The vacancy, occasioned by the resignation of President Adams, will be filled by the Board of Trustees as soon as they shall meet and elect his successor. The result of their action will then be announced.

I would here state that the interest-bearing Alumni and Endowment Notes have been placed in my hands. As the interest on some of them is now due and unpaid, I would request the parties giving these notes to send to me the amount due. I take this way of notifying them through the Advocate, as I do not know the residence or postoffice of most of them and can not, therefore, address them personally.

G. H. WILEY,

Baton Rouge Revival.

The meeting in Baton Rouge, begun at the Quarterly Conference, last Sunday week, is progressing finely. The altar has been crowded from the start, and up to Sunday afternoon over fifty souls had been converted and a number received into the church. Pastor Faunt LeRoy's last bulletin to the presiding elder has this in it: "Oh, the power of the Lord—it will take the city! Houses crowded at each service. God be praised! Glory be to his name! Pray for us that the good work may go on."

While the brethren at the front press the battle, let the church at home plead in prayer for a Waterloo to fall upon the hosts of Satan at the capital. S.

October 10, 1887.

Notice.

Rev. Sam W. Small will be present and hold a series of meetings in Morgan Street Church, corner Enghein and Chartres streets, New Orleans, beginning Sunday, October 23, and continued through Sunday, October 30. We earnestly invite the hearty co-operation of the Methodists of the city, and cordially invite the public to attend said meetings. A choir is being organized in which "Triumphant Songs," by E. O. Excell, will be used. H. D. Kimball, P. C.

There is said to be one hundred Baptist periodicals and papers in this country, and every one of them is in favor of prohibition. Good!

Notes.

The average Methodist preacher is generally a "acute observer" of things, and always has an eye open to the humorous side. A brother in Louisiana, writing to the publisher, took occasion to slip in this very significant sentence: "Took up a collection last Sunday at —— Church, and the members enjoyed religion while we were at it, and made up the amount in a few minutes." The rule is, that people will always give while in the enjoyment of religion. The other rule is, that people will always enjoy religion if they give in the right way. These two rules cover the whole case.

To our brethren who have been holding revivals and receiving new members, we commend the following, from the Watchman, as worthy of bringing to the notice of their young converts:

One of our practical, hard-toiling and, we may add, successful preachers came last week into The Watchman office, saying: "Here is payment for a new subscriber, a recent convert, Mrs. ——. I accept it," he added, "as I presume you will, as an evidence at least of a sound conversion, that this lady, in the very act of a public profession of Christ, avowed her purpose to become a regular reader of such a religious newspaper as she had learned this to be." On our part we do certainly accept the evidence thus put in as "first-class."

It is very wonderful how persistent history is in repeating itself; and that, too, in things which we would suppose that history takes no notice of. Even in the matter of foibles of humanity and the pleasantries of jokers history is inexorable in repetition. Jokes, current to-day and seemingly fresh and original, are found among the people of two thousand years ago. The other day a Kentucky paper having said that it was undetermined which is the worse, "the man who can sing and won't, or the man who can't sing and will," a correspondent pointed out the same foible satirized by Horace in these lines:

"Omnibus hoc vitium est cantoribus, inter amicos
Ut nunquam inducant animum cantare rogati
Iniussi nunquam desistant."

The editor of the Alabama Advocate has been treated to an anonymous letter. Listen to what he says:

As a rule, we have a contempt for anonymous communications. There is generally some sneaking meanness in them, to which the writers are afraid or ashamed to attach their signatures. But, then, there are exceptions to this rule, as well as to all others. For instance, here is one that did not fill the editorial soul with indignation nor excite contempt:

"Mr. McCoy: Will you accept this knife from one who delights to read your paper, and signs himself your unknown friend, TWO STARS."

The "knife" alluded to is a beautiful pearl paper knife, with the gold monogram "W. C. Mc." on the handle.

Anonymous communications so freighted with kindness and taste can inspire only sentiments of gratitude toward the unknown giver, which we thus publicly express, because we know not how else to reach him.

Hugh Price Hughes, the editor of the London Methodist Times, is one of the foremost men in the Wesleyan Conference. We read this little incident in the London Daily Telegraph, of September 22:

Mr. Hughes is a Welshman, about forty years old. His father, a doctor, intended his son for the bar; but one day, while the lad was at school studying for the legal profession, he addressed to his parent the following brief epistle:

"My Dear Father—I think I ought to be a Wesleyan minister. Your affectionate son."

To this he received an equally laconic reply:

"My Dear Boy—I would rather that you should be a Wesleyan minister than Lord Chancellor. Your affectionate father."

Thus began a career which has been one of marked success.

Here is a sermon for every preacher who reads the Advocate. We don't know a more opportune time than now to give it. Fill up on it, brother, and pour it out to your people next Lord's day. We take it entire, without adding or subtracting a word, from the Christian Index:

"Now, concerning the collection * * * upon the first day of the week, let everyone of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." Let us ask a few questions, and leave the reader to supply the answers: 1. Where are these words found? 2. Who wrote these words? 3. By whose authority did he write them? 4. What do they mean? 5. Are we under any obligations to do what these words say? 6. If yea, will any special good come to us if we meet this obligation? 7. If yea again, will any special harm come to us if we refuse or neglect to meet this obligation? 8. Suppose that these words were blotted out of the book in which they were written, would that book be complete? 9. Has any man a right to "take away from the words" of that book? 10. Is there any penalty for taking away from the words of that book? 11. If yea, what is that penalty, and where is it pronounced? (See Revelation xx. 19.) 12. Is it any greater sin to take away the words of the book than it is to let them stand and yet ignore, and disregard and disobey them?

Personals.

Rev. W. F. Compton, of the Pacific Conference, died September 26, at his home, in San Jose. His end was peace.

A card from Bro. Godfrey, of the Haynesville circuit, informs us that his camp meeting at Mt. Zion was a good meeting.

Rev. George F. Round, of the North Carolina Conference, has been transferred by Bishop Granbery to Columbia Conference, and stationed at Albany and Sargent.

A card from Rev. J. W. Pugh, of Amite City, La., informs us that Bishop Galloway will dedicate the new church in that place, October 30.

Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, is on a visit to this country. His wife accompanies him, and she is said to be as gifted as her husband.

The Southwestern Methodist has finished its fifth year. In that time it has been twice enlarged, which evidences prosperity. We are always glad to see it, and wish it a still more prosperous career.

Prof. W. H. Payne, of the University of Michigan, has been appointed president of the Normal College at Nashville, Tenn., in place of Dr. Stearns, deceased.

John B. Finch, of Nebraska, the well-known temperance advocate, died suddenly, in Boston, last week.

The Nashville Advocate announces that the corner-stone of the new West End Church was laid September 25. It says the church promises to be "a thing of beauty" and as solid as beautiful.

The successor of Prof. Huxley to the highest chair in the Royal Society of London, is Prof. Stokes, a reverent Christian. So says Prof. Drummond.

The Woman's Missionary Society, of our church, has lately sent out to China the following missionaries: Misses Ada Reagan and Emma Kerr, of Tennessee, and Misses Lula H. Lipscomb, Ada F. Gordon and Bettie Hughes, of Mississippi.

Dr. Philip Schaff has been installed professor of church history in Union Theological Seminary.

The second volume of the "Life of Jabez Bunting" has appeared in England. The first volume was published twenty-eight years ago!

Dr. Dorchester's new book, "The Liquor Problem in All Ages," is advertised in the New York Advocate as "A Book for the Cranks."

One of the Boston papers speaks of Dr. McGlynn as "somewhat endorsed" by the New York Methodist Preachers' Association. It took two columns of the New York Advocate to explain the "endorsement!"

Hon. George Bancroft, the historian, reached his eighty-seventh year, October 4.

Ex-Secretary Manning is ill again and confined to his room.

Note from Our Missionary, Miss Bettie Hughes.

ON BOARD CITY OF PEKING, September 21, 1887.

DEAR MOTHER: We are safe aboard the vessel that is to bear us to our future home. I never felt the presence of my Savior so much before. He is wonderfully sustaining us all. We had a grand time just as we left the shore. Many of God's children were on the docks to bid the "missionary ship" good-bye. They begun singing on the shore, and many voices on the vessel joined them, and we thus continued to sing until their voices could no longer be heard. God bless the good people we leave behind in America! My heart is full of gratitude to Him. We are very happy together and, I trust, will have a pleasant voyage. There are about forty missionaries on board this grand old ship—some of them new workers, and others returning to the work. Good-bye! God bless you all! I am quite well.

Lovingly. BETTIE.

NATURE usually makes a gallant fight against disease, and when aided by Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier will eradicate it from the system.

Items of Interest.

There are thirty counties in Missouri, which have local option.

The consumption of liquor is on the decrease in England, but largely on the increase in Ireland.

Mr. Howard Crosby estimates that the receipts of the New York liquor saloons amounts to $30,000,000 yearly, one-half of which comes from the laboringmen!

The house in which Abraham Lincoln lived when elected President has become the property of the State of Illinois, and is to be used as a repository of articles connected with his life.

The International Hygienic Congress held its session last week in Vienna, and was welcomed, in a speech by Crown Prince Rudolph.

On September 23, the Fulton Street (New York) Noon Prayer Meeting reached its thirtieth anniversary.

The British national debt was decreased $30,000,000 during the last fiscal year, and $190,000,000 during the last thirty years. At present it is $3,582,732,035.

In Japan there are 321 missionaries, including men and women, of whom 249, or 76 per cent., come from the United States. In China there are in all, men and women, 892 missionaries, of whom 318, or nearly 40 per cent. come from the United States.

In America there are now about thirty successful hospitals for inebriates.

There are in New York City something like one hundred and sixty women physicians. Half a dozen or so make incomes of about $10,000 a year.

Out of over 20,000 railroad men in Alabama, it is estimated that 3,000 will be forced to give up their positions under the new law regarding color blindness.

Records of Pasteur Institute show that since the adoption of the new treatment for hydrophobia cases, the number of deaths of persons bitten has decreased from sixteen per cent. to 1.34 per cent.

It is estimated that there are annually manufactured and consumed, in this country, $22,000,000 worth of patent medicines. Our people love to pay to be humbugged.

Bethany Sunday-school, Philadelphia, of which John Wannamaker is the superintendent, has 2,981 members.

Last year there was coined $391,147 in cents, $552,376 in nickels, and $1,093,279 in dimes, and yet the demand is ahead of the supply.

According to the Herald, it takes $31,657,273 to run the city government of New York for one year.

For the building of the new Catholic University, in Washington City, $8,000,000 will be required. Only $700,000 have as yet been subscribed.

A drug clerk in Kansas has been sentenced to seventeen years and four months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of $20,000 for violation of the liquor law. So much for a druggist turning saloon keeper!

An exchange says, that in Virginia the martins have begun a systematic warfare upon the English sparrows. The spirit of '76 is evidently awaking.

By the will of Jose Sevilla, the Peruvian millionaire, New York City gets $500,000 with which to build the Sevilla Home for Children.

The importations of gold were $2,000,000 in July, $6,000,000 in August, and $12,000,000 in September.

The Peabody Educational Fund amounts to $2,000,000, and the income from it is $70,000.

An examination of two hundred thousand persons shows that about one in twenty-five males is colorblind in a greater or less degree, while among females the proportion is only about one in four hundred.

Periodicals.

—Wide Awake, for October, will delight all the young people, for Maurice Thompson, Grant Allen, Charles Egbert Craddock, Margaret Sidney, Elbridge S. Brooks, and other popular writers, contribute of their best for their [illegible] Co., Boston. Price, $2 40 per annum.

—Journal of Education, October, has Study of Biology, by Prof. Orelway; Romance Philology, by Prof. Fortier; Music in Public Schools, by R. Woods; Higher Education of Women, by Andrew D. White; besides other articles of value. This monthly is edited by William O. Rogers, the secretary of Tulane University. President Johnson and Prof Jesse are associates. P. O. Box 1653, New Orleans, La. Price, $1 50 per annum.

—The Century holds on its way "steadily, with an upright keel." A fine portrait of Harriet Beecher Stowe opens the October number, and then 160 pages of matter on various topics succeeds. "Abraham Lincoln" and papers on the Civil War make up more than one-third of this number. Frank Stockton's One Hundredth Man is concluded. Topics of the Time and Open Letters constitute valuable departments of this monthly. Century Company, New York. Price, $4 per annum.

—Scribner's Magazine, for October, begins with The Paris School of Fine Arts, by Henry O. Avery, and ends with The Bucolic Dialect of the Plains, by Louis Swinburne. Thackeray's Unpublished Letters are finished in this number; and N. S. Shaler has an interesting article on Caverns and Cavern Life. This number is the equal of any magazine for this month. Charles Scribner's Sons, 743, 745 Broadway, New York. Price, $3 per annum.

—Book News is an interesting periodical to all persons of a literary turn. Its resume of news in its special department is good and valuable to all who desire to keep pace with the progress of literary achievement. Published monthly by John Wannamaker, Philadelphia, for fifty cents a number.

—Babyhood, for October, is on our table. For several months we have failed to receive this valuable periodical. We are glad to welcome it again. This number is full of matters of interest to those having the care of young children. We commend it heartily to all such. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman street, New York. Price, $1 50 a year.

—Woman's Magazine, for September, though late in coming, has several departments of readable matter. Much of it is devoted to the home and to the temperance cause. It is a good magazine, and cheap. F. E. Hoadley & Co., Brattleboro, Vt. Price, $1 per annum.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this state, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology, and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt, University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the ADVOCATE; but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

Review of the Modern Fathers.

A Consideration of the Theories of Modern Methodist Writers, and of the Historic and Scriptural Doctrines of the Methodists.

BY REV. JNO. M. CROW, A. M., Louisville Conference.

Rt. Fitzgerald says: "This Review of the Modern Fathers is clearly the product of a mind that has wrestled manfully with the questions discussed. He has something to say, and says it in his own way. The glow of earnestness gilds and warms every page. He gives a reason for all his positions, and dogmatizes delightfully. He criticises his seniors modestly and respectfully. Transparent love of truth characterizes the book. He fights in the open field and uses the weapons of honorable warfare."

GOOD NATURED, HEALTHY, HEARTY,
BY THE USE OF

Lactated Food

Babies do not cry if they are satisfied, and they can not be satisfied if they are not properly nourished by their food, or if it produces irritation of stomach or bowels.

Very many mothers can not properly nourish their children, and the milk of many mothers produces bad effects in the child because of constitutional disease or weakness.

For all such cases there is a remedy in

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and other cause the worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in deep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been accurately understood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of Fahnestock is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. Fahnestock, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.
Gentlemen—I have used a bottle of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.
Yours, &c., J. W. DUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANBY, M. D.

DO IT NOW.

BY CHERIE CARY.

If you're told to do a thing,
And mean to do it really,
Never let it be by halves;
Do it fully, freely.

When father calls, though pleasant lie
The play you are pursuing,
Do not say, "I'll come, when I
Have finished what I'm doing."

If you are told to learn a task,
And you should then begin it,
Do not tell your teacher, "Yes,
I'm coming in a minute."

Waste not moments, nor your words,
In telling what you could do
Some other time; the present is
For doing what you should do.

Don't do right unwillingly,
And stop to plan and measure;
'Tis working with the heart and soul
That makes our duty pleasure.

MR. EDITOR: As this is my first letter to a newspaper, I hope to see it in print. My papa has been taking the dear old ADVOCATE a long time. We all love it very much; even to my four-year old brother, who does not like to see the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," as he calls it, disrespectfully handled. I used to belong to the Adams' Sunday-school, but now we live in Wesson. Both of my grandfathers are Methodist preachers. They are both seventy-six and their wives are named Lizzie. Is not that a little remarkable? I have four brothers, and a dear little baby sister, named Geneva. I will be thirteen my next birthday. I have been a member of the church four years.

Your little friend,

LIZZIE TARVER.

WESSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been so long since I wrote to your excellent paper, I thought I would write again. My mamma takes your valuable paper. We like it so much. Bro. Mandeville is our pastor this year. We all like him. He preaches for us once a month. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday night and Sabbath-school every Sunday. I will answer Eddie Bennett's question: Elijah was fed by the ravens. I will close by asking a question: How old was Moses when he was called to lead the Israelites out of Egypt? Will some of the cousins tell me where in the Bible is the word "flour" found? Wishing your paper much success, I remain, as ever,

Your friend,

M. BAMA RICH.

LOVERS LAKE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Good morning! We come this morning asking a place among the cousins. Papa takes your good ADVOCATE, and we enjoy reading the letters from the little cousins. There are five of us—three sisters and one brother on earth, while one sweet little brother is in heaven. We enjoy going to Sabbath-school so much. We have a lovely little pony that refuses to be caught when he sees a bridle in our hands; but if we have food for him, he is perfectly gentle. We have ever so many beautiful pigeons, and such a cute little dog called "Minnie." Will some one of the cousins tell us where in the Bible the word "butter" is found?

Your little friends,

MABEL SMITH,
GEORGE SMITH.

GREENVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your paper, I thought I would. My Grandma Wiggins takes your good paper, and I love to read the "Mr. Editor's," as my little sister used to call the little folks' letters. I do not go regularly to Sunday-school. Rev. C. A. Powell is our pastor and Mr. Robert Ford our superintendent. We like them so much. Mrs. May Muse is my teacher. We all love her so dearly. I will answer Eddie Bennett's question: Elijah was fed by the ravens. My question is, Where is "figtree" found in the Bible?

Your little friend,

ELLIS R. ALLEN.

SHARON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I am going to school to Rev. Mr. Taylor. I also go to Sunday-school. Uncle B. D. Graves is our superintendent. I like to go to school very well. Bro. Brelund is our preacher. During our protracted meeting he preached one sermon for the children. His text was, "Trust in the Lord and do good." Can any of the little readers of the ADVOCATE tell me in which one of the Psalms the text can be found? As this is my first letter, I will close.

Your little friend,

RULES FOR READING HOLY SCRIPTURES.

These rules are part of a sermon preached in the parish church of Broad Clyst, in Devonshire, by the Rev. Prebendary Aebud, the vicar, on the "Duty of Searching the Scriptures."

1. In reading Holy Scriptures keep steadily before you its great purpose of teaching you the will of God and the way of salvation through Jesus Christ.

2. Let its beautiful histories, and the many interesting questions which arise out of it, serve (as they are doubtless intended) to engage your attention, and to help you to look at God's dealings with man in many different points of view; but never read or search into them in a mere spirit of curiosity, or let them distract you from its one great purpose.

3. Read it reverently; remembering that God caused the books to be written as they are, and to come down to us as we have them; and that he is speaking to you through them.

4. Read it thankfully; blessing God who has caused it to be written for your learning; and often reflecting how sadly in the dark we should have been without its guiding light and what blessed hope you have through it, which without it you would not have had.

5. Read it prayerfully. It is well to offer a short prayer before reading; but I mean as to the whole spirit of your reading, read with the wish and with the expectation that the voice of God, Holy Scripture, may speak to your heart and conscience, and that you may be better for reading that portion which is before you.

6. Read it humbly; remembering that a book which God has caused to be written by men gifted with his Holy Spirit for that purpose, must be, very much of it, far above us: that we must be content to wait till God shall give us more light; and that meanwhile he will enable us to understand all that is good and needful for us to know.—Christian Mirror.

How to Reduce Your Expenses.

You can do it easily, and you will not have to deprive yourself of a single comfort; on the contrary, you will enjoy life more than ever. How can you accomplish this result? Easily; cut down your doctor's bills. When you lose your appetite, and become bilious and constipated, and, therefore, low-spirited, don't rush off to the family physician for a prescription, or, on the other hand, wait until you are sick abed before doing anything at all; but just go the druggist's and for twenty-five cents get a supply of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Take them as directed, and, our word for it, your unpleasant symptoms will disappear as if by magic, you will have no big doctor's bill to pay, and everybody interested (except the doctor), will feel happy.

FOR AMBITIOUS BOYS.—A boy is something like a piece of iron, which in its rough state isn't worth much, nor is it of very much use, but the more processes it is put through, the more valuable it becomes. A bar of iron that is only worth $5 in its natural state, is worth $12 when it is made into horseshoes, and after it goes through the different processes by which it is made into needles, its value is increased to $350. Made into pen-knife blades, it would be worth $3,000, and into balance springs, for watches, $250,000. Just think of that, boys, a piece of iron that is comparatively worthless, can be developed into such valuable material!

But the iron has to go through a great deal of hammering and beating and rolling and pounding and polishing, and so if you are to become useful and educated men, you must go through a long course of study and training. The more time you spend in hard study, the better material you will make. The iron doesn't have to go through half as much to be made into horseshoes as it does to be converted into delicate watch springs, but think how much less valuable it is. Which would you rather be, horseshoes or watch springs? It depends on yourselves. You can become whichever you will.

This is your time of preparation for manhood. Don't think that I would have you settle down to hard study all the time without any intervals for fun. Not a bit of it. I like to see boys have a good time, and I should be very sorry to have you grow old before your time, but you have ample opportunity for study and play, too, and I don't want you to neglect the former for the sake of the latter.—Christian at Work.

Household.

HOMES WITHOUT GOD.—One alarming evil of the nineteenth century is the number of irreligious homes found in every community. Not homes without culture, refinement and elegance; not homes wanting in social and worldly enjoyment; but irreligious homes; homes in which practically there is no prayer, no God, no Bible reading, no worship. Practically, God is as much excluded from many homes as he is from the marts of trade or the ball-room. Alas for such homes!—the father unsaved, bearing no testimony for Christ, placing before the children no Christian example. Sometimes both parents are unconverted, and as indifferent to the gospel or to a word like this as the most blasphemous infidel. Oh, what a calamity is this! If parents are irreligious, and can and do dispense with God and his church, how are we to expect better of the children? Godly homes have done more for the peace of society and the spread of the gospel throughout the world than any other single agency. If this be true, who can speak the dreadful influence and results of irreligious homes?—many of them excellent in many things, but wholly unchristian. God have mercy on such.—Our Young People.

"The angel who takes care of the flowers and sprinkles upon them the dew in the still night, slumbered on a spring day in the shade of a rosebush. When he awoke he said:

"Most beautiful of my children, I thank thee for my refreshing odor and cooling shade. Could you now ask any favor, how willingly would I grant it."

"Adorn me, then, with a new charm," said the spirit of the rose-bush in a beseeching tone.

"So the angel adorned the loveliest flowers with simple moss. Sweetly it stood there, in its modest attire, the moss rose, the most beautiful of its kind."

So the costliest ornaments are often the simplest. There is no gold, nor jewel, nor sparkling pearl equal to the "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

A GOOD BED.—A correspondent of the Indiana Farmer says a feather bed is decidedly unwholesome as well as expensive, while a spring-mattress bed presents many things objectionable. Of what he considers a bed better than either of these he speaks as follows:

Get material for the "tick" and put a strip eight inches wide in each end. This will make it hold more. Then fill with soft husks. Now make a top by taking calico or other suitable goods, white muslin preferable, and make a "comfort" that will be just the size of the bed, by putting in six pounds of cotton or batted wool. Spread it on the top of the bed, then spread the sheet, and you have a bed that is good enough for a king or anybody else. You can air the cotton top all day and have your bed made up nicely, too.

HOT WATER FOR SPRAINS.—Hot-water is the best thing that can be used to heal a sprain or bruise. The wounded part should be placed in water as hot as can be borne for fifteen or twenty minutes, and in all ordinary cases the pain will gradually disappear. Hot water applied by means of cloths is a sovereign remedy for neuralgia and pleurisy pains. For burns or scalds apply cloths well saturated with cold alum water, keeping the injured parts covered from the air.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional, not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches. The result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington St., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVeau, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Bagman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. STAPLETON—BRO. DANIEL A. STAPLETON, son of W. A. and Livina Stapleton, was born in Dale county, Ala., March 8, 1850; came to Mississippi with his parents about 1855 or 1856; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Clear Creek, 1868; was married to Miss Lucy E. Kennedy, February 28, 1878, and died at his home, near Cato, Rankin county, Miss., August 25, 1887.

In the death of Bro. Stapleton the community has lost one of its best citizens; the church, a consistent member; his wife, a devoted husband; his aged mother, a loving, faithful son; his brothers and sisters, a kind and affectionate brother, and his neighbors, a friend that they could rely upon. It was my privilege to know him only about seven months before his death; but in that short period I had learned to esteem him very highly, and hoped, as our acquaintance lengthened out, the cords of friendship would grow stronger. But, alas! we were doomed to disappointment, for while busily engaged on his farm, August 21, at about half-past nine A. M., he was bitten by a large rattlesnake, and, although everything was done that medical skill and loving hands could do, the next day, August 22, at half-past nine A. M., he passed away, we trust, to a better world than this. May the sustaining grace of our kind heavenly Father rest upon his aged mother, his loving companion and brothers and sisters, and may they be permitted to meet him where parting will be no more! is the prayer of their pastor, A. P. MILLER.

BROWNE—MRS. SUSAN BROWNE died July 31, 1887, at her residence, Prairie Mound, in the southern portion of Yazoo county, Mississippi. She was born August 2, 1827, and was the daughter of Mr. John and Ann Carson; was married to Mr. Miles T. Browne, December 30, 1841. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, May, 1873, and was a modest, consistent member, and, although not very demonstrative, took an active interest in all its duties. There were a serenity and quietude in her life and character that indicated a peace within the soul that flowed like a river. A kind friend, a good neighbor, and exemplary lady, she was highly esteemed and beloved by all. As a wife, she was a model of industry, patience and kindness, and her husband always found in her a help meet indeed. She was the mother of a large family, and her watchfulness, tender care, indulgent disposition and affectionate counsel in the household endeared her to her loved ones. Her husband preceded her to the tomb, May, 1873, and upon her devolved the training, educating and admonishing the most of her children, which she did with faithfulness and devotion. Throughout many years of feeble health, with Christian fortitude and abiding faith, she passed the ordeal without murmuring. Alas! she is gone, and rests in peace.

L. H. J.

SMITH—DUNCAN SMITH was born in Rutherford county, N. C., March 22, 1810, and died at the residence of his son, J. V. Smith, at San Marcos, Hayse county, Texas, December 9, 1886, and hence was seventy-six years, nine months and twenty-three days old at the time of his death. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, early in life, and maintained his church relationship to the end. Bro. Smith was married to Miss Magaret A. Russell, January 9, 1835. The fruits of this marriage were eleven children, of whom nine, with their mother, survive. Six of those children are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one of the Baptist Church.

I don't suppose there was a man more extensively known than Bro. Smith. He has traveled all over the United States. Much knowledge could be gained by being in company with him. I was always glad when he would come to our house, for he always had something interesting to talk about. He was a great advocate of temperance. He gave liberally of his means to support the institutions of the church, was a regular attendant upon public worship of God, and the preacher always found a welcome at his home. He has taken a great deal of interest in the welfare of his children; and God grant that they, with their bereaved mother, may so live that they will meet again on the other shore! F. N. SWEENEY.

BOWEN—MRS. ALICE C. BOWEN, (nee Cawthon) was born August 8, 1860; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1878; was married to the Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, March 8, 1881; died at the residence of Col. W. R. Stuart, in Ocean Springs, Miss., July 9, 1887, and was buried in her native town, Holly Springs, Miss., July 13, 1887.

She leaves a sorrowing husband, and a baby boy who is too young to remember the fond caress of a loving mother. Sister Bowen's health was failing many months before her death, and everything that medical skill or loving hands could do was done for the uncomplaining sufferer. Hoping to find relief for her, Bro. Bowen carried her to the coast where new, but kind friends joined in ministries of love to her during her last days. Sister Bowen was an intelligent Christian. Before her marriage she completed the "course of study" prescribed for our traveling preachers, and this special training made her a helpful companion to her husband. Bro. Bowen ascribes his success in the ministry largely to her prayers and wise counsels. She was a devout and systematic student of the Bible. From this sacred book she drew much comfort during her long and painful illness. Solid books were read and enjoyed by her; hence her mind was a rich treasury of Christian thought. She was quiet and undemonstrative in her religious life; but her faith was steadfast, and her end was peace. A short time before her death she sung, "I would not live alway," and said to her faithful husband, "Stop working and praying for me, and let me go and be at rest." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

E. H. MOON.

BEMISS.—Resolutions adopted by the Rodney Missionary Society on the death of our beloved member, MRS. LIZZIE BEMISS.

Whereas, On August 19, 1887, our heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, has come with the sickle of death and cut down in the prime of life our beloved friend and co-worker in his vineyard; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, we feel assured that husband, sisters and friends have sustained a great loss, and that we, as members of the Rodney Missionary Society, deeply deplore our loss, and we feel that God has drawn very near us by thus taking our favorite in all her usefulness; and by her death he says to us, Be ye ready.

Resolved, That while we know the pure spirit of our lost one has been called from the sorrows of earth, we will strive to meet her on the other shore, where farewells are never spoken and death can never come.

Resolved, That to the stricken husband and bereaved sisters and relatives of the lost one we tender our most heartfelt sympathy and compassion in this, their great bereavement, and we say to them, though bowed with grief, yet in this the darkest hour of their affliction, God gives grace to say, Thy will be done.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and, also that we ask the publication of same in NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and that each member of the society wear a badge of mourning for a period of thirty days.

MRS. KATE HATHAWAY, Vice-President.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health can not exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid, the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.
As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

The Rings in Trees.

Mr. R. W. Furras, an agent of the United States Forestry Department, who has given much attention to the age of a tree as indicated by rings, as well as to the period at which trees of different species stop growing, and that which the wood is at its best, has reached some conclusions of general interest. He says: "Concentric or annual rings, which were once accepted as good legal evidence, fail, except where climate, soil, temperature, humidity, and all other surroundings are regular and well balanced. Otherwise they are mere guess-work. The only region within my knowledge, where either rings or measurements were reliable indications, are in the secluded, even, and regularly tempered valleys of the Southern Pacific Coast."

Annual measurements of white elm, catalpa, soft maple, sycamore, pig hickory, cottonwood, chestnut, box elder, honey locust, coffee-tree, burr and white oak, black walnut, osage orange, white pine, red cedar, mulberry, and yellow willow (nineteen) species made in Southeastern Nebraska, show that "annual growth is very irregular, sometimes scarcely perceptible, and again quite large," and this he attributes to the difference in seasons. As trees increase in age, inner rings decrease in size, sometimes almost disappearing. Diminished rate of growth after a certain age is a rule. Of the four great beeches mentioned in London, there were three, each about 17 feet in girth, whose ages were respectively 60, 102, and 200. Mr. Furras found 12 rings in a black locust 6 years old, 21 rings in a shell bark hickory of 12 years, 10 rings in a pig hickory of 6 years, 11 rings in a wild crab-apple of 5 years, and only 20 rings in a chestnut oak of 24 years. An American chestnut of only 4 years had 9 rings, while a peach of 8 years had only 5 rings. —Exchange.

NATURE'S CURIOSITIES.—One of the chief naphtha wells in the Caspian region of Russia shoots up from a fountain, and has formed a lake four miles long and one and a quarter wide. This enormous surface recently became ignited, and now presents an imposing spectacle. The smoke and heat are such as to render a nearer approach than one thousand yards impracticable. The quantity of naphtha on fire is estimated at four and a half million cubic feet. Everybody has heard of the singing beach of Manchester, Mass., the sand of which, for a distance of about a fifth of a mile, gives out a sound when walked upon, or even when stirred by a stick; but it is not so generally known that in 1834, inquiry among the members of the United States life-saving service showed that samples of the singing sand could be found in twenty-six different places on our coast. It is said that later investigation has increased the number to seventy-four in America, and thirteen abroad. In Algeria there is a small stream which the chemistry of nature has turned into ink. It is, formed by the union of two rivers, one of which is strongly impregnated with iron, while the other, meandering through a peat marsh, imbibes gallic acid. Letters have been written with this compound of iron and gallic acid which unite to form the little river. In Colombia, South America, is a river which, by admixture with sulphuric acid, becomes so sour that it is appropriately named the Vinegar river. A park in Arizona has an unparalleled phenomenon in a natural bridge of agatized wood, spanning a canyon fifty-five feet wide. The tree is from three to four feet in diameter, and more than a hundred feet of its length is in sight, both ends being embedded in the sandstone at the sides of the canyon.—Exchange.

An Angel in the Home.

It is probable that one-half of the entire globe is composed of free or combined oxygen. This gas occurs in a state of freedom in the atmosphere of which it constitutes one-fifth part by volume. At every inspiration oxygen passes into the lungs, there meeting the blood in which it is dissolved and carried into every part of the animal frame. It is what supplies the heat to the system. As a remedial agent, in restoring impaired vitality, its value is universally conceded by all branches of the medical profession. Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., have found means by which this valuable and safe remedy for many of the ills from which humanity suffers can be supplied to patients at their homes. Compound Oxygen as prepared by them has already effected thousands of cures, as their testimonials printed in a pamphlet sent to any address, free of postage, amply proves.

Love's Achievement.

It is pleasant to turn, from time to time, to stories showing the influence of women upon art, through the medium of a happy married life.

On the tomb of the painter Quintin Matsys, in the cathedral of Antwerp, are inscribed in letters of gold the words: "Conubial love made him an Apelles." This man, known as the "blacksmith of Antwerp," was born in poverty in 1466, and for a long time supported himself and his mother by working as a locksmith. He fell in love, however, with the daughter of a painter at Antwerp, and although the young lady returned his affection, she assured him that it was impossible for them to marry. Her father had always declared that no one but an artist should possess his daughter; and she, probably with some prophetic recognition of the natural powers of Matsys, added that his suit must be hopeless, unless he could transform himself from a blacksmith into an artist. The young man immediately began to devote himself to ornamental ironwork, and produced such delicate and artistic specimens of decoration that his name became known to lovers of art. He next made a series of exquisitely modeled images for distribution among the people taking part in a certain church festival, and these were so much admired that they materially increased his fame. All this, however, was not enough for the ambitious painter; Quintin was only a worker in iron, after all. The "blacksmith of Antwerp" did not despair. Although he was in delicate health, he shut himself up and diligently studied the art of painting, and as soon as he had produced a work which seemed to approach worthiness of display he carried it to the father of the young lady who had thus fired his ambition. The father was delighted with the picture, and at once gave his consent to the marriage. Many of Quintin's productions in iron and upon canvas are now carefully preserved in the art collections of Europe, and thus bear constant testimony to the influence of a deep and true affection.—Toronto Guardian.

She Couldn't Understand It.

"What in the world has happened to you since the last time I saw you?" asked one lady of another when they met on the street the other day: "I can't understand it. Then you were pale, haggard and low-spirited, and I remember you said that you hardly cared whether you lived or died. To-day you look ever so much younger; and it is very evident from your beaming face that your low spirits have taken flight." "Yes, indeed," was the reply; "and shall I tell you what drove them away? It was Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was a martyr to functional derangement until I began taking the 'Prescription.' Now I am as well as I ever was in my life. No woman who suffers as I did, ought to let an hour pass before procuring this wonderful remedy."

For a good, every-day household angel give us the woman who laughs. Her biscuits may not be always just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battle-field, nor life one long unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the matter has no bright side, of shining up the dark one, is a very important faculty; one of the things no woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Rural New Yorker.

"Golden at morning, silver at noon, and lead at night," is the old saying about eating oranges. But there is something that is rightly named Golden, and can be taken with benefit at any hour of the day. This is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, literally worth its weight in gold to anyone suffering with scrofulous affections, impurities of the blood, or diseases of the liver and lungs. It is unfailing. By druggists.

People find their places; and there's always a like for a like. The good Lord does not leave any of us to quite starve out. There's always manna, and sometimes quails, in every desert.—A. D. T. Whitney.

SUMPTER, SOUTH CAROLINA, June 2d, 1887.
DR. A. T. SHALES SHERMAN, Rochester, Pa.
Dear Sir: I have been using your Antidote for Malaria in my family for several years. For more than a year I had chills, and was so low down that I had not strength to walk. Mr. Whonsley begged me to try the Antidote, and it cured me at once. I am now a strong, healthy man. We use no other medicine in the family, as we find it the quickest, safest, and also the cheapest. Yours very truly.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

The O'Brien case has been adjourned pending a decision in the case against Lord Mayor Sullivan for the same offense.

Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia declared recently that, when occasion arose, he and a number of other Russians would join the French army.

It is reported that Salisbury, Prime Minister of England, will shortly pay a visit to Prince Bismarck, Prime Minister of Germany.

A decree under the Socialist law, declaring a minor state of siege and prohibiting the sales on the streets of special editions of newspapers, has been issued in Berlin.

Russia accepts the Porte's proposal to send a commissioner to Bulgaria, to act in conjunction with a Russian Lieutenant-Governor, provided the Ottoman Commissioner have second rank.

John Bright has again thundered at Parnell and Gladstone, and claims that he has a truer sympathy for Ireland than either.

The interview between Bismarck and Crispi, the Italian Prime Minister, is said by the latter to have had no political significance.

The result of the Socialistic Conference in Switzerland is thought to be a consolidation of the Socialistic party throughout Europe.

Earthquakes have been felt in Greece and Cuba.

The police engaged in the Gweedon evictions in Ireland have intimated to their commander that they will not fire upon the people.

It now turns out that the result of Signor Crispi's conference with Bismarck is the formation of a new tripartite alliance between Italy, Austria and Germany, to check the encroachments of Russia in the direction of Constantinople and Bulgaria.

The Socialistic Conference at St. Gall failed to accomplish a reorganization of the party and a concert of electoral tactics. In Germany the anarchist Neve has been convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

The German Ambassador has handed the French Minister of Foreign Affairs $12,000, as indemnity to the family of the gamekeeper, Brignon, who was recently killed on the Franco-German frontier.

Stanley is still pursuing his way in Africa. Emin Bey has sent men to meet him, and it is said his progress will pacificate Uganda.

The alliance between Italy, Germany and Austria has been renewed for five years, Italy reserving the right to neutrality between France and Germany.

An immense meeting in Dublin, presided over by Sexton, M. P., and addressed by O'Brien, protested against the oppression of the press.

DOMESTIC.

What was said to be dengue fever at Tampa, Fla., is now declared yellow fever. The inhabitants are panic-stricken and have left the place by scores. Quarantines against Tampa have been established in other places. The government tents at Tampa have been granted to the authorities for use.

The Sunday law, at the instance of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is being enforced in Missouri.

The President's tour is proving to be a perfect ovation wherever he stops. Nothing equal to it has ever been seen in this country. The enthusiasm equals that which the Queen's Jubilee aroused in England.

The fever reported at Tampa, Fla., as yellow fever, has been declared dengue by the resident physicians.

The Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Line has been sold to the Western Union for $5,000,000 in stock.

The Comptroller of the Currency has issued a call for reports of the condition of all National Banks at the close of business, October 5.

Strikes are coming in vogue again in New York. The brassworkers, in Philadelphia; the shoemakers, in Louisville; the brakemen and switchmen on the Louisville and Nashville have struck.

Dr. Holt, president of Louisiana Board of Health, has received a dispatch from Tampa, Fla., reporting four deaths and twenty cases of yellow fever.

Messrs Putman and Angell, of the Fishery Commissioners, have held a conference with Secretary Bayard on the subject of the fishery dispute with England.

The Knights of Labor, in session at Minneapolis, by a vote of 151 to 52, voted down a resolution of sympathy with the condemned anarchists.

The Piedmont Exposition at Atlanta, was opened on the tenth, Hon. Sam J. Randall making the opening address.

The Pacific Express safe on the Iron Mountain road has been robbed of between $30,000 and $60,000, and suspicion points to one of the messengers.

The fever at Tampa is spreading. Funds and nurses are greatly needed, the town treasury being empty, and the people demoralized.

Andrew H. Wilson has been appointed member of the School Board, of this city, in place of John G. Parham, removed from the city.

The dispatches of the tenth, from New York, represent Minister to Mexico, Thos. C. Manning, in a dying condition at Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Lung Troubles and Wasting

Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time, as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is very pleasant to take."

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for $2 75, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or $3 for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

The elections which have gone against the prohibitionists have developed the fact that prohibition, though young, is a giant, and a giant that is growing in every limb and nerve and muscle; and when he has become a few months older, we shall see exploits that will make somebody's hair stand on end.

Fast Time by Kennesaw.

The fast time of 40 hours to Washington, and 46½ hours to New York, is made only by Queen and Crescent to Chattanooga, and thence by Kennesaw, via Bristol and Lynchburg, to Washington. This is the shortest possible line—only 1,111 miles from New Orleans to Washington City, and 1,339 miles to New York. Kennesaw office, 22 Carondelet street.

The promise of Messrs. Schlicht & Field, publishers of the Cosmopolitan, to make valuable improvements in that excellent magazine on their removal to New York, has been fulfilled in the letter and spirit of improvement. The illustrations, contributions and general make-up of the October number is first-class in every point. The subscription is only $2 per year; sample copies, twenty cents. Office, 29 Park Row, New York.

A Fine Piano for Senator Mahone.

[From the Baltimore American]

A number of prominent musical people gathered in the warerooms of Wm. Knabe & Co. yesterday to examine a piano made by the firm for Senator "Billy" Mahone, of Virginia, for his Washington residence. The instrument was specially designed and built for that gentleman, and is truly a magnificent specimen of the highest musical as well as decorative art. It is a full Concert Grand, the same in size and general outline as the famous grand Messrs. Knabe & Co. furnished for the White House. The case is of rich and beautifully figured rosewood, decorated with inlaid work of white holly, of unique and intricate design, carried out in the most artistic manner. Each panel has a group of different musical instruments, the whole surrounded by borders of fine marquetry work in leaves and flowers; etc. The legs and lyre are richly carved and decorated to match the body of the case, the whole producing a striking, and at the same time most refined esthetic effect. The tone is superb, striking the listener by its wonderful volume, depth and richness, combining with greatest power a most refined and mellow character and charming singing quality, the action and touch perfectly delightful to the performer by its ease and responsiveness.

With this issue we begin another year's advertising for THE MCSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, of Baltimore, Md. The firm has been using space in this paper for years past, and know the value of conscientious advertising. There is no concern in the country that is more reliable in their business transactions; always courteous and obliging, willing to give every customer full justice, and full value for the money; furnishing the finest grade and best quality of Bells, they deserve full recognition and a full share of the trade of our people. There are no Bells in the market that are superior to those they manufacture, and this I evidenced by the fact that the demand for McSHANE BELLS has gradually grown and increased year after year until now, and is apparently getting heavier every month. During 1886 they furnished 856 Bells to churches and for other purposes; and from Jan. 1st to Sept. 17th they have shipped away 615 Bells, indicating a total for 1887 of about 920 Bells. Our people will do well to write this firm for prices and terms when in want of Bells.

IT IS WELL.

Yes, it is well! the evening shadows lengthen;
Dome's golden gates shine on our ravished sight;
And though the tender ties we try to strengthen

'Tis well! The way was often dull and weary;
The spirit fainted oft beneath its load;
No sunshine came from skies all gray and dreary,
And yet our feet were bound to tread that road:

'Tis well that not again our hearts shall shiver
Beneath old sorrows once so hard to bear;
That not again beside death's darksome river
Shall we deplore the good, the loved, the fair.

No more, with tears wrought from deep inner anguish,
Shall we bewail the dear hopes crushed and gone;
No more need we in doubt or fear to languish,
So far the day is past, the journey done.

As voyagers, by fierce winds beat and broken,
Come into port beneath the calmer sky,
So we, still hearing on our brows the token
Of tempest past, draw to our haven nigh.

As sweeter air comes from the shores immortal,
Inviting homeward at the day's decline;
Almost we see where from the open portal
Fair forms stand beckoning with their smile divine.

'Tis well! The earth, with all her myriad voices,
Has lost the power our senses to enthrall.
We hear, above the tumult and the noises,

'Tis well, O friends! We should not turn—retracing
The long, vain years, nor call our lost youth back;
Gladly, with spirits braced, the future facing,

—Chambers' Journal.

Four Good Men.

BY "GIDEON."

Four good men will not answer to roll call at the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference. They have finished their work and have gone home to rest. They were old men—all on the superannuated list.

Rev. G. D. Wade was a good man and true, a strong preacher and faithful pastor. His name was as ointment poured forth in every community where he labored.

J. F. Truslow was a strong preacher who, in his palmy days, filled some of the best stations in the church. His last years were years of great trial and suffering. He had to battle long and hard with poverty, physical suffering and infirmity; but he held firmly to faith in Christ, and would not yield his hope of reaching heaven at last.

L. H. Davis, familiarly known as "Blind Davis," was a holy man of God, and a faithful and earnest preacher of the gospel of Christ. An injury to one eye, while he was yet a boy in his teens, caused the loss of sight in both eyes. My parents knew him in South Carolina before and after the loss of his eyes. He was a devout man, spending many hours every day in meditation and prayer. He was wonderfully familiar with the Scriptures and with the standard books of our Methodist Arminian theology, particularly with the writings of Wesley, Clark, Benson and Fletcher, on the doctrine of Christian perfection. It was exceedingly interesting and profitable to hear him converse on this subject. He was my father's pastor when I was about five years old, and I did not see him again until I was twenty-three, when I met him at Conference. I introduced myself to him, and told him whose son I was, when he said: "Yes, yes, I remember. This is that little tow-headed 'Gilderoy.' Why, my brother, I am so glad God has called you to the ministry. Many a time I've prayed for and with you." It was very impressive and suggestive to see Bro. Davis when engaged in private prayer. His sightless eyes were always turned upward, and he seemed to talk to God as friend to friend. He held out his right hand with palm upturned as if waiting for God to put a blessing in it, and every few minutes he would lay that hand on his left breast, as if laying the blessing away in his heart. I once asked: "Bro. Davis, why do you hold out your open hand when you pray?" "Why, my brother," he replied, "I know God is going to give it to me, and I want to be ready to receive it." That was an expression of faith visible to the beholder. The motives and actions of the inner man often find expression in the outer man.

Rev. William Murrah, D. D., died, on Sunday last, after a brief illness: Dr. Murrah was a strong man every way—physically, mentally and spiritually. His name will be a household word in hundreds of homes in Alabama and Eastern Mississippi for generations to come. I never knew him personally till sixteen years ago; but, considering the difference in our ages, we were on intimate terms. Dr. Murrah's preaching was at once expository and hortatory, both instructive and moving. He was wonderfully gifted in short, apt, pithy saying—aphorisms that clung to you and grew as time went by. He had a "chop-logic" method with cavilers that generally unhorsed an antagonist at the first fire. The same man rarely locked horns with Dr. Murrah a second time. The first lick he hit was always a stunner. Bro. Murrah was a most delightful companion. He was a wise man—wise about men and things, and he had a rich and, apparently, inexhaustible fund of anecdote, with the keenest sense of humor. This gave him great influence with the young people down to a green old age. Educated, uncommon people always heard Dr. Murrah with pleasure and profit, and then his style of preaching was exactly suited to the common people, the children and the negroes.

These old men have finished their work and are at rest. The links that bind us to the past are breaking, one by one, and pretty soon the boys of the present will be the old men of the generation to come. Our memorial service this year will be peculiarly solemn to all, but specially so to a few who are going down the sunset-side of the hill of life. I do not remember, during a ministry of twenty-nine years, a time when we were called upon to mourn the death of so many old men at one Conference. The young men should lay this lesson to heart.

OCTOBER 13, 1887.

Louisville Conference Session.

BY J. B. COTTRELL, D. D.

Bishop Granbery held our Conference at Hartford, from September 28 till Monday night, October 3, dispatching business in no haste, yet with tact, courtesy and executiveness. His unpretending manners and genial address were most grateful, and all realized the justness of the selection the General Conference made when electing him Bishop. His sermon on Sunday morning, before ordaining the elders, was chaste and effective.

The Conference sermon, by Rev. Ed. R. Harrison, was an admirable one. Rev. I. W. Emerson was appointed to preach that of next session.

Dr. Steel, transferred to us from Memphis, last year, and stationed at Walnut Street, Louisville, where he has well established himself in the esteem of all, preached a sermon on Sunday night that drew the Conference to him, literally; for at the close we impulsively gathered around him and shook hands in a storm of hallelujahs. There were passages in his sermon of real power and sublimity, and I felt rejoiced that one so gifted had been transferred to our Conference.

Rev. Dr. Kelly, of the Kentucky Conference, has been transferred, and fills Broadway station. He has fairly won his spurs as a writer and a preacher, and will find a cordial greeting in Louisville and the Conference.

There was some discussion on the temperance report. The word "prohibition" being used, it was suggested by me that the word per cent be substituted, that our action savor not of any political sap. The committee declared that the term had no such squinting, and my suggestion was not agreed to. I took occasion to say that, as citizens, we could each, for himself, judge, speak, and vote according to our several views of policy; that, as for myself, I'm a prohibitionist, and when the issue is presented singly, aside from party politics, I am ready for the platform on its behalf. I regretted most sincerely that in some of our church papers Hon. Jeff. Davis had been denounced as he had for utterance of an opinion in a question of policy. Brow-beating for opinion sake, when questions of policy are at issue, will be "honored more in the breach than in the observance," as evolution of the higher elements of humanity is marked. No little injury was done in the late contests, by the treatment Mr. Davis received, as I apprehend. Justice to a cause calls for no injustice to persons. I differ, radically, with Mr. Davis; but I honor him for ringing clear on all questions upon which he chooses to speak or write; and, in memory of his unflinching loyalty to his people through all their bitter trials, I say from the depths of my soul, "Heaven bless him!"

Your correspondent goes from Cadiz to Franklin. He had the pleasure of hearing yesterday his successor, Bro. W. K. Piner, in two sermons. He is the son of Dr. J. W. Piner, who used to be stationed in New Orleans, and it will be a pleasure to the comrades and friends of the father to hear that the son promises to be a stalwart in the gospel. He is gifted, and dares utterance as he conceives truth. Of course, all such will have rubs and bruises; but "wisdom is justified of her children" at length. I withstood a heavy pressure of solicitation from preacher and people to occupy one of the hours; but I was eager to hear and, therefore, forbore. A delightful year I've had, and, in leaving this good people, I realize how gracious is our covenant of life and love.

Franklin is one of the most pleasant stations of the Conference, and is on the railroad, fifteen miles below Fairview Cemetery, at Bowling Green.

In closing, allow me to express my gratification on reading the communication of Rev. J. A. Parker, of Ruston. He makes a philosophic and practical statement of the matter, worthy of one who gives thought to the business of the church.

The news of the death of the wife of Bro. F. M. Grace, though not a surprise, gives sorrow. She was an excellent woman and noble companion.

I put the ADVOCATE in my valise, as we are packing, that I may read, deliberately, on getting to Franklin, the article of Bishop Keener, addressed to an honest unbeliever. God bless the dear Bishop! In the olden days he was an inspiration to me. I read his "Post Oak Circuit" until I almost had it by heart. As he edited the ADVOCATE in the transition period, in the days of our humiliation, he was a power that was felt along the line from Maine to Mexico.

CADIZ, KY., Oct. 10, 1887.

Spiritual Quickening.

BY REV. J. W. ELLISON.

Spiritual influence is, by all, allowed to be a mystery. It is a power distinctly divine, and should never be confounded with the human. Nor should we lose sight of the nature of this power. It is persuasive. It is spoken of as like the wind. Its effects may be seen, as may the blowing of the wind; but this difference must be observed: The wind is a coercive power, moving objects, the law of whose nature is to be at rest. The spiritual power is persuasive, operating upon the mind of man, the law of whose nature is to be dead to God and his law, which is spiritual, as will be seen in infancy—that is, unconscious that there is a God, or that nature is out of harmony with God and his law. While it may have been known to some extent by Adam, yet his posterity would have been born without the knowledge of their sad condition; and, when passing away by death, they would have fallen into an eternal death with new and great surprise. To be informed of this state was certainly a great power, if with this information there be presented a plan and promise of redemption from that state. The office of the Holy Spirit is to create a conviction of this deplorable state, and to direct the mind of man to the plan proposed for his redemption, and to persuade him to recognize the one and accept the other. Thus, when he is convinced of his sinful state and condition, and "turns to God with repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ," in whom this plan of redemption centers for its execution, he is said to be converted or changed in mind—changed from "darkness" or ignorance of God and his law, as also of his own sad state and condition. As sin or "all manner of concupiscence (lust) was wrought" in man's nature, so as to be constitutionally sinful or corrupt, passing this sinful nature to the next generation, and so on, man could never approach God in any successive generation but as sinful beings, in turn to be convinced of their sinful state and condition, and fly to God, through Christ, as humanity's Great High Priest. Devils believe their fall, and realize their enmity to God, but can never turn or change their mind towards God, because no plan is proposed or help rendered; but it is not so with man. His chief difficulty is the bondage of ignorance. If this power of "the kingdom of darkness" can be overcome, there is a chance for his deliverance; for such love as offers deliverance, as offers pity or condolence to such a sad calamity, is almost irresistible as a persuasive power to draw the sinner to God for this mercy.

This mysterious spiritual power of the Holy Ghost is coercive, as restraining sin in man's nature that otherwise must hold dominion over him forever, but persuasive to man thus liberated from the power of ignorance, one of the phases of sin.

"When the strong man keepeth his goods, they are safe; but when a stronger than he cometh, he bindeth him, and taketh his goods." If the devil could have been superior to God, and could have prevented this information or light of offered deliverance, he would have held man forever. But this he could not do. God was greater and more powerful. The plan is such "that whosoever," when his state and condition is recognized, "shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved"—that is, taken into the plan of redemption, to be comforted concerning this sad misfortune, with the assurances of Christ's power to "bruise the serpent's head," and finally destroy him or sin—wholly purge it from nature's constitution, and restore or renew the Holy Spirit's nature, which was originally lost, to man's constitution, and thus make him "a child of God," bearing "the likeness and image of God," and perfect purity, as was the original state, which would be, in the truest sense, a regeneration—"washed in the blood of the Lamb."

This love, when seen by the sinner, melts his heart, brings about a change of mind, as a sinner willing to be saved. But as this restraining power over sin in man is not yet extracted or removed, but restrained or bound, and also the quickening power of love, both come to him through faith, those powers, restraining and quickening, will be more or less weak and irregular, as regulating the life of the believer. Faith in the truth is what secures these powers of God, so mysteriously given. A deceived condition in faith might be very fatal to a well-regulated life, or one intended to be so. For instance, if I should claim a change of nature, I should then very consistently claim that the experience of "love, joy, peace," etc., was to be accounted for under the law of a changed nature within itself; whereas, in Scripture, it is accounted for as the "fruit of the Spirit" mysteriously supplied, and that constantly, or as constantly as intelligent faith is constant, and varying as faith varies.

Under this law of faith in Christ, then, just in proportion to my faith in my own sinfulness, even to total depravity (sin disease), I should realize my need of help, and pray for that help as a foreign power, and should ever view it as a divine power, and not my nature. "If a man thinketh himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself." I want ever, while I am here, to account for my experience as a believer, as the mysterious work of the Spirit—"Christ in me by faith," "kept by the power of God," coercively, as restraining sin in me; persuasively, as keeping my mind upon the plan of my redemption and the source of my help, taking Christ's words as true—"Without me ye can do nothing."

The divine power of the Spirit is not, while in this world, woven into our nature. It must ever be viewed as a foreign power, distinct in itself from what I am. (II Cor. xii, 1-10.) It is a mystery never to be explained here, and it should be left as such. Our children being born with sinful or corrupt natures proves that it is a foreign power, and not a blending with our nature. (Gal. ii, 20.)

This state is called a quickening, or the importation of life to a lifeless substance, as in the case of a child, and must precede the birth. This taste or supernatural experience is what we have in this life, prior to the realization of all that is involved in our redemption from sin, as now seen by faith, to be a heavenly state.

This was Christ's argument to Nicodemus. "That which is born of the flesh"—or man in his fallen state—"is flesh." Children born from us are like us in nature—sinful, and the life that emanates from this nature is sinful before the law. But "that which is of the Spirit is Spirit." This certainly is so; and so of the life that flows from that Spirit's influence upon my mind, not coercive, but persuasive, the enmity of sin in me having been overcome by this divine power. When there is a full faith, the power of sin diminishes almost to nothing. But still it is restraint, and not a removal. It is a crucifixion or a slow death. "I die daily." Its extirpation is not, and can not be, in this life: therefore, let no one confound this influence with his own nature. My faith in the blood of Christ gives me peace with God every day, if applied every day, and entitles me to "the washing" of regeneration by the renewal of the Holy Ghost, as the law of my future being, and to a seat upon a throne.

Said Christ to Peter's inquiry, as to what they, who had "left all and followed him" by faith, should have, "What shall we have therefore?" "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (St. Matt. xix, 28.) This is so plain as to leave no doubt. But Paul is explicit. My body, in which my nature is lodged, and with which there is an inseparable alliance, by creation, with body and mind "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory: it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." (Phil. iii, 21.) Let no one stay away from God and his Christ because of the feeling of a sinful nature. Said Christ, as our High Priest, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," or a change of mind, as explained by Dr. C. G. Andrews, in the Sunday-school Lesson, not long ago.

Letter from Mrs. Landrum.

MR. EDITOR: My husband, Rev. J. Landrum, has been sick eight weeks at our home, in West Melville, and during the past week has been very near to the gates of death; but his condition is now somewhat improved.

The little church of thirty-nine persons, which the Lord has planted in this town under his ministry, has been equal to the draft on their time and patience and help, having been unwearied in their attention and kindness to us, and I desire, through the columns of the ADVOCATE, to thank them, as well as those who from a distance have sent words of love and sympathy in this, our time of great trial and affliction.

J. M. C. LANDRUM.

Revival at Sardis, Miss.

For more than two weeks we have been conducting religious services at Sardis. Bros. Hodge, Bowen, Beville, and George Lipscomb have been with us at different times all working earnestly and successfully. Bro. Lipscomb is a young layman, secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association for the State. Meeting still continues with the aid of Bros. Thames and Terry. Results so far: Church greatly stirred and moved forward, many young Christians established, sinners converted, and back-sliders reclaimed. Ten additions to the church last Sunday. Praise the Lord!

Special Notice.

Presiding elders, please give me the names of those who expect to come up for admission, the delegates elect and alternates, and the local preachers for deacon's and elder's orders. Those who shall bring their wives or daughters, write me; also persons who purpose having horses here, and when. Hope you will let me know at once concerning these matters. Will send railroad terms soon. Pray that our Conference will be a real benediction unto us all—visitors and town.

Yours, J. M. WYATT.

LUDICROUS INQUIRIES

What is your faith, and what your hope
Do you believe the gospel true?
And are you willing, and the love
Which is from heaven to heaven will move you

Do you, each day, devote to Him
And do you love him in return
Is you the highest wish to win
Or still to sin, but to learn

Is this "one thing" you've noticed him
Whate'er you do, in every place,
To do it all in Jesus' name,
And trust him for [illegible]

Have you the courage to confess
That you are Christ's, and he is yours?
And that his righteousness
Is what your faith in him secures?

O, do you know your sins forgiven
And can you sing, "Sweet Hour of Prayer"
Do you recede in hope of heaven?
And will you try to meet me there?

The Sunday-School Lesson for October 30, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE HARVEST, AND THE LABORERS.

Matthew ix, 35-38; x, 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Freely ye have received, freely give."—Matthew x, 8.

INTRODUCTORY.

This lesson brings us to about the close of the second year of our Lord's ministry. It is the beginning of what is regarded his third circuit through Galilee. After the events of the last lesson he had again gone to the home of his childhood, and had attempted to give them the benefits of his glorious teaching; but they had again rejected him as unworthy of their acceptance, charging him with being in league with Beelzebub, the prince of the devils. In everyone of their allegations against him, the Master exposed their fallacy and put them to silence. Although they admitted that he spake as never man spake, they still endeavored to entangle him in his talk, and refused their faith and homage. Regardless of their opposition and of the discouragements, as fast as they refused to receive him in one city, he would turn to another. His message must be delivered, whether they would hear or whether they would forbear.

THE HARVEST.

Verse 35. "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages." From the time he entered upon his ministry, he was never idle. From city to village, from desert to mountain, from house to house, he continually verified his reply to his parents, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" "Teaching in their synagogues." The word "synagogue" literally means a congregation, and indicates the place where the Jews were in the habit of worshiping just after they were banished from the temple, and afterwards the places where they met for their solemn, periodic meetings. That the Savior was permitted to teach there clearly shows that he was recognized as being connected in some way with the priesthood. As his act of driving the money changers out of the temple was not gainsayed nor resisted, he was confessedly the master of the synagogue. "Preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness, and every disease." The New Version and Wesley's Notes leave out "among the people," as superfluous. Telling the good news of the salvation of the world must necessarily in those days be accompanied by the working of miracles, in order to its divine attestation. The evidence which the Master sent to John of his Messiahship was, "The lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them."

36. "But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted." To behold the multitudes ever called forth from Jesus his kindly offices. The sight was sufficient to affect his heart, and thence followed his gracious words and his helpful ministrations. "Were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd." They had, indeed, gone astray from the Shepherd and Bishop of their souls, and Christ yearned to bring them back.

37. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." The yellow harvest falling upon the ground, and wasting for want of a reaper to gather it into the garner, typifies the thoughtless, purposeless multitude without a conception of duty or destiny, ready to drop, all unprepared, into a changeless eternity for want of some blessed teacher to arrest their attention and turn their minds to better things. Alas! how few and inadequate were the workers compared to this extended and arduous field of labor. "The field is the world."

38. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into the harvest." This injunction was doubtless called forth from the blessed Savior by his sight of the whitening fields, and by his expectation of soon ordaining and sending forth laborers into the vineyard. But this injunction still rests upon the followers of Christ. It can be said with just as mournful an emphasis now even as in the days of the Savior, "The harvest is plenteous, and the laborers are few." Multitudes even in the circles of civilization, as well as in the far-off islands of the sea, are sitting in heathenish darkness, and are yearning to be told of the Light of Life.

THE LABORERS.

Ch. x; V. 1. "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples." He had a number of disciples, in a general sense; but these were chosen for a specific purpose. It may be that the number, twelve, was chosen to correspond with the twelve patriarchs and the twelve tribes of Israel. Though these twelve have never had successors in the church, still the great Head reserves the right of calling men to labor in the ministry. "Gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness." The miraculous power to heal all manner of sickness no longer belongs to the ministry, though, without doubt, some sick persons have been healed in answer to prayer. The power to cast out evil spirits—that is, to be the means, under God, of converting souls and of delivering them from the power of the Evil One—is still the blessed prerogative of a true minister of Christ. The greater the success in this line, the surer the evidence of the presence and the power of the Spirit.

2. "Now the names of the twelve apostles." The first and the only time which this title has been given to any orders of ministers. The etymology of the word is "to send away;" and simply distinguishes those who were sent out to preach and to administer to the church by Christ in person. "The first, Simon, who is called Peter." The "first" does not in any sense mean primacy, as nothing in the after history of the apostles showed Peter to have any preeminence. It simply means that he was called first and mentioned first. He, with John and James, was favored among the apostles. His name denotes "rock," or "stone," and Christ said, "Upon this rock"—that is, upon Peter confessing that Jesus is the Christ—"I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Peter is said to have died by crucifixion, and he asked that he might be crucified with his head downwards, feeling unworthy to be crucified as his Lord had been. Andrew, the brother of Peter, was also crucified. His body was afterward removed to Constantinople by the Emperor Constantine. "James and John, the sons of Zebedee." James was surnamed the Great, to distinguish him from the brother of Judas. He was beheaded by Herod. John, the beloved disciple, was the youngest of the apostles, and the only one who died a natural death. He was thrown into a caldron of burning oil by the order of Domitian, but was preserved unharmed. Philip was a native of Bethsaida, the same city of Peter and Andrew. He was scourged and imprisoned, and finally hung up against a pillar in Hierapolis until he was dead, because of his faithful preaching. Bartholomew, the son of Ptolemy, or Nathanael, as he was sometimes called, labored in Armenia as his mission field, and was there said to have been flayed alive, and afterwards crucified. Thomas labored in India. He was pursued by the Brahmins, and was thrust through with a lance while he was at prayer. Matthew, called also Levi, was a Roman tax gatherer, was the author of the gospel. He suffered martyrdom in Nadabar, a city of Ethiopia. James, the son of Alpheus, called James the Less, is supposed to be the author of the epistle; was stoned to death while praying for his murderers. Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus, was also called Jude, or Judas. He was supposed to have been slain at Berytus, and honorably buried there. Simon the Canaanite was thought by some to be the bridegroom mentioned at the wedding at Cana of Galilee. After Pentecost he traveled through Africa, and finally into Great Britain, where he was crucified and buried. "And Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him."

5. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not." This commission was made to prevent the first offer of the gospel being made to the Gentiles, so that no stumbling-block might be placed in the way of the Jews. Our Lord himself afterwards preached the gospel to the Samaritans. (John iv.)

6. "But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Israel were the ancient fold of God, but they had sadly estrayed. The Master wanted them to be returned to their fold and their Shepherd.

7. "As ye go, preach." Confine yourself to no locality, and, as ye go from place to place, let your message be, "The kingdom of Heaven is at hand"—that is, true religion with its comforts in this life, and its rewards in the life to come, is offered to all.

8. "Freely ye have received, freely give." While the Bible says they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel, yet a minister who would withhold the blessed gospel because he was not sufficiently paid, would be a monster. Oftentimes is the gospel preached successfully to thousands by ministers who find it difficult to provide daily bread. "As poor, yet making many rich."

TEACHINGS OF THE LESSON.

1. Imitate Christ. Go about doing good.

2. Consider the great harvest. Pray and labor for its garnering.

3. As an inspiration to liberality, constantly remember, "Freely ye have received, freely give."

From the Work.

MARION CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have closed my series of protracted meetings on the Marion circuit. I have nine appointments, and have held a protracted meeting at all of them. Our meetings were all good meetings.

I was assisted in six of my meetings by Rev. J. C. Lang, a local preacher from the Hillsboro circuit. Bro. Lang preached with untiring zeal, and in demonstration of the Spirit, and with power. By his affable and sweet spirit he grew on the people; and his ministry was owned and honored of God.

I was assisted in one of my meetings—namely, Bethel—by Bro. H. P. Lewis, from the Lauderdale circuit. Bro. Lewis preached us four good, practical, heart-searching sermons. We had, at that meeting, a number of conversions, and seventeen accessions to the church. Bro. W. C. Day, a lay member from Marion station, was with us, and rendered good service in praying and instructing penitents.

We had no help at Curtis Chapel except Bro. Day. We had a good meeting at that place.

We have received into the church at our meetings forty-eight members, and most all converted. To God be all the glory!

J. H. HOLLAND, P. C.

MONTICELLO CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Seven appointments within the bounds of Monticello circuit. Commenced with four. Had protracted meetings at all, save one. Accessions, 68; adults baptized, 22—infants, 36. Good revivals at all the appointments. All Conference claims will be paid. Many thanks to Bros. Gale, Downer, Benson, Denson and Dawson for service rendered. This is a new circuit; with proper care will develop into a first-class circuit.

By the suggestion of a good sister (Baptist), I have adopted the following on receiving members in the church: After all Christians give "the right hand of Christian fellowship," extend the privilege to all the children and all the sinners to come forward and give the right hand of congratulation—all being glad when anyone joins the church. We tried this plan. It was a time of rejoicing to see the little children performing this service. The children feel that they are recognized. It takes a flank move on the sinners, and smokes out the seclusive sort. At this meeting one refused to come forward. He looked like he was a lost "one by himself."

WM. HOOVER, P. C.

SUMMIT, Mississippi.

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: I had the pleasure of attending the camp meeting at the celebrated Sam Jones Camp Ground, in Amite county, Miss., and was pleased with much I saw and heard the five days I was there; and, as I have seen no notice of the meeting in the ADVOCATE, I thought it not amiss to say something.

The grounds are located out in a wild rural district of country, in a deep hollow; on either side high, romantic hills. The railroad runs on high embankments above the campus, so if the cars were to run off, it would make a smash of things. The grounds, as nature left them, are about as lonely as could be, but, by artistic skill, could be made one of the most lovely and romantic. A large and beautiful spring branch runs through the center of the campus; two large springs, about the right distance apart, sufficient for a dozen camp meetings. They have a good tabernacle, but I think badly constructed—too long and narrow. The congregations splendid, both in size and good order. Has not the fencing in of the grounds something to do with the behavior of the people? I think between twenty and thirty preachers were there. Preaching, in the main, good, better, best; but, Mr. Editor, how things have changed since the days of "auld lang syne," when I first went to camp meeting! Then the most of the preachers there were elderly men; young preachers were the exceptions, and were hardly ever called upon to preach. But it is the opposite now. At this meeting but two classed as old men. One was the grand old leader of the host in the Mississippi Conference, strong, hearty, ready: namely, John G. Jones. The other has held honored places in the church; but he took no public part in the services, not even a prayer, while I was there. The Sunday program was filled by quite young men, but the eleven o'clock service was fully up to the demand. I don't think the results were equal to the efforts made, from some cause. I was glad to see so many promising, educated young preachers running over with zeal for God.

I think the outlook for the Sam Jones Camp Meeting is quite encouraging. Another change from the old way of holding morning prayers. Then every tent-holder had prayers in his tent at the same time. If there were thirty tents, there were thirty Scripture lessons read, songs and prayers—all the family guests and servants present. But I thought, when I heard the singing all round and praying at the same time, it was close akin to heaven. But now a few gather at the stand, some young preacher gets up time enough to conduct the exercises, short lesson, little song, a prayer—all told.

Well, I am glad I was permitted, in the providence of God, to attend the camp meeting at Sam Jones Camp Ground.

VISITOR.

ALEXANDRIA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our district high school opened successfully this morning with Rev. Charles E. McLean, A. B., principal.

I wish to say, through the ADVOCATE, to the brethren of the Conference, and especially of the Alexandria District, that we are prepared to teach all the branches of a high school education thoroughly. We will have only the best teachers. Tuition from two to four dollars per month. Board in good families for ten dollars.

Now, brethren, altogether, help us.

Both sexes taught.

B. F. WHITE.

OCTOBER 1, 1887.

MT. CARMEL, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my round of protracted meetings with good results: forty-two accessions, a number converted, and the membership greatly revived.

Finances are coming up well, and I hope by Conference to report all my collections up in full. We have done something for the Lambuth call and week of prayer.

W. W. SIMMONS.

OCTOBER 5, 1887.

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have collected and forwarded $50 65 to Dr. Kelley from the Ocean Springs charge, to pay on the missionary debt. In many respects, we are glad to know that things are on the up-grade on the coast. Your brother,

G. F. THOMPSON.

SEPTEMBER, 28, 1887.

POPLARVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our protracted meeting at this place, after a continuance of nine days, was brought to a close Thursday night, September 22. The results are as follows: Four candidates for church membership, eight professed conversion, and God's believing children generally, and some of them greatly blessed.

On the twenty-first ultimo Rev. J. W. McLaurin worshiped with us, and at night preached a very effective sermon on the text: "We know that we have passed from death unto life." (1 John iii, 14.) After the altar exercises, he organized a branch American Bible Society with a capital of $50, raised by the citizens of Poplarville, which will be a great convenience to the people.

Rev. J. M. Gann preached once for us, with unction from above, to the edification of believers.

Prof. George, a graduate of Cooper Institute, and a zealous member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, conducted a day-service with much profit to all present.

Taking the inclemency of the weather, and the scarcity of ministerial aid into consideration, we feel that our meeting was a success; and I feel assured that our people here are in a more spiritual condition than they have been since I came among them. And the prospects, spiritually, are brighter for our future here.

With many prayers for the success of the ADVOCATE, I am,

Yours in Christ,

J. N. TUCKER.

SALLIS CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a most excellent meeting at Sallis. The Lord was with us in great power, and the church was graciously revived. Had ten conversions and six additions. Nearly all the members, both men and women, will lead in prayer anywhere when called upon. Several new family altars erected. I believe we have the most consecrated membership I ever knew. We have a Woman's Missionary Society that is doing fine work for the Master. Bro. T. W. Lewis was with us, and preached to the delight of all, and won the affection of this people.

With the rest of the good things, they did not forget their pastor, for they kept up a "storm" at the parsonage all the week, and also presented the pastor with a nice quilt, which the good sisters had made for the missionary cause, and sold by contributions. You know all this makes us feel good at the parsonage. Yes, we are all happy in the love of God; and this makes us love one another. God has done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

W. W. WILLIAMS.

BOWERTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have closed my fourth protracted meeting, all of which were a grand success. Many professors and careless church members raised to a higher plane, and made to rejoice on account of the Spirit's presence in his saving power. Persons who had not spoken for three or four years met and embraced each other around the altar. One hundred conversions and one hundred accessions. Three prayer meetings organized, and quite a number of family altars erected.

I am under many obligations to Bros. V. D. Skipper, W. B. Hines, C. W. and C. C. Campbell, James Legett, J. T. and A. B. Nicholson for valuable service rendered.

We give God all the glory! "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

D. F. GUICE.

OCTOBER 5, 1887.

SALTILLO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a report of Saltillo circuit, North Mississippi Conference.

I have just closed a series of protracted meetings, lasting for ten weeks, resulting in fine revivals. Over one hundred conversions, fifty-seven accessions to our church, with more to follow.

I had a hearty co-operation of local preachers and working church members. Thanks to Bro. T. J. Taylor, of Richland circuit, for faithful and valuable assistance. Give God all praise!

The Saltillo circuit is in Lee and Itawamba counties—both dry. Local option works well.

Yours fraternally,

W. T. SHELL.

SUMMERFIELD CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: There seems to be a deepening spiritual work going on with us on this circuit than has existed for eighteen years. Bro. Barr has just closed a meeting at Shiloh Church, holding four nights, with nineteen accessions, thirteen adult baptisms—several the heads of families. The spiritual condition of the church was greatly revived; and there was a greater spiritual interest on the night that it closed than at any previous time.

Bro. Barr is an interesting worker, having established Sabbath-schools at the outpost of most of his appointments.

There has been about thirty-nine accessions on the work. Other protracted meetings are still to be held at some of the churches, and we trust that this is only the beginning of a great work on our circuit. Pray for us.

R. ROBERTS.

HAZLEHURST, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Nicholson has just closed a successful protracted meeting, resulting in fifty conversions, twenty-five of whom joined our church. The membership has also been awakened to a new zeal for Christ and his church. Family altars have been newly erected, class and prayer meetings greatly built up, and the missionary spirit active.

The Sabbath-school, under the management of Bro. Millsaps, is a model of order and clock-work movement. At the close of the exercises, the teachers of each class, rising, report the progress of each class in their studies, also all absentees, showing a watchful care of their precious charges.

The church has been newly painted; the tall spire pointing heavenward like an angel's finger.

Bro. Nicholson is full of zeal, and a preacher of power.

T. J. C.

SOUTH BOSSIER CIRCUIT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Just closed a two-days' meeting in Bossier Point with six accessions to the church, and ten children baptized. This has been a great year for baptizing children in this country. Wish the ADVOCATE would send about twenty-five more good families to Bossier Point. It is a fine country, but sparsely settled. Before the war there were a few wealthy families in possession; now they are gone, leaving room for many small farmers, and few only have as yet occupied. V., S. & P. railway passes through the northern end of said country.

Yours in Christ,

R. M. BLOCKER.

SEPTEMBER, 28, 1887.

WALTHALL CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have closed my round of protracted meetings—six in number. The Lord has been with us, and blessed us abundantly. The membership has been greatly revived. Fifty seven added to the church, with more to follow. The number of conversions is unknown—sixty-five or seventy, I suppose. Infants baptized during the year, twenty-seven. Foreign mission assessment paid in the early part of the year. I think all other assessments will be raised by Conference.

W. C. HARRIS, P. C.

VERONA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord has done great things for us on Richmond circuit: 175 or 200 conversions, 121 accessions to our church. Two more meetings to hold. Have had only two days' rest in eleven weeks, yet feel stronger than when commenced. To God be all the glory!

Cotton crop very short, but will be largely in advance of last year. In finance, if not full, I feel more than ever before that our labor in the Lord is not in vain. Pray for us.

T. J. TAYLOR, P. C.

SEPTEMBER 26, 1887.

PONTOTOC CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my last meeting on the Pontotoc circuit, North Mississippi Conference, with the following results: Forty-two conversions, 46 accessions to our church, and the churches greatly revived. I was assisted by Bros. Recket, Gladney, A. J. Foster, and Willie Vaughn, all of whom did efficient service for the Lord. We thank God for his goodness manifested to us.

Schools and Other Things.

BY REV. B. F. WHITE.

I am truly proud of the last issue of our ADVOCATE. I regard Bro. J. A. Parker's article as a needed warning to our Missionary Board. Would it had come sooner and been heeded! We must cease this venturing so much in our financial affairs.

"The Honest Unbeliever" is truly timely. It would be timely at any time. It is, as the Bishop's productions ever are, full of deep thought and wonderful suggestion.

I am glad to see the article, from Bishop Galloway, on "Systematic Education," which appeared some weeks past, followed up by an article from Bro. Wier's pen. For years I have, in an humble way, been trying to practically develop a church system of connectional education. We have the University, equal to the wants of our church, perhaps, for the next half-century or more. We have the colleges, which, if properly endowed, would meet all the demands of our church for the same length of time. We have the great Mississippi, and the tributaries as the Ohio, Missouri, Arkansas and Red, but hardly a tributary to them, and no fountains from which flow in constant limpid streams the waters to fill these larger channels.

Our system is, the want of system. We are putting up the roof of the building, with the girders in the air, without posts, sills, braces or foundation-rocks. The few airy nothings, in the shape of primary schools, are only calculated to disqualify for advanced learning, making the task of all higher grades of education almost an impossibility. The celebrated public schools of the best type—such as those in New Orleans—are chargeable with the same insane management. I have known one school in New Orleans to have in the primary department about sixty pupils for one teacher. This plan necessarily disqualifies for the higher education of the pupil. Pupils in the primary classes can not know how to study till taught. They are profitably employed (in this State) only when reciting. Six recitations per school-day of six hours—each ten minutes' long—is the whole time they are profitably employed, leaving five hours of the six in which they can only learn idle, mischievous habits which, formed once, are almost impossible to ever overcome. Right here is the evil of evils in all our schools. Little children scarcely learn anything but idleness and its swarm of evils. Just here is where we must begin the reform in our public schools, and right here is the great want of the church in arranging a system of connectional education. The teacher of the primary department of a school, or a primary school, should be the best teacher—the most learned, the most experienced, and the most patient and pure; should have only (I would say) not more than fifteen pupils: so that each pupil could be under the eye and care of the teacher every moment of the recitation. The recitation should not be longer than from ten to thirty minutes, according to the advancement of the class. As soon as the recitation ends, the teacher should have them, under his eye and direction, engage in recreation—such recreation as would amuse, divert the mind from books and develop the physique of the child. Let it last from five to ten minutes. Then the recitation; and so on through the day. This system would prevent totally all the evils of habits of idleness and its consequences. Hence the pupil advancing to a higher grade is so trained to application that the teacher of the next grade can easily teach twice the number, and these, advancing to another higher grade, can be doubled again, or nearly so, and still the teacher can meet all their wants. They have been moulded, prepared; and the system will be such that the school term will be shortened, the pleasures and success of education increased a hundredfold.

In pay schools the tuition fees should be reversed from what they are: the largest price paid in the primary department, and decreasing in ratio till the education is finished.

This system would have another advantage, viz: The parents (from a financial standpoint) would become a hundredfold better co-operators in the advancement of their children.

The church needs these fountains, in every society of every charge, as feeders to the district high school. Every presiding elder's district should have its high school as a feeder to the college, and the college should feed the university.

For our church (say) one university, fifty or a hundred colleges, thousands of high schools and tens of thousands of primary schools—all taught by the purest, most exemplary, intelligent teachers, but especially the primary schools. As Bro. Wier says, we seem to forget that it is the child-mind which is the most easily impressed and, consequently, the most important period in forming and developing the future character. It will be a sad day when the church of God becomes careless of the purity of its ministry, and yet it is of equal, if not more, importance that the teachers of our children be pure. They are in personal contact with the child, with great authority, for six or seven hours each day; the minister probably seldom in personal contact, and but weekly in a public manner has he the child under his influence at all. Let us have a corrected system of schools, beginning with the primary in every congregation and ending with Vanderbilt.

ALEXANDRIA, Louisiana.

A Venerable Virgin Says Her Say.

It is my private opinion, publicly expressed, that if "J. W. M." had known more about the subject upon which he elaborated at such length, he would have said less. It is evident he does not read the stock and poultry notes in his agricultural newspaper, for along that line arises the universal cry, "The scrub must go!" But because David thought it was a fine thing to have a quiver full of children, "J. W. M." unblushingly asserts that a scrub husband is, therefore, a thousand times better than none.

Now, it had never occurred to my dim mind that David was a desirable model for nineteenth century young men to imitate, for it has always been my conviction that he preached better than he practiced. If he had possessed fewer wives, it would have been more to his honor; and if the abominable conduct of his sons caused him heartfelt happiness, that sainted old gentleman had a horribly degraded idea of felicity—or, perhaps, his quiver was not full.

When so much attention is given to improving the lower animals, sure and it seems a bit odd that a civilized Christian should consider it a capital crime that a woman should want "the best or none" for a life-long companion. Nevertheless, notwithstanding this, "J. W. M." insinuates that, no matter how tacky and runty a man may be, it is a condescension for him to rescue a woman from the dreadful doom of single blessedness, and any woman should deem it a precious privilege to cater to his whims and raise his scrappy, scabby children. If "J. W. M." is a preacher—and I hope he is not, for he is a disgrace to his district if he is—he had better repent, and that speedily, for, at Conference, if the presiding elder does not arraign him for immorality, he will neglect his duty. Heaven knows it is hard enough for parents to raise their children right; and with this "poor-husband-thousand-times-better-than-none" doctrine great harm will be done. There is a big screw loose somewhere. "J. W. M." probably proposed to a girl, and when she would not have him, vented his spleen in the article frequently referred to.

I have known women who cooked three meals every day, who washed, ironed, sewed, did all the housework, cut and carried in all the wood, and who milked the cows in an open lot, without so much as the shade from a barbed-wire fence for protection from summer sun and wintry wind. And that kind, considerate husband, where, oh! where was he? Sitting in the most comfortable corner of the fire-place, smoking his pipe in peace. And that beautiful boy bursting with sweetfulness? In the next best corner, playing checkers with a boon companion. When these women died with diseases unknown to the medical fraternity, loud was the lamentation of the survivors upon whom the mysterious hand of Providence had been laid.

I have been acquainted with Methodist women, who lived within a stone's-throw of their church, who on Christmas morning have had to send for help to prevent that noble, knightly husband from setting the house a-fire and murdering those beloved boys budding to bloom into the similitude of their father. Why was this thus? The old man was drunk again. I have lived near neighbor to women who annually enriched this impoverished planet with a half-witted, full-blooded scrub baby, who worked, early and late, in the house or in the field, at anything, from making a mush poultice to mauling rails, until they dropped dead in their tracks. After killing several women in the enviable manner described, I have heard the worthy widowers commiserated as having "mighty bad luck with their wives."

In all my wide and varied experience I have known one couple who succeeded successfully in raising a boy that was worth making a stir about. The father was a minister, and the son followed his footsteps. It took him seven years to finish his Conference course, and his class-mates called him a "crank;" but during that time he had been instrumental in saving more than a thousand souls, for his highest ambition was to work for Christ. When the crowning day comes, I think he will not only receive his own star-studded tiara, but a few dozen crowns originally intended for other people.

Finally, I will aver that "J. W. M." could not do a more manly deed, than to get on his knees and pray and plead and petition for gumption to see himself as others see him, and for grit to apologize for the error of his ways, if it is the advice of

AN OLD MAID.

Schools and Territories.

I acknowledge the lack in our church of any prescribed educational policy. We have a mission policy and a church extension policy which makes both of these purely connectional. Perhaps we need an educational policy that our church schools may be connectional. Then there would be no longer any question as to the rights of territory. The whole may then be regarded as one province to which everyone may have legitimate access; but in North Mississippi we can not but object to our territory only being regarded as provincial and to exist only in connection with something else.

We tender our sincere thanks to our sister Conferences for the good work they have rendered us in our weakness; but we now have a desire to stand up and relieve them of this kindness further. We appreciate their desire to still extend to us a helping hand in the education of our daughters: but we can not help feeling (if we are afraid to say so) that we could afford to be let alone in our patronage and finances until we are established. This may be considered a kick before we are hurt; but I hope it hits nobody, and so nobody is hurt. Now, we have our Conference school which is doing a good, thorough work in Christian education, by which it is fastening itself upon the affections of our people. Having the Grenada Collegiate Institute centrally located; and well equipped, causes us to think more respectfully of ourselves, and others to hold us in better esteem. We realize that as much obligation rests upon us, as a Conference (as upon any other), to build up a first-class college for the thorough education of our own girls. Now, like true men, we will stand by our school until we are well established, and to every institution of the church in all her broad bounds we will stand, if need be, swearing to our own hurt, and changing not.

For the present we are willing to undertake the task of educating our girls; and if our sister Conferences are overworked, we are willing to reciprocate their kindness and work of love by aiding them in their arduous labors.

Let every preacher rally to our school until the debt is paid. More than half of the debt is provided for. Let us provide for and pay the remainder by the ensuing Annual Conference. Let your collections ordered by the Annual Conference be full, and then give us a lift.

G. H. HODGE, Agt.

What It Means.

To the man or woman who has never been ill, the word "health" is meaningless. But to the one who has suffered and despaired, health appears as a priceless boon. To the thousands of unfortunate women who are suffering from some of the many forms of weaknesses or irregularities peculiar to their sex, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription holds forth the promise of a speedy restoration of this "priceless boon."

A Complaint.

MR. EDITOR: In last week's ADVOCATE, Bro. Holloman says: "He who attends most closely to his own duties has less time or disposition to complain of others;" but often the performance of those same "duties,"

"A subtle chain of countless rings,
The next unto the farthest brings"

either help or discouragement.

Now, for some time we have tried to keep our Sabbath-school alive; and, in spite of local discouragements, we have succeeded, our trouble now being that the literature which was ordered and paid for comes so very irregularly as to seriously interrupt the interest and almost threaten the life of the school. Now, "Si is" not "mad:" but shall we "complain," or shall we forbear?

After Thirty Years.

That the spine and brain are intimately connected all who have ever had spinal disease, or who have witnessed the sufferings of any one afflicted with it, can attest. The suffering generally is of the keenest character, and usually greatly prolonged. It seems a mystery how the human frame can survive the agonies frequently endured, and one is led to wonder if the body is not toughened in the flame of pain so that it is made capable to endure more pain. The Warren Republican, of Williamsport, Warren county, Indiana, printed the following in August last:

"Rev. Colbraith Hall, of Pike, was in town yesterday, looking hale and hearty. He reports the wonderful recovery of his wife within the last eighteen months, after being a confirmed invalid for over thirty years from spinal trouble. She about eighteen months ago, began the use of the Compound Oxygen Treatment, and attributes her recovery to the use of that medicine. She is now able to walk, get into and out of the buggy, take rides, etc. All acquainted with Dr. Hall and his family will rejoice with them in this remarkable recovery."

In a letter dated West Lebanon, Indiana, September 2, 1885, Mrs. Sarah H. Hall wrote, enclosing the article and propounding it correct.

Send to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., for the last number of HEALTH AND LIFE, which is sent free to all applicants: also the treatise on Compound Oxygen, a valuable little book of two hundred pages.

A Christian grieves over sin, because it displeases God, dishonors the Savior and grieves the Holy Ghost.

Chronic Looseness of the Bowels

Results from imperfect digestion. The cause lies in the torpidity of the liver. A regular habit of body can be secured by taking Simmons Liver Regulator to aid digestion, to stimulate the dull and sluggish liver, and rid the system of excessive and poisonous bile. The Regulator corrects acidity of the stomach, cures dyspepsia and insures regularity of the bowels alike free from laxity or costiveness.

Never forget that the Lord Jesus knows all you think of him, say about him and do for him.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of sedentary habits are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which make the sufferer for laziness or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is no exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Insomnia, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

"Thy Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."

The Scripture teaches that the Word of the Lord is the food of the soul. How can our souls be strong and healthy if we do not feed them regularly upon their proper food?

In regard to diseases in Europe and in this country, the Times-Democrat has this:

Considering its climate, one would naturally look for the greatest number of deaths from lung and bronchial troubles in London. Such, however, is not the case. The mortality from consumption is three times as great in Vienna as in London, twice as great in Marseilles, and equal in Rome. The French cities lead in typhoid fever, the British in scarlet fever, the German in diphtheria and the Austrian in consumption. The deaths from scarlet fever in England are three to one as compared with this country, diphtheria is four times as fatal in Germany as here, and typhoid fever five times as prevalent. All of these diseases are more or less the result of defective sanitation and drainage. This would indicate that our houses are at least sanitarily better constructed than those of Europe, and that the drainage, sewerage, etc., of our cities as good, notwithstanding our many complaints. On the other hand, pneumonia is far more prevalent here, and usually carries off more victims than all the zymotic diseases together. Pneumonia is somewhat the result of climate, but largely of carelessness and neglect.

The Methodist Times tells the following; and it illustrates the point that a true minister will do his best to save the people in spite of all the old "stiff-backs" in the church:

A few years ago one of our most successful missionaries was stationed at a stately old chapel in the west of England. On the first Sunday morning he found a poor congregation, and instantly decided to mend it. He proposed an out-door service before the evening service, and, of course, found all the young people ready to follow him. The result was that in the evening the chapel was full. On the next Sunday night it was crowded. The next day was the quarterly meeting. When the business of this meeting was cleared away, an elderly and very reverend-looking trustee addressed the meeting. He wanted to know whether a new minister had power to do as he liked in holding out-door services. The old man was profoundly moved. He had attended that chapel for forty years, and for the first time in his life, on the last Sunday evening, he had actually been unable to get into his seat. The chapel was positively full of "common people"! The new minister, instead of feeling the horror of his position, shouted, "Glory!" And he went on to remark that the Conference had sent him there to fill that chapel, and he meant to do it. If the dear and reverend brother who had spoken objected to the common people coming into the sanctuary, he had better go elsewhere where there were no common people, for not all the reverend brethren in the world would deter him from trying to save souls. The dear old man did go elsewhere, and the people were saved. They were saved by scores, and the chapel was crowded with common people.

Home Mission Work.

Our late attempt and mortifying failure, after five months of earnest entreaty and exhortation, to raise from a million of members money enough to pay off the indebtedness of our Mission Board, has convinced us that, as a church, we are anti-foreign missionary. Our only hope now is to turn our attention to home mission work, and give our people a chance to show that they have that sort of a missionary spirit.

The Southern Christian Advocate points out a practice that ought to be changed. "In making appropriation for our home missions we do not follow the law of the church. The law says that the Conference Board has the control of the funds raised for the home field: the practice is for the Bishops' Cabinet to make these appropriations, and then the Board agrees to it by a vote taken when there is no time left to investigate matters. Our objection to this is, that the presiding elders, being interested to have their districts receive as much help as possible from this fund, are not disinterested enough to make an equitable distribution of the same. Each presiding elder thinks his own district particularly needy, whereas an outsider, having all the facts and circumstances before him, may see clearly that the need is at some other point. Either let the Board manage its own matters in frequent sessions during Conference, or change the law.

We have another practice we think objectionable. The Bishops' Cabinet, in making the appropriations for home work, seems to be endeavoring to make the small amount collected for that purpose spread itself over the largest space of territory: and it is spread out so thin that it does very little good. If we have ten "missions," we generally manage, by the way we appropriate the domestic mission fund, to keep those ten "missions" on our mission list for an indefinite number of years. Nobody ever expects any of them to grow and be developed into self-sustaining circuits. The way they are treated in this matter absolutely prohibits growth and development. Say we have twenty-five hundred dollars to distribute. Our present plan is to give each "mission" $250. This necessitates another thing. The rule in our church now seems to be to adapt the man to the money to be paid; and $250 is just enough to keep a mediocre, single man from starving. Receiving the appointment and the appropriation, he feels that the whole thing is an evidence that not much is expected of him; and he generally meets that expectation, and the people on the mission are satisfied to let him go at Conference, and to receive a new preacher with a like appropriation for another year. And thus we go "round and round forever."

We think there is a better way than this. Instead of trying to develop ten missions into self-sustaining works, and failing continually, suppose we change our plan. If we can't learn something by our failures, we have little wisdom. Instead, then, of failing on ten missions, suppose we fail on eight and develop two. Would that not be a gain? Take the twenty-five hundred dollars and appropriate them to two missions, and select the best talent two of the most earnest workers in the Conference and appoint them to those two missions. In a year those two will grow off the mission list; and, pursuing this course, in five years your ten missions will be redeemed, and no more money spent than if you had run along on the old plan, and still had the ten missions on your hands.

Another thought in this connection is, that mission work to be successful requires the best talent and tact, supported by knowledge gained by experience. To put young and inexperienced preachers on mission work, simply because they can live on the little appropriation made, is contrary to the teaching of the history of missions as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles; and, we doubt not, is a grief to the Holy Spirit who opens these mission doors and calls upon the church to enter them. When the Holy Spirit had direct and immediate control of these matters, he selected the first men in the church to do the work. "Separate me Barnabus and Saul." This sort of work, in any Conference, calls for its best talent; and when the Conferences begin to recognize the call, and the Conference Boards diminish the number of their missions that they may treble and quadruple the appropriations, the successful workers will be secured. There are many preachers in our large cities, who are stinting and pinching and curtailing at every point that they may get through the year without debt, who would feel like millionaires on a mission with a $1,200 salary; and, having gotten rid of that horrible specter of gaunt want staring them daily in the face, and by its stare withering and crushing their spirits, they would be new men with new power, preaching a new gospel of power, and their families would be contented and comfortable, and all around that mission "the solitary places would be made glad," and all that "wilderness would blossom as the rose."

Let our Conference Boards "meditate on these things," and resolve to quit the "picayune policy" that keeps us always in "the same old ruts."

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Early in the year we were in attendance upon a District Conference, and when the Committee on Missions brought in its report, a large blackboard, with a diagram of the district on it, was moved out in front of the audience. The mission work on the district was mapped out on this diagram, and, as the report was read, the chairman of the committee pointed out the different missions, and named distance between churches and neighborhoods, told of the probable number of people who were without the gospel, and from what places they were accessible, etc. It was the most intelligent report on home missions we had ever heard; and the audience had an intelligent perception of the mission wants of the district.

Our Conference Boards might adopt this plan to the increase of their knowledge of the wants of our missionary territory, and then they would have an intelligent basis for appropriations. It is true, this will require some diligence in hunting up facts and taking the "metes and bounds," but then it is God's work; and if we can't afford to expend time and thought and diligence upon the Lord's work, we had better quit. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Clergyman, Priest, Minister, Pastor or Preacher?

There is an interesting significance in the several titles applied to those who are appointed to proclaim God's Word to men.

The word "clergyman" is derived from the Greek klerós and the Latin clerus, through the French, with the addition of the Saxon and Sanskrit man, which means a thinker. It primarily alludes to the assignment of lands by lot for the support of the clergy, the word kleros in Greek meaning a lot. Though not in the Bible, it is much used by Protestant Episcopalians and members of the Church of England. "Clergy" and "clerk" have the same origin in the Latin clericus, the chief officers of the church being in early days among the few who could read and write—the clergy and the clerks were the same persons.

"Priest" is derived from the Greek presbuteros, which first became presbyter, and was afterward contracted into priest. The original word meant an aged person or elder; and, as the older men were accustomed to plead with the gods for the people, a presbyter, or priest, came to mean one who offered sacrifices in behalf of others. Under the Mosaic dispensation, priests offered sacrifices typical of the sacrifice which Christ should offer for the whole world. Since the one sufficient offering of Christ, "there remaineth no more offering for sin;" hence there can be now no priests in a proper sense. Christ was the only real priest; all who were before him were typical of him. The entire object of the priesthood was forever fulfilled in Christ.

"Minister" is a word of broad application, and, when not limited, means an honorable servant. Coming from the Latin minus, less, it suggests inferiority in office. Joshua was Moses' minister. It is a biblical and dignified appellation for all those who, under Christ, supply the church with the Word and means of grace.

"Pastor" is a Latin word adopted as English, and means a shepherd, or one who pastures cattle. Our Savior applied its Greek equivalent to himself as the Good Shepherd; and the New Testament speaks of pastors as among those sent by the Spirit to edify the church. It is a beautifully parabolic word, full of expository instruction. All the tender relations between a shepherd and his flock are pictured to the mind of him who hears it intelligently.

"'Tis not a cause of small import
The pastor's care demands;
But what might fill an angel's heart,
And filled a Savior's hands."

"Parson," from the Latin persona, a mask, meaning, it is said, primarily in English, a person of importance, is not to be tolerated as applied to dignitaries of the church in the United States.

"Preacher," from the Latin predicare, to proclaim in public, is the only word in the list, unless it be the first, that has no other application but to one who speaks God's Word to men. "As ye go, preach," said the Master; and he himself "began to preach." This word is eminently scriptural, being used with its cognates 117 times in the Bible, and always implying the declaring of God's Word to men. "The Lord gave the Word; great was the company of them that published it." The world, then, and the Methodists, too, are right in calling God's spokesmen preachers.

What Our Papers Say.

Our general organ, the Nashville Advocate, has a strong article, on "The Solidarity of Evil Parties," in which is shown the readiness of all kinds of evil-disposed people to effect and perfect a combination of power and influence to oppose any and every "movement looking to moral reform." The article shows how such a "compact organization of evil-doers works numerous ills" in social relations and in municipal, State and Federal government. We clip a part of the article, and ask our readers to give it a prayerful pondering:

Will good men hear us, then, as we warn them the time has come, and has been upon us for awhile, when they must stand together for the right. Depend upon it, we will be respected when we respect ourselves, and not before. Perhaps, it would not be well for us, or for the good we profess to love, if it were otherwise.

Let us see how the matter stands: The most reliable statistics place the communicants of the Christian churches of the United States at nearly twenty millions—that is, about one-third of the entire population. It is not extravagant to say at least forty of the sixty millions of people in this country are directly subject to Christian influences. Let any considerable portion of these stand up tomorrow, and demand that the institutions of this country shall exist in righteousness, and it will be so.

As the church has entered upon the season for holding Conferences, and the pastoral relation is about to be exchanged or renewed, the St. Louis Advocate, in an editorial—"Be Beforehand with Your Preacher"—brings to the remembrance of both preachers and church officials a matter which, if attended to early and in a right spirit, will lessen many evils, foster good-will, and hasten on the enlarging kingdom of God. Let all read this:

This is the season when, under our itinerant system, pastors are being exchanged, or old ones returned. In either case, a sacred duty devolves on the church to provide for their temporal support. By their itinerant vow they have surrendered their right to enter into secular pursuits. The church demanded this of them, and they gladly yielded. They must be cared for by the church; and should be cared for in the spirit of large-hearted liberality. They are not pensioners on the bounty of the church, but bear the relation of a sacred compact. A solemn agreement exists between them and the church, by which they are to labor for the church in its spiritual matters, and the church is bound to supply their temporal wants. The obligations and exactions of the relation are mutual. The preacher is committed to fidelity in supplying their spiritual needs; the church is committed to fidelity in meeting his temporal wants.

The Alabama Advocate discourses warningly upon the "Dangers of the Future." It shows how the influx of foreigners to our land is affecting our institutions for evil, and in many places rendering the observance and execution of the law an exceedingly difficult matter. Those principles and laws and institutions which make up our social and political and religious life, and are the bases of our civilization, "are all seriously threatened by foreign emigration." Editor McCoy has a strong hope in the church as being able to counteract these evil influences. He says:

Where is our protection? We answer that it lies in the church. She it is to whom the country turns in this hour of her peril. It is her high and holy mission to cultivate by her influence a strong and vigorous public morality. The church has nothing to do with politics, save to infuse into public sentiment such a vital morality as will purify the political atmosphere. It is a sphere infinitely exalted above partisan strife, and upon her fidelity to her mission the future of this country depends. Brethren of the ministry, you have nothing to do with third parties nor second parties. It is yours to see that the pulpit speaks in no uncertain tones on all questions of right and duty, and that the church holds up before men an exalted standard of right thinking and right living; that she preserves her influence for good, and puts into the mass of public life the salt of her own pure and exalted life. Let the gospel continually speak through you its own eternal lessons of hope and promise. Let its purifying influence pervade the social and individual life of the people, and it will purify it from these malarial poisons that threaten the health and life of the body politic.

The Episcopal Methodist discourses on "Mechanical Religion." The mechanical sermon, the mechanical prayer, the mechanical love-feast talk, the mechanical class-meeting experience are all touched up so as to show their natural colors. Dr. Boyle voices the sentiment of very many earnest men and women, when he says:

We want a shaking among these dry bones, for as we gaze on them, we sadly announce, lo! they are very many and they are very dry. They give tone to the religious life of the congregation to which they belong, and the ardor of young converts is chilled in contact with them. We have sometimes almost sinfully wished the Lord would put some life in them and then take them out of the way of the young and eager souls around them. It may well engage our thought whether any of us are religious in such a perfunctory way, and if so, the sooner we get out of the old routes and be keenly alive to every spiritual truth, duty and promise, the sooner we will have the approbation of our own consciences and enjoy the smile of God.

Notes.

The editor received the other day twenty-five cents for the Lambuth Fund from a little boy, four years old, with the request that it be applied to "convert a Japanese giant." That's a good idea. If the giants are converted, the pigmies will soon yield to the power of the gospel. It is wonderful how many scores of pigmies can hold out when safely hidden behind some great giant. When David's "smooth stone" went crashing into the brain of Goliath, the army of the Philistines trembled in terror, and when the fearless lad cut off the head of the impious boaster and held it up as a trophy in the name of the Lord, that trembling host fled in dismay over the mountains. May our little friend's twenty-five cents prove just such a "smooth stone!"

We verily believe that the church needs to broaden her work in every direction. This is the imperative necessity of the times, and the men and women who have the money of Christ in their keeping must pour it out by rich streams into the coffers of the church, that she may be able to do this work, or else the Lord will take it away from them. The following, from an exchange, points out both our failures and what we need to do.

While we have been diligently reclaiming individual drunkards, we have allowed the deadly liquor shops to manufacture general misery at the corner of every street. While we have been laboriously rescuing a few harlots, we have done nothing to destroy the organized trade in lust. While we have been healing a few sufferers in hospitals, we have allowed countless thousands to be wounded on fields of blood. We can not afford to carry on this unequal war with the devil any more. We are in a majority. Why should we not lay hold of the gigantic resources of civilization and use them on the side of Christianity? Let us carry the war into the enemies' country. Let us organize society in the interests of sobriety, chastity and peace. Let us use all the power of the State to secure that every citizen shall, at least, breathe fresh air, drink pure water, eat plenty of wholesome food, and be able to read his Bible. Let us create an enlightened Christian public opinion which will discourage all that is evil and stimulate all that is good. Let us, in fact, by the help of God, organize what the world has never yet seen a really Christian nation.

After we had copied the above for the printer, we picked up an influential paper of another denomination, and read this:

The Christian people of this country need to be made thoroughly awake to the crisis that seems so near at hand, if it be not already upon us. There is far more of Christian power wasted than utilized in the interest either of a common Christianity or of a common patriotism. The Christian people of the country are too much absorbed in that material interest which in its extreme form is a thing so paralyzing to the spiritual life of the individual, the church and the nation, and which is damaging to even that common morality the lack of which is such a "reproach to any people." If American Christians, or any large proportion of them, could be roused to the importance of making American Christianity the power in this land it ought to be, and must be, if it is to save the nation, might not the effect be seen in all those directions where the signs of danger so ominously appear? And might not the Christian people of the country, acting upon sound principles of Christian patriotism, hope to bring into alliance with themselves a great body of right-minded men, not professing Christians, who have the interests of the country really at heart?

In this connection, what strikes us forcibly is the fact that the foremost men in Church and State seem to be restless with apprehensions for the future of our country. As an evidence of this, the Evangelical Alliance is sending out a call to a Conference at Washington, D. C., to be held on the seventh, eighth and ninth of the coming December, to consider the vast and urgent work before the churches of the United States in our own country, especially in the great cities, and also by what means denominational co-operation may be secured to economize effort and make the most of it, to prevent waste and rivalry with its injurious effect.

Tennessee has an area of 5,100 square miles of coal, which covers twenty-two counties. During the past six years the output of coal in the State has grown from 491,000 tons to 1,700,000 tons—an increase of 100 per cent.

Personals.

Rev. Thomas Bottomly, of Louisville Conference, has been preaching sixty-two years, is eighty-four years old, and, though superannuated, preaches nearly every Sunday.

Dr. R. H. Rivers has finished a four years' term at Broadway Church, Louisville. His pastorate has been a success-ful one.

Rev. W. M. Robey, D. D., one of the editors of the Methodist Advance, and Mrs. N. M. Grainger, of Goldsboro, N. C., were married by Bishop Key recently. The NEW ORLEANS sends congratulations. The Advance will sparkle with new brilliance now.

The Wesleyan says that Bishop Key has purchased Dr. Haygood's residence in Oxford.

Rev. J. M. Trimble, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been elected to represent the Ohio Conference in the General Conference for the twelfth time. A remarkable record that!

Rev. Patrick Lane, superintendent of the State Institute for the Education of the Blind, died in Baton Rouge, last week, aged sixty years.

Rev. W. A. Shook, of North Texas Conference, has recently died. "He was a good man, full of faith and good works."

And now comes Rev. J. W. McLaurin, and desires us to state to the public that he did not write the article on "old Maids," signed "J. W. M." Now, let all the "J. W. M.'s" in the Southwest enter a like disclaimer and be done with it for good.

Rev. John Hannon, D. D., has been transferred to the Pacific Conference and stationed at San Francisco.

According to the Missionary Reporter, the Louisiana Conference is ahead of all the Conferences in contributions to the Self Denial Fund during the month of September; the amount being $857 15. And yet we are a feeble folk in numbers, having at last report 15,775 members.

Bro. R. J. Jones, our pastor in Vicksburg, Miss., gave us a call last week. He had been to his old charge at Moss Point to "twine an orange wreath and set the wedding bells a-going."

The Raleigh Christian Advocate comes to us this week in a new dress—from bonnet to slipper. We tip our hat, and wish that it may now win its way into a thousand new homes before the spring-time comes. It deserves to.

Our correspondents will please "hold up" on "old maids" and "church festivals." The "old maids" are generally happy and contented. "No farther seek their merits to disclose." As to "church festivals," the fiercest logomachy will change nobody's views.

One of the papers reports that Miss Frances Willard has been elected a lay delegate from the Rock River Conference to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to meet in New York City next May.

Items of Interest.

The art of paper-making has reached a point where a growing tree may be cut down, made into paper, and turned out as a newspaper—all within thirty-six hours.

This item is for the ladies: Custom-house statistics show that since September 6, or about one month, fourteen bustles investigated at the Custom-house have produced 143 yards of silk, 103 yards of dress goods, 31 yards of calico, 62 yards of lace, diamonds, pipes and knick-knacks subject to duty. Yet probably not more than a hundredth part of the bustles adorning female passengers have been examined.

Dr. A. S. Isaacs, a leading rabbi, estimates that there are now 500,000 Jews in the United States.

One person in 250 of our foreign population is insane; one in 618 of our native population, and one in 1,697 of our colored population. These facts were brought out in the recent Medical Congress at Washington.

Dr. Strong's little book, "Our Country," has reached its eighty-fifth thousand. Everybody ought to have it and read it.

J. Q. A. Ward, the sculptor, has been selected to prepare the proposed Beecher statue.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons, the gift of the Vanderbilts to New York City, was opened recently.

One of the most curious Jubilee presents made to Queen Victoria was from the Primrose League, consisting of a volume of congratulatory addresses to her majesty from the Habitations of the League throughout the empire, and being, probably, the biggest book ever bound. It measures eighteen inches across the back, and weighs thirty pounds.

Prof. Drummond told the Yale students: "There is a great deal of religion in this country, but not much Christianity." Complimentary, or not—which?

BOOKS.

HEALTH IN OUR HOMES, AND HEALTH OF OUR CHILDREN. By "Doctor Frank." Thayer Publishing Company, Boston. For sale here by Wharton & Bro., No. 5 Carondelet street. Price, seventy-five cents each.

These are valuable little books, discussing, from a physician's standpoint and in a pleasant style, all the important phases of hygiene and health in the home. There is nothing so satisfactory as a healthy home, and nothing so beautiful as a healthy child; and these little books point out how we may have both. We commend them to our readers.

This is a book of essays. The subjects of the essays are: Emerson, France and Voltaire, Voltaire and Frederick the Great, Frederick the Great and Macaulay, Albert Durer, The Brothers Grimm, Bettina Von Arnim, Dante on the Italian Struggle.

THE MONK'S WEDDING, by Conrad Ferdinand Meyer, is published by Cupples & Hurd, Boston; and for sale here by Wharton & Bro.

Mr. Rideing has prepared a choice little book which all lovers and collectors of Thackeray will be glad to have. The old house at Kensington in which "Esmond," "Pendennis," and "Vanity Fair" were written; Becky Sharp's house in Curzon street; the Athenæum Club, in which Thackeray did much of his work; the quaint old buildings of Charterhouse, where Colonel Newcome said "Adsum," and many of Thackeray's characters were educated; and Mayfair, with its souvenirs of Ethel Newcome, the Countess of Kew, the Rev. Charles Honeymap, and others, are described with Mr. Rideing's well-known picturesqueness of style. Clews are also given to localities and houses which are mentioned in the novels under concealed names.

ACCORDING TO PROMISE; OR, THE LORD'S METHOD OF DEALING WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE. A New book by Charles H. Spurgeon. A companion volume to "All of Grace." 12mo., cloth. Price, seventy-five cents.

These are brief, practical homilies on Scripture themes, the most of them based on appropriate texts of Scripture. They possess all the characteristics of the renowned author—spirituality, scripturalness, directness, fidelity and experimental richness and fullness. It is a little book that can not fail to carry cheer and comfort and strength to God's people, if they will but read and heed its teachings.

PERIODICALS.

—Sidereal Messenger, for September and October, has Time Service of the Lick Observatory, by James E. Keeler; Relation of Aerolites to Shooting-Stars, by Prof. Kirkwood; Life and Achievements of Alvan Clark, by the editor; Yale College Measurement of the Pleiades, by A. M. Clerke; Total Eclipse of the Sun, August 19, 1887 translated from Ciel et Terre—by Dr. C. H. Wilson; and other articles. Northfield, Minn. Price, $2 per year (ten numbers).

—The Book-buyer is published monthly by Charles Scribner's Sons, at one dollar a year, and is a most valuable summary of American and foreign literature. It keeps its readers informed regarding the contents of all valuable new books. It is not only newsy in literary matters, but is carefully critical. If you take it, you will know what books to buy.

—Dress, for October. This is a magazine devoted to the practical and the beautiful in women's and children's clothing, physical culture, and kindred subjects; and conducted by Annie Jenness-Miller. Published by The Jenness-Miller Publishing Company, New York, at $1 50 per annum.

In an obituary of a preacher's wife, published in this paper, last week, this sentence occurs: "Before her marriage she completed the 'course of Study' prescribed for our traveling preachers, and this special training made her a helpful companion for her husband." If all our girls who intend to be preachers' wives would do likewise, what a reinforcement the itinerancy would receive! By the way, girls, if you want to "catch the young preacher," "set your cap" for him by qualifying yourself to be his helpmeet! You will thus honor yourselves and equip him.

The man who starts out to do a full day's work without partaking of nourishing and strengthening food can not be expected to do that work in the way it ought to be done; and the probability is he will grow faint before the sun goes down. There are hundreds of Christians who start out daily on their work for God just in that way, and we see them fainting and falling long before the time to "call the laborers and give them their hire."

Review of the Modern Fathers.

A Consideration of the Theories of Modern Methodist Writers, and of the History and Scriptural Doctrines of the Methodists.

BY REV. JNO. M. CROW, A. M., Louisville Conference.

... "Modern Fathers is clearly the product of a mind that has wrestled manfully with the questions discussed. He has something to say, and says it in his own way. The glow of earnestness gilds and warms every page. He gives a reason for all his positions, and dogmatizes delightfully. He criticises his seniors modestly and respectfully. Transparent love of truth characterizes the book. He fights in the open field and uses the weapons of honorable warfare."

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and dinners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing a delicious bit, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge. Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

JACK FROST.

BY JESSIE W. H. AMES.

Gaily down the mountain glen
Comes Jack Frost, with all his men,
Turning fields to silver-white,
All in one October night.

Six long months have come and fled
Since we mourned Jack Frost as dead;
Six long months of summer flowers,
Summer sunshine, summer showers.

In the springtime of the year,
When the snowdrop did appear,
And the violet, blue and sweet,
Bloomed in beauty at our feet;

When a tender touch of green
On the hill-tops could be seen,
And the robin, on the wing,
Sang a "welcome back" to spring;

Then with hearts with joy oppressed
Did we lay Jack Frost to rest;
Wading for sweet flowers to wave
In their beauty o'er his grave.

Once again the summer's dead;
All the bright sweet flowers have fled;
Very soon we'll greet again
Old Jack Frost and all his men.

The editor has received a solution of the figure puzzle from Emma B. Henry, of Arcadia, La. It is so curiously arranged that we don't know how to print it. The editor thinks it a greater puzzle than the one he gave the cousins. We must say to Emma, that it is not correct. Try again.

MR. EDITOR: As I have always before been a silent admirer of your children's department, I have now concluded to join the happy band. My father subscribes for your valuable paper, and I enjoy reading the children's letters very much indeed. I am a little girl ten years of age, and live in the northern part of Louisiana. I have no pets except my dolls and a beautiful little deer. I attend Sunday-school here and am trying for the prize. I have always been fortunate enough to get one every year. I will close by asking a question: What word occurs most frequently in the Bible? Your friend,

MIDGIE HERRING.

FLOYD, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: We thought, perhaps, you might like to hear from two little girls in East Carroll parish. We go to school to our dear grandmother, Mrs. W. C. Currie, and we ride a little white pony named Hester. We have to ride two and a half miles every day. We take turns about riding in the saddle. Our ages are six and four years. We read and make figures, and are past "baker." Our grandma takes the ADVOCATE; and our mamma did too, but her subscription gave out, and she intends to renew it again. With love to all the little cousins, we remain, BURTA RILEY,
LEILA RILEY.

SOLITUDE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a boy twelve years old. I am not going to school now, but will start soon. My father takes your paper, and among all the papers we take I like the ADVOCATE the best. I have no pets but one, and that is a great big cat, five years old. As this is my first attempt to write a letter, I will not try to write a long one. I hope to see my letter in print to surprise papa. I will close by asking a question: Which is the longest verse in the Bible? With many wishes for the ADVOCATE, I will close.

Your little friend, EDWARD HOOD.

STATE LINE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years old. My papa takes your valuable paper. I like to read the little cousins' letters very much. I have four pets: three pet cows and a pet chicken. We have a pair of white rats, and they are great pets. I will close, wishing the dear old ADVOCATE many good wishes. I remain, Your little friend,

B. A. TALLEY.

MR. EDITOR: I think the answer to Aunt Loretta's puzzle is "LOVE," because twice twenty-five is fifty, and fifty in the Roman notation is "L." The circle is "O;" five is "V." and one-fifth of eight is "E."

Your friend, CAROL MELLEN.

WESSON, Mississippi.

Hal's Eyes Opened.

"No, Daisy. You can not have my roller skates. So there!"

"I mean when you don't want them, Hallie," and Daisy's blue eyes pleaded anxiously as she looked at Hallie.

"I want to clean them whenever I'm done with them, and hang them up in the bag Aunt Alice is making for me."

"You might let me have them just a few minutes, Hallie?"

"You don't know how to use them."

"I could learn. Please, Hallie, just let me try. I know I could learn."

"Learn on your own, then," answered Hal crossly, as he walked away, muttering: "I earned the skates with my own money. I'm not going to let Daisy spoil them."

He did not see Aunt Alice on the stoop.

Hallie Brown was not an ugly boy, but he was inclined to be selfish. He would have been very indignant if any one had told him he made his cousin, Daisy Holt, unhappy. He really loved her; but she was so gentle that she did not resent many of the ungenerous, ungracious things he did.

When Hallie left Daisy she walked slowly home with a very sorrowful heart. She could not understand how Hallie could refuse so small a favor. She could not conceive of refusing Hallie any enjoyment that depended on loaning anything she possessed.

After tea Hallie sat in the sitting-room with the family when he suddenly thought of a new illustrated set of Irving that Aunt Alice had received at Christmas. He said:

"This is a free evening, Aunt Alice, may I have your Irving to look at?"

"No, Hal. I've made up my mind to be very careful of my Irving and keep it in the box when I'm not using it."

A surprised, angry look came into Hal's face. Aunt Alice, sweet Aunt Alice, had never refused him anything before. Daisy, who had come in with her mamma, was as much surprised and puzzled as Hal was.

No one else seemed to notice Aunt Alice's answer but the children. Hal took down Bancroft from the shelves, but he could not interest himself or overcome the unpleasant effect of the refusal to his simple request.

"I'll sharpen up my new pencils and have them ready for Monday," he thought. "Papa's knife is sharper than mine; I'll borrow it."

"Papa," he said aloud, "please lend me your knife? I want to sharpen my new pencils."

"No! I've made up my mind not to lend my knife. When I'm done using it I am going to wipe it off and keep it in my pocket. No, I can not lend my knife; earn one yourself."

"Papa!" and Hal almost burst into tears. Never in his life had he received such an answer from his father. Hurt, mortified and angry, he buried his face in his hands for some minutes. A soft, gentle touch roused him and, Daisy said:

"Hallie, I brought over my new game. Do you want to see it?"

He looked at the gentle little girl, whose face was full of sympathy. Just beyond was his father's full of reproach, and Aunt Alice's sorrowful, and saying so plainly, "Do you deserve her kindness?"

A blush covered Hal's face as he remembered the scene of the afternoon and his refusal to grant a favor to the little girl who was always so ready to share every pleasure, every gift. The lesson was not forgotten.—Christian Union.

To solve the problem whether life is worth living requires of us that we should offer our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." The Psalmist answers, "Yes," with a chime as sweet as that of silver bells when he says, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree; he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing."

Household.

The Child in the House.

There was something pathetic in the appeal which a little boy made to his father when he cried, "I often do wrong, I know, and then you scold me, and I deserve it; but, father, sometimes I do my best to do right! Won't you let me know when I do please you?" In many families there are sensitive children, diffident and easily intimidated, who need, above everything else, encouragement; while there are others pert, forward and offensive, who need any amount of repression. Even in the same family, children are so unlike in temperament and disposition as to require very different training. Solomon's family regulator is out of fashion now, but it had its use in his day, and can find occasions for practical application in ours. When discipline was stricter than it is now parents received more honor. It was so in the days of the apostle, for he says: "Our fathers corrected us, and we gave them reverence."

There are roundabout ways of reaching the heart of a child, and the rod of correction may be one of the indirect methods of stimulating the better nature. But quite different is the case with children of a highly nervous organization, often with that pensive, plaintive air about them that touches our pity. Even their own parents do not know how such natures are injured by the stern, well-intended, but mistaken discipline to which they are often subjected. They little know how such spirits are blighted by harshness, and how traits of character which, under the influence of tender fostering care, would have developed into grace and beauty, never unfold at all for the want of it. Such discipline to the child is what a dark, cold cellar would be to a delicate, exotic plant craving light, air and genial warmth. What children of this temperament need is kind words of encouragement and the little tokens of appreciation with which the ingenuity of parental love should ever surround them. —Dr. M. D. Hoge.

MINOR DETAILS IN THE HOUSE.—Trifles make the sum of life, it is said; certainly they do of life in the kitchen and dining-room. And the wife who by her skill and knowledge of detail knows how to save any fraction of the sum allowed her for housekeeping is really the one who brings more happiness into the dwelling than the wife whose own income doubles her husband's. This skill and knowledge are the portion of every wife whose mother has taught her to observe the seemingly trival things of good house-keeping, the minor details of daily living. And whoever has these little things at command will find them a more integral part of family happiness than familiarity with the differential calculus is. And although Greek and Anglo-Saxon and high philosophy and natural science may be requisite and delightful acquisitions, yet it is evident that they are incomplete without the previous requisites of bodily comfort and mental quiet.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.—The beginning of household economy is in the purchase of what is needed—just that, and nothing else. Only the housekeeper knows what is necessary, and this knowledge seems to be incommunicable, even to the wisest of men. Indeed, the wiser they are, the less they know of household matters. Such things are outside of their line. Give the woman the purse and let her manage; ninety-five times in a hundred she will do it well. Never find fault with the table till she does, for there is really any deficiency she knows it better than you do, and will be sure to speak of it, thus by a flank movement, protecting herself.

The spooks and goblins that delight
To fill with terror all the night;
That stalk abroad in ribbons dreams
With which dyspepsia's fancy teems,
Will never trouble with their ills
The man who trusts in Pierce's Pills.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets—vegetable, harmless, painless, sure!

It may be said that the hardest thing in the world is to do just right one's self; and the easiest thing in the world is to see where others fall short of doing just right.—S. S. Times.

Sick headache, wind on the stomach, biliousness, nausea, are promptly and agreeably banished by Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets: 25c a vial.

MISCELLANEOUS.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the backing cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Soothes and Heals

the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with

Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and I believe, saved my life."

HARRIS—Mrs. Elizabeth Harris (nee Duke) was born in Warren county, N. C., February 7, 1818; was married to Robert M. Harris, December 14, 1837; moved to Mississippi, 1850; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1842. In this church she lived a consistent member till her death, which occurred at her home, in McCool, Miss., September 10, 1887.

Sister Harris stood, with her husband, at the head of a large family of wide religious influence all over this community. They are useful citizens and vigorous members of the church. One of her sons is a promising member of the North Mississippi Conference. The piety of the children and their willingness to support God's cause is due in a great measure to the noble example and wise instruction of their now sainted mother. Sister Harris' house was the itinerant's home. There his weary feet found delightful rest. Being a cripple since 1873 did not cool her ardor or abate her zeal. She bore the affliction as a submissive child of the Lord, making this even to work out for her good. Conscious in her last illness of the approach of death, she was not alarmed; indeed, she seemed delighted that the end was so near. Often she shouted aloud the praises of God, and the night before her death she was in a perfect ecstacy of joy. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" The struggle is over now and she is with those gone before, "watching and waiting" for those behind. Lord, comfort the bereaved and help the Harris family to be one unbroken in the final day!

D. M. COGDELL, Pastor.

SMITH—Sallie Ella Smith, daughter of G. J. and Lou Smith, was born in Sabine parish, La., April 3, 1876, and departed this life, near Fort Jessup, La., September 6, 1887, aged eleven years, five months and three days. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of the Rev. R. S. Isbell, while he was holding a protracted meeting at New Hope Church during the month of September, 1886, and was converted a few days before her death while attending a meeting at the same church that she had joined about twelve months ago. She had been a member of the Sunday-school at New Hope ever since she was large enough to attend, and will be greatly missed by her Sunday-school mates, that she had become so endeared to. She was very calm and composed, and would talk about death as though she was not afraid to die. She said to her mother that she was willing and ready to go, and that she was going home to heaven.

It was the writer's privilege to stand around her dying-bed and see the unmistakable evidence of the Christian religion as it beamed forth from her countenance. She leaves a father and mother, five brothers and four sisters and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Two sisters and two brothers have preceded her to the better world.

Weep not, fond parents, your little darling has gone to a beautiful world above to bask in the sunlight of God's everlasting love. May the God of unbounded mercy comfort the bereaved ones and help them to meet her in heaven! W. J. BOLTZ

Years ago, W. A. Herron, of Peoria, Illinois, refused to keep Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria on commission, because his shelves were crowded already with ague remedies. A dozen bottles were left with him, which he agreed to give away. No other advertising was done. In less than six months he sold over nine hundred dollars' worth. Could there be any stronger testimony in favor of a medicine?

God's Plans.

Many men wreck their lives by determinedly carrying out their own plans without reference to the plans of God. In an army every part, every brigade and regiment, must wait the commander's orders. If any battalion moves independently, though ever so heroically, it not only confuses the whole plan of battle, but brings disaster to itself as well in the end. So each individual must always wait for God's command to move. Keep your eye on the pillar of cloud and fire that leads. Rest when the pillar rests, move when it moves. Never lag behind, but be sure you never run ahead. You can make the clock strike before the hour by putting your own hands to it, but it will strike wrong. You can hurry the unfolding of God's providence, but you will only mar the divine plan unless you wait for him.

You can tear the rose-bud open before the time when it would naturally open, but you destroy the beauty of the rose. So we spoil many a gift or blessing which God is preparing for us by our own eager haste. He would weave all our lives into patterns of loveliness. He has a perfect plan for each. It is only when we refuse to work according to his plan that we mar the web. Stop meddling with the threads of your life as they come from the Lord's hands. Every time you interfere you make a flaw. Keep your hands off and let God weave as he pleases. Do you think you know better than he does what your life ought to be?—The Presbyterian.

A Prondent Merchant in Trouble.

As sunnish and cross as a bear;
The clerks know enough to keep out of his way,
Lest the merchant should grumble and swear.
Even Tabby, the cat, is in fear of a cuff,
Or a kick, if she ventures too near;
They all know the master is apt to be rough,
And his freaks unexpected and queer.

What makes the old fellow so surly and grim,
And behave so confoundedly mean?
There's certainly something the matter with him
Is it stomach, or liver, or spleen?
We've guessed it—his liver is sluggish and bad,
His blood is disordered and foul,
It's enough to make anyone hopelessly mad,

The world-wide remedy, Dr. Pierre's Golden Medical Discovery, will correct a disordered liver and purify the blood, tone your system and build up your flesh and strength.

Concentration.—A great defect in both personal and church work is its discursiveness. There is a roving, rambling spirit actuating its movements which scatters its energies, weakens its momentum and minimizes its results. "This one thing I do" of Paul should be the motto engraven upon the heart of every worker for Christ. Then the eye and heart and lips will be employed toward the attainment of some object which must yield before the steady and persistent efforts put forth for its conquest and possession. How little of the earnest, concentrated spirit of the prayer of John Knox is displayed in modern evangelistic efforts! Oh, for more of his spirit when he cried out at the throne of grace, "Give me Scotland, or I die!"—Congregational Magazine.

Many whose occupations are of a sedentary character, often have the feeling of being literally worn out, and are reminded very forcibly of declining years, when if they knew what ailed them, they would find all their troubles arose from the inaction of their kidneys or liver. If they would at such times take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm, would again feel the vigor and strength of manority.

Earnestness in religion, such as the Lord approves, is a longing, not for popularity or power, but for holiness and God. It is zeal, not for denominational triumph over rival churches, not for a predominating influence in courts or camps or parties, but for the overthrow of sin and the salvation of sinners. "The kingdom of God is within you." It is a principle binding the individual soul to God. Its most deeply seated and controlling sentiment is "hungering and thirsting after righteousness." Consciousness of personal alienation from God, and an ardent desire to be conformed to him, are the fixed spiritual experience of everyone who has been born of the Spirit. The world can not understand a religion of this sort. It will never cease to express its preference for a religion of forms. But it is nevertheless true that the spiritual power of the church is that which accomplishes most in the advancement of Christianity. A holy life preaches louder than the most splendid series of symbolical services. The spiritual character of a congregation has far more influence for good than the most artistic ritual. The world loves it less, but feels it more.—Richmond Advocate.

Take one of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm Pillets at night before going to bed, and you will be surprised how buoyant and vigorous you will feel next day. Only 25 cents a vial.

A Voyage in a Blood-Vessel.

If one of the great arteries were magnified, millions of times, it would resemble a river vaster than the Mississippi and Amazon combined. Unlike a river, it would be largest at its source and smallest at its delta. Let it be thus magnified for the purposes of study. It is quite hot and of a rich bright red. The color is not evenly distributed. Here and there are patches of intense color, oblong bodies, distinct from the water in which they float. These are the red corpuscles. Now and then some other body falls into them or becomes enfolded by them. There is a series of tiny sparks, the strange body disappears, the red body is a little larger and darker colored, and a particle of debris may be left floating behind. Here and there are swimming masses of jelly-like substance. They expand and contract as they pass by, and suggest the Portuguese men-of-war and the devil fishes of the ocean. They are alive. At times they seize upon some floating body that impinges against them, swallow it by turning themselves inside out around it, and swim on as if in search of fresh prey. They are the protoplasm discovered by Prof. Huxley.

Strange bodies succeed—the half animal, half vegetable germs which produce or accompany disease. Here and there are shattered fragments, gray, white, brown, black and pink. At one place they form rafts and piled-up masses, at another they are few and far apart. These are the debris of the system that have passed through the veins, lungs, heart and arteries, without being consumed or excreted. They are ever increasing, and, unless disposed of in one way or the other, are bound to produce disease or death. If, like logs in a stream, they form a jam, the stream makes a back water, the banks give in and local desolation and ruin results. Physicians, who like hard names for simple facts, call it an embolism, but it is only a jam of microscopic logs.

There comes a lake of lymph and in it clots of thicker lymph. Here and there are crude crystals half forming in the blood. They are lime salts, and the great river is bearing them to some bank where it will leave them high up above the wash. It keeps the stream clean, but the banks become ugly. On these are huge telegraph and telephone wires worked by some invisible person. As the crystals are deposited, he becomes wrathful and the wires jump as if in sympathy. This is what it would be if magnified. In nature this deposition is gout and inflammatory rheumatism; the wires are the nerves; and the invisible person is you, O reader, or myself. Last of all, are strange fluids and solids. These are the humors of the blood.

Let us journey with the stream. As we progress, it becomes slower and smaller. Branches run off in every direction, at first large and far apart, then smaller and nearer, and at last continuous and small as water pipes in a modern house. These are the capillary blood-vessels. Here the chemical action is intense. The red corpuscles and the protoplasm are biting and being bitten, corroding and being corroded. The color changes before your eyes. The odor changes: before it was fresh and stimulating, now it is stale and unpleasant. It is dirtier, heavier, more loaded, and more mixed up; it moves more slowly, and as it moves the walls diverge and the channel seems almost the line simile of the one we have traversed. It is, in every respect but one. Its walls, though strong and handsome, have not the elasticity of the artery. The quality or absence of quality is not necessary. No pump is forcing a stream through it; but the same pump is sucking out its contents. All that it requires is that its walls be strong enough not to fall in from the suction, and not that they shall be able to resist a pressure that never comes. At points on the route it meets long tracks of territory into which or through which the impurities sink and disappear. These are the kidneys and other organs. Finally the stream reaches the heart, and is again forced through a circuit like the one through which it has already passed. If the debris should not be disposed of, but should accumulate, and the blood become surcharged with humors and waste matter, it would change its action and convert the body into a place of pain, helplessness, and oftentimes death!

Having thus traced the cause of disease to its primary source, we may now indicate the remedy. It must be obvious to anyone that the remedy must be one that shall cleanse and purify this vital current—this Red River of the body—and send it with health and vigor to the remotest vein and artery. Huxley and Pasteur revealed protoplasm and the microbe, but to Dr. J. C. Ayer must be awarded the credit of having discovered a combination of remedial agencies, the effect of which is to search out and expel from the system all those germinal and morbific elements. As a blood-purifier, therefore, Ayer's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla is regarded as one of the most valuable contributions that modern science has made to the Pharmacopœia. American Analyst, May 25, 1887.

Havana has been visited by a cyclone.

The authoress, Dinah Craig Mulock, is dead.

Dr. Mackenzie says the affection of the Crown Prince is not cancerous; but the report is that the Prince is growing worse.

Gen. Boulanger has been imprisoned for thirty days. During that time the ministry will decide whether he shall be deprived of his command.

The Inspector General has ordered the constables found guilty of murder by the jury at Michelstown, to be released.

The Crown Prince's case is said to resemble that of Gen. Grant, and his condition is undoubtedly precarious. It is admitted that the situation is very grave.

The scandalous revelations concerning persons high in authority in France are the subjects of comment by European papers. Gen. Boulanger's conduct is generally condemned, and Jules Ferry thought to be at the bottom of the whole affair; but the official inquiry so far justifies the statement that no officer of the army or employe of the War Department is involved except Gen. d'Andlau.

France, Spain, Belgium and Austria have declined to answer the Pope's circular requesting an opinion upon the necessity of temporal power for the head of the church.

In spite of the police, the League held a meeting at Woodford, where O'Brien burned a copy of the proclamation forbidding the holding of the meeting. The act aroused the wildest enthusiasm.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinons put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Lung Troubles and Wasting

Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time, as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is very pleasant to take."

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

J. C. M'ALLISTER, Agent,
146 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

Whatever else is left, shut up the lager beer saloon. There is a curse in it. It must be abolished. It should have no quarter. The man who sells lager beer ought to be shut out of the church. The man who makes the vile stuff ought to be ostracised from decent society. These men are foes to God and their country. There should be no mercy shown in the traffic. The sacred cause of prohibition must make war on the fermented as well as the distilled stuff. It makes no difference what the politicians say, what German vote the Republican party may lose, for the lager beer saloon must go; and if the German vote or the Republican party resist, they must go, too. Downright abolition and prohibition, sweeping and complete, unyielding and compulsory, is the only thing to which we can give consent.—Independent.

New Time Card.

New time card on the Texas and Pacific railway, in effect Sunday, Oct. 16:

California express leaves Terpsichore street at 7:50 A. M. and arrives at 9:20 P. M.

Local train for Baton Rouge leaves depot at 3:30 P. M. and arrives in New Orleans at 11:30 A. M.

A Liberal Offer.

We call the attention of our readers to advertisement of German Electric Agency of "Electric Belt Free." To all likely to make good agents they will for the next sixty days give away free of charge one of their German Electric Belts.

The rumor is that there will be a meeting between the Emperor of Germany and Russia within a fortnight in Pomerania.

Geo. N. Stoddard.

The Cincinnati Christian Standard says: "We have seen testimonials from sufferers and they all verify the good results obtained from his simple remedies. We know Mr. Stoddard personally, and can vouch for the truthfulness of his statements. He has been in business in Buffalo for 20 years, always doing just as he agreed to. Our readers need have no hesitancy in sending him money."

Excursion to Manchester, Iowa.

The Illinois Central R. R. will name a rate of one fare for the round trip from all its points in Iowa, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, to the annual Convention and Exposition of the National Butter, Cheese and Egg Association, to be held at Manchester, Iowa, November 1, 2 and 3. Tickets will be on sale from Oct. 31st to Nov. 5th, good to return until Nov. 8th. The Iowa State Association will also hold its annual meeting at the same time and place. Manchester is the champion local butter market of the West, and Delaware county, Iowa, is the banner butter county. The citizens of Manchester are sparing no pains or expense to make this the largest and most successful convention of the kind ever held in the nation. Accommodations will be provided for all at moderate prices, and the Exposition alone will be worth ten times the expense of attending to any creameryman or dairyman. Exhibitors will pay regular freight rates to Manchester, and returning they will be billed free to point from which they were shipped. Cream-separators, churns and cheese apparatus will be run by steam power, showing exactly what each machine can do. People of the South engaged in the creamery or dairy industry should not fail to attend this great gathering of representative dairymen. Manchester sends a cordial invitation to all. For circulars, programs, rates, etc., apply to J. F. MERRY, Gen'l West. Pass. Ag't, Manchester, Iowa, or to the undersigned at New Orleans, Louisiana.

CAMP MEETING.

The Gillis Camp Meeting, two and a half miles from Hattiesburg, will commence on Friday night before the fifth Sunday in this month. The time is short; but our people have built a tabernacle preachers' tent, and are pushing things to get ready. There will be but few tents this year. But it is the beginning, and we expect ample support another year. A lunch-house will be provided, and meals furnished visitors at the lowest practicable rates. All traveling and local preachers invited, and will be cared for.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Wells, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. E. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will have the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and their wives, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

GOD'S APPOINTMENTS.

BY EMMA C. DOWD.

Two men went forth, one summer hour,
And both were young and brave and true;
Two loyal hearts, two brains of power,
Eager to dare and do.

Each followed right, each turned from wrong,
And strove his errors to outlive;
Each sought with hope and courage strong
The best life has to give.

For one love's fountain yielded up
Its sweetest—royally he quaffed;
The other drank from brimming cup
A bitter, bitter draught.

One touched but stones, they changed to gold,
Wealth came and stayed at his command;
The other's silver turned to mould
And dust within his hand.

He ate with kings, their honors shared;
The other trod a barren way,
And few men knew or cared.

And this is life: two sow, one reaps;
Two run abreast, one gains the goal;
One laughs aloud, the other weeps
In anguish of his soul.

One seems of fate the helpless toy,
Unbroken one's triumphant chain;
God hath appointed one to joy,
Appointed one to pain.

The Wisdom that doth rule the world
Is wisdom far beyond our ken;
But when all seems to ruin hurled,
God's hand is mighty then.

In God's appointments I believe,
Trusting his love, believe in this:
That though from day to day men grieve,
And life's sweet fruitage miss,

In some glad future they shall know
Why one through striving may not win;
The book of life will surely show
Why all these things have been.

Bargain-Mongers.

BY T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D.

This class of people is large in the church. The amount of time, study, brains and maneuvering involved in securing bargains has never been published by the man of statistics. Why not has often excited my wonder.

I wish to furnish a definition to bargain monger. I, therefore, submit: "One who is afflicted with that species of madness which causes him to enjoy the intoxication of mind resulting from a sense of having gotten the advantage." Selfishness is the root from which this vice springs; but it often so changes in its development that we could no more guess its origin than we could that the frog came from the pollywog and spawn of the puddle. Bargains are not sought by many for themselves. As hunters train dogs and kites and ravens to catch, retrieve or purloin for them, so the devil often employs bargain-mongers to cheat, overreach and oppress not for themselves, but for some cause or person noble or lovely in their estimation. We see outrageous and pitiable developments of this in religion. Men and women work for bargains for their church. Sweet-faced girls are taught to lie point-blank, and almost steal at fairs, festivals and sociables, to add something to the "collection." Sober-faced laymen and ardent preachers often "catch 'em by guile," as I heard one of them say as he got fifty dollars "by way of a slant."

It would be impossible to describe all the types of bargain-mongers, or to enter into details as to their ways. But a rough classification will do as well as an elaborate.

1. Those who bargain for enjoyment. To these there is a commodity which is called enjoyment, and which is to be won from first hands by bargain—i. e., less than cost of production. I have been amused at this individual at picnics, camp meetings, and all other places where enjoyment is supposed to be had in the raw state, or manufactured in any style from celluloid to celestial wear. What a sharp eye at the picnic to see where the fun was going to break out, and to be ready to paste his label on it! If at the camp meeting, how keen to discover that Bro. Jones was getting full, or that Sister Brown's daughter was "about to pull through!" That would be the lucky point to put Bro. Jones' wine on tap, and to say the word that would bring Sister Brown's daughter "whoopin' to the kingdom." As to real work and agony for or with these strugglers, our bargain-monger would have nothing to do. He is the religious character at a revival answering to the fellow that hangs round the bar, but never steps up until "free drinks" is called out. He is a believer in "freedom from the word 'go.'" Won't he ever work or pay? Yes—when he sees that he can toss heads and tails and win, he will do it. But the enjoyment derived has to be immediate and large, or it does not suit him. This character expects the Lord to tickle him every half-hour, in order to get any work; but the tickling business must last twenty-five minutes. The other five is spent in telling how much he enjoyed it; and that is hard work in the Master's cause.

2. A second class is almost the opposite of the foregoing. They want to drive a bargain with God in regard to assured faith, and yet have liberty to live according to their lusts. They are antinomian workers—a seeming paradox, and yet most common. They ignore the moral law as to its obligation, except the exaction of so much work as an equivalent for its violation. Millions seek to serve God and their generation according to their lusts, yet work themselves to death.

3. But I wish to come to the third class of bargain-mongers who present none of these glaring faults. They are people who want to get things cheap. They are to be divided into two classes: (1) The Jew-er and (2) the one who is "just lookin' round."

(1) The Jew-er is sometimes the hanger-on to the old direction in the Discipline to deal as much as possible with those of the same faith. He does it "for duty's sake." He lets the merchant and grocer know that "we belong to the same church, you know; it wouldn't be right for you to be hard on me." Such a brother will buy at half price, and let his "brother in the church" lose it, or make it up on some "vile sinner." Sometimes he acts upon the maxim, "Business is business," and acknowledges no bond but to buy where things sell the cheapest. This leads him to deal with Jews and houses of doubtful methods; and to beat these he must deal more doubtfully. He resorts to various pleas and turns that he would so heartily detest in a beggar that he would want to arrest him for a fraud. He forgets the true import of his maxim that business is not fraud or beggary, but business. He forgets that goods may sell under cost rather in the dear store than in the cheap store—not because the vendor does not make profit in either case, but because there is more than money in the transaction. When a dozen shirts are made by a poor sewing-woman for thirty-five cents, they can be sold cheaper than when the making of each cost twenty-five cents; but who will say that the former may not one day become the shirt of Nessus? Tears and sighs weave into the texture and imbue the fiber of many a rich garment that sells cheap. But can it be ever that in the moral world the reaction will not come? Can it be that that on which not only joys or hopes are suspended, but even character depends for its symmetry and color, can be broken and thrown aside, and that still our hopes shall ascend heavenward and our characters grow God-like?

(2) "I'm lookin' round where to send to school." So said a long-pocketed Methodist to me. When he learned my terms he did not say, "Can't you do it for less?" He only drew a long breath, and said, "Well, I was only lookin' round, and I had heard o' you." I was glad to know I was "heard from;" but I knew then he never would be. But I did—not directly, but indirectly. I learned that he went to another place where direct charges were less; but it was made up in military uniforms and initial envelopes. The brother parted with a "God bless you;" but I felt that it had the after-clause, "for I can't."

"It is corban"—so said Jesus with the evident emphasis that the gift was infinitely dearer than the purchase. There is more in a moral relation than in seeming fulfillment of man's highest duty. "Stand in thy lot" is more than a possession in fee. It is life's stream traced to its fountain-head in the enchanted glens of Eden; its strength measured along those force-measurers where spiritual empires learn their grade. We forget that the law of trade is more than the law of gain. Buying and selling is not business. My buying and selling should advance the world's aggregate wealth—and wealth means well-being and doing. As I measure a piece of goods over the counter, more than the image of the gold ought to shine upon my mind. More than the mere garment. That garment is to be worn, and the wearer has what is unpurchasable save by the richest love Deity could show. As I pay gold over the counter, more than the dream of a fine bargain should fill my mind. I have helped somebody. Whom? Have I warmed a viper or a half-frozen cherub? Have I fed a pig or dropped a loaf in the lap of the mother of starveling waifs? Have I contributed to the advancement of some noble cause, or lent my money to those who would coin heart's blood, if possible, into nickels or doubloons? In a word, have I been a business man or a bargain-monger?

Household Christianity.

BY REV. R. ABBEY.

Household Christianity is the Christianity of the church. Show me the one, and I'll show you the other. And not only so, I will show you the church of the future. The general character of the church of the next generation is already irrevocably fixed. No pulpit nor no press can change it beyond a very few points of the compass. If a man could go to-day and make an accurate survey and examination of the occupants of the cradle, of one year old and under, he could draw an outline, moral and religious, chart of the church of the next generation with almost unerring approximate certainty. If he were to include in his examination the children over one year and not over two, he would make it still more accurate. After two years there is very little change in the habitude of children, so far as concerns the great fundamental principle on which Christianity is built. After about the age of two, or sometimes three years, great changes might be made, but not always are made, in social manners, moral traits of character, and general behavior; but the primary principle on which Christianity is mainly built is generally fixed not to be changed.

This fundamental principle relates but very slightly, if at all, to moral character. The moral character of a child of one or two years is but very slightly, if at all, established; but a habit is firmly and generally fixed, not to be changed. If you will go to the cradle, with the Bible as a book of reference, for information, you will learn that long before moral character begins to set in, a habit has become firmly established for life. Any healthy child a week old, or even a day old, has not failed to set up his self-will in resistance to control. He resists authority for no reason, and, therefore, the act can scarcely be said to be moral. You may call it the first fruits of original sin, or give it any other name; the fact is well known. It begins at first. Moral acts, such as are done with a sense of right and wrong, come in a long time afterward. This self-will habit is nothing but a habit.

The force of a feather, judiciously and occasionally applied, will not only prevent this self-will habit from growing, but will change it into a gentle, docile habit of easy, quiet obedience. Nothing is more simple or easy than this process if taken hold of in time. But if let alone a month, a year, the time is past. Or if not irrevocably past, at the end of six months or a year, a hundred or a thousand times the force is now required. This is rarely, if ever, done.

Two years or so after this the child begins to take on some traits of moral character, and now this early formed habit of resistance to authority comes in as a large factor in its formation. After this there may be obedience, but it is never submitted to so cheerfully. There is more or less reluctance. Obedience is now submission, not free.

This is the character of the children as turned over to the pastor. The habit of resistance to authority is well fixed. The child, following the bent of nature, has resisted, with more or less success, ten thousand times. It has become a part of his nature, or, according to the old adage, second nature. Every person, young or old, is almost irresistibly inclined to do whatever he has been constantly doing. A child in the habit of obeying reluctantly, or not at all, is not going to obey cheerfully. A child in the habit of obeying cheerfully and promptly, without consulting his own feelings, will do so every time. Cheerful obedience is as easily learned as resisting and reluctant and coercive obedience, if taken in time—that is, in the docile state. Troublesome, irksome, disagreeable and hated obedience is no obedience at all. It is mere action produced by fear and force. The child is merely overpowered for the time, but is ready for the next conflict. Child-life is thus a continued strife. Corporeal punishment is mere barbarity. Necessary it most assuredly is; but this necessity is the result of parental negligence and mismanagement back yonder. Establish a habit of docile obedience during the docile period, and there is no more use for the rod of correction in the nursery than for a whipping-post in a church.

Now, if the managers of the nursery would introduce to the pastor the growing children of six, eight or ten years, with well-established habits of docile obedience, according to the Bible rule, the church would grow more in one year than it now does in forty or a hundred. It is even now beginning to be seen that here, and not in the pulpit, is the place where great, world-wide religious increase is to be looked for.

There is a passage of Scripture on this subject, with forty other supporting ones, which is as follows: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." I know of no reason to believe that this law, with the promise annexed, has ever been read. Its mere literature has been looked at a thousand times; but if any writer had gone down into its deep profound, and there surveyed the breadth and height of its great teaching in natural history and Christian philosophy, the world would surely have known it by this time. But up to this day, so far as I know, the books are silent. I have not seen the subject brought forward in the pulpit! And in the books, the only place I remember to have seen it is in two of Wesley's sermons. If I remember right, in Nos. 100 and 101. There, or in some others, it is clearly alluded to, but not elaborated. The usual "exposition" of the teaching relates merely to good behavior in children—the merest glance at the surface of the subject.

"Bettie," says a mother to a girl of five years—"Bettie, come in, my dear; the preacher is going to leave, and we are going to have prayers: come in." "I don't want to come in," says Bettie. "O, come in, come in." "I don't want to." "Yes, but you must come in: the preacher is going." "Yes, but I don't want to." And some pulling at Bettie's elbow was equally unsuccessful. Now, that is the kind of people, either of four years or forty, to whom we preach.

The church reform now greatly needed is in the early months of the nursery; not so much to teach good behavior as to establish a habit of obedience before the child can understand or appreciate good behavior. Then good behavior and good Christianity, too, will flow easily.

Domestic Missions.

MR. EDITOR: A communication from Rev. R. S. Woodward, of the Mississippi Conference, appeared in the ADVOCATE a few weeks ago, which was intended to call attention to the cause of domestic missions. That is an important part of our church work, but it is not encouraged and sustained as it ought to be. The interest in the cause of missions is directed to foreign fields, to the neglect of the destitute places at home. While we rejoice in the signs of increasing interest in the evangelizing of foreign nations, we should not forget that there are many places in the bounds of our old Conferences which are almost as needy and as difficult to work as some of the foreign fields. There is need for the exercise of wisdom in providing for the home mission work. It must have the sympathy and support of the church, and its importance must be recognized to the same extent as foreign missions, if it is worthy of the name of mission work.

All agree that the laborers in the foreign fields should be well qualified in every respect for the work they are to do, and should be adequately sustained in it, and they have the sympathy, not only of a Christian denomination, but of the Christian world. But there is a fallacy in the church that but little ability is necessary for a laborer in a domestic mission, and that provision should be made only for his meager support. The true view of this work shows it among the the most difficult to be done. No other proof is necessary to sustain this view than the simple fact that these uncultivated fields have been at our doors so long. There are obstacles in the way which can only be removed or surmounted by laborers who are strong to endure and are well supported by the church. It is a sad comment on the work of half a century that there are some of these neglected or poorly cultivated regions in our midst. Why should not the means necessary to success be brought to those places? Why should they not have the support and sympathy of the church?

These very feet of ours are purchased for Christ's service by the precious drops which fell from his own torn and pierced feet upon the cross. They are to be his errand-runners. How can we let the world, the flesh, and the devil have the use of what has been purchased with such payment?—F. H. Havergal.

A Column of Clips.

Never lose a chance of saying a kind word. As Collingwood never saw a vacant place in his estate but he took an acorn from his pocket and popped it in; so deal with your compunctions through life. An acorn costs nothing; but it may sprout into a prodigious bit of timber.

Above all things, the practice of kind thought is an main help to that complete government of the tongue which we all so much covet. The interior beauty of a soul through habitual kindness of thought is greater than our words can tell. To such a man life is a perpetual bright evening: with all things calm and fragrant and restful. The dust of life is laid, and its fever cooled. All sounds are softer, as is the way of evening, and all sights are fairer; and the golden light makes our enjoyment of earth a happily pensive preparation for heaven.

The regenerated man is known by the spirit which animates his life, for it is the motive which gives quality to character; the regenerated man lives by rule, but it is the unwritten and unchanging rule of love; the regenerated man advances in orderliness, but it is the orderliness, not of mechanical stipulation, but of vigorous and affluent life; the regenerated man is constantly strengthened and ennobled by an inextinguishable ambition to be filled with all fullness of Christ: his new life springs up for ever as a well of water that can not be exhausted.

The character is formed by the personal habits of daily life as much as by the thoughts and principles inculcated. The careless and unmethodical in action will scarcely be the accurate observer, the correct reporter, the reliable authority, or the steadfast supporter in other matters. The loose ends of daily habits repeat themselves in the character, and graver victims than the prosaic qualities of method, order, regularity and the like follow on those habits of forethought and observation which elder people try so hard to inculcate on the younger, and the younger try so hard not to learn. Also, no one can exaggerate the importance of daily combating the sins or the frailties that most easily beset us. To give way to-day to a fit of inconsiderate selfishness, unfounded suspicion, irrational anger or careless self-indulgence makes control all the harder to-morrow, and the folly committed now all the easier to repeat then.

What a sad world this world would be to a thoughtful man, if there were nothing beyond this world! Not for himself, perhaps, but for others, there is need of another life to make this life tolerable to one who observes and reflects. On every side there are deserving ones who suffer far more than the undeserving. And there are saints whose lives are lives of toil and trial and seeming failure. Here, often, if not always, the fittest die, and the unfittest survive. If there were nothing to live for beyond the life that now is, the helps to true character-making would cost more than their apparent worth. But here it is that immortality sheds light on the mortal life; and here it is that this world at its worst and at its darkest is, to the believer, the very best conceivable preparation for the highest existence beyond all human conception.

THEN AND NOW. Oh, could I but restore the "old-fashioned" girl to this age, what a benefactor I should be to mankind! How neat was her dress; how simple and cordial her manner. We thought it a dreadful term of reproach to call one affected. Those girls obeyed their mothers and fathers, and really supposed there were some things in heaven and earth their parents understood better than they did; they knew how to sew with exquisite neatness; how to make a bed and a shirt; if their education did not extend to classical music, the higher mathematics and dead languages, they were grounded well in the useful knowledge that is needed every day. They did not get up in prayer meetings and obtrude their opinions or their experience upon the public. St. Paul had not become a delusion and a snare then; they did not call his indignant words, that "it is a shame for women to speak in the church," the utterance of "an old bachelor," "an old fogy;" they had respect for the Word of God in all its fullness and detail. Ah, what wives and mothers they made!

But now flaunting about the streets, their hair all about their eyes like skye-terriers, their figures distorted into the likeness of nothing in heaven above or earth beneath, by bumps a dromedary would revile, their vital organs squeezed into numbness and uselessness, drawn out of balance and, therefore, out of gear, by heels that give them the gait of gouty old men, their heads crowned with h aps of "fuss and feathers"—if they are not making acquaintances with no introduction as they promenade the pavement, or flying round some hall closely folded to the bosom of a youth of their own sort, they are lounging at home in the easy chair, that should have been their tired mother's, pounding out clattering marches or tuneless polkas on a poor piano, or leading a prayer meeting perhaps not having reached that height, only offering exhortation or petition with the aplomb and self-confidence of a deacon of the church.—Rose Terry Cooke.

MY FRIEND.

BY MACHEATH.

Cast [illegible] me, day by day
Wash[illegible]Fitch]—no [illegible]
[illegible] I hear, to [illegible] I pray,
Telling the trials of the way
He hears the [illegible] I speak
He is so strong, I am so weak!

His love makes every [illegible]
His presence all my [illegible]
What heights can [illegible]
That trusts the strength of His dear [illegible]
How can I yield [illegible] and fear,
Or anxious thoughts, while He is near?

His voice I hear so soft and low,
Showing the way I am to go,
I do not even seek to know
The reasons why—I love Him so!
He is my rest, my joy, my song?
To Him my life and soul belong.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

Matthew x, 32-42.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew x, 32.

INTRODUCTORY.

Twenty-four verses are passed over between the last lesson and the present. They contain a continuation of the charge which our Savior gave to the apostles immediately after calling them and sending them forth to preach. The concluding verse of the last lesson gave them in general, but most comprehensive and impressive, terms, instructive as to the method and measure of their service—"Freely ye have received, freely give." The verse succeeding continues the same idea, but in more definite and particular prescription, plainly enjoining it upon the apostles to have no care for the supply of physical wants, for "the workman is worthy of his meat." The Master drew for them a very sorrowful picture as to their future. He told them that they would fall among the wolves of persecution; that they would be scourged in the synagogues; that they should be hated of all men for his name's sake. Surely, by no means a pleasant future thus portrayed! Had there been a faint heart among them, then was the time to withdraw. As an offset to these trying experiences, Christ assured them that his Father had numbered the very hairs of their head, and that he, without whom even a sparrow was not permitted to fall upon the ground, would much more surely care for them. He also told them of their triumphant issue out of all these troubles—"He that endureth to the end shall be saved." But the most inspiring plea of all was, that in these persecutions they were like their Lord. "It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master." It would brighten the darkest prospect and solace the saddest hour, to reflect that the Master passed through all this before them, and that these very experiences gave the best evidence that they were united to their Head. Inasmuch as so great benefits were contingent upon a proper connection with the Savior, there follows very appropriately

THE NECESSITY OF CONFESSING CHRIST.

Verse 32. "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven." In the midst of the persecutions mentioned, it required courage and faith to confess Christ; courage to be able to face all the dangers, and faith to realize that he who was for them was greater than all against them. He was to be confessed "before men." It is vain for men to say that they confess Christ in their closets, and that even when occasion serves they confess him in their speech. The requirement is to confess him before men, so that they may ascribe good works to his influence. In this Christian country, is not the initial step to the confession of Christ before men that of joining some branch of his church? No matter how moral a man may be, no matter how near to the Christian standard may be his life, if he persists in staying out of the pale of the visible church, he will not be understood as confessing Christ "before men."

33. "But whosoever shall deny me, him will I also deny," etc. There are many ways by which men may deny Christ, even after they confess him by joining the church. When his doctrines are assailed in a wicked company, to be silent may be equal to a denial of him. To neglect any act of worship or reverence because gainsayers or persecutors may be at hand, is a denial. If a man denies Christ on earth, he may expect to be denied by Christ before his Father in heaven. God and Christ are one.

PEACE OR A SWORD?

Verse 34. "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword." Christ is called the Prince of Peace. His advent was heralded as bringing peace on earth and good-will to men. Yet Christ's reign allows of no compromise with evil, and, as men are evil, a continuous warfare with evil-doers must be the necessary result, even until those evil-doers change their course and become reconciled to Christ. A curse is pronounced upon those false dealers who cry, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." That Christ's mission be one of peace or a sword depends upon the individual. If he should lay down the weapons of his rebellion, then there will be no use for the sword.

35, 36. "For I am come to set a man at variance with his father." "And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." If some members of a family are ungodly, and others are devotedly pious, there will necessarily be variance. The strife will be unremitting and implacable just in proportion to the intensity of the ungodliness and the fervor of the piety. The hatred felt by a wicked man for a Christly member of his own family will be greater and fiercer than that felt toward a stranger, because of the more intimate association, and because a pure life is a constant condemnation to an impure one.

THE CRUCIAL TEST.

Verse 37. "He that loveth father or mother, * * * son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me." If it should come to the test of deciding between even the nearest and dearest earthly relative and our blessed Savior, there should not be a thought of hesitancy. Christ objects to no proper love or association, and if either is arrayed against him, that very fact proclaims it to be offensive to him, and, therefore, hurtful to us. There is nothing that savors of jealousy in this sentiment. The meaning simply is that Christ is the impersonation of all that is lovable, and if a man does not freely accord to him supreme affection, he is by that fact unworthy and unappreciative of the Source of all good.

38. "He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." The Romans compelled the condemned to bear their cross to the place of execution. Christ bore his until he fainted under, and Simon relieved him. Our Savior takes no delight in inflicting unnecessary crosses. The reason of the necessity of the daily cross is because men are naturally bad, and every step towards good must be in direct opposition to nature, and hence it becomes a cross. If a man did never take up his cross, he could never follow Christ, because Christ's course is one of purity, truth and love, and man's inclination is just the reverse. He who most completely crucifies self is worthiest of Christ and meetest for heaven.

39. "He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." He who makes his temporal well-being to be of more importance than his spiritual, and who is continually laboring for the interests of the former to the neglect of the latter, will disastrously fail in securing either interest. But he who, in complete forgetfulness of worldly values, seeks first the kingdom of God and his righteousness will secure success in the life that now is as well as in that to come.

SERVICE FOR CHRIST'S SAKE SECURES REWARD.

Verse 40. "He that receiveth you, receiveth me: and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me." The apostles represented Christ as an ambassador represents his sovereign. So if anyone receives, or does a kindness to, a disciple of Christ, he really bestows the same attention upon Christ, for Christ makes himself in this respect one with his disciples. Also if kindness is shown to Christ, it is shown to the Father. "I and my Father are one."

41. "He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward." A prophet is not necessarily one who foretells future events, but any minister of the gospel. If one receives such as a messenger of peace for his office sake, he shall receive a prophet's reward. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace!" "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever." To have a righteous man, an eminently pious person, in one's household brings blessings upon all around. His influence will be elevating and assimilating. "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." So he who receives him shall partake of his blessing.

42. "And whosoever shall give to drink one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily, I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." Little in the estimation of the great world, but highly prized in the estimation of their Father. Even a cup of cold water given in the name of a disciple borrows a greatness and worth from the pious intention. This links it to the skies, and opens up the treasure-house of the faithful rewarder of his people.

TRUTHS TO BE TREASURED.

1. Confession on earth is necessary to recognition in heaven.

2. Peace will be shown to them that love peace: but the sword will never be sheathed for the sinner.

3. The Savior deserves and must have supreme affection.

4. Even the smallest act done in the name of righteousness will secure the favor of Heaven.

McKendree Church and the Theater.

From the American, of Nashville, we copy the following:

A meeting of the Official Board of McKendree Church was held, according to notice, last evening. Thompson Anderson presided in the chair, and J. D. Hamilton was secretary. The following preamble and resolutions were presented by Dr. W. H. Morgan, and seconded by Mr. Henry Hart:

Whereas, Recent events in our midst have directed special attention to the question of the relation of the church of Christ to the theater; and

Whereas, This question is one of profound interest to all who have at heart the purity, peace and prosperity of the church and the highest good of humanity: and

Whereas, Existing conditions affecting this question imperatively demand the prayerful consideration of our people, and wise, firm and timely administrative action on the part of their pastors; and

Whereas, We regard the present time as eminently fitting for us to give distinct and emphatic expression to our views concerning a matter so deeply involving the welfare of the church: therefore,

Resolved, That, in common with all other evangelical churches, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, during its entire history, borne a uniform testimony against the theater as inimical to the Christian life and hurtful to public morals; the General Conference having again and again endorsed the deliverances of our chief pastors interpreting the general rules, as clearly forbidding theater-going on the ground that it is one of those "diversions that can not be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Resolved, That we, the members of the Official Board of McKendree Church, are in hearty sympathy with the law of the church and these deliverances of our chief pastors in relation to the theater; that the sermon of our pastor, Rev. W. A. Candler, on Sunday, October 9, 1887, voiced our convictions concerning this matter, and that we pledge ourselves to give the pastors who may hereafter minister to us in sacred things our sympathy, our moral support, and our official co-operation in all proper effort and disciplinary measures to banish theater-going from the church.

Resolved, That our indignation at the violation of propriety and the law of the land by an actress who interrupted the religious services at McKendree Church, on Sunday last, is enhanced by the flagrantly false accounts which have been sent forth by the press dispatches in relation to the matter. There might have been a few persons in the rear of the congregation who were in sympathy with the offender—but so far from applauding her conduct, the evident feeling of the congregation was that of indignation, mingled with disgust. The Christian and dignified bearing of our pastor on the occasion met our unqualified approval.

Resolved, That God being our helper, we will, both by precept and example, seek to promote that spirituality in the church that will cause our people to prefer the worship and service of God to the pleasures of sin, to choose the communion of saints rather than to run with the multitude to do evil, and, if need be, to suffer the reproach of Christ rather than purchase the friendship of the world by compromising the truth as it is in Jesus.

After the preamble and resolutions had been read, Bishop McTyeire made the following remarks:

Brethren: Coming into the city this morning, after two week's absence, I heard that a preamble and resolutions of the character just submitted, would be acted on by McKendree Church to-night, and I purposed to attend. The subject matter was not news. On the route home and at Abingdon the Knoxville and other papers had it. "Let me read to you the McKendree sensation of last Sunday," said a preacher to a company of us. And he read how an actress had invaded your sanctuary and confronted the pastor and congregation with an indignant rebuke at the conclusion of his sermon on the theater. More, that the congregation heartily applauded her smart speech; she carried the house before her, and many rushed to congratulate her for pluck and eloquence in defense of herself and her craft.

Some of our little company hung their heads in shame for McKendree Church; others doubted—it looked so much like an advertising catch. I ventured to assure them that the thing could not be as bad as represented. The laws of the land jealously protect worshiping congregations from interruption and scandal: and surely the congregations of this old and well-trained church could never furnish ill-bred and irreverent people in sufficient number to tolerate and enact such a scene. At Chattanooga the report grew worse, as the papers of that city and of other cities fell into our hands. "Thunderous applause" greeted the actress, "carriages of the best people" drove to her lodgings to congratulate her for rebuking Mr. Candler, who was made to take a very tame part all through.

A copy of the sermon was procured, and, after careful reading, I could see no cause. The sermon was nervous and to the point; the authorities quoted were various, respectable, venerable and overwhelming; the argument was clear and the conclusion orthodox. Was the actress trying her hand in a new part in order to work up an advertisement? Or did the truth, uttered as our Bro. Candler knows how to utter it, enrage her beyond control? Did the McKendree congregation forget its own self-respect so far as to cheer this brazen violator of propriety, instead of turning her over to the police? Well, my journey ended, and so did my questioning suspense. I soon learned that not only vanities, but lying vanities had gone abroad. You are about to clear yourselves before the world. Your correction, if you see fit to adopt this paper, will never overtake these sensational falsehoods; but you will justify old McKendree before those whose good opinion you cherish, and you will remove a possible reproach and stumbling-block. More, you stand by your faithful pastor while he stands by his duty. This is honorable and just and right. You owe it to him and to the truth and to us all.

"The world will love its own," said our Lord. Be not surprised that your pastor is spoken of as fanatical and narrow by a certain class, and that a large and noisy class. My! how the lovers of pleasure more than the lovers of God will enjoy this story. How they will garnish it up, and circulate it, and applaud the "plucky little actress," as they style her! She bearded the lion in his den. She did, indeed, and carried off the spoil. Now, sell tickets for the show. The men and women who run theaters will make the most of it. This morning's paper has an extensive telegram headed, "Honors for Emma," telling how, last night, in the Opera House at Chattanooga, the city editor appeared on the stage, "in the name of a large number of the best citizens," and "presented Miss Abbott" with a magnificent solid silver testimonial for her conduct in McKendree Church. Her reply is given in full—how she met the "shameless slanders" of the minister. No doubt the New York and other papers display the same advertisement to-day. Who got up this telegram? Think you the regular agent of the Associated Press did it? Hardly. The agents of this Abbott troupe might possibly tell us. Who sent out into all the land those lying reports that appeared in Monday's papers? It is barely possible they could tell us that also. It pays.

It would be amusing to see how people who patronize theaters are caught with such chaff, if there were not a serious side to this business. There is a very serious side. It concerns every church in Nashville and in Tennessee. Have we not laws for the protection of public worship, and are we ready to surrender them to strolling players? If a poor drunkard staggers into the house of God and behaves disorderly, he is locked up and fined. If a thoughtless rustic talks too loud or otherwise swaggers into misbehavior, not only in a church, but under an humble hush-arbor, where religious services are being held, the officers of the law attend to him. And shall this open, boastful breach of good order in McKendree Church be allowed to pass as a theatrical sensation, only bringing money and notoriety to the offender? What congregation is safe from scandalous intrusion? Your neighbor, Dr. Witherspoon, of the Presbyterian Church, is a bold and faithful preacher. Suppose on next Sunday he preaches a sermon against card-playing, the round-dance, and such like, or repeats one that he did preach awhile back. Some indignant devotee of dice and the german gets up and contradicts him, and makes a sensation in his congregation and—gets telegraphed! Or he is warning the young men of Nashville against gambling, and lo! a modest blackleg stands up for his profession and insists that some of them are gentlemen; and he browbeats the pulpit.

Suppose Dr. Strickland, of the Baptist Church, takes as his next text the Seventh Commandment, and reads largely from the fifth chapter of Proverbs, and then duly enforces text and lesson. Before the congregation quietly receives the benediction and retires, a painted courtesan denounces the minister, declaring, in the stage manner of the most approved Langtry or Abbott, that there are exceptions and qualifications that ought to be specified, and that as for herself she does not keep a disorderly house. Suppose Dr. Cave should edify his people next Sunday with one of his fearless discourses against liquor drinking and liquor dealing, and the congregation, instead of being allowed to retire in order and seriously impressed, should be treated to a speech by some rumseller, who had just dropped in and does'nt fancy what has been delivered concerning himself and his brethren in like condemnation. Would such a thing be funny—a thing to laugh at, and to make the perpetrator of the outrage the hero of the hour, and worthy of a solid pewter testimonial, delivered with great applause among his followers, and, perhaps, paid for by himself? The grand jury would have a sworn duty to perform in such cases; and if that guardian of law is properly awake, this case will not escape an indictment.

Whereunto will this thing grow? If one actress makes an advertisement by it, who next? The public should see to it, at least, that it be not a free advertisement. The vicious and idle would be delighted to see Christian churches made a place for badging and bear-baiting ministers. This is fair play, in their estimation. But churches are not built and supported by this class: neither were they dedicated to such uses.

I can not close without expressing my grief and astonishment at an anonymous article in yesterday's American, which, the editor tells us, was written by an "eminent divine." Save the eminent! Save the divine! Can it be possible that he is a Methodist? We expect sinners—and only a certain class of them—to revile faithful ministers, but when an "eminent divine" joins in the attempt to cry down Bro. Candler, there is the more reason why the church he has served should speak out. I trust McKendree Church will utter no uncertain sound to-night.

After remarks by Dr. Morgan, E. W. Cole, Henry Hart, J. W. Manier, Prof. Z. H. Brown, B. Richardson, J. D. Hamilton, T. D. Fite, G. A. Dazey and Dr. G. W. F. Price, members of the Board, and the Revs. Dr. Tillett and Fitzgerald, visitors, the preamble and resolutions were adopted.

Notice.

To the Sisters Engaged in the Missionary Quilt Enterprise:

The North Mississippi Conference is to convene in annual session as early as November 23. This will be before our national Thanksgiving Day, which time was suggested for the disposal of the missionary quilts. Therefore, those who wish to send the prices of their quilts to Conference by their pastors will have to sell them previous to that time in order to do so.

With faith in his name who says, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and whose parting words are an assurance that he will never forsake his true followers who obey this command, it is desired that the money obtained by these quilts, before November 23, be reported at the coming annual session of the North Mississippi Conference as a donation to the missionary cause, and placed at the disposal of the Board of Missions. Thenceforth, be it much or ever so little, may it be spent in the happy, heavenward-tending cause by divine guidance.

A few of the quilts have already been well disposed of by the proposed method. Under the circumstances, it may be all who can do so would be pleased to dispose of theirs before Thanksgiving Day. Hence this notice is given

From the Work.

RAYMOND CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I promised when I wrote before that I would write again when I had concluded my protracted meetings. Last Thursday night we closed the last one of four for this circuit. We have had some refreshing times on the Raymond circuit this year. While the harvest was not as bountiful as we expected and desired, yet the outpouring of the good Spirit was manifest, and a general warming up and reconsecration of the membership has been accomplished. We have had fifteen accessions to the church, with more to follow, I trust. We hope to have all our collections up by Conference. At Raymond we had the help of Bro. W. B. Lewis, from Canton, for a week; at Bolton we had Bro. J. S. Parker, from Benton; at Clinton, Bro. F. M. Keen, from West Jackson. All these brethren did faithful, efficient, and much appreciated work. Bishop Galloway preached us one grand sermon at Bolton, and gave us a good missionary talk. Our beloved elder and Dr. Marshall, of Vicksburg, were with us a short time, and the latter gave us two of his inimitable talks, which we all enjoyed very much. Our people are very sorry that this is the last year our presiding elder can serve them in that capacity; but, as Methodists, are loyal to the usages of Methodism, and hopeful about his successor, trusting that he may be a man of equal wisdom, faithfulness, prudence, and zeal for all the interests of our Zion.

Fraternally yours,

W. E. BALLARD.

BOLTON, MISS., OCT. 17, 1887.

HERNANDO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just returned from one of the grandest revivals of religion I ever witnessed—held at Jonesboro, Ark. One hundred and fifty-five conversions reported; eighty-three had united with our church. Thirty-two joined other churches. Others will join. Bro. Smith (pastor) and Bro. Cochran, presiding elder, are doing fine work.

Yours fraternally,

E. G. KILGORE.

OCTOBER 18, 1887.

You may be nearer to Christ than you think. Those men who went stumbling along the road to Emmaus, weeping and mourning that their Christ was gone, poured into his very ear their tale of bereavement. They told him of their trouble—that they had lost Christ; and there he was talking with them. In the midst of their deep grief they were their victory, and they did not know it.

Our Contributors.

An Educational System.

BY W. F. A. SULLIVAN, D. D.

While our church has no educational system, as such, she has yet been the friend and supporter of education. Through her Annual and District Conferences, she has owned no little school property in the use of schools conducted in her name and by her agencies. Her ministers and laymen have shared in the work of the higher schools of the State, and the common schools have drawn upon her members in filling the corps of teachers. She has taken such position and done such work in the great field of education, and commands such resources and holds such possibilities for good, that it seems timely and urgent she should put her own schools under a system regulated by her legislation. The most practical and efficient plan for doing this seems to be the creation by the General Conference of a Board of Education, with such general directions as shall give consistent and co-operative form to the work. The form should be that of not less than three distinct grades: the university, the college and the training-school. These should be properly correlated, so as to be members of one body. There will be common intellectual and spiritual life animating the whole; but each organ will fill its own function and contribute its proper part to the body. Let the work of the college be more particularly defined: then that is beyond that will readily fall into the sphere of the university, and what is preliminary will be kept in the training-school.

The training-school will be made flexible and adaptable to meet existing conditions. It must expect to take pupils at all stages of preparatory study—even down to zero—and gradually lead them along scholastic paths, where the mental powers shall be nourished and unfolded and proper knowledge secured. No common school system can be enterprised by the church, for the church can not collect taxes to support such a system. But in many places a primary pay school can be maintained, and here our system can work. The object must be to get hold of the children as early as possible in their formative age, and of as many as possible. For this purpose the training-school must have energetic attention. Here foundations are laid; here more minds will be met and set a-going in the right direction; more hearts will be influenced; more Christian lives secured for church and society; more workers disciplined, and society itself more deeply moved by this power.

The system proposed need not and will not give a stiff or stilted form to our educational movement. It will only give orderly adjustment to the parts, bring all forces and methods into harmony, conserve resources and conditions of degrees; it will judiciously regulate the number of colleges, give character and efficiency to the training-schools, increase their number and properly direct their studies; it will remove hurtful rivalries between schools and make all teachers laborers in a common field for common ends; it will eliminate patch-work and cramming, while it puts the growing mind on a simple and natural course of healthy development.

Infant Baptism.

When we, as believers, have our children baptized, we consider them not regenerated members of the church spiritual, but as members of the church visible, brought into covenant relations with God, with access to him in the name of Christ, through the means of grace. "If this be so," says the believer in exclusive adult baptism, "why is it you do not admit your infant members and administer to them the Lord's Supper?" We have in reply two remarks to submit which we think will meet the supposed difficulty involved in the question.

First, Jewish children were circumcised when but a few days old. If the feast of the Passover came within a few months after their circumcision, these infants did not eat the "roast flesh," the "unleavened bread," nor drink the three cups of wine invariably drank on such occasions, although undoubtedly members of the Jewish Church. But so soon as these children were mature enough to ask intelligent questions as to the import and meaning of the Passover feast, they were admitted, by divine command, and fully instructed in the history and purpose of the feast, and the promises connected with the Lord's covenant with his people.

Next. The baptism of infants, like their circumcision, is on their part an involuntary act—an act for which they are not responsible; but the eating of the Passover Supper and the Lord's Supper are each voluntary acts, and can only be voluntarily performed. As the Jews permitted all their circumcised children, as soon as they were able, intelligently and voluntarily, to do so, to partake of the Passover Supper, so do we permit and invite our baptized children, under like conditions, to partake of the Lord's Supper.

These facts seem to me satisfactorily to answer this apparent objection. J. B. WALKER.

St. Tammany Camp Meeting.

COVINGTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: According to previous announcement, the meeting at this place began on the twenty-second ultimo. As the ministering brethren failed to arrive till the second day of the meeting, the opening sermon was delivered by the writer.

Every service from the beginning to the close of the meeting was largely attended. There were in attendance from the itinerant ranks five of our best preachers, besides four local preachers, one of whom was from your city, who, by his boyish appearance and practical sermons, made a deep impression upon the hearts of the young people.

The preaching throughout was in demonstration of the spirit and with power, as was evidenced at the close of each service by the rush to the altar of penitents bathed in tears.

The singing was greatly augmented by the aid of two lay brethren, Bros. George Walker and Elbert Miles, from Whittington circuit, Mississippi Conference. Every evening, just when the sweet notes of the song bird where hushed and all nature seemed to be falling into a sweet slumber, could be seen gathering under the spacious tabernacle crowds of ladies and gentlemen, led by the sweet singers from Mississippi; and from then until time for the night service the air for many hundred yards around was filled with sweet intonations of music that would make one stand in bewildering rapture, and, while listening with intense delight to the sweet strains, as they poured forth from this sacred place, in the songs of Zion, and reverberated over the rich forest that stands in verdant beauty around our camp ground, the question would arise, as if impelled by some unseen power: "If music be so sweet on earth, what must it be in heaven?"

On Sunday the tabernacle, which has a seating capacity of six hundred, was very near full. At the close of the eleven o'clock service the sacrament was administered to over one hundred communicants, after which there was a collection taken—to finish paying for the building of the tabernacle and other incidental expenses—in which there was raised about $50.

So, Mr. Editor, in spite of the powers of darkness, croaking of some, the ridicule of others, and the plea of poverty with some of our best citizens, the St. Tammany Camp Ground has been built up, the tabernacle paid for at a cost of $125, the meeting has been held, resulting in the conversion of twenty-five or thirty souls, eleven accessions to the church, the Christians have been made to rejoice, and the whole community wonderfully revived.

Now, in conclusion, let me extend my heartfelt thanks to everyone who has aided in any way or degree to this encampment; and may they live long to enjoy the soul-stirring sermons that may be preached from year to year, the pathetic prayers offered, and the sweet songs of Zion sung at this place.

Let me also add: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name forevermore." Amen and amen!

Yours,

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

What It Means.

To the man or woman who has never been ill, the word "health" is meaningless. But to the one who has suffered and despaired, health appears as a priceless boon. To the thousands of unfortunate women who are suffering from some of the many forms of weaknesses or irregularities peculiar to their sex, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription holds forth the promise of a speedy restoration of this "priceless boon."

Science and Religion.

On a recent Sunday afternoon Prof. Simpson, of the Medical Department of the University of Edinburgh, in a brief talk to the students of Princeton Theological Seminary, said:

Apologetics is an important department in your course, and I eulize the indispensable work of writers and teachers in defense of the faith; but I want to say, coming from Edinburgh University, for the nineteenth century at least, you need not bother your brains about apologizing for Christianity. Our great university, a few years ago, celebrated a centennial anniversary, and men eminent in literature, arts and sciences, from all parts of the world, were present. While the programmes were being arranged, the students said: "We want a chance to select whom we please from among the distinguished guests, and have them meet us." The request was granted. The students looked over the list, and chose about a dozen men whom they regarded the cream of the lot. From your country they asked for James Russell Lowell; from France, Pasteur and DeLesseps; from Germany, Helmholtz and Virchow; from Belgium, Laveleye. I do not recall all the names. From our own country the only one called for was Robert Browning.

Now, gentlemen, you are aware that, according to second-rate literature, Christianity is a worn-out affair. A good deal is said about men of science having no sympathy with it. Some of us were afraid of what might be said to our students by the men of their choice that day. We came out of that meeting praising God. Pasteur said in the course of his remarks: "Students, youth is the period of enthusiasm. What does enthusiasm mean? You know the derivation—entheos, 'God within.' Whatever you do, young gentlemen, do not fail to cultivate the divine within you."

DeLesseps told somewhat of his life-history, showing that, in seeming opposition to his own inclinations and plans, he had been led into his great canal construction. His auditors could not but feel that a higher mind than his own had guided the man in his life-work

Helmholtz gave some personal reminiscences to the same effect. Virchow got up before the students and struck out on an entirely different line than he had purposed, not expressing one thought he had mapped out for himself, as he afterwards showed me his outline. "Young gentlemen, I want to warn you against the dangers of empty speculation. For instance, spontaneous generation is, you may plead, not an impossibility. It may be thinkable. But there is a man here who has demonstrated that in fact no such thing exists. Some of you are students of medicine. If you go out in the world and go to treating fevers on the theory of spontaneous generation, you will very quickly find yourself without a practice. You must deal with facts. Beware of all empty speculation."

It is said that German theology is getting orthodox of late, and when my German friend had finished, having taken such sound positions, I began to tremble at the name of a famous Dutch theologian, for Dutch theology is represented as in the Bible-smashing stage. But my fears vanished as the man took our university motto for his text, and began to analyze it. He spoke of the power of the cross, and, then noticing the emblem of a book in the motto, he said: "I can only say of that what your own Walter Scott said on his deathbed: 'Bring me the book.' And when his servants whispered, inquiringly, 'What book does he mean?' 'The book: there is but one book. Bring me the Bible.'" I can not tell you what all those men said; but Prof. Laveleye, the eminent political economist, said: "Everybody must be interested in the things that elevate humanity. My time is devoted to the study of social problems. Young men, make yourselves masters of the best books, and go forth to elevate your generation. Take Adam Smith and J. S. Mill in your left hand, and in your right hand the book of God."

Students, such a gathering of intellect as that has rarely been witnessed in the history of the world. Those men were there on purely academic ground. They had not been asked to say one word in defense of Christian principles, and their spontaneous utterances, with entire unanimity, showed that the greatest book for the needs of the present century is the Bible. My friends, however much the priestlings of science may prate against the Bible, the high priests of science are in accord with Christianity.

I want to add that, at my home, after family worship, one day, I turned to Prof. Virchow, that man who has probably dissected more bodies than any man living, and asked, "Do you find any difficulty in the doctrine of the resurrection?" He turned upon me, "The resurrection, did you say?" as if to reassure himself. "Yes, the resurrection." "No; why should I?" Students, you may publish it as much as you please: the highest authority in medical science in Europe at this hour echoes the language of Paul—"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The following Easter I received a card from him on which was inscribed some such resurrection text as, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."—C. W. B., in Evangelist.

A Horse Who Can Talk!

Everybody has heard of a "horse laugh," but who has ever seen an equine gifted with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the telegraph and the telephone have been a hundred years ago. Why, even very recently, a cure for consumption would have been looked upon as miraculous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it, if taken in time. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when all other means have failed. Thousands can gratefully testify to this. All druggists.

When Peter of Cortona was engaged on a picture for the royal palace of Petti, Ferdinand II particularly admired the representation of the weeping child. "Had your majesty," said the painter, "a mind to see how easy it is to make this very child laugh?" The artist merely depressed the corners of the lips and the inner extremities of the eyebrows, when the little urchin seemed in danger of bursting his sides with laughter, who a moment before seemed breaking his heart with weeping. Lives worth living belong to the soul artists, whose untiring, consecrated hands are always wielding their brushes in changing tears into smiles, and sorrow into joy, brightening dark pictures, and retouching dim and faded ones—in his name. —Christian at Work.

Don't suppose, if you have that pain through the right side and shoulder blade, that yellowness of the skin and whites of the eyes, and furred appearance of the tongue, that these indications are of little account, or will depart of themselves; much better take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets and remedy the trouble. 25c. per vial.

I saw a dark shadow resting on the bare side of the hill. Seeking its cause, I saw a little cloud, bright as light, floating in the clear blue above. Thus it is with our sorrow: it is dark and cheerless here on earth; but look above, and you shall see it to be but a shadow of his brightness whose name is Love.—Dean Alford.

Kidney and bladder troubles produce a feeling of utter despondency. A genial stimulant and tonic and an unfailing remedy for all such troubles, will be found in Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm

Depend upon it, in the midst of all the science about the world and its ways, and all the ignorance of God and his greatness, the man or woman who can say, "Thy will be done," with the true heart of giving up, is nearer the secret of things than the geologist and theologist.—Geo. Macdonald.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes a derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which make the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in relieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

The preacher who characterized the gospel without Christ "as sickening taffy" knew what he was talking about.

"The most effective agency for attracting men to the truth, and inspiring them with better purposes, is hearts alive with genuine sympathy, and hands which do not disdain to touch other hands less clean." If you believe that, it is your duty to put it in practice, and thus win men and women to the truth.

Sometimes Christian life begins very simply. A thoughtful girl of sixteen years, living in the country at a distance from church which made attendance irregular, read, on a Sunday, the memoir of a Christian woman. On closing the volume, she said to herself, "That was a beautiful life." After a little thought, she added, "And I should like to live such a life." A few minutes later, she kneeled down, and said, "Lord, I will try from this time." The decision was made. She went on steadily, and is still a useful and influential Christian woman.

How true is that Scripture, in regard to the humble, yet faithful workers in the Master's vineyard, about "being dead, yet speaketh"! The late Dr. Mark Hopkins began his last will with these words:

In making my will I wish first to express my sense of the great goodness of God to me during a long life, the blessings of which have far exceeded my expectations. Second, I wish to express my unshaken faith in the glorious gospel of that blessed God as it is revealed by and in Jesus Christ, and my personal acceptance of him as my only ground of hope in passing into the future world; and my prayer is that all my children may accept this Savior in their hearts and serve him in their lives.

It is a significant fact that both John the Baptist and our Lord taught their disciples how to pray. On one occasion the disciples said to Jesus, "Lord, teach us how to pray, as John also taught his disciples." We are too prone to think that prayer comes spontaneously, and its spontaneity is the evidence of its genuineness. If this were true, our Lord would have answered his disciples' request in a different manner. What he did was to answer this request by teaching how to pray. An unstudied prayer may be fervent, but not edifying. Paul said, "I will pray with the Spirit, and I will pray with the understanding." The reason for so many poor and unrefreshing prayers is the lack of studying and learning the art of prayer.

We have received, through Bro. Wimberly, the sad news of the death of Bro. Jeptha Landrum, our preacher in charge at Melville, Alexandria district. His death was most triumphant. A few moments before he breathed his last, he exclaimed, "Washed, washed in the blood of the Lamb!" With the last breath, he exclaimed: "Up! up! up! Rejoice!"

"Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ!
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

As Chastened, and Not Killed.

This phrase occurs in Paul's catalogue of those things in which he had approved himself as the minister of God. The thought had been written by the Psalmist centuries before, when he said: "The Lord hath chastened me sore; but he hath not given me over to death." It is not an uncommon experience of God's children in all the ages; and the writer to the Hebrews does not hesitate to bring forward this very chastening of the saints as a good evidence of their sonship. "If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons."

But we stagger at this great mystery of human life—this puzzle of the universe, suffering in a world, every law and every movement of which is under the direct control of the infinite power of a wise and good God! In our distresses our thoughts become confused, and we fail to appreciate the fact that our very chastenings and suffering are as much under the supervision and control of a wise and good God as the courses of the sun and the stars. In our sufferings we place ourselves in our thoughts outside of the circle of God's blessings, and regard those sufferings as punishments, in the infliction of which we recognize nothing but the anger of the divine Being. We have "forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto us as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."

No matter how large our sufferings may be, or how deep our distresses, of one thing we may rest assured, and that is, if we are the Lord's children by the faith which accepts Jesus as our Savior, this same omnipotent and wise and loving Ruler has his hand upon every part of the machinery of creation, and upon every movement in the moral and spiritual and intellectual realms, and is moving them all up to a point where it will make for our good. "All things work together for good to them who love God." God is immanent in "all things," even in our chastenings and sufferings, and he is there as a good God. "He dealeth with us as with sons." The fact that our Father rules ought to inspire us with hope, for the ultimate object of his rulership is our promotion. But promotion comes only to those fitted for it; and the chastenings of the Lord are the instruments by which we are refined and purified and fitted for the elevations in his kingdom. We can not conceive of our Father ruling the universe to the detriment of his own children.

But then the sufferings are so terrible, the chastening so sore, the anguish so crushing! Ah! yes. David said, "The floods overflow me." It is the plaint that wails out its sad note all along the path of human history; but one joyous note is heard swelling in richness above the almost universal lamentation, and it is: "I glory in tribulation." Christian fellow-sufferers, do you know the ground for that triumphant shout? It is this: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding eternal weight of glory." In all our sufferings of mind and spirit, and in all our pains of body, let us be comforted by these precious teachings of the divine Word. It is an important part of the educational processes of probation; and no matter how low down in suffering we may get, let us never forget that, in spiritual life as in physical movements, every depression has its corresponding elevation. That is the philosophy which underlies Paul's shout of triumph.

MR. EDITOR: I have just returned from Donaldsonville. We have there a very neat, modern chapel, for which we are indebted to the present pastor, to his immediate predecessor, to some one or two liberal laymen, and to the Conference Church Extension Fund. Since the house has been open, more than twenty persons have been added to the membership. In this fallow ground the ploughshare of the Word has at last found entrance, souls have been converted, and the church strengthened. Thirty-five years ago I was here preaching for some eight or ten days. Then ten or twelve persons were converted, the greater part of whom remained faithful to the end, and are now in heaven.

The pastor informed me that a great interest is being felt in religion all along these regions. The work began at Plaquemine early in the year. He thinks that down the Lafourche there are symptoms of a spiritual vitality. The Lord grant that it be so! When this part of Louisiana takes fire, the whole State is in danger. Revivals on this circuit are among the evidences of the great power of the Holy Ghost to raise the dead. Thank God the time "now is" when those who are "dead in trespasses and sins" can hear the voice of the Son of God!

I know of no railroad trip that repays the traveler better than the one on the Valley road at this season of the year. The cane crop, waving its tall green foliage, alternating with the recently reaped rice fields; the freshly ploughed and planted cuts; the sugar-houses full of steam and stir; the carts, loaded with cane, filing to and from the mill-feeder—everything hopeful and active, and, hard by, the grand mansions, as a finish, looking much like homes in paradise, so quiet, so restful—I say, in appearance, all composes a picture in this sublunary world that gives an additional sharpness to the Tenth Commandment.

It was my good fortune to be entertained on the "Burnside Plantation," now owned by Mr. Byrne. Here, during the time of Bro. Pipes, I preached in the sugar-house, Col. John Preston and Mrs. Preston attending. The vast and beautiful estate, consisting now of five plantations, side by side, has kept together, and also the places opposite—all once owned by Wade Hampton. One such estate as this is a sufficient probationary ground for any spirit. It is not exactly "the whole world," but no inconsiderable part of it. I looked upon the bank of the river in front, which had not changed in thirty years, and the surrounding plantations, all full of life with the drive of a new energy, and remembered the past. Death and the war had scarcely left an original owner to these princely industries. I looked at the majestic stream, with its swift current, and saw the panorama, but scarcely realized that I was moving myself. There was no one that recollected my visit; and I then saw that the place which once knew me will presently know me no more forever.

But in those former days the sugar region knew no Sabbath. Everywhere mules and men moved to the pressure of steam. During the grinding season, day and night, there was no time for prayer—scarcely enough for cleaning the kettles. Those lost Sabbaths, however, were recovered when the land had rest for four years. Recently, by a wise legislation, Louisiana has been placed in line with all the States of the Union; and the Sabbath day is maintained by law. What a beneficent change! The very light of the holy day is brighter than any other in the week. The laborer stretches his weary limbs, and gathers his children about his knees, the church bell is heeded in its call, the Bible is read; best of all, the Holy Spirit applies the Word to the heart of the sinner, and recognizes everywhere the return of the people to the services of their God. This is of itself enough to account for the revivals which, of late, have been at several points on this river coast. It is a great mercy when we find time enough to be saved. Yours truly,

J. C. KEENER.

The English Bible As a Text-Book.

A few days ago, a friend, who takes pains and spends money to keep himself posted on all current questions in religion and philosophy, in science and art, in education and politics, called our attention to two articles, on "Education," in the June and July numbers of Blackwood's Magazine, for the current year. They are written by Prof. G. G. Ramsay, of the University of Glasgow. We have read them with profit; and every man or woman interested in the education of the young ought to read them. As we have several times, in these columns, advocated putting the Bible, the English Bible, in our church schools as a text-book, it gives us pleasure to publish what Prof. Ramsay has to say on that subject:

And now that I am touching on English, and on subjects that may specially be called the English subjects, I can not but express my fears that there is one subject of paramount importance in education which, under the present system, is being gradually driven into a corner, so that it constitutes no longer the main pillar of our educational system—I mean the study of the Bible. The Bible finds, alas! no place in the six standards or in the inspector's examination; its teaching has to be huddled into odd corners, or to be confined to the Sunday-school; and I have a strong suspicion that the youth of this generation do not study it, do not know it as their fathers did. If this indeed be so, it is a serious national misfortune, and is, of itself enough, to account for a deterioration in the literary fibre of our youth. Apart altogether from its sacred character, the Bible is the grandest book that the world has ever produced for feeding the intelligence, the conscience, the taste, the imagination of the young. It is all that Homer ever was to the Greek or Roman, and much more. There is history in it, there is poetry, there is romance, there is philosophy; it is a fountain of wisdom, great, simple and universal; it is a store-house of instruction and illustration for every form of human emotion, for every phase of human character, for every incident of private life, for every kind of social and political institution. There never was a richer or nobler granary out of which to feed the heart and mind of a nation. It is a model of style, or rather of many styles; it speaks in a language at once pure, rich and strong, at once popular and classical, and presents for the formation of our vocabulary an inexhaustible "well of English undefiled." May the day never come when the simple facts of the Bible shall cease to be studied in our schools as the foundation of all human knowledge, or its ideas and literary form to shape the conscience, to develop the taste, and to fire the imagination of our young!

Brother Teacher, do you believe these words of the learned Scotch professor? If this is a true statement, are you not aiding the process of "deterioration in the literary fibre" of your pupils by failing to put the English Bible in your course of study?

A private note from one of our superannuates outside the bounds of Louisiana says: "We long to get back to Louisiana, to get a good dinner of jowl and turnip greens. I am not surprised that the Israelites longed for the leeks, onions and melons of Egypt. I dreamed last night that you had a big circuit and I was junior preacher." How surprisingly the good things of the past cling to the memory! Junior preacher on a big circuit is the best thing a Methodist preacher ever had.

What Our Papers Say.

The Nashville Advocate, on the "Duty of the Hour," in specifying some instances of ministerial failure, has this paragraph, which every preacher should "read and inwardly digest:"

Again, some men fail to win souls because they give no study to the work. It is a high art that every Christian, not to say every minister, should master. It is attainable in some degree by all. The same care bestowed upon studying how to persuade men to accept Christ which some bestow on controversies about the form of baptism, or some minor question, would result in such demonstrations of divine power as would make polemics seem puerile. It is good to hold fast the form of sound doctrine, but it is a sad thing to so busy one's self about doctrine as to miss all but the form. At all times the aim of the gospel preacher should be the conversion of sinners—and the edification of believers, that in turn they may bring sinners to Christ. Here is where the emphasis of his ministry should fall. To this point he should draw all his cares and study. All else is subsidiary to this end. "He that winneth souls is wise;" and if there is any greater wisdom possible to man than this, we have no knowledge of it. Let this wisdom be cultivated with especial care, and exercised with especial zeal during the remaining weeks of our ecclesiastical year. This is pre-eminently the duty of the hour.

The Richmond Advocate produces an able and strong article on a subject of vital importance to the individual Christian and to the church. "Practical Unbelief" is the subject. In comparison between faith in the apostolic times and that of the church of to-day, we read this:

It was rarely necessary in the apostolic days to teach the doctrine that "faith without works is dead." In these latter times, when "faith without works" has become the rule in Christendom, it becomes the necessity of the age. Men have placed themselves behind every conceivable sophistry to keep from being disturbed on the subject of religion. And it almost seems that every conceivable sophistry has been employed by gospel messengers to excuse them. The minister sometimes says all men believe, for, if they do not before, they cry to God on their death-beds. The reasoning here is evidently sophistical. The proximity of a graveyard shrouded in darkness produces uneasiness and loses the imagination. At such a time a man may believe in ghosts, but his faith is ephemeral, not fundamental. Our faith must be a moral force that controls our lives and subordinates our passions, else it is not real. It must be a faith that is contagious, that spreads conviction, else it is not fundamental.

The London Methodist Times, in an article on "The Coming Battle of Christianity," has these strong words:

Always and everywhere Christianity has prospered or declined in exact proportion to the degree in which the representatives of Christianity have dealt effectually with the sin and misery of mankind. Christianity is essentially a fact, not a philosophy; a life, not a theory of life. So long as the living experience of it throbs in the warm hearts of living men, no discussion about the origin of our sacred writings can effect it. When that living experience is lost, there is nothing left about which it is worth our while to trouble ourselves. Hence, when inquirers came to our Lord, he entered into no theological discussions with them. He simply told them to consider the practical effects of Christianity. He based his claims upon the fact that he healed and fed the bodies of men and filled their souls with purity and peace. That was the argument for Christianity. Without those positive blessings in real, present human experience, even he had preached in vain. When those results are secured, no one need feel the slightest anxiety about any of the problems which scholars debate. The fact is that our Lord was essentially a man of the people. He l among the people. He was constant touch with the mas He was, therefore, supreme concerned to grapple with gigantic practical evils w confronted their daily life. only by imitating our Lord mixing freely with the peo by talking with them in the o air, by sharing their experien that we shall realize the re importance and urgency of tasks which await the Christ church.

The New York Christian vocate, in an able review of decision of the Supreme Co of Illinois in the case of anarchists, has this strong, reasonable paragraph:

If these men are not punish all government is gone. A heal public sentiment is necess This is the freest and best gov ment possessed by any popul country in the world. The f eigners who teach the doctrine anarchy have fled from desp isms, but in many cases themselves to blame for the p ticular oppression which they to endure. They come here conceot schemes which will ov throw the best experiment self-government that man yet contrived. Whoever sym thizes with them is a foe to country. The engine which t used to destroy the police is a to poison. It is irresistible; is subtle; and the mere hav of bombs of this kind, with being able to explain a legitim purpose, should be construed prima facie evidence of a m derous intent; and when c nected with such careers and cendiary speeches and s meetings and conspiracies have been proved against th defendants, and followed by murderous outbreak such as t in which they were concern should bring upon them the nihilation which they threaten against government, church a authority.

Notes.

The Western North Carolina Ba is publishing the names and amo due of all delinquent subscribers. all religious papers should do like wouldn't there be a buzz? It may that some of them may be driven t in order to protect themselves. I It curious that a man will fail conti ally to meet this obligation, and w reminded of it, gets mad? That "queer" religion!

Is this true? "He whose c anxiety is to reach heaven, is worth much for practical service h on earth." We are inclined to belie from our observation, that there much truth in it. Paul had "desir depart and be with Christ," but anxiety does not seem to have abso his usefulness. "To abide in the fl is more needful to you," were words. His anxiety seems to have b on the side of "practical servic The servant who is ever looking escape from service is not conside very valuable. Heaven is the rew of practicable service. "Thou h been faithful," is the word that op its doors.

In the Missionary Reporter, October, 25 letters are given of p sons sending money for the self-den fund, and three of them make specific statement that the "week prayer and self-denial" was not o served by the pastors. One lett says, "It was not even mentioned our pastor." We note this to po out two wrongs. The preachers w refused to co-operate in this effort get the church out of her difficult have done themselves and th churches serious harm. The ot wrong is, in withholding the names such preachers from the public pri A man who will shirk his duty at su a time and in such a crisis deserves be publicly exposed. He is not a f lower of the heroic men who ga their lives to the planting of t Southern Methodist Church.

The Independent makes this obse ation in regard to the prot of the anarchists of Europe agai the execution of their condemn fellow-murderers in Chicago:

Anarchists in foreign countries a protesting ferociously against the ex cution of the seven condemned a archists of Chicago. They might well save their breath, since neith the people, nor the authorities, in t country have any respect for them their principles. Their protest is a solutely a matter of not the slighte consequence.

Those protests may not be of "t slightest consequence" to our peop or authorities, and yet they are ve comfortable reading to anarchists this country and tend to foster a keep alive the spirit, which the exec tion of the Chicago anarchists ou to put down. In this view, their pr tests may be looked upon as a mat of grave consequence.

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church are broaching the subject of a missionary Bishop for India. They have one for Africa, why not one for India?

"The Life of Dr. Pinshon," by Rev. F. W. Macdonald, has made its appearance, and the Methodist Times says it "is worthy of its distinguished subject."

Some Wesleyans are beginning to think they need a revision of their hymn book. Others think not.

Bro. Murrah, of Whitworth College, dropped in on us last Saturday. Though saddened by the death of his venerated father, his sorrow is irradiated with bright hope of future association in the better land. Whitworth College is doing finely, there being in attendance about two hundred pupils.

Bro. J. M. Franklin, of Sabine parish, gave us a call last week. He is pushing an enterprise that promises much good for his section, viz: The establishment of a high school at Fort Jessup, La. The buildings are already under way and the school is expected to open January 1. That is a token for good which we would like to see in every parish in the State. If the country needs one thing more than another, in educational matters, it is good training-schools, where the young may be properly prepared to enter upon the courses of higher education. Colleges and universities are in many places crippled and thwarted in their work by lack of training-schools from which to draw their pupils.

We have received complimentary tickets to the second Annual Fair, which takes place at Shreveport, La., November 8-12. We tender our thanks to M. L. Scovell, secretary.

The Young Men's Christian Association has set apart the week, November 13-19, as a week of prayer for young men. All pastors and Christians are invited to join in this interesting service.

A gentleman has left in our office a set of Dr. Clarke's Commentaries, complete in six volumes, bound in calf, gilt borders, in a good state of preservation, which we will sell cheap for the cash. This is a good chance for a young preacher. A layman might use this opportunity to furnish his preacher with a staple article of Methodist doctrine.

Rev. Sam Small began a weeks' work in this city, last Sunday, at Moreau Street Church. He holds services in Moreau Street Church every night, and services in Carondelet Street Church, at twelve M., every day. So far the congregations have been good, and he has the hearty co-operation of all the Methodist preachers. We expect to be able to chronicle a good work done.

Dr. Evans began a meeting in Rayne Memorial Church last Sunday. He is assisted by Bro. P. A. Johnston, of the Mississippi Conference. With Sam Small down town and Pinckney Johnston up town, we expect to see fine results from this week's work.

Several hundred copies of our paper were struck off last week before it was noticed that "W. L. C. H." was not getting credit for his scholarly article on "Clergyman, Priest, Minister, Pastor or Preacher." The mistake was rectified as soon as discovered. Our rule is, "Honor to whom honor is due."

The Pacific Conference has set apart the first Friday in April, 1888, as a day of fasting and prayer for raising up laborers for the Lord's vineyard.

Sunday, November 13, has been appointed by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as a day of prayer for the cause of temperance, and ministers are requested to preach on that subject on that day.

On the seventeenth the building belonging to the Arkansas Democrat, of Little Rock, was burned. In this building the Arkansas Methodist also had its habitation and shared the fate of the Democrat. Bro. Winfield says he was pretty well insured, but does not know what his loss is. The tone of the Methodist this week illustrates a line of one of the poets:

"Even in its ashes live its wonted fires."

The ancients had a bird that rose on beautiful plume out of the very fires that consumed it. So may it be with the Arkansas Methodist!

Lung Troubles and Wasting

Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time, as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is very pleasant to take."

PARLOR GAMES. Prepared by H. E. H., and published by The O. M. Hubbard Company, Rochester, New York. Price, fifty cents.

This is a little book containing nearly a hundred games for in-doors. There are games with pencil, games of memory, games of action, catch-games, and forfeit games. Our young people will find these games very entertaining these winter evenings after the lessons are studied.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON: HIS MATERNAL ANCESTORS, WITH REMINISCENCES OF HIM. By David G. Haskins, D. D. Published by Cupples, Upham & Co., Boston. Price, $1 50. For sale here by Wharton & Bro.

This is a beautiful book in its make-up, and will no doubt be interesting to all admirers of Emerson. Dr. Peabody says of it: "To a believer in heredity this is the one biography which transcends all the rest in value."

A FRIEND IN NEED: A HOUSEHOLD GUIDE IN HEALTH AND IN DISEASE. By "Doctor Frank." Thayer Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $3. For sale here by Wharton & Bro.

This is an extensive treatise on domestic medical practice. Hygiene in all its branches, as affecting body and mind, is discussed in an easy and clear style. The principles of medicine and its practice make up the larger part of the book. The author appears to be familiar with his subject in all its phases, and presents it vividly to his readers. We think that part which treats of hygiene will be of most value to households, inasmuch as it treats of such familiar subjects as food, exercise, clothing, care of the body, sleep, bathing, etc.

Louisiana Preachers, Attention!

These are some of the reasons why the preachers of the Louisiana Conference should report their collections for church extension in full at the approaching session of that body:

1. It has been established by the most simple kind of demonstration that churches are the only missionaries that will avail us anything on Louisiana soil.

2. The people do not contribute to domestic missions, and some efficient substitute therefor or auxiliary thereto is called for by our destitution of gospel agencies in some of the most populous quarters of the territory occupied by us.

3. No other collection represented by us embodies the mutual insurance feature, and causes every dollar raised by the individual to net ten times that amount in the Conference treasury, i. e. by paying one hundred dollars we insure the building of a church worth one thousand dollars.

4. Not only are churches built under this plan; but, in the wisdom of a legally constituted Board, where they will do the most good and yield the largest return.

5. It ensures the building of many churches where none would or could be built.

6. It is a building age and the field occupied by the Conference a budding center, and we must keep up with the shifting populations of the State and Conference caused by new railroads and other industrial establishments.

7. No other collection presented by us to the people will meet as liberal a response if accompanied with a fair statement of its merits.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Baton Rouge Revival.

The results so far have been sixty-five conversions and twenty accessions. I feel assured that many more will come in before the close of the year. The church has been wonderfully revived. My work stands for the year—ninety-five conversions and one hundred and one accessions. God be praised for his great favor toward my church! Oh, that we may still go forward and gather sheaves for the Master!

T. K. FAUNT LEROY, P. C.

OCTOBER 19, 1887.

The following note from Rev. J. W. Lowrance, of Springfield, Mo., explains itself:

MR. EDITOR: Our city claims 25,000 people. We voted on the twentieth instant for local option, under the late amendment, and carried by a majority of 250. The Queen of the Ozark is dry. Praise the Lord!

OCTOBER 22, 1887.

We have read in one of our exchanges of a wise missionary among the Indians. He made proof of his wisdom on this wise: He took a keg of whisky and poured it over the grass in the presence of the young people. It destroyed all the herbage. The chief then told them that just as it burned the grass, it would burn them if they drank it. This experiment has become a yearly ceremony with the Indians, and there has been very little trouble with the liquor question since. If our young people could be taught the same lesson in some such way, would it not be good for the country?

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the ADVOCATE; but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for $2 75, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or $3 for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

A Scotch minister, in one of his parochial visits, met a cowboy, and asked him what o'clock it was. "About twelve sir." "Well," remarked the minister, "I thought it was more." "It's never any more here," said the boy, "it just begins at one again."

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

Little three-year-old Lillie, while in the country one day, saw a yoke of oxen drawing a wagon, and she ran to her mamma, and said: "O mamma! come see two cows hitched up playing horse."

In going east, ask for tickets over the Kennesaw Route, which, for beautiful scenery, is unsurpassed.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and worms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and nibbles. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes crying loud and eating ravenously, again refusing food and tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave when the disease which caused its death has been entirely unsuspected, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy; therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with them—cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for very surely, as they ran in, safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children in safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged, and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be sure they get the genuine, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient; he must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

OUR HEROES.

Here's a hand to the boy who has courage
To do what he knows to be right;
When he falls in the way of temptation
He has a hard battle to fight.
Who strives 'gainst self and his comrades
Will find a most powerful foe;
All honor to him if he conquers,
A cheer for the boy who says, "No!"

There's many a battle fought daily
The world knows nothing about;
There's many a brave little soldier
Whose strength puts a legion to rout;
And he who fights sin single-handed
Is more of a hero, I say,
Than he who leads soldiers to battle,
And conquers by arms in the fray.

Be steadfast, my boy, when you're tempted,
And do what you know to be right;
Stand firm by the colors of manhood,
And you will o'ercome in the fight.
"The Right" be your battle cry ever
In waging the warfare of life;
And God, who knows who are the heroes,
Will give you the strength for the strife.

A Little Talk with Boys.

When I meet you everywhere, boys—on the street, in the cars, on the boat, at your homes or at school—I see a great many things in you to admire. You are earnest, you are merry, you are full of happy life, you are quick at your lessons, you are patriotic, you are brave, and you are ready to study out all the great and curious things in this wonderful world of ours.

But very often I find one thing lacking in you. You are not quite gentlemanly enough. There are so many little actions which help to make a true gentleman, and which I do not see in you.

Sometimes when mother or sister comes into the room where you are sitting on the most comfortable chair, you do not jump up and say, "Take this seat, mother," or, "Sit here, Annie;" but you sit still and enjoy it yourself. Sometimes you push past your mother or sister, in the doorway from one room to another, instead of stepping aside politely for them to pass first. Perhaps you say "the governor," in speaking of your father; and when he comes in at night you forget to say, "Good evening, sir." Sometimes when your mother has been shopping and passes you on the corner, carrying a parcel, you do not step up and say, "Let me carry that for you, mother," but you keep on playing with the other boys. Sometimes when mother or sister is doing something for you, you call out, "Come, hurry up," just as if you were speaking to one of your boy companions. Sometimes when you are rushing out to play and meet a lady friend of your mother's just coming in at the door, you do not lift your cap from your head, nor wait a moment till she has passed in.

Such "little" things do you say! Yes, to be sure; but it is these very little acts, these gentle acts, which make gentlemen. I think the word gentleman is a beautiful word. First, man—and that means everything strong and brave and noble; and then gentle. And that means full of these little kind, thoughtful acts of which I have been speaking. A gentleman! Every boy may be one if he will. Whenever I see a gentlemanly boy I feel so glad and proud. I met one the other day, and I have been happier ever since.—Anon.

If I Were a Boy.

If I were a boy I would not use tobacco in any way. There are men who think it right to smoke, and I am not going to discuss the question as regards men; but whatever may be said of them, there is no intelligent man anywhere, whether he himself smokes or does not smoke, whether he thinks it right or wrong for men to smoke, who does not think it always wrong for a boy. It might be right for your father, and utterly wrong for you. There is a great difference between the effects of tobacco upon a growing person and its effects upon one who has his growth. It hurts a growing boy a great deal more than it hurts a grown man. I have my doubts whether anyone ever uses it habitually without being injured by it; but it is perfectly certain—all the doctors agree on this—that it is always injurious for boys. Here, for example, is the word of one doctor, who thinks it no harm for some men to use it: "To young persons," he says, "under twenty-five years or so, tobacco, even in small quantities is so apt to disorder health in some way or other, that for such it should be considered generally harmful."

For the same reason, if I were a boy, I would not drink beer or wine or any kind of alcoholic liquor. Here, too, there is a dispute among the doctors, some of them saying that men may sometimes drink wine or beer without harm; but here, too, they all perfectly agree that for boys such drinks are always harmful. A great many boys in this country are learning to drink beer. Some of them think that there is no harm in it. But in thousands of cases it has brought a deadly train of misery along with it. It has crippled many a man's best powers; it has been the beginning of drunkenness and of blighted lives. And not only because of the probable harm to yourselves, but because of the trouble and poverty and sorrow that it causes all over the land; have nothing to do with it.—Washington Gladden, in St. Nicholas.

Boys Waiting upon Themselves.

Sisters, don't you put the boys' things away! Let the boys hang up their own hats and put away their own hats, balls, tennis rackets, school books, etc. If they drop them in the hall or on the parlor floor, tell them, good-naturedly, that mother, nor sister, nor maid, is going to put them in their places. They are dear good fellows, and you don't mind doing it one bit; indeed you rather like it. But you must deny yourselves this pleasure. Habits are masters. You don't want your brother to live all his life under the dominion of disorderly habits. You and your mother ought to cure him.

It would be a good plan if every boy could have the training of a West Point cadet in orderliness. No untidiness allowed in his room! Every inch of it must be in perfect order; and he must put it so and keep it so himself. How independent and comfortable this habit makes the man.

A word or two now to the mothers. Mothers are apt to let their boys go. "Sallie," says mother to Bob's sister, "put away your things, keep your drawers in order; and while you are about it, do put away Bob's things, too."

Let me whisper a word in Sallie's ear: I think you will be forgiven if you rebel, gently and argumentatively, against maternal authority when it commands you to look after "Bob's things."

I know a mother who trained her three boys to open wide the windows, take off the bed-clothes and put both bed-clothes and mattress to air before leaving their bed-room in the morning.—Wide Awake.

MANNERS BETWEEN BOYS.—There is a good deal of rudeness between boys in their intercourse and bearing with one another that is not really intended as such, but is not, therefore, any the less to be disapproved. It is simply the overflow of excessive high spirits. But the very best good humor, unrestrained by the proper bounds and limitations, may become the most positive incivility.

We often apologize for the coarseness of people by saying, "He means well." It is well if we can make such an apology for them, for if their rudeness is intentional they are not fit to be received into any worthy person's society. But they who mean well should also do well, and the ways of politeness are never so easily learned as in youth.

The boy who is habitually coarse and rude in his bearing toward other boys, will be such as a man toward men, and all his life will never gain the reputation of being a gentleman.

Household.

Women Washing.

When women get together somehow it comes about, naturally enough, that they go to comparing ways of doing work. It is a good plan. One can learn from another newer and better ways sometimes. There were four of us chanced to meet the other day. It was on a Monday evening. All four had done their week's washing, got 'em dry, and folded down in their clothes-baskets, and they got to telling how they did it all.

Julie soaked hers over night, wrung them out, and plumped them into the suds in the boiler, after having put in nearly half a teacupful of kerosene and stirred it up well. Boiled fifteen minutes, washed well through one suds, and rinsed through two waters. All the odor passed off while drying and ironing. And Julie said she hailed the day as a young millennium when she first learned how to save herself and do her washing this way.

Then the class-leader's wife, Nora Leland, told her way—her yet more glorious "millennium," and we, always on the lookout to make women have easier and better times, took out a stub of a pencil and wrote on the back of the last letter we had from old Deacon Strawman, a widower, with six hopefully converted children: Take one pound concentrated lye, dissolved in about two gallons of soft water, five cents' worth of salts of ammonia (the dry kind, whatever it's called), five cents' worth of borax, and the same of salts of tartar. Dissolve each one separately, then pour together in a jar or jugs. To a boiler of water add one teacupful of this detersive. Clothes to be soaked over night in clean water.

Both these labor-saving plans are good, and we wish women would let go the old, tiresome, tedious way of washing, with two or three tubs and three or four suds, and two or three rinse waters. It is all nonsense.—Old Woman, in Watchman.

Ready-Made Housekeeping.

Housekeeping is getting to be ready-made, as well as clothing. The culinary department may be almost abolished and prepared food got from the grocery. There are canned soups, canned mince meat and canned Boston baked beans. Coffee is bought both parched and ground, and spices and pepper are prepared for use. Self-raising flour can be bought at any grocery. Fruit of all kinds ready for the table can be got about as cheaply as that which must be prepared, at a price only a little above the cost of the raw food; salmon, lobster and the like are sold cooked and ready to be served. Every kind of bread, cake and pastry can be purchased at a slight advance on the cost of the materials they contain. Cooked corn beef, tongue, pigs' feet and ham have long been on the market. Even English plum puddings are canned, while cans of cooked green corn, beans, peas, tomatoes, cauliflower, and asparagus, with Saratoga fried potatoes are on the shelves of every grocery.

Cooking seems no longer to be necessary in housekeeping, for a little warming over of food will answer. Provided with a can opener, a coffee pot and a frying pan, with an oil stove on which to place them, a housekeeper can get up a meal in the twinkling of an eye, with a little assistance from the neighboring bakery. Even the cook book may yet be obsolete, for every can of prepared food has a label with directions how to cook. This is very different from the old housekeeping that required a range or stove, a coffee and spice mill, a mortar, a cake board and rolling pin, a tray and chopping knife, not to mention numerous pots and kettles, frying pans and bowls, and a large stock of raw provisions.—Good Housekeeping.

Small-Pox.

"A member of my family was taken down with the Small-pox. I immediately commenced to use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. It kept the atmosphere of the room pure and fresh. The patient was greatly relieved, and never for a moment delirious; was not pitted, and was about the house again in three weeks, and no others had it."—JAMES W. PARKINSON, Ex. "The Caterer," Phila., Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, the fruitful cause of innumerable evils, the dreaded Consumption being only one of many forms of it, is fatal. Eruptions, sore eyes, glandular swellings, wasting and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which may only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

McLAURIN—On March 15, in the town of Bolton, Hinds county, Miss., a gentle spirit passed from earth to heaven. Through great tribulations she had passed and her robes had been made white in the blood of the lamb. MRS. MARY DUDLEY MCLAURIN was born unto Dr. George H. Jones and his wife, Martha H. Peebles, December 8, 1811, at "Live Oak," the elegant home of Mrs. Jones' father, Mr. Joseph Peebles. This daughter grew into a beautiful childhood and a lovely womanhood, surrounded by all the comforts and advantages which wealth could procure. She was educated at the Nashville Female Academy, graduating in June, 1859, under the presidency of the Rev. Dr. C. H. Elliott. She was married, January 3, 1861, to Cornelius McLaurin, who gave his life in behalf of the South in the battle of Corinth, October 9, 1862. All the wealth of the young widow's heart was from that time lavished upon the son—the only child whom God had given to them, the pledge of love. To the welfare of this son the mother devoted the residue of her days.

The child of luxurious wealth, the world was very bright to her, and the paths of worldly pleasure very tempting. She was fond of the gaities of fashionable life and fully gratified that fondness. Under the pastorate of the Rev. J. W. Weems, in 1868 or 1869, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; but, like many others, not clearly seeing the evil tendencies, or the inherent evil of worldly pleasures, she tried for some years to blend the world and the church. She became convinced of the error of such a course, and with her usual decisiveness, took her stand wholly on the Lord's side. That step once taken, she never turned back. Henceforth her heart was God's, and God's alone, and she could truthfully sing, "I am my Lord's, and he is mine." Even before that wise decision, she had been an earnest worker in the Sabbath-school and in every other church enterprise. Afterwards her efforts were not slackened. In the Aid Society and in the Woman's Missionary Society her zeal found expression, and her influence was felt. The church was dear to her heart. The preacher was her friend, and she was his friend. And now that she has gone, she will be sorely missed; but, thank God! we know where to find her.

Her earthly possessions were gone, and for more than two years she had suffered great bodily affliction and pain; and soul, as well as body seemed, yea, doubtless, were passing through the refiner's fire. Occasionally there would be a brief respite, and the sunlight of God's grace would illumine her features with something of the old-time loveliness; the light-brown hair, just streaked with gray, would glow with a golden hue; the large blue eyes would flash with light, and the laughter would ripple from her lips, fraught with the music of her soul and the joy of her heart. A visit from her or a visit to her at such a time was a benison. But the bodily affliction deepened, and the light became clouded, and the eye grew dim with weeping. On her soul a shadow of sorrow grew darker. While she bore her sufferings unmurmuringly, she would often ask, "Why must I suffer so?" And who could answer? As her pastor, I did what I could; but I think I learned more from her patient resignation and sweet spiritual submission than I was able to teach her. Once she said to me, "If I could, I would build me a house somewhere where I should never see another human face." But she learned to know that she could best serve God by suffering where other eyes might see. "Not my will, but thine be done." God was leading her. Under the guidance of Bro. Ballard, and the blessing of the Holy Spirit, she reached the fullness of Christian grace, and "fell on sleep" with not a cloud, and not a fear, not a mist and not a doubt between her and her God. Her Savior came and laid his gentle hand on her aching heart, and "the weary wheels of life stood still." God had claimed her for his own. T. L. MELLEN.

MAXWELL—Death has again entered our community and robbed us of one of our choice young men. SAMUEL MAXWELL was born August 15, 1817; died August 9, 1887. He was quite a sufferer for months before his death, but bore it all with remarkable fortitude and patience. He trusted in God, and was not afraid. He called upon his name, and the Lord made known unto him the hope of his calling and the riches of the glory of his inheritance. So the angel reaper found him ready. In his death a good citizen, a kind, devoted son and brother was taken. "What he does we know not now, but shall know hereafter." "Now we know in part, but then shall we know, even as also we are known." Afflicted parents, sisters and brothers, there is comfort for you in those words.

ARA B. ROBERTSON.

GORDON—WASH. GORDON, son of Charles L. and Alice Short Gordon, died in Iuka, Tishomingo county, Miss., August 26, 1887, aged two years, four months and twenty-two days. Wash. was a sweet, precious boy, and very promising. The parents were much devoted to him. While he lived, the happy parents thanked God for him; now the Lord hath taken him away. May they say, "Blessed be the name of the Lord!" The Savior said, "For of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Our loved ones can not come to us, but we may go to them. May Wash. wait at the "beautiful gate" and greet his parents!

D. L. COGDELL.

BARKSDALE—MRS. JOSEPHINE BARKSDALE, consort of Mr. Fountain Barksdale, died in Yazoo City, Miss., September 5, 1887, in the sixty-fourth year of her age. She was born in Warrenton, Warren county, Miss.; spent several years of her early life in Vicksburg; was educated in Kentucky; converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1811; was married in 1812, since which Yazoo City has been her home and the sphere of her usefulness.

Seldom have we been called to chronicle the death of one whose influence for good was so universally felt and acknowledged. It is not the mere repetition of a trite expression to say, "None knew her but to love her; none named her but to praise." Nor is there fulsome praise in saying, hers was a beautiful life, and true, and that her name is "as ointment poured forth." Though she is dead, she still lives in the affections and fondest memories of our people. A life so free from ostentation, vanity or selfishness, and replete with acts of benevolence and abounding in every good work, though unwritten, is "read and known of all," being stamped in characters of living light everywhere she was known, and is voiced and imaged forth by the many who have shared in her benevolence and felt the gentle touch of her sweet and ennobling influence. She possessed the happy faculty of giving and doing deeds of kindness without making the recipients feel that they were mendicants feeding on the bounties of the great.

The space allowed in a brief memoir is not sufficient to give an account of her devotion to the church as shown by her works and personal sacrifice, nor of her untiring and ceaseless attentions to the parsonage and the wants of its inmates. The present and former occupants only can appreciate how much she contributed to the happiness and comfort of the pastor's family. She was thoughtful, careful, tender, discriminating. She seemed to know, as if by intuition, just what to give or do for each child, and each felt that in her they had a true friend. Her home life was simply beautiful! Her last illness was extremely painful, her disease being pneumonia. But she was rational to the last moment, giving full and free expression to her faith in God and her hopes beyond this life. She also gave full directions in regard to the temporal and domestic interests of her family. The last words I heard from her were in reply to the question, "Can you trust all into the hands of God?" She said, "Yes, everything." Thus closed a beautifully symmetrical life—a rich heritage to her children and grandchildren, abounding in good fruits. May they imitate her example and be sweetly drawn to that bright home where she awaits their coming!

R. S. WOODWARD.

BARKER—WILLIAM BARKER was born in Wade county, Ga., February 8, 1800. In the year 1827, in Twigs county, Ga., he married Elizabeth Davis, with whom he lived over fifty-nine years. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, in September, 1837. He moved to Mississippi in 1841, and lived in Kemper and Lauderdale counties forty-two years. Father Barker raised four sons and three daughters—all making good religious men and women, "rising up to bless their parents." His oldest daughter married the late W. E. M. Linfield, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference, in the year 1849.

For fifty years he kept a house for the weary itinerant preacher, always ready to encourage and help. God gave him a finely well-balanced mind, and generous heart. His faith in the church and Christ was unwavering, and, his judgement being so good, he was a great help. He lost two of his noble sons in the late war. Father Barker suffered greatly during the last two years of his useful life. He sweetly "fell asleep in Jesus," May 16, 1887. Thus ended a long, useful, consecrated life. He leaves his aged wife, five children, forty-three grandchildren and thirty-one great grandchildren to mourn their loss. May the great head of the church comfort and sustain them! D. C. LANGFORD.

DUNNING—At Utica, Miss., September 5, 1887, BERTA MYRA, daughter of Mr. John and Florence C. Dunning. The soul of beautiful little Berta has passed into eternal light and glory. Six short years she nestled upon the bosom of fond parental love; then answered the summons of him, whose love and pity and mercy surpasseth all our own.

Oh friends bereaved, there lies such grandeur in the simple thought that Jesus wanted her, how can you mourn uncomforted? Like a fair rosebud here, in his precious presence there will she not unfold a flower more beautiful than all earth has ever given? If he bringeth from a homely little seed a flower resplendent in its wealth of beauty, with how much more grace will he not clothe us for whom he doubly careth? Let the joy of beholding her transcendent beauty beam as a star of hope before you, and let your "heart be where your treasure is." K. C. H.

MR. DARWIN'S GREAT ERROR. A notable article appears in the Nineteenth Century from the Duke of Argyll, in which he points out that Darwin's theory of the coral islands, explaining them by the subsidence of mountain after mountain and island after island slowly sinking into the water, and affording fresh basis for the growth of corals, is entirely false. "The theory" has maintained an unquestioned place for fifty years as one of the great triumphs of reasoning and research. Darwin himself spoke of it in an unwonted tone of confidence. Eminent men have declared that if he had done nothing else, his solution of the great problem of the coral islands would have crowned him with an immortal name. But the voyage of the Challenger proves that his theory was a dream. It is being admitted very reluctantly, almost sulkily, and with grudging slowness, as far as public discussion is concerned, but the truth can not be hidden. The Duke of Argyll draws the inference that many speculations equally fashionable at the present moment may go with advancing knowledge, and protests against the curious power which is sometimes exercised on behalf of certain accepted opinions, or of some reputed prophet, in establishing a sort of reign of terror in their own behalf, sometimes in philosophy, sometimes in politics, and sometimes in science. The Duke closes by saying: "And if this be taught us even of explanations which concern results purely physical, comparatively simple, and comparatively definite, how much more is this lesson impressed upon us when, concerning far deeper and more complicated things, explanations are offered which are in themselves obscure, full of metaphor, full of the pitfalls and traps due to the ambignities of language—explanations which are incapable of being reduced to proof, and concern both agencies and results of which we are profoundly ignorant."

HEATING CARS BY ELECTRICITY.—A heater for warming cars by electricity has been patented. There is a plate of fire clay through which run wires; the connecting wire arting heats this plate, and there you have it. For surface cars of the size of New York street cars the plates are twelve feet long, eight inches wide, and one inch thick. In the experiments already made two of these heaters have been used in each car, and it is found that in a half hour after the current began passing the plates were giving out sufficient heat, and had attained a temperature of 180 degrees. It is also found that the amount of current required for this purpose is almost insignificant—would cost nothing compared to the expense of stoves. The electric car, when complete, will, therefore, be run, heated and lighted from the same current. As the use of electricity, taken from storage batteries, for lighting purposes is now becoming general on palace cars, and is soon to be introduced on the Pennsylvania railroad on most of the trains, it will be possible that the same supply will be used for heating purposes.

According to the experiments made, the heater will remain at an effective temperature for nearly twenty minutes after the current has been drawn.

THE BUILDERS OF THE PYRAMIDS.—A personal inspection of the pyramids of Egypt, made by a quarry owner, who spent some time recently on the Nile, has led him to the conclusion that the old Egyptians were better builders than those of the present day. He states that there are blocks of the stone in the pyramids which weigh three or four times as much as the obelisk on the embankment. He saw a stone whose estimated weight was eight hundred and eighty tons. But then the builders of the pyramids counted human labor lightly. They had great masses of subjects upon whom to draw, and most of their work was done by sheer manual labor and force. There are stones in the pyramids thirty feet in length, which fit so closely together that a penknife may be run over the surface without discovering the break between them. They are not laid with mortar, either. There is no machinery so perfect that it will make two surfaces thirty feet in length which will meet together in unison as these stones in the pyramids meet. It is supposed that they were rubbed backward and forward upon each other until the surfaces were assimilated.—The London Iron.

THE SECRET OF LONGEVITY.—A little way beyond the ancient church at Hohlerness is a brick residence, whose front is half hidden by one of those monster rhus that are the pride of our Northern States, and beneath its shade, I saw yesterday, an old man who is passing his ninety-fifth year, sitting comfortably in a great arm-chair. My wife told me that his aunt had recently died, aged one hundred and five; and, curious to know if there was any especial reason for such longevity, I made inquiries. "No," said my informant: "only they were almost always out-of-doors and lived a quiet life."

Yet in that single sentence lay a greater philosophy than he dreamed of, a sounder precept than he knew. To keep out-of-doors and avoid worry is a maxim that, if followed, would close a majority of our hospitals, which, I regret to say, have a greater number of occupants with each succeeding year.—American Magazine.

What Is Respiration?

Respiration is not merely the taking of air into the lungs. The air must, first be inhaled. Then the blood, passing through the air-filled lungs, takes up the oxygen from the air, and carries it to every part of the body. Respiration begins with our first introduction into the world, and is kept up day and night, sleeping or waking, till life ends.

When Compound Oxygen, the great vitalizing remedy for disease, is taken into the system, it is not introduced into the stomach, but in a far more direct way into the lungs. Hence, it is taken up in the ordinary and regular process of respiration, its beneficent effects being carried to every part of the system. Acting directly on the blood, it refreshes, restores, and invigorates the whole system.

When all the attempts at the healing of chronic infirmities have failed, Compound Oxygen has sometimes accomplished the work completely and permanently. If you want to know more about this most beneficent agent, write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, and their treatise will be freely mailed to you.

"But how shall I do something for Christ?" Strictly speaking, you can not do anything for him. He is the Infinite One. What can we do that will be of any value or service to him? Christ foresaw the difficulty his children would have in trying to do something to express their gratitude and love, and he provided a way. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me." Everything we do for Christian love's sake for others, we do for Christ, and he accepts it just as fully as he accepted the loving service of those who were around him on earth. Don't forget that he said, "My yoke is easy and my burden light." It is very easy to serve Christ. He is not a hard master. Anything we do for him is immediately rewarded with a thrill of joy in the heart. The hardship in the Christian life comes not from serving Christ, but from combating the evil that is in us and the devil that assails us. In this Christ will serve us, by helping us and strengthening and encouraging us. Indeed, we soon come to know Christ not as a Master, but as an infinitely loving and faithful Friend. Interior.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

It is reported that a well-organized society of anarchists exists in San Antonio, Texas.

The French steamer, "Britania," from Marseilles and Naples, has been sent to quarantine in New York harbor, there being suspected cases of cholera on board.

The Episcopal Church Congress, at Louisville, discussed without coming to conclusions woman's education and the change of the church name.

Nine new cases of fever and two deaths reported at Tampa, October 19. Nurses at Savannah have been engaged and sent to Tampa.

The President had a wet and muddy time at Atlanta.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has notified 2,000 employees of the old B. and O. that their services will not be needed after November 1, and have raised the rates for messages.

Meridian, Miss., is seeking to establish trade with St. Louis via steamboat line from Vicksburg to St. Louis, to get rid of the excessive freight rates now charged by Queen and Crescent railroad.

A dreadful fight occurred in Indian Territory between a band of robbers and a Vigilance Committee, in which it is estimated that thirty men were killed.

Thirteen new cases of fever and three deaths are reported at Tampa.

Thirty-five delegates, representing thirteen States, returning from the late convention of the Knights of Labor, at Minneapolis, stopped at Chicago, and held a meeting, in which they declared war against the Executive Board for violation of the laws of the order.

For twenty-four hours, ending October 23, sixteen new cases of fever appeared in Tampa.

A convention of third and fourth-class postmasters will be held in Washington, on December 13, to petition Congress to allow them better compensation.

It is estimated that 50,000 people greeted Mr. Jefferson Davis upon his arrival at Macon, Ga. The enthusiasm all along the route knew no bounds.

FOREIGN.

There have been serious disturbances by unemployed persons in Hyde Park, London.

Mr. Gladstone, in a speech at Nottingham, rasped the government severely on its Irish policy, stating that the whole system required to be reformed, root and branch.

Dr. Mackenzie persists in saying that the Crown Prince continues to improve.

Mr. Gladstone, in a speech at Derby, to the Liberals, said their opponents were growing weaker while their own forces were growing stronger.

Michael Davitt, on his return from America, was given a splendid reception at Queenstown. In a speech he declared the Irish of America in earnest in the cause of home rule. He counseled courage, determination and self-sacrifice as a sure means to secure early success.

The case of Gen. Caffarel and others implicated in the sale of decorations has been handed over to the correctional police.

China has applied to Germany for army officers to drill her troops, and the Emperor has consented to allow officers to go there.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in a speech at Seaham, said that the present government of Ireland compared favorably with the former one.

Bishop Kopp, the new Prince Bishop of Breslau, has taken the oath of civil allegiance to the Emperor William.

Excavations in Jerusalem have resulted in the discovery of the remains of the ancient town wall and the position of the gates of the town during the life-time of the Savior.

There is fresh evidence that the relations between Russia and Germany are rather strained; and the conference between the two Emperors is opposed by high personages in Germany. Increased military preparations of the two powers are going on on the frontier.

Lord Lytton, it is reported, will succeed Lord Lyons in the British embassy at Paris.

The Pope's messenger to Ireland, Mgr. Persico, seems to have some success in settling the differences between the landlords and tenants.

The police dispersed a meeting in County Galway, in which several speakers and ladies were roughly handled.

There was a significant demonstration in Westminster Abbey, last Sunday, many unemployed workmen forcing their way in and interrupting the service, seeking to redress their wrongs.

The treaty between France and England, regarding the Suez Canal, has been concluded.

Sir Wilfred Blunt has been arrested at Woodford, and gave bail.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in a speech at Stockton, said he believed the League and all the forces of disorder in Ireland would be got under by the meeting of Parliament.

A Magnificent Offer.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT AT ONCE.

The American Agriculturist (English or German), for the balance of this year and all of 1888—fourteen months.

"Fences, Gates and Bridges." A most practical volume, published October 15, only work of the kind extant, elegantly bound in cloth and gold. 300 illustrations. Books on architecture abound, but this is the first work specially devoted to the subjects upon which it treats. There are chapters upon rail and other primitive fences; stone, sod, board, and barb-wire fences, hurdles, gates and fastenings, wickets and stiles, country bridges and culverts; and also a chapter on fence law. The large number of illustrations are in most cases representations of fences, gates, etc., in actual use, the utility of which is thus made clear.

Engravings of the Homes of our Farmer Presidents, 11x18, issued during 1886 and 1887, viz: Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Garfield, etc., etc., together with descriptions of same, by eminent American writers.

We will furnish all the above, postpaid, for three dollars for new subscribers, or three dollars and twenty-five cents for renewals—cash in full with order. This is the offer of the season; nothing like it has ever been known. Address NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 112 Camp street.

Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you the November number of the American Agriculturist, containing four hundred and seven editorial, contributed and descriptive articles, and two hundred and forty illustrations. Also specimen pages of "Fences, Gates and Bridges."

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

J. C. M'ALLISTER, Agent,
146 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR., Publisher,
112 Camp street.

THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,

is a double number, far surpassing, its editors claim, any previous issue in the amount and variety of reading matter, in the number of contributors, in the number and variety of illustrations, etc., etc. Not during its nearly fifty years' existence has any number of the American Agriculturist begun to compare with the one which goes out this month. There are no less than one hundred and ninety-seven columns of reading matter proper, embracing four hundred and eight editorial, contributed and descriptive articles; fifty-five different contributors, representing twenty-two States, Territories, the Provinces and Europe, and two hundred and forty illustrations, including full-page illustrations and Premiums. In alluding to the death, this month, of one of its editors, Col. Mason C. Weld, the American Agriculturist says: "What is noteworthy; the body of writers, who for nearly half a century have made it a power in both hemispheres, are still, with this exception, connected with the periodical. Publishers have come and gone, but the editors and their associates remain." $1.50 per year, English or German; Single numbers, 15 cents. Address American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

Out of seven scholarships awarded at Cornell for the best entrance examinations, three were won by young women—two in mathematics and one in classical studies.

We understand that DEMOREST'S MONTHLY has been making extensive changes in its editorial staff. If parallel results could always be obtained, we would advise every publisher to go and do likewise; for the November number, which has just arrived, is certainly a grand success. DEMOREST'S MONTHLY has always been in the front rank of family magazines, but the new blood that has now been infused into it puts it ahead of all rivals. Before subscribing for your family magazine for the coming year, you should see DEMOREST'S, for they say with truth that "it contains a dozen magazines in one, and furnishes information and amusement for the whole family." Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th street, N. Y.

The American Edition of the Illustrated London News is now issued weekly from the New York office, 237 Potter Building. This edition will, in every respect, be equal to the London edition. The price has been put at four dollars per year, postpaid, thus making it the cheapest first-class illustrated weekly in the United States. Sample copies will be mailed for ten cents. Address Illustrated London News, 237 Potter Building, New York City.

If you feel the necessity of a corrective for your liver, and to infuse vigor into the secretive action of your kidneys, you will find a wonderful remedy in Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

CAMP MEETING.

The Gillis Camp Meeting, two and a half miles from Hattiesburg, will commence on Friday night before the fifth Sunday in this month. The time is short; but our people have built a tabernacle, preachers' tent, and are pushing things to get ready. There will be but few tents this year. But it is the beginning, and we expect ample support another year. A lunch-house will be provided and meals furnished visitors at cheapest practicable rates. All traveling and local preachers invited, and will be cared for.

H. J. HARRIS, for Ex. Com.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, two dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 285 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

BY SAXE HOLM.

Like a cradle, rocking, rocking,
Silent, peaceful, to and fro;
Like a mother's sweet looks dropping
On the little face below,
Hangs the green earth, swinging, turning,
Jarless, noiseless, safe and slow;
Falls the light of God's face bending
Down and watching us below.

And as feeble babes that suffer,
Toss and cry, and will not rest,
Are the ones the tender mother
Holds the closest, loves the best;
So when we are weak and wretched,
By our sins weighed down, distressed,
Then it is that God's great patience
Holds us closest, loves us best.

O great heart of God! whose loving
Can not hindered be, nor crossed,
Will not weary, will not even
In our death itself be lost;
Love divine! of such great loving
Only mothers know the cost—
Cost of love, which all love passing,
Gave a Son to save the lost.

Rev. Joseph Miller.

IN MEMORIAM.

BY "GILBEROY."

Rev. Joseph Miller was born in Kentucky, March 31, 1806, and died at the residence of his son-in-law, J. M. Parchman, in Aberdeen, Miss., September 1, 1887. Bro. Miller was for some years a member of the Tennessee Conference, but located and moved to Mississippi, where he was an honored and useful local preacher till the day of his death. In his palmy days he was an earnest and powerful preacher of the gospel of Christ. He was richly endowed with a strong mind and a clear perception of truth. He was a careful and diligent student of the Word of God and of the standard works of theology. His sermons were loaded with apt and appropriate quotations from the Bible, and always in the exact words of the book. He regarded the Word of God as the sword of the Spirit, and he used it freely in presenting the claims of Christ. Few preachers, traveling or local, were better posted in the standard writings of our Methodist Arminian authors. He knew how to state and defend the doctrines of his church. Woe betide the man who locked horns with Bro. Miller on the peculiar tenets of our Wesleyan Methodism! His familiarity with the Bible and standards, his power in argument, his Christian spirit and his unfailing fund of good humor, made him a powerful antagonist. His style of preaching was peculiar and very attractive. At times, when in his best moods and full of the Holy Ghost, he was very eloquent, carrying everything before him. I never knew any man who had an audience so completely under his control. People bent to his will like wheat before the wind. I have seen a great multitude, for an hour at a time, alternately in a flood of tears or filled with laughter, as Bro. Miller, in his pathetic and quaint way, preached the gospel of the Son of God. His quaint sayings, uttered as no other man could utter them, were at once amusing and penetrating. They stirred a laugh, but left a line of truth that clung to you for years. Strange to say, but the most amusing of these sayings were uttered while his own face was suffused with tears. Many a time, under his preaching, my mouth has been filled with laughter while the tears were yet streaming down my cheeks. These utterances were always preceded by a pause and a peculiar, Ahem! that once heard could not be forgotten. He was one of the most venerable-looking men I ever saw. Large, compact, well built, of commanding presence, a fine face, the finest eye I ever saw, bald-headed, and a beard as white as snow and almost as long as Aaron's. He commanded respect wherever he went. For thirty years or more, young and old, black and white, saint and sinner, called him "Uncle Joe." His warm heart and cordial manner made him the kinsman of every man. He was more like a brother than a master among the slaves on his farm. "Uncle Joe" was a man of deep piety and of rich, ripe experience in the things of God. He was ready when the summons came. He said to his son-in-law, "I will be dead when you return." He was reminded of what Dr. McFerrin had said to his son under similar circumstances. After a long pause he said: "I have tried to live for sixty years so as to leave no doubt in the minds of my friends as where they will find me."

A good man has gone home.

Reminiscences of My Early Itinerant Life.

BY REV. H. M. DOOTH.

After considerable intermission in these communications, owing to severe family affliction, I will devote another paper to my first appointment to Port Gibson and Grand Gulf circuit.

As it was in the county of my birth and early training, I will endeavor to trace the hand of Providence which wonderfully led me, in a way I know not, from orphanage in very early years (about six years old) to young manhood, that others may see, as I do, distinctly, that there is a "divinity which shapes our ends, rough hew them as we will." Without religious education, in the family of as kind and tender relatives as anyone ever had, I grew up without any strong convictions on the subject of my salvation, except as were received from the fact that my maternal aunt, in a transient visit in the neighborhood, taught me the Lord's Prayer, which was, with the divine blessing, the guiding star of my life, and was repeated nightly, before going to sleep, up to young manhood, exerting a conservative power in its restraints against vicious indulgence, and frequently producing strong religious impressions, intensified in later years, while at college, by the Spirit of God in a most powerful awakening and conversion, after protracted and earnest and continuous seeking, not in the throes of the earthquake shock, or the violence of the storm, or the raging of the fire, but in the still small voice speaking and melting my heart in the groves of Cumberland College, Ky. Returning home from college life and entering upon secular pursuits among old companions of my youth, I was soon impressed upon the subject of the ministry, and, with much hesitation and great fear and trembling, entered upon my life-work, being sent out by the Rocky Spring Church, Mississippi Conference, of which I was C. L. This church was then one of the most spiritual, progressive, active, useful churches which I have labored among in my fifty years' ministry. Uncle Tommy Owens was the genius of the church, being resident minister, and his wife, Sister Owens, and Sisters Wright, Rundle, afterwards Harding, and Lum, and others; and Bros. Throckmorton, Lum, McClelland, and others, rejoicing, shouting Christians in the class-room and great congregation. Never was sent out by the church a more tremblingly unworthy young minister, who realizes yet that nothing but God's grace, by direct and divine interposition, could have sustained him in this work of stupendous and unparalleled responsibility. With these feelings of an inexpressible sense of responsibility and inadequacy for the work, he was sent by the Mississippi Conference of 1838, held at Grenada, Miss., to this, his first charge, in the county of his birth, and among the associates of his youth, who all called him by his given name (Horace). As I have said elsewhere, by the help of God, I endured the burden of this work, and lived through it, thank God!

There were men and women of God to hold up the hands of the shrinking, timid and trembling young itinerant, who looks back to those early years of his ministry with the feelings already expressed, and realizes, in all their force, as vividly and lifelike as in the days of long ago. I have lived to see them nearly all pass away—beloved kindred and friends of my youth—many dying in the Lord, giving their dying testimony to the blessedness of a living Christ revealed to their rapt visions in passing over death's cold flood. Blessed be God! "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his." I would like to dwell upon the memory of these saints of God, and record their examples of piety and faith, to stimulate their successors; but one well qualified has accomplished the task, and many of them will be recorded on the historic page in indelible memorials.

I would here express my thanksgiving to God. Rev. J. G. Jones' "History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference," first volume, has greeted these glad and rejoicing eyes, and, if spared a while longer, I hope to read the heroic lives of these immortal worthies, my contemporaries, ministers and laymen, "whose names were not born to die." This history should be circulated far and wide, not only in the Mississippi Conference, the mother of Conferences, but within the bounds of her offspring—Alabama, Louisiana and Texas Conferences. Many hearts will be gladdened, as was mine, and many eyes filled with tears, and many hearts made to rejoice for the grace of God vouchsafed to men and women.

Letter from Montana.

BY REV. A. C. COREY.

MR. EDITOR: Since our return from the Annual Conference we have moved along quite smoothly in our church work in Butte. I am preaching three times a week, which, with the oversight of two Sunday-schools, conducting a weekly prayer meeting, and pastoral work, gives me enough to occupy my time.

After getting all in good running order for the new year, and getting my pulpit supplied during my absence, I accepted an invitation from Bro. E. J. Stanley to make a week's visit to the Bitter Root Valley, in the bounds of the Stevensville circuit.

Leaving Butte on the seven P. M. train, you reach Missoula, on the Northern Pacific railroad, at half-past three the next morning. A short nap and breakfast brings the time to leave on the stage for Stevensville, where you find headquarters for the preachers of this circuit. This ride of thirty miles, though on a stage, is not tiresome, as it is up the valley all the way. This can not be said of all stage riding in Montana, as some of our Bishops can testify from experience in ante-railroad days. I was so perfectly charmed with this great valley that I feel inclined to write about it. Its length is about ninety miles; width, from ten to fifteen. The Bitter Root river courses its entire length in a northwesterly direction; so while you are going up the valley, you travel south. The river is one of the most beautiful streams I ever saw. At the point we crossed, going from Missoula to Stevensville, the water is from six to ten feet deep, and as clear as crystal. I could see the smallest pebbles lying on the bottom. This stream is fed by many smaller tributaries that come from the canons and gorges of the mountain ranges on either side. Certainly no valley was ever more easily irrigated. And while it is but a trifling expense here to irrigate, it guarantees a rich crop every year. There is no horror of drouth. Oh, what a blessing!

I must tell you of the products of this fertile valley. My letter may possibly astonish some, but the figures can be relied upon as stating facts; for I testify of the things I have seen. Here the farmers (called ranchers) raise wheat, oats, clover, grasses, peas, corn (to some extent), pumpkins, Irish potatoes, turnips, carrots, cabbages, beets, onions, lettuce, parsnips, celery, tomatoes, spinach; various kinds of fruits—apples, plums, blackberries, raspberries, currants, etc. They luxuriate finest flavored watermelons, too, in latter summer.

On these farms you will find sheep, hogs, cows, horses, mules, and among them all scarcely ever see a scrub.

The thermometer in winter is most always ten degrees lower than in this city, and many other of the mountain towns.

Forty bushels of wheat per acre is an ordinary crop; oats, seventy-five. Though corn is not much grown, the yield is from thirty to forty bushels per acre. A farmer there told me that he raised as much as forty thousand pounds of onions to the acre. I saw a half-acre upon which he said was twenty-two thousand pounds. They grow 400 to 450 bushels of Irish potatoes to the acre as an ordinary crop. It is said 800 bushels have been raised.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company is wise enough to tap their road at Missoula, and go up this valley. The grading and track laying is going on now very rapidly. The present crop will be shipped by rail from a distance of thirty-five miles up the valley. While the valley is rich in its productions, the mountains on each side produce rich minerals. A specimen on exhibition in Stevensville, from a mine near by, carried $7,000 of gold and silver to the ton.

Now, Mr. Editor, a ride up the valley on one side of the river, and down the valley on the other side, where I saw elegant homes, fat cows, horses, sheep, mules, hogs, hay-ricks, wheat garners, etc., convinced me that Montana has some as fine stock and agricultural country as we need. I must state, too, something of the timber in that country and other places, as seen in my travels in this Territory.

Before coming to Montana, Bro. William H. Gayle, Judge Thomas A. Garrett, of Monroe, La., and I examined the congressional plates of Montana forestry, as there represented. Seven cords per acre was the densest. A good, honest farmer in the Bitter Root Valley told me that a few weeks since he felled one tree for lumber, which yielded three thousand and five hundred feet, and there was enough top and limbs left to make two cords of wood. I am satisfied, sir, that I saw many trees there that would yield three cords, and spaces of thirty feet square with seven to ten cords. I saw acres of ground that surely had over one hundred cords. Why, Mr. Editor, the saw-mill business is one of the most profitable industries in some sections. This is not a barren country like Colorado and many other parts, and it is very wrong that the country should be so represented.

With these facts before us, suffer one more statement or two with reference to our church work, for that is the end for which we write concerning our resources. The circuit in this very valley of which we have written is left without a regular pastor. Bro. Stanley is our presiding elder of the Helena district, and what time he has to spare he gives to the Stevensville circuit. This, too, is one of the strongest charges of all our work in Montana. Is it possible that preachers are afraid that God and nine hundred substantial members, in such a good country as the above, can't support them? Mr. Editor, allow me to say that I do think it is positively a reflection upon the itinerant system of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that Bishop Hendrix does not feel at liberty to transfer a man from some of the crowded Conferences to supply this people with the gospel. I think those people of Stevensville circuit would take care of a preacher who would come and do his duty, without a single dollar from the Board.

We have other places in this Territory where we are not so strong, and, of course, need help from the domestic funds. Places to be supplied: Anaconda and Deer Lodge, with a beautiful valley between, a church at both places, out of debt, and a good parsonage at Anaconda—no preacher; Bozeman, a nice little city on the Northern Pacific railroad, a nice church building and outside preaching-places in the valley—no preacher. Oh, how it grieves us to think that the labors of our noble Father Stateler, and most worthy Bro. Stanley at these places are fast going to naught for the lack of men! Will the readers of the ADVOCATE hear us and help us? We thank God for two new men who have come to us this year; but we have need for more. Methinks I hear it said by some one in the future, that Southern Methodism in Montana is a failure, and yet wonder why it is so. And then methinks I hear the answer given by some of these men of God who have been here for years, "Ye would not enter the open door." We can but feel some impatience when so many are offering themselves to the Board for China and Japan, and yet never think of laboring at their own door. God certainly does not make mistakes in his calls.

Mr. Editor, I could scarcely write less than I have, and this is my apology.

BUTTE CITY, MON., Oct. 17, 1887.

A Column of Clips.

It is impossible to mentally or socially enslave a Bible-reading people. The principles of the Bible are the ground-work of human freedom.—Horace Greeley.

From the time that at my mother's feet or on my father's knee I first learned to lisp the sacred writings, they have been my daily study. If there be anything in my style or thoughts to be commended, it is due to my early love of the Scriptures.—Daniel Webster.

Work, work, work! It is the iron plow-share that goes over the field of the heart, rooting up the pretty grasses and the beautiful, hurtful weeds that we have taken such pleasure in growing, laying them all under, fair and foul together—making plain, dull-looking arable land for our neighbors to peer at until, at night-time, down in the deep furrows, the angels come and sow.

A gentleman at Wolverhampton, England, went into a factory, where the manager showed him about a hundred locks, with a good deal of workmanship belonging to all of them. Holding in his hand a bunch of keys, he said: "There is not one of these that will open one of the other locks;" but, taking up a particular one, he added, "This is a master key, and will open everyone of them." And just such a master key is the Word of God; for there is no deep want of the human soul for which that divine Word has not its remedy.—The Worker.

Men say that time is money. This is a wretched burlesque. It would be as truthful to say that light is money, that air is money, that sleep is money. Time is thought; time is knowledge; time is character; time is power; time is the threshold of eternity. An earnest man will often reckon time as if he were on a death-bed. There are hours in every man's life in which the tick of a watch is more thrilling to an earnest spirit than the roll of thunder. There will come in the lives of us all moments in which the beat of a pulse will be more awful than the roar of Niagara.—Austin Phelps, D. D.

What is needed is such a difference in the temper, bearing, conduct and aim of life, and in the work and walk of the church, that all men may know that the "Lord doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel." The Christian's speech ought always to "betray" him, and his life demonstrate that he has been with "Jesus and learned of him." The preached gospel is shorn of half its power for lack of a testified gospel. This does not mean pharisaical separation, but Christian separation. Christ was more separate from sinners than the Pharisees were, and yet he did not hesitate to touch them, and eat with them, and be their friend. So ought Christians to be separate from the world, while we are in constant touch with it.—New York Paper.

The Episcopal Methodist, on "The Need for Thoroughness," has this:

"In praise we speak of a thorough business man, a thorough mechanic, etc., and it will be found that the people thus praised pay strict attention to all the details of their work, and will not allow it to be slighted in the least particular. 'For the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.' Why should not every Christian present to the world's eye a fully rounded character? Surely grace is all-sufficient, so that even the weak things of earth may thereby be enabled to confound the mighty, and completeness in Christ should be diligently sought. Now, on examination we will discover that the lack of thoroughness is the reason why so many Christians are so inert and negative in their life and influence. In the first step in our Christian life we should be absolutely certain, for doubt here will become all our future. Was the work thorough in conversion is a very important inquiry, for we have often had reason to doubt whether some we know were ever soundly converted. 'If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away, and behold all things are become new.'"

The true Christian may doubt his own ability, but he can not doubt God. He may say with Paul, "I am less than the least," but he must also add, "I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me."

"The gift of God" through Jesus Christ is, indeed, said to be "eternal life." But what is eternal life? "This is life eternal, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent." Eternal life is not mere existence; nor is eternal death the cessation of existence. That passage, "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel," has been often treated as if it meant that through the gospel, or that grace of God which the gospel announces, immortality is conferred. It is "brought to light." All that revelation to man of the immortality conferred upon him in the act of creation, so dim under the law, bursts into glorious radiance in the gospel. The whole strain of Scripture teaching, becoming more and more evident as the revelation becomes more complete, assumes that the being addressed, in law, in appeal, in promise, in penalty, is an immortal being; and the vast emphasis of the call upon men to forsake sin and return to God, is grounded always in the truth that in sorrow or in joy man must live forever.—Standard.

LOVE.—Love makes drudgery delightful. It forgets self, and lives for others. Love outruns law and leaves it far behind. Not to be able and permitted to serve is a penalty. The question is not, "What must I do?" but, "What may I do?" To give pleasure is its joy. To grieve its object is to grieve itself. Love is the secret spring of the believer's life; and this makes him often pass in the world for an enthusiast. It stops at nothing. Mountains of difficulty are no more to it than plains. It clasps the cross and kisses it. Love strengthened Mary, when the soldiers quaked with fear. Love kept her hovering round the sepulchre when all the disciples were scattered to their own homes. Love has a joy of its own, which a stranger can not understand. It is fed by the unseen Spirit of God, while reposing on an unseen Savior. To lose life for him is to gain it. To suffer martyrdom for Jesus is to see him standing at the right hand of God waiting to welcome his servant to glory.

OLD HUNDRED.

BY L. N. TAGGART, D. D.

I phrase myself, that somewhere on this earth
Its daily notes are evermore ascending
That, 'mid above all strife or noisy mirth
Its human song with heavenly ones is blending;
As earth turns round beneath the daily sun,
And morning's rays from land to land are creeping,
This glad uplifted strain is never done,
But somewhere still its notes are heavenward leaping.

On cold New England's green and templed hills;
On Southern shores, where summer dew distills,
And tropic birds their morning songs are waking;
Far o'er the spreading empires of the West,
High with their garnered stores of golden treasure,
And life unfolds in full and joyous measure;

On Asia's spreading plains or Afric's sands;
On flowery shores the pilgrim's feet enticing,
Where cultured Europe shows her peopled lands,
And her great temples in their grace are rising;
From sea-girt isles that stud the watery main;
From countless ships on ocean journeys going,
Somewhere ascends the grand and lofty strain,
"Praise to our God from whom all good is flowing."

And as God's law lights up the waiting world,
From shore to shore, o'er all the darkened spaces,
As Christ's own peaceful banners are unfurled,
And wave triumphant o'er benighted races;
"Praise to our God from whom all blessings flow,"
Shall ever swell, in mightier waves ascending,
Till earth's glad songs go up from all below
With heavenly songs in choral union blending.

The Sunday-School Lesson for November 13, 1887.

BY C. B. ANDREWS, D. D.

CHRIST'S WITNESS TO JOHN.

Matthew xi, 2-15.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He was a burning and a shining light."—John v, 35.

CONNECTING LINKS.

This lesson, though it goes forward in the position of chapters, is said to go backward in point of time about six months beyond the past lesson. It occurred in the year of our Lord, 28; and comes in just after the healing of the centurion's servant, which was the first lesson of the present quarter. Jesus was performing many miracles. A notable one was the restoration of the widow's son. John had been cast into prison by Herod for reproving him for his unlawful marriage to his brother's wife. He, doubtless, had become despondent, and had heard of the miracles of Christ, and now sent messengers to Jesus to inquire into the truth of his mission. He thought strange of his having been so long neglected.

JOHN'S QUESTION.

Verse 2. "Now when John had heard in prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples." John had now been in prison about four months, in the dungeon of the castle Machærus, a fortress on the eastern shore of the Dead Sea: To be shut out from the world for so long a time, away from contact with friends, and seemingly abandoned by the Savior, was well calculated to try his faith. Madame Guyon, who was a most intrepid Christian, states that the greatest trial which her faith ever sustained was when she was shut up within the walls of the Bastile, the celebrated prison in Paris. So John found his faith yearning for confirmation, and he took the most natural way to have it strengthened, namely: that of sending messengers direct to the Savior. Here is a good example for desponding Christians: let them send messengers of prayer direct to the throne of grace. Christ's seeming neglect of John, his forerunner, may have suggested doubts of Christ's divinity; but the works of Christ bore testimony on the other side, as no one could work miracles, except through divine power. The journey of the two disciples from Machærus to Capernaum was about one hundred miles up the valley of the Jordan, through the portions of Reuben, Gad and Manasseh, and around to the opposite shores of Gennesaret.

3. "And said unto him"—that is, through his disciples—"Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Art thou the Messiah, the sent of God? This question sounds very strangely from John, who had so short a time before that said of Christ, "Behold the Lamb of God." Some commentators, thinking to save the reputation of John, say that the question was asked for the confirmation of the faith of his disciples, and not his own. But that opinion does injustice to the straightforward methods of John. He would not have employed a round-about way, but would have directed his disciples to go and ask for themselves. Besides, the Savior would have directed his reply to the disciples instead of sending it to John. John had borne his testimony to the divinity of Christ, and it had been attested. Now, even if he had lost faith altogether, it would not have detracted from the validity of his testimony, no more than did Peter's neglecting afterwards to carry out the teaching of his vision invalidate the call of the Gentiles through him. John was human, and the effect of his long and cruel imprisonment, together with the silence of the Savior, naturally made him to doubt.

CHRIST'S ANSWER.

Verses 4, 5. "Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, the lame walk," etc. Christ did not answer directly by words, but referred them to the works of healing which he had performed. This, according to the prophets, was a positive evidence of his Messiahship, as related in Isaiah xxxv, 5, 6; lxi, 1; Malachi iv, 2. Christ wrought some miracles in the presence of John's disciples, and they heard of others. "The poor have the gospel preached unto them." This was a fulfillment in Christ of a prophecy made in Psalms xxii, 26, and Isaiah lxi, 1. Christ's especial mission was to the poor. Is not the provision of the gospel for the poor still necessary to constitute a true church of Christ?

6. "And blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me." He will be happy who shall not be scandalized at my humble appearance and the spiritual character of my kingdom. These words contain a reproof delicately administered to John and to his disciples for their questioning.

CHRIST'S TESTIMONY OF JOHN.

Verse 7. "And as they departed"—as John's disciples returned with the message to John—"Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John." There was some reason in the mind of the multitude for doubting the faithfulness of Christ's forerunner; hence Jesus proposed a defense of him. "What went ye out in the wilderness to see?" Reminding them in what crowds and with what eager expectancy they had flocked to John's ministry. The Greek word here rendered "to see," more properly signifies to "consider," "observe." "A reed shaken with the wind?" His sending to Christ might by possibility convict him of being vacillating, but when they would think of his bold proclamation of truth sending him to a dungeon, they could no longer entertain such a thought.

8. "But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses." John's life in the wilderness, his rough clothing and simple fare were very far removed from luxury or effeminacy.

9. "But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet." All regarded John as a prophet; even the Pharisees feared to say that he was not. He was the immediate herald of the Messiah. His conception and birth were miraculous—the result of immediate divine interposition.

10. "For this is he of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee." John's coming and mission were especially foretold by Malachi in the third chapter. In Malachi the Messiah seems to be the speaker who foretells John, and now the Messiah is the speaker who testifies as to his character.

11. "Verily, I say unto you." A solemn and an emphatic preface which the Savior generally used before his important announcements. "Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." He had been foretold as the herald of the Christ. It was his distinguished privilege to point out Jesus as the Christ, and Jesus the Christ had endorsed him as the forerunner according to the Scriptures. "Notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of Heaven, is greater than he." The Savior is not uttering the truism that a man saved in the eternal kingdom is better than John. He means that any man who lives after the coming of Christ, who has had all the light and privileges of the gospel dispensation, is better off, and has the opportunity of attaining superior character than even the greatest under the old dispensation. A parallel expression is found in Zechariah xii, 8: "He that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of the Lord before them."

12. "The kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." The reference, doubtless, is to the fact that publicans and harlots, yea, all classes of people who earnestly repent of their sins, and with purpose of heart call upon the Lord, shall enter the kingdom.

13. "For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John." In Revelation, xix, 10, we read "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." The central idea of all the Scriptures is Jesus. Now John, the forerunner, the immediate herald, had come and pointed him out in person, thus corroborating and fulfilling all prophecy.

14. "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come." The New Version has it: "And if ye are willing to receive it, this is Elijah which is to come." If ye are willing to credit and believe all the prophecies which were spoken about John, ye will see the truth of what the angel of the Lord said to his father, Zechariah, about him: "And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias * * * to make ready a people prepared for the Lord."

15. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." As if he had said, these things are so plain, the prophecies have all so overwhelmingly agreed upon John, and the characteristics possessed by him do so fully conform to the character of prophecy, that anyone who has ears to hear can not fail to hear and be convinced by the truth.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. When Christians fall into doubt and despondency, let them imitate John, and send messengers direct to Christ. Searching the Scriptures and prayer bring us into speedier and closer communion with the blessed Savior than did John's messengers.

2. Inasmuch as John the Baptist, than whom there was no greater, was imprisoned and beheaded for the truth, therefore, less distinguished Christians should not repine at suffering.

3. All prophecies of God's blessed book will be fulfilled—"Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him: woe unto the wicked, it shall be ill with him."

From the Work.

MAYERSVILLE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: As this is my fourth year on this work, I hope you will allow me space in your columns for some observations and suggestions.

This being my first work in the Conference, I will always have pleasant recollections of it. I must say, I have been agreeably disappointed in the work. Like many, not having any personal knowledge of "the swamp," I came with the preconceived idea that the people here were a rough set generally, and that it was a perfect graveyard. Without reference to other sections of the swamp, I want to say that these ideas have proven false. I have been treated very kindly. My health has been as good here as I have had anywhere. I have not been sick for over three years. I think, however, that this climate is more enervating than in some sections of the State. The health of the white population here will, I am satisfied, compare favorably with almost any section of the State.

After four years' observation, I am of the opinion that the church will not have any very great permanent prosperity here for some time to come. This is not owing, however, to the indifference of the people to religion, but to the present circumstances of the country.

This (Issaquena) county has only one thousand white population—all told. A goodly number of these are agents, renters, etc., and, of course, can not take that interest in the church as if they were settled. We have Jews, Catholics, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists; hence you see we have only a small number of any one denomination, and still a smaller number of settlers of any one denomination. The country is owned by, comparatively, few persons; hence we conclude that till this state of things is changed nothing very great can be permanently accomplished by the church. But these people must have the gospel: and I think it must be supplied mostly, if not altogether, by the Methodists for some time to come. This is not because our sister churches are less zealous than the Methodist, but because the Methodist system of supplying the ministry is more adapted, for the present at least, to this section than the systems of our sister churches. These people are intelligent. If anyone has an idea that the population here is composed of "roughs," he is badly mistaken, and has only to come and see to be convinced. In order, then, that we may maintain ourselves here, it is necessary to send good, first-class preachers. This is my opinion after being here four years on the field; and the church can take it for what it is worth.

At Mayersville we have a neat church, and very comfortable country parsonage, tolerably well furnished.

We have received in the church, in different ways this year, up to date, fifteen members. I closed an interesting and profitable meeting here last week. It resulted in four accessions and spiritual development of the church. Bro. I. W. Cooper, who did all the preaching, says it was one of the most successful and spiritual meetings he ever attended. According to the number in attendance, I feel confident that I will be able to bring up the collections in full by Conference. And I don't think the preacher will be overlooked.

The preacher whose lot it will be to labor among this people next year will, I feel confident, be among a kind and appreciative people. He will have a good comfortable home, with an abundance of work to do.

RICHLAND CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I am now closing my fourth year on the Richland circuit, and deem a few words through the ADVOCATE not impropriate in reference to the work. A retrospect discovers many imperfections both in plans and in their execution; yet there is much to rejoice over. Development has been going on in some respects, leaving the work somewhat improved. But what losses we have suffered since I came, by death and removal! A former pastor would recognize many familiar faces in some of the congregations, and yet he could but be struck with the number of the missing. Some who greeted me when I came, and whose friendships grew dearer as time advanced, have "slipped off," and are in the better world now. What constant and rapid changes does time make in our associations! There hangs on the wall above me, as I write, a grouped picture of my Conference, taken fourteen years ago. Of the one hundred and twenty-two preachers whose faces appear in that picture, twenty-five, to my certain knowledge, are dead. So also the venerable Bishop Paine, who presided, and several of the lay delegates. Again, of the remaining ninety-seven, forty-four have left us; some locating, a few surrendering their ministerial credentials, while others have transferred to other Conferences, and are scattered from the Kentucky border to the Gulf, and from North Carolina to the Western frontier. May we all meet again in the grand Conference above!

Yes, Annual Conference will soon be here, and some of us, by the inexorable law of limitation, must go to other fields. In such a case the delicious suspense from not knowing whether you will have to move or not, is missing. There is nothing but dead certainty about it.

And I must get out of this new parsonage and go—where? Will there be a home for the preacher's family when I get there? And I must bid these good people good-by. Who will greet me and mine in the new field—the somewhere else—to which we go? Will they be as kind as these dear people have been? Will we stay another four years? Will they be fruitful years? Under the new arrangement will the church of God move forward? Will souls be born unto God?

Who will come here? Will he be successful? I trust so. And now I pray that the blessing of God may abide upon the people of this charge, one and all, and when we "meet beyond the river" may not one be missing!

Mr. Editor, I have written a great deal more than I intended. Come to our Conference.

PALMER CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write you a few lines about Palmer Camp Meeting.

We started from home about eight o'clock Saturday morning. We had to go eleven miles before we reached the grounds. The ride was through a beautiful pine country. As far as the eye could see, the grass was beautiful and green, dotted over with beautiful wild flowers. After riding for about four hours, we arrived at the grounds; but, before entering the main part of the ground, we had to cross a creek whose waters were as clear as crystal. I thought it was very shallow until we had started across. I found the water came up to the body of the wagon. When we arrived at the camp, it was twelve o'clock.

The tents are arranged so as to form a square, the tabernacle being in the center of this square. You can sit in front of your tent, and see wagons, carriages and buggies coming in every direction. At the present time, the space around the tabernacle is very sunny, but in a few years it will be a beautiful grove of oaks.

The horn blew for the first service Saturday evening. Dr. West, the presiding elder, preached. I did not know where all the people were going to sleep, but I soon found out. The tents have a long bed the entire length of the tent, and as many as can sleep in there. Then they have to make beds on the floor. The tents are crowded all the time. The tent-holders provide food for everyone who comes. It is a free-will offering.

I was glad to see dear Dr. Walker; it seemed like home. He preached for us at the eleven o'clock service. He gave us a good sermon, as he always does.

They have five services. I enjoyed the experience meeting; everyone spoke of having family prayers, and being able to call on any one of their children to lead in prayer.

Tuesday evening, Bro. Kimball came—that was another home face. He preached some powerful sermons, that awakened sinners and brought them to the altar, penitent and humble. It was a good sight to see the Holy Spirit working among the people. It seemed to me the people out here are more zealous than at home. Bro. Kimball did a great work at that camp meeting, which will never be forgotten.

There was one little boy, who was converted, whose face fairly shone; and some one asked him about being so happy, and he said: "Why, I just look at that preacher, and when he called up mourners, I just went up and prayed, and now I am so happy." And he talked to the other boys, and told them if they would do like he did, they would be happy too.

There were a good many converted, and some backsliders reclaimed. It was a good camp meeting. It was my first visit, but I hope it will not be my last. It has done me a great deal of good. The people out here are whole-hearted, and most of them enjoy religion.

The meeting broke up Thursday morning. I formed some pleasant acquaintances, whom I hope to meet again. It seemed as if everyone hated to leave the grounds. May the Palmer Camp Meetings grow in good deeds?

RUSTON STATION.

MR. EDITOR: With an intermission of a few days during the Doubberly Camp Meeting, we have held protracted services here for about twenty-five days, during which time I never heard more earnest and practical gospel preaching than was done by Bro. Blocker, of Bellevue, and Bro. McLaurin, of Mississippi, who chanced to come this way at this time in the prosecution of his Bible work.

The meeting resulted in a closer union of the membership, and a general revival of the attendance, together with the conversion of five souls. Up to this date, fourteen members have been added to the church during the year.

We are now entering upon a battle against the saloons. They were closed last year by a vote of the people; but, under the views of the Police Jury, we have to fight the battle over again to keep them closed another year.

Eight addresses in this parish, and three in Bossier, will keep me pretty busy during next week and the week following.

Pray for our success.

Truly yours,

J. A. PARKER.

BENTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR:—We have just closed our round of protracted meetings on the Benton circuit. We have been here nearly one year among a clever and kind people. There have been about forty conversions, and fifty accessions to the church. The spiritual power in the membership greatly quickened and improved. Our Conference collections will all be paid up in full. Our assessments on the Benton circuit are larger than any other assessments in the district, except Jackson station. We have a faithful Board of Stewards and, therefore, expect them to bring up every dollar of the assessment for the support of the ministry.

We have received valuable aid from our beloved and faithful presiding elder, Bro. J. A. Ellis; Rev. W. B. Lewis, of the Canton station, and Rev. R. S. Woodward, of Yazoo City station. We will soon have to say good-by to Bro. Ellis, as our presiding elder. He has endeared himself to the hearts of the preachers and the people of the Jackson district. We would be glad if we could keep him with us longer; but, alas! the inevitable law of the Discipline is in our way. We heartily recommend him to the love and kind favor of the people to whom he may minister another year.

In addition to the success that has attended our ministry on the Benton circuit, we have had the pleasure of holding meetings with Bro. W. E. Ballard, of the Raymond circuit, at Bolton; Bro. Dollar, at Ebenezer, and Bro. S. J. Cotton, at Fletcher's. At Bolton there were five accessions to the church; at Ebenezer, seven; at Fletcher's, nineteen or twenty. Then we spent five days with Bro. J. A. Newsom, at Lake City, where we had about twenty conversions and twenty-five accessions. The Lord has greatly blessed the preaching of the Word in Yazoo county this year. I know of one hundred additions to the Methodist Church in this county.

Faithfully and truly yours,

J. S. PARKER, P. C.

TRENTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: As we have reported nothing from this circuit this year, we now proceed to give you some items, which may be interesting to the readers of the ADVOCATE. Our round of protracted services are past. We have held protracted services at each church—eight in number—also one camp meeting, resulting in many conversions, and fifty or more added to the membership. The membership very greatly revived. Many of the members occupy a higher plane of Christian experience now. We are greatly indebted to our ministerial brethren for services rendered, especially at our camp meeting and third Quarterly Conference. Licensed to preach one promising young brother, who is now in school preparing for the regular ministry. Owing to short crops in this section last year, the finances are far behind. The people and the stewards say they will come up.

R. A. SIBLEY.

ROBELINE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: God has honored us and our new church here with one of the most glorious revivals within the history of this town. Robeline is stirred from center to circumference. We are now entering the third week of the meeting, and the end is not yet. Upwards of thirty conversions, and nineteen accessions. We have had the world, the flesh and the devil to conspire against us, but God has given us the victory. Glory be to his name!

Rev. J. R. Fuller, evangelist, has been with us from the beginning, and has preached continuously with great power and success.

Result for the year so far: nearly fifty conversions and accessions. Have three other meetings to hold. Pray for us.

H. S. ISBELL.

The car-stove was prohibited by law. Railroad men thought they could not get along without it, but, under the spur of necessity, experiments have been made until it is found that they can heat the cars much more economically without stoves. Some people think they can not get along without liquor, but a good dose of prohibition would educate them wonderfully, proving to them that they can be more healthy and happy without a drop of spirits.—Witness.

Our Contributors.

"As a Church, We Are Anti-Foreign Missionary."

"Our late attempt and mortifying failure, after five months of earnest entreaty and exhortation, to raise from a million of members money enough to pay off the indebtedness of our Mission Board, has convinced us that, as a church, we are anti-foreign missionary. Our only hope now is to turn our attention to home mission work, and give our people a chance to show that they have that sort of a missionary spirit."

That parngraph reads like the beginning of an obituary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I am sorry that it ever appeared in the columns of the ADVOCATE, and very sorry that it formed part of the leading article in the number for October 20. It is true, there has been a mortifying failure in the effort to pay off the missionary debt; but is it apparent that the church is at fault? Has there been any failure where the matter was brought before the people of the church by the preachers? Was the effort a failure in the New Orleans district, of the Louisiana Conference, or the Brookhaven district, of the Mississippi Conference? No, no, no! A week of self-denial and prayer next year will result in the achievement we so much desired this year. Do not let our church turn backward nor tarry where it is in its foreign missionary experience, but continue to urge it onward and upward.

For nearly thirty years our church played at being a missionary church, and sent its two faithful missionaries to batter down the walls of superstition and bigotry environing the four hundred millions of China, besides the few workers in the Indian Territory; but now, with its scores of earnest workers in China, Japan, Mexico and Brazil, and their labors honored of God, let us "go forward," and not "stand still," to "see the salvation of God."

"Turn our attention to home mission work," you say. Well, how long would that last, or what would it amount to in or by a church whose spirit is "anti-foreign missionary"? Let us get a powerful microscope and find the Primitive—Baptist Church, and we can see what our condition would be in twenty-five years, or even less time. What use has Almighty God got for an "anti-foreign missionary church"? About as much as he has for an anti-prohibition club!

Let the church face the question: The missionary debt must be paid and more missionaries be sent out, or we must recall those who have already been sent and be accursed of God for our meanness and our stinginess. Who can doubt the result?—especially if our brethren in the ministry will quit, publicly and privately, criticising the acts of the Board of Missions in the premises, and go to work and help raise the money that is needed for the mission work. Let our church papers shut out the whines and growls of the men who have more regard for "individualism" (that's smoother than egotism!) than for "order." Brethren, advice is cheap, especially ex post facto advice. Anybody can see through a mill-stone after the hole is drilled.

"A home mission church!" That reminds me of an "Orphans' Club" which thrived, some years ago, in a Southern city. Its members were orphans—some had been orphans forty years, and nearly all of them were members of the church—Methodists, Presbyterians or Protestant Episcopalians. The club was for the benefit of the orphans—composing it. They liked oyster suppers and a quiet game of poker; but their consciences would not permit them to bet, and so their rules made the chips represent fines. (A rose under any other name would smell as sweet!) So they gambled and ate oysters, and occasionally drank champagne—all for the benefit of the orphans—composing the club!

There is not a church in any of our Annual Conferences but what is a home missionary church and a home mission field, and there is not a preacher who is not a home missionary, and the adjacent territory is more or less influenced by the work being done; and if our work is to be restricted to our Conference lines, until all the heathen at our door have been converted, we will never be a missionary church.

Exhortation: Let us get rid of the word "foreign." It is a political term improperly imported into the church, and is antagonistic to the Lord's Prayer and to the whole spirit of Christianity. And let us preachers all get "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," quit fault-finding and get to work, even though $100,000 does look mighty big to a poor fellow who gets only $600 or $700 a year for himself and numerous family to live on and look decently.

Domestic Missions Again.

MR. EDITOR: I thank you for your timely editorial, on "Home Mission Work," in issue of October 20. Your views accord, with my own in the leading matter you discuss—"the picayune policy." About the direct and full control by the Conference Board there are difficulties of which I would like to write in another article. My chief object in this is to "exhort after" you and our worthy president, R. S. Woodward.

As a further basis for my exhortation, I would state that our mission funds in the Mississippi Conference, at least, are more judiciously expended, and with better results than seems generally believed. Having acted as secretary of this Board for four years, and closely observed the outlay and ingathering, I am prepared to state my conviction that no other sums of money expended for the support of the ministry within our bounds have yielded a richer harvest of actual fruit during the same time. As a rule, those whose support has been supplemented by our Board are as good men every way as can be found among us. Some are the old, tried and true veterans; some, the active, zealous and successful young and middle-aged brethren. Their year's record is closely investigated by the Board, in open session, before their appropriations are allowed to be paid by the treasurer. These reports have generally been most gratifying, showing large increase in membership and considerable contributions towards the cause of missions, foreign and domestic. Our constant effort is to bring each charge aided up to the self-supporting plane. In this we are succeeding better than could be expected from the small amount contributed. I recall six different works which have thus developed from a needy condition to full self-support within these four years. Others will need no further aid after this year. About six neat churches have also been built on these works during this period. We are reaching out the helpful hand to the poor in our little cities, with hopeful returns. No, brethren, the trouble does not lie in "money wasted on fruitless efforts;" but it lies in the want of liberality in that same class of people who "don't believe in foreign missions, because there are so many heathen at home." If you would get a contribution for the "home work," do not go to the "heathen-at-home" man, for he is sure not to have the money at this time—"Don't like to promise, but will hand in something before you get off for Conference." Maybe so! But beware lest his engagements prevent his seeing you any more till next year. If this class of our members would save even a fifth part of the money spent on circuses, and the like, they would be more able and in far better spiritual frame to give to all the causes of God.

But some of the fault lies at the door of preachers in charge and presiding elders. They do not present the cause always with the force it deserves. We are sometimes too much afraid of losing our popularity, or our something else, to allow our projecting the subject fully upon the consciences of our hearers in public and in private.

Brethren, let us all wake up to the importance of giving the pure gospel to all the people in the bounds of our own loved section. Nothing else will save us from floods of ungodliness which pour in from the four quarters of the earth. The Master will not excuse us from this part of the great commission, even though we should send to China and Japan a hundredfold more rapidly than we are now doing. The need in our Mississippi Conference is specially urgent this year. For, though we appropriate far less than was called for, yet we have to raise $1,475 to pay these faithful men the small amounts more than due them. This you can see, by reference to the minutes, is $353 more than was raised last year from all our circuits and stations. Unless a greater effort be made all along the line, these toiling comrades will sorrow, their wives and children will suffer for needed comforts, because we are too bashful or too thoughtless and neglectful to do our duty by them. Let us rise and take the collection in full before we give rest to the soles of our feet. So may our Christmas sleep be undisturbed by visions of care-worn wives and weeping children. The way to do it is to do it by all means. "Brethren, the time is short."

Preach in Your Natural Tone of Voice.

MR. EDITOR: I have attended three camp meetings, this year, and several other places of preaching, and I suppose I have heard about one hundred and fifty sermons. Many of them were full of gospel truth, were well delivered and were good to the use of edifying. Some few of them were greater lengthwise than otherwise, and some of them were delivered in such unsunned, unnatural tones of voice that they were not distinctly heard and, of course, not appreciated by many in the congregation. To begin with some of our preachers: They announce the number of the hymn, with their faces turned down toward the book, in such a low, indistinct tone of voice that half of the congregation does not get the number, and especially if it is numbered with three figures. He lets his voice fall on the third figure, so that it is not heard by many in the audience, especially those who are partially deaf, and there are many such besides we old men. This is a constant inconvenience to many since we have adopted the practice of not lining out the hymn. The Bible lessons are too often read in the same mumbling tone of voice. Why does not the man hold up his head like a man, and speak every number of hymn or chapter and every syllable so distinctly that all who can hear tolerably well can get hold of what he says? Now for the sermon that follows: Perhaps the text is announced so that most of the audience get the book, chapter and verse, as most preachers repeat the text. The preacher soon abandons his natural tone of voice and drops off into a sort of adopted tone, which is not pleasant to hear because it is not natural. Presently he begins a paragraph in such a low, inaudible tone that half the audience in an average Sabbath congregation does not know what he is talking about; then he rises higher on a few sentences, which are distinctly heard; then he pitches into a terrible squall, at the top of his voice, until the paragraph is finished. The consequence is, that during the squall his words all mash up into mere noise, so that you can not eliminate a single sentence, so as to understand it. And then in commencing a new paragraph he drops down to his low, unmubling tone; then rises on a few sentences and screams again, and thus he goes on to the close of his discourse.

I have known several such preachers, and their style of managing their voice reminds me of a woodpecker making a long flight across an old field. He goes up and down, up and down, with the regularity of a pendulum, until the flight is finished. It has always been embarrassing to me to refer to anything about myself as worthy of imitation; but, perhaps, at my time of life I will not be thought egotistic to put in a little item right here. When I first commenced preaching I was soon impressed with the importance of speaking so that all in the audience could hear me distinctly; and I at once acquired the habit, as soon as I rose to my feet, to look at the furthest man in the house, and then commence the service as though I was speaking to that outside man, knowing if he could hear me, all between us could hear. I have kept up that habit during the more than sixty years of my ministry, and I have heard but few complaints about not hearing every word distinctly. The whole secret is, speak in your natural voice, loud and distinct enough for all to hear.

TEACH US HOW TO PRAY.—It is a great matter when we kneel down and speak to God, calling him by the dread and awful name, and asking him to give heed to this which we are about to say. It would almost seem as if the consciousness of this was one of the first things deeply felt, alike by the disciples of John and the disciples of Jesus. That new idea of all spiritual things which was dawning on their minds, appears as one of its first effects to have set in a clear light the utter worthlessness of a merely formal religion, such as that in which they had been born and reared. A new sense of the privilege of prayer, and a new sense of the deep solemnity of the act seems to have taken possession of them, and they wished to know in what way this act should be done. We do not know how John taught his disciples; but we know, thankfully know, how Jesus taught his. Not any prayer of the Pharisee, standing at the corners of the streets or in the temple; not any of those "repetitions," as if they were to be heard for the much-speaking. It is the reverent child opening his heart to the great, loving Father, and asking for the necessary things which come in the order of providence or in the order of grace. What an absolutely wonderful thing is the Lord's Prayer! The like of it had never been heard in the world before. It was an era in man's spiritual history—just the teaching and the learning of that one prayer.—Standard.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.
It restores the functions of the tear passages.
It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.
Mr. W. BORNE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

Briefs.

"Search the Scriptures—they are they which testify of me."

The Lord reveals himself in the Word. In the Word he reveals himself as the Word. A friend of ours suggests that, if language is the direct gift of God, it is natural and reasonable that God would make a revelation of himself in the language he gave to men. Hence the appositeness of the injunction of Jesus: "Search the Scriptures, for they are they which testify of me."

We have received the "minutes of the fortieth session of the St. Louis Annual Conference," from which we glean these facts: The amount for church extension, $947 65; local preachers, 182; members, 17,705; infants baptized, 763—adults, 1,258; Sunday-schools, 182; teachers, 1,408; scholars, 11,080; church edifices, 170½—value, $478,595; parsonages, 31—value, $38,436; collected for foreign missions, $3,833 42; for domestic missions, $1,832 65; collected for widows, orphans and superannuates, $2,535; for Bishops' Fund, $742 32; Woman's Missionary Society (collected), $2,225; reported for self-denial fund, $391 05.

From the Methodist Times, London, we gather these figures in regard to the religious accommodation in the great metropolis: Combining statistics of outer London, just published, with those of inner London, published in 1884, the following results are obtained: Aggregate population, 5,416,066; sittings, 1,903,509, being 35 per cent. of the population. Of sittings, the Established Church supplies 49.5 per cent., and the Free Churches, 50.5 per cent.; and it is believed that, on an average, not more than one-half these accommodations are used for public worship. That is, in a city of five and a half millions of people, less than one million attend church!

Number of associations, 1,176; membership, 155,000; annual current expenses, $950,000; 116 association buildings, valued at $4,822,980; 426 libraries of 295,606 volumes; 503 reading-rooms; total net property, $6,053,259; 760 weekly Bible classes and 700 weekly prayer meetings, for young men only; 587 educational classes; 2,347 lectures; 168 gymnasiums; 623 general secretaries and other paid officers engaged in the local, State and international departments; 11,628 situations for young men secured; 2,287 sociables; 158 boys' departments; 70 railroad and 10 German departments; 258 college and 24 colored associations.

The announcement has been made that a paper coffin has been invented and put upon the market. A man may now build his house of paper, eat his dinner from paper plates, wipe his face with a paper handkerchief, buy his wife a paper piano, and go to his grave in a paper coffin. The coffin may be paid for with a piece of paper and the death published on another piece. There are few things more useful than paper.

A Significant Incident.

Every aggression the church makes against evil the devil meets with a determined opposition, and contests with a fury inspired by his own lying nature. The recent sensation which occurred in McKendree Church, Nashville, is an illustration of the brazen effrontery with which the devil seeks to prop up his decaying and falling rule. The pastor of the church, Bro. Candler, made a direct attack upon one of the strongholds of unrighteousness, the theater, and dealt such heavy and stunning blows against it, as demoralizing so many of the young, after having already ruined so many of the old, that, in the very precincts of the sanctuary, the old cry was raised, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Emma Abbott, the actress, felt so much aggrieved at the impertinent and impudent ignorance of the preacher and his fearful onslaught upon the theater and its environment, that, then and there, she rose up and "confessed," before the whole astonished audience, that she had been a "Christian for sixteen years!" and that there had been other "performers," too, who went after the meek and gentle One of Nazareth. In venting her Christian rage upon the preacher, in a manner that insulted the modesty of womanhood, and violated the proprieties of the occasion, and profaned the sanctities of the place, she created a sensation that "set everybody by the ears," and worked up the biggest advertisement on the cheapest scale that was ever seen. The telegraph and the newspapers immediately began to blaze abroad the matter, and, as is usual with newspapers reporting what is done in churches, the matter got before the public in a form different from the truth. The report represented the congregation as applauding the actress, when the applause was given to the gentlemanly remark of the preacher when the angry Christian actress had closed her rebuke.

Last week we published the official action of McKendree Church on this incident, and also Bishop McTyeire's address on the subject. What those resolutions and that speech embody is the sentiment of the church on the subject of the theater. No matter how many Christian actors and actresses there may have been, are now, or may be in the future, the unvarying and uncontradicted testimony of all the ages is, that the whole tendency of the theater is toward evil. If the church and her pastors and her people do not oppose this tendency, they are recreant to Christ and opposed to his teaching.

This incident discloses clearly the animus of the world against the teaching of the Bible. It shows that the enemies of Christ and his religion are taking on that desperate sort of boldness that invades the sanctuary of the Most High, and flaunts its abominations above the altars of Christ.

The devil has made immense capital out of this incident, and will do his best to get it repeated somewhere else! And at this juncture of affairs the church needs to "add to her faith, courage." When the world comes into the sanctuary to attack the church, and contradict the ambassador of Jesus Christ, and give the lie to the teachings of the Holy Ghost for two thousand years, it is time for the church to draw and use her weapons against the intruder. "The combat thickens."

Dr. Potter, of the Wesleyan, says that Grace Methodist Church, in Macon, has four women in its Board of Stewards, and that the pastor says "they make very faithful stewards and good collectors." "All of which we steadfastly believe."

A Much-Neglected Study.

No study of equal importance is so generally neglected, especially in our primary schools, as that which teaches how to preserve health. There is no good reason why young children should not study the parts of the human body, and how to keep them in their natural and healthy action. We need not be frightened at the learned names—anatomy, physiology and hygiene. We craze the brains of the young over the anatomy of language, under the name of spelling; and the physiology thereof, called grammar; and the hygiene of it, styled rhetoric, and sometimes carry them into the gymnastics of language known as logic, treating them all the while much as if they were disembodied spirits. Yet any child might learn the parts of the body more easily than the multiplication table, and the laws of health are certainly as easily understood as the laws of language. What knowledge is of most use? is a question that demands answer now as never before. We can not learn everything; then what is it best to learn?

Nothing conduces more to the efficient and happy action of all our mental and moral powers than a healthy body. No amount of faith or prayer can subdue a headache or make a dyspeptic happy. Christ redeemed the body as well as the soul, and physical healings accompanied and illustrated almost every spiritual cure. The laws of the body are as divine as those of the soul, and are certainly as easily understood.

A prime question in education, then, is how the bodily machine may be made most fittingly to co-operate with the soul. Who is to look after the health of the body, if not its owner? The engineer ought to understand his engine and know how to repair it in an emergency. What a soul is to accomplish in this world depends largely upon the quality and condition of the bodily instrument with which it must work. There can be no virtue in neglecting the body. Nothing is of greater earthly importance to a man than that his mind shall be furnished with the best machinery for doing its life-work.

We urge, then, that children be taught from the outset that it is a personal duty to take care of their bodies, and that they be trained from infancy to live by the best rules of health that the wisdom of age can impart. Thousands have gone prematurely blind, or groped with dim sight at mid-day, because they were not taught in childhood how to preserve their eyes. Sound teeth are an invaluable possession, yet thousands suffer in appearance and in health from loss or aches of teeth, simply because they were not trained in childhood to prize and preserve these pearls of great price. How many go through the world afflicted and afflicting others with all the horrors of dyspepsia, only for lack of knowing the functions of the stomach and the laws of digestion. Bushels of medicine have been taken for ailments of the liver, when lacking or unused teeth and an abused stomach were the cause of all the trouble. The power of hearing, too, has been boxed out of many a child's head by parents who never learned at school the sacred delicacy of the human ear. God has tenderly hung the hammer, the anvil and the stirrup beneath the tympanum that closes the small tube of the ear; but a wrathful blow has smashed the divine arrangement, and dimmed the face of the dull hearer forever. Behold the ravages of that insidious disease known as consumption, which is said to kill more of our race than wars and all other causes of destruction together; and remember that there is no hope of staying its personal or hereditary progress, except in teaching men from early life how to use and strengthen their lungs. Yes, children need to be taught even how to breathe.

You have "taken cold," literally. Life raises a feverish protest against the chill that has settled upon the "warm precincts of the soul." You sneeze and wheeze and breathe laboriously for days or weeks—all for lack of knowing that heat properly applied at the outset would have driven that cold away in a few hours, and have saved you from much suffering—perhaps, from permanent disease.

Pecuniarily, the world would be the gainer of millions by adopting these suggestions. Everyone ought to be, in a large measure, his own physician. It is far more desirable to know how to prevent disease than how to cure it. It is very well to have a kind and skillful physician when we are sick; it is much better not to grow sick at all. All our schools, and especially the primary, ought to teach, with emphasis, the laws of health.

W. L. C. H.

A Methodist Primary School.

In my former article attention was called to the fact that we had no educational policy, as a church, and that in such desultory efforts as are put forth the primary school is ignored. We make no provision for the education of our children of tender age, save as in connection, here and there, with the high school and college. The more I ponder the subject, the more am I impressed with the thought that, as a church, we are derelict, and are committing a grievous blunder at this point—in giving up child-mind to be taught and educated by the State in the public schools. Such dereliction and blunder on the part of the church, of Methodists, and of Christian parents, is passing strange, and fraught with ill consequences, of which I have not time nor space adequately to speak.

In the present paper I purpose to inquire if aught can be done to remedy the defects of our educational system—a system which Bro. B. F. White, in the last number of the ADVOCATE, rightly characterizes as "the want of system." Can we provide for the education of our children of tender age by schools under the control of the Methodist Church and taught by our teachers? Or shall we continue our present apathy and inaction and leave the whole responsibility to the State and the public schools? It is time the church should wake up and move out along this line. Let us adopt some connectional policy which shall systematize our educational work, and concentrate the energy and resources of the church. Let our plans look to the establishment of a Methodist primary school in every pastoral charge, to be under the care and direction of the Quarterly Conference. There would, then, be more of pertinency in Ques. 13: "What is doing for the cause of education?"

Of the primary schools, Bro. White says—and I heartily endorse him—"The church needs these fountains in every society of every charge, as feeders to the district high school. Every district should have its high school, as a feeder to the college, and the college should feed the university."

As in regard to the Sunday-school, so, also, let it be required in regard to the primary school. Wherever but a few children can be got together, let them be organized into a school. Our female colleges are sending out, annually, a large number of graduates. The Methodist primary school, as contemplated in this plan, would furnish profitable and useful work for these educated young ladies, many of whom, for the want of suitable employment, are now compelled to remain inactive, and to lament an aimless life. Even a small school, paying ten or fifteen dollars per month, would be preferable to no employment.

Let no one say that some such system of connectional schools as we have suggested is utopian or impracticable. The subject is worthy of sober consideration and honest effort; and an effort with even partial success would be vastly better than our present supineness and inaction.

Will the members of our Board of Education give attention to the subject, think upon it, and at the approaching Conference session turn on all the light?

T. C. WIER.

Those Farewell Songs.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

In a late issue of the California Christian Advocate, in a notice of the departure of the "City of Peking," with our devoted band of missionaries and others on board, Dr. Crary, the editor, has this to say:

Last Wednesday a large number of missionaries sailed on the "City of Peking"—some for Corea, some for Japan, and others for China. It was an impressive scene. Most of them were young, some gray-haired—all ready to do or suffer for his sake. We overheard one gentleman say he thought the whole Methodist Church was there to bid them God-speed; and we noticed that the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches were also on hand. There were warm greetings and silent partings. When the gong sounded and the crowd passed down on deck, Rev. F. Werth began to sing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." At once those on board and those on shore united their voices in a mighty anthem of praise "unto him that loved us." One song followed another—"The Sweet By-and-By," "Shall we gather at the river," "My country, 'tis of thee," "What a friend we have in Jesus"—until the boat left her mooring, and passed out into the bay to the music of that old, yet ever new, song: "Jesus, lover of my soul."

It is their privilege to go into the forefront of the battle; it is both theirs and ours to be "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

In our own ADVOCATE, of last week, we have a refrain of those songs, and the effect of their "soul-feeding influence," in the note from Miss Bettie Hughes, written after the last echo of the song may have fallen on her ears: and that might have been:

With the shadow of thy wing."

The Jewish Times, of the same city, notices the departure of the missionaries with these sarcastic words: "Off to convert the heathens, eh? Why not remain at home and convert some of the Caucasian heathens who so abound in the United States? * * * Truly the world is full of hypocricy and humbug." Whereupon Dr. Crary replies in this vein: "If the Jewish Times, which copied our note of the missionaries departure, had noticed the numerous appointments we have lately published, all in our home field, it would not so readily condemn our people. 'The field is the world.' We are trying to convert the heathen at home, but, in the case of the Times and others, with indifferent success." Sorry are we that so many heathen surround our pathway at home, and we hope and pray that all of them may, by some means, be gathered into the blessed fold. That there is a field at home none deny; and all is being done that can be done with the forces at command, yet this never-ending refrain has lost all its symphony by going through so many mouths. As a solo, it sounded very well when it first fell upon the ear and had some originality to commend it, but, as a chorus, it is non-applausibum.

A gentleman, who left his whole fortune to the foreign mission cause, was asked his reason for so doing. He replied that "everyone in this country had the same opportunity to become a Christian he had, and if they were not Christians, it was their fault; so he would send the gospel to the heathen abroad."

Lost and unimproved opportunities may be the theme of the farewell songs of some, while the ever-reviving and soul-strengthening songs of our Zion will go on reverberating around the globe with marvelous power, while the noble workers in the Lord's vineyard are continually "bringing in the sheaves."

Notes.

The Evangelist mentions the circumstance that a man in New Jersey started two letters around the world in opposite directions, and that they both passed through Macao, China, the same day, and arrived the same day in New York, having made the entire trip in eighty-six days. So that it is just as far around the world, if you go east as if you go west, and the east is just as far from west as the west is from the east; and if you go west, you will come from the east, and if you go east, you will come from the west, and it will take you eighty-six days to find out that there is really no east that is not west, and no west that is not east.

The preachers who don't "draw," after whom the crowds do not run, may find a crumb of comfort in this, from the pen of Bro. Lafferty; and we acknowledge that to us "it is very full of comfort."

Dr. Lovick Pierce, in his prime, preached on Sunday nights in a certain city to a handful for a year. Men elected to the bishopric have been known to command meagre congregations. No man could challenge the superiority of their sermons.

The sermons that rank the highest in merit do not always "draw." Men struggled for standing-room to hear Maulit. His rhetoric in print is rhythmic fustian. Rainbows, the ripenings of clouds, catch all eyes. The downpour of distilled waters out of heaven that refresh the air, mellow the earth, move the mill, is shunned as monotonous and mean.

The Christian Index says:

Yes, after all, the best way to put down modern skepticism and every other ism, ancient and modern, is to preach the gospel. The best way to put down vice of all kinds is to preach the gospel. And the best way to defend the gospel is to preach it.

To which we may be permitted to add: The best way to preach the gospel, is to learn what it is, and then speak it out bravely from the pulpit and embody its principles in the daily living. Our Lord said, "The works that I do bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me, and the words that I speak, they are spirit and they are life." True preaching means gospel works, as well as gospel words.

There was quite a spirited discussion in the Episcopal Congress, at Louisville, on the subject of the "History of Episcopal and Apostolic Succession." The D. D.'s arrayed themselves on both sides of the question and fought valiantly for victory; but the dispatches fail to tell us upon which side victory declared itself. The reality of "apostolic succession," in its tactual sense, is a most important thing to one wing of the Episcopal Church, and if it is shown to be a mere figment, then that wing loses all its grace. For the Methodists, this whole question was settled satisfactorily by a little book, called "Powell on Succession," years ago. It seems strange that our Episcopal friends should endeavor to thrust this matter upon other denominations, when they are themselves, by no means, agreed upon it.

The interpreters of prophecy will not "down," though every one of their predictions flatly fail. They have a persistence that is amazing. Now comes Mr. Baxter, of the Church of England, and puts forth this.

England soon is to be separated legislatively from Ireland, India and her colonies. Imelen Bonaparte is to become King of Syria, and, later on, Emperor of France. Belgium and the Rhine provinces are to be annexed to France. In 1895, 144,000 Christians are to ascend from earth to heaven, and the millennium is to commence on April 11, 1901.

We think we read one of this man's books years ago, and our Civil War smashed everything and every prediction of that book into such minute particles that they could never be gotten together again. So we don't put much faith in this last utterance.

The class of the third year will meet the committee in the Methodist Church, at Winona, at nine A. M., November 21.

The Ingathering.

The news from the churches in every direction is most cheering and encouraging. Multitudes of sinners have been reached by the Word and felt its power and, responding to the invitations of the gospel, have received the peace that passeth understanding. In every assembly, where the Word has been boldly preached, the power of the Lord has manifested itself in healing the people. And this is so, not only in our own church, but all the church papers of every denomination abound in notices of revival meetings. Every corps of the Lord's army is marching on from conquering to conquer. To us this is an evidence that the true Word is being preached, for nothing but the gospel ever accomplishes the salvation of souls. It is evidence that the Divine Spirit is working with the preached Word, for conviction and regeneration are effected only by the combination of the Word and Spirit. In all this we do rejoice and will rejoice.

But what about the future of these multitudes who have so lately emerged from darkness into light? Entrance upon the Christian life transforms one into a special target for the devil's arrows. He, who had the impudence and impertinence to tempt the Lord Jesus, will not be backward in trying his followers to the utmost. The only place of safety is where our Lord himself stood—under the shelter of the written Word. Let the pastors continue to "preach the Word" to their converts. The same gospel that was powerful in the hands of the Spirit to convict and convert, in the hands of the same Spirit is alike powerful to build up and sanctify. "Sanctify them through thy truth," was the prayer of the Savior, and the only sanctifying truth is the gospel, in the written Word. Let no man, however wise or learned or original he may be, imagine that he can invent truth which will be food for the souls under his care. God has lodged all saving truth in his Word, and it is the pastor's duty and high privilege to discover it and bring it out and tell it to his people, that they may be nourished and grow strong in faith and practice.

We simply say to the pastors who have had revivals: Brethren, stick to the written Word if you would have your people grow in grace and knowledge.

A Note of Cheer.

We make no apology for publishing the following note. It has cheered the editor's heart no little. It is really to us a "word fitly spoken," and we are encouraged to do and suffer on as God gives grace for each.

MR. EDITOR: Thanks for the rich feast in the ADVOCATE just read. Your editorial is golden. I fear it comes from an experience of fire; but the best things come that way. May the Master show you more and more his presence. "Science and Religion," on second page, is par excellence, and so is "English Bible As a Text-Book."

Never was there a time when plain preaching and teaching, on the matters of fact of the gospel of Christ and work of the church, was more needed than now. The battle is upon us. We must go in to win; and shouts of victory are heard all along.

Personals.

We had a pleasant call last week from Sister Decan, one of the oldest members of our church in this city. She joined the church here in 1825, under the ministry of Rev. B. M. Drake, and has been a member here ever since. She is in the enjoyment of good health, and is as much interested in the prosperity of Zion as ever.

The Free Masons of Missouri are turning out the liquor dealers, the Knights of Labor want to take them in; and now it is pertinent to ask, What will the church do with her's?

"Galloway College" is the name given to a new male college to be built in Vinita, I. T.

Dr. Winfield, in an enumeration of the articles saved out of the fire, mentions the "empty safe and the waste-basket." That is the "cutest" reminder to delinquents and the fairest warning to contributors we have yet seen.

One of the best revivals that we hear spoken of in these days is the "revival of the amen corner." What a power it used to be in helping the preacher! Glad to hear of its revival!

Rev. M. B. Chapman's book of travels will be "The Lands of the Orient," and will be issued by our House at Nashville about December 20. Price, $1 50.

Our young friend, Rev. F. S. Parker, whom we so reluctantly parted with, has been appointed by Bishop Hargrove to Santa Ana, Los Angeles Conference.

Rev. C. B. Carter, the editor's son, has been in charge of Opelousas and Washington charges since the middle of August.

From a reliable source we learn that Dr. Young J. Allen, our missionary to China, will return home soon. His health has been feeble for some time, and he comes for rest and recuperation.

Bishop Galloway gave us a short call last Saturday. He is looking a little, just a little, wearied. He gives good reports about our church work in those parts of the West where he has visited, and the outlook is hopeful for future progress.

Rev. Sam Small closed his week's service at Moreau Street, last Sunday night. The interest increased to the last. The congregations enlarged at every service. There is but one opinion in regard to the preaching, and that is, it was of a very high order. The mid-day meetings at Carondelet were well attended, and the preaching was well aimed and did good. A 3 P. M., Sunday, Mr. Small made a temperance address, in Washington Artillery Hall, to a vast assembly, and it was one of the finest. Altogether the work done was good, and the results, no doubt, will abide. The meeting at Moreau Street continues under the lead of Bro. Johnston, of Mississippi.

Dr. C. G. Andrews, of Jackson, Miss., graced our office with his presence last Monday. His work is represented in good and growing condition, and he has one of the handsomest churches in the connection.

Items of Interest.

The New York Evening World says that the elevated railroads are utterly incapable of meeting the public want.

An English statesman says that among bachelors there are 30 criminals to the 1000, while among married men the ratio is 18.

The Lord Mayor of London, recently elected, is a Roman Catholic, the first of that faith elevated to the office since the days of Henry VIII.

The drinking shops in Paris have increased since 1880 from 14,000 to 31,000.

In eighteen years the population of Scotland has increased eighteen per cent., while the attendance upon the universities has increased in the same period ninety per cent.

The New York World says its circulation in four years has grown from 15,000 copies per day to 300,000 per day.

A complete set of surgical instruments, many of them similar to those used at present was dug up not long since at Pompeii!

A three-line advertisement in a New York Sunday paper elicited 793 answers in one week!

Prof. Ramsay says, "The true Latin scholar is precisely the man who will most avoid Latin in writing English."

Gen. Butler agrees to undertake the case of the condemned anarchists for a retainer of $1,500, and $250 per day!

In Missouri there is an Anti-Horse Thief Association, which meets yearly in secret session.

About 300 delegates attended the recent Waterways Convention at Memphis. There were representatives from eleven States.

The Supreme Court of the United States had on its docket, when it reassembled recently, 1,113 cases.

Bible Study.

We are still "harping" on this subject, and suppose that some of our readers have already set us down as a "crank." So be it. We once heard a young preacher say, "Lorenzo Dow was crazy." And an old layman replied, "Would to God more of us had his craziness!" We think it may not be a very bad thing to be "cranky" in a good direction. We believe the book of God, because of its origin, to be a good text-book for church schools. On this point the Illustrated Christian Weekly has this:

The education needed in our country to-day is a Christian education. The Bible, even properly studied, might not lead every student to become a Christian. But the Bible, properly studied, would vindicate itself against the ribald criticism which often arises from pure ignorance of its contents. If our educated men are instructed in the Bible, they will appreciate its character, and their influence will be in the direction of leading others to do the same, even when they do not personally accept the truths which the Bible teaches. Nor would it be improbable that the Bible truths, seen in their relations and symmetrical consistency, would impress the heart and mould the life as well as awaken the respect of the intellect.

But to be of the most value this instruction ought to be of a high order. Young men in their college days are not particularly impressible. Good Bible-class teaching, however excellent in its place, will hardly do for them. They need something of a higher kind, both from the dignity of the subject and for the impression that ought to be made upon them. Prof. Harper's suggestion is eminently just: "That this course of study be placed in the hands of men who can teach, and that it be made to have equal dignity and rank with other courses of college study."

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

THE BIBLICAL ILLUSTRATOR; OR, ANECDOTES, SIMILES, EMBLEMS, ILLUSTRATIONS, EXPOSITORY, SCIENTIFIC, GEOGRAPHICAL, HISTORICAL AND HOMILETIC. Gathered from a wide range of home and foreign literature on the Verses of the Bible. By Rev. Joseph S. Exell, M. A., St. Matthew. A. D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. Sent by publishers, postpaid, on receipt of price ($2).

This is a portly volume of nearly 700 pages of comments on the Gospel of St. Matthew, gathered apparently from every available and conceivable source. That one man should be able to collect so much from so many sources is proof of most wonderful diligence on his part. That so much of this should be apposite and appropriate to explain this gospel is proof that the author is no novice in this kind of work. And such is the fact, for Mr. Exell is joint editor with Canon Spence, of The Pulpit Commentary, and sole editor of The Homiletical Quarterly, and has published, independently, "Practical Readings in the Book of Jonah," and "Homiletical Commentary on the Book of Exodus." The Biblical Illustrator is a valuable addition to a preacher's library.

PERIODICALS.

—The Magazine of Art, for November, finishes another volume of this handsome monthly. The promises made when the volume began have all been fulfilled. The forthcoming volume promises to be of more than usual merit and beauty. The contents of the present number, both as to reading matter and pictures, are all that a refined taste can desire. Cassell & Co., New York. Price, $3 50.

—The Homiletic Magazine, for October, has an able corps of writers, and preachers and others will find many things of interest and profit. For theological articles, practical homilletics, and suggestive expositions, this periodical is one of the best. E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, New York. Price, thirty cents.

—The Musical Herald keeps its readers posted about musical matters and musical people, and is paying attention to church music and choirs. It is a good monthly for tuneful folks. Franklin Square, Boston. Price, ten cents.

—The Pansy, for October, is rich in interest and instruction for the little folks. It is edited by "Pansy"—Mrs. G. R. Alden—and published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Price, ten cents a number; $1 a year.

—The Quiver, November, has its usual quota of good reading. The contributors to this magazine are among the foremost men and women of England. For Sunday reading it hardly has a superior. Published by Cassell & Co., New York. Price, $1 50 per year.

The Coronet Corset Co.,

of Jackson, Mich., are offering lucrative employment to ladies, and attention is called to their advertisement in another part of this issue. Selling this class of goods belongs especially to the ladies, and those desiring an agency will do well to write them.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

A certain judge, having been called on at a public dinner for a song, replied that it was not in his power to gratify the company. A wag, who was present, observed he was much surprised at the refusal, as it was notorious that numbers had been transported by his voice.

In this number of the ADVOCATE will be seen the card of Mrs. N. Jenkins, who has taken charge of the old Lally Hotel, corner Camp and Poydras. Our patrons will find here clean and comfortable quarters at very reasonable rates.

"Just bought this donkey, Jones. What do you think of my purchase?" "Most remarkable case of self-possession I ever knew."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

In going east, ask for tickets over the Kennesaw Route, which, for beautiful scenery, is unsurpassed.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly extinguished, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.
Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.
Yours, &c. J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

OCTOBER.

BY FRANK DEMISTER SHERMAN.

October is the month that seems
All woven with midsummer dreams;
She brings for us the golden days
That fill the air with smoky haze,
She brings for us the lisping breeze,
And wakes the gossips in the trees,
Who whisper near the vacant nest
Forsaken by its feathered guest.
Now half the birds forget to sing,
And half of them have taken wing,
Before their pathway shall be lost
Beneath the gossamer of frost;
Now one by one the gay leaves fly
Zigzag across the yellow sky;
They rustle here and flutter there,
Until the bough hangs chill and bare.
What joy for us—what happiness
Shall cheer the day, the night shall bless?
'Tis Hallow-e'en, the very last
Shall keep for us remembrance fast,
When every child shall duck the head
To find the precious pippin red!

—St. Nicholas.

MR. EDITOR: As I was appointed by the superintendent of our Sunday-school to write a letter to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, I will do the best I can. I do not take the ADVOCATE, but I would like to very much. We have a very interesting Sunday-school in Ruston. There is over one hundred members. Our superintendent's name is Mr. W. W. Guthrie. We like him very much. We have also a very good pastor. His name is Rev. J. A. Parker. We all like him very much. We like his wife, Mrs. Parker, also, because she is so good and kind to us. I have such a good teacher. Her name is Mrs. A. A. Kidd. We all like her so much. We have a Juvenile Missionary Society here. We organized it in July, I believe, with only thirty-six members, and now we have over one hundred. Don't you think we are improving very fast? I go every Sunday. I also go to church and Sunday-school every Sunday. I have united myself with the Methodist Church. I hope you will pray for me. Your true friend,

IRENE M'CRORY.

RUSTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to publish my letter last year, I thought, perhaps, you might confer the same favor again. I am six years old and want a letter all to myself this time. We are so thankful to have our dear preachers again this year, Bros. Blocker and Johns. I love them very much. Bro. Blocker has only one year more to stay with us. I hope the good Bishop will send him back next year. I think about Christmas and Santa Claus already, and love him for his presents; but I have a good friend I love much better: Mrs. Ticia Doyle. She gives me such nice presents all the year, and Santa Claus only once a year. Can any of the little cousins blame me. With much love to the little cousins and kind wishes to the editor, I will close.

TICIA D. GREENE.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I have no mamma. I live with my dear kind uncle and aunt. They take your valuable paper. I am very fond of reading the children's letters. Thought I, too, would make an attempt, and hope you will not ignore my first effort. I attend Sabbath-school and church at Davis Chapel. Our beloved pastor's name is Rev. George Anders. We will have our quarterly meeting the second Sunday in November. I want to be christened at that time. Your little friend,

LOLA M'DOWELL.

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since I have written to your dear old paper, I will again address you. I write this time to ask how many of the little cousins are willing to give us something for our church at Valley. We are working to get up a church here, and I know all of the dear little cousins will help us. Well, I must close this time, wishing the dear old ADVOCATE and its editor much success. Your little friend,

AMANDA HOLLINGSWORTH.

The Sunshine Overhead.

"What are the clouds in my little girl's sky to-day?" asked Aunt Sue, coming up behind her, and stroking the curly head.

"I know I'm very foolish, Aunt Sue," sobbed Alice; "but I never saw any peaches growing in my life before I came here, and I've been watching them all summer. There were only six on the tree, and grandpa said I might have half of them when they were ripe. I thought it would be such fun to pick them all myself; and I was going to have a dolls' tea-party this afternoon, and had asked some of the girls to come."

"Well, and what is there in all this to cry about?"

"Why, grandpa forgot he promised me half, and has gone and given them all to Cousin Maude. I met her just as I was coming in, and she had a big basketful, and was eating one of the peaches; and I heard her tell some one she got them in grandpa's orchard. I was so disappointed I just had to sit right down and cry. I wouldn't care so much, only Cousin Maude gets all the good things."

"Well, and what is Alice going to do about it—sit here and cry under her little cloud, or look up and see if she can't see some sunshine somewhere? How would some of those big rosy apples do for the tea-party?"

"They would be nice, wouldn't they?" And Alice dried her eyes. "And I could have lots of them."

"And what do you think Maude's little sick sister will say when she sees the basket of peaches?"

"Oh, she'll be delighted! I'm glad to have Louise have some, she has so little to make her happy. I didn't think of that."

"Now, the sun is beginning to come out. Did you know, my dear, that young people often hide their faces in the shadows, and think it is raining, when there's plenty of sunshine overhead? Just look up and see."

Alice raised her eyes involuntarily, and there, just over her head, hung three great glorious peaches.

"Why, Aunt Sue!" she cried, "how did they get there?"

"They have been there all the time, my dear, only you wouldn't look up to see them. Grandpa told Maude to leave half of them for you; and her basket was filled with apples, not peaches. I didn't tell you before, because I wanted you to learn a little lesson. You'll remember it some time, when everything seems to be dark—that there may be some golden blessings hanging, like the three peaches, just over your head. But you never will see them until you look up into the sunshine."—Sunday-School Times.

Colic.

Persons and especially children, are subject to this agonizing complaint, which often comes on suddenly in the night and without any previous warning. Simmons Liver Regulator should always be at hand. A single dose will generally allay the pain. It never fails in giving relief. It is harmless, and can be given with safety to a child of the tenderest age.

Brother and Sister.

Young men seldom realize how happy they can make their sisters by small acts of courtesy. How many brothers offer to their sisters the little attentions which they instinctively give to other girls or women? Nay, how many are there who do not feel justified in venting upon their sisters the irritated feelings which they have felt obliged to conceal in their intercourse with the world? A brother who would not wrong his sister of the very least of her rights will yet inflict upon her the grave and almost irreparable wrong of rudeness—a wrong as irreparable as it is dastardly. For rudeness hurts—hurts grievously and lastingly; and what man is worthy of the name who hurts a woman? Brothers do not realize how far a want of courteous conduct at home may go to wreck their future sister's lives. They wonder at the unaccountable liking of girls for men whom the brothers know to be unworthy—men whose very attentions they feel to be almost an insult to a woman's good sense. Do they not see that it is the courtesy of these men—their "company manners," if you please—which makes them agreeable to women? Women so seldom have a high standard of manhood! They so seldom see the best of men they know the best.—How should they not be deceived, and mistake that outside veneer of courtesy which makes pleasant the present hour for that inward truth of character which shall be a benediction to all their future lives? Brothers, if you would have your sisters love worthily, let them at least be accustomed to gentle manners, that when they see them in strangers they may not be so dazzled as to become incapable of distinguishing a true man from a sham.

Household.

COURTESY AT HOME.—If there is any spot where the amenities of life should be freely exchanged, it is at home. Courtesy should be the rule, not the exception. It prevents jarring, it dissipates moodiness, it heals wounds, it ennobles human nature. It is wonderful in its subduing influences. It is contagious. It extends to the entire household. The boys, with inward pride over their father's courteous demeanor, will be chivalrous and helpful to their younger sisters. The girls will imitate their mother in gentleness and patience even when big brothers are noisy and heedless. Even the domestics will show their appreciation.

It seems strange that a man will speak more rudely to his wife than to any other lady; or that a brother will be harsh to his sister, while to her lady friend he is everything respectful—perfect gentlemen in society, but boors within their own homes. It is a sad commentary to say that some, my many, mothers, wives and sisters are indebted for most of the politeness shown them to those who are not members of the household.

Family ties are designed to make us sociable. We are not gregarious. We were not made to live alone. We must have a heap of embers to have a glowing fire; if we scatter them they will flicker and die. In the same way, if we want to live a healthy and vigorous life, we must have a group of lives to afford comfort, encouragement and support. Courtesy is mighty in its influence to glorify the home and to benefit the world; yet fathers and mothers are careless and indifferent, and allow day after day of opportunities to go by. Let us remember that life is made up of moments, and that a succession of well-spent moments make up a well-spent life.

A RECEIPT FOR DAILY LIVING.—When I took up my Bible this morning, girls, to read my chapter, I turned to the fourth chapter of First Peter, and in the eleventh verse found this:

"Let him do it as of the ability which God giveth." I think we often make a point of leaving certain things for others to do because we can not do them as well, perhaps, and for excuse say, "Oh, well, I never could do so and so." It may be perhaps with regard to conversation, and entertaining, or perhaps when asked to play or read. This not only comes under the head of duty, but of good manners or Christian courtesy. Or, taking some of the every-day duties, the caring for our rooms, the sweeping and dusting, even dressing, or our studies, those perhaps that we are not as fond of. So then, perhaps some of you would like to take my text, which it seems to me ought to go with us through life. "Do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ." We do not any of us pretend to do all things equally well, but that word ability has come home to me more forcibly to-day as a command. This will make some of our lives seem very much fuller, and it ought to be the mainspring working in each one of us, I am sure, and if some think that working on this plan they could never find time for all their duties, only let them try, and God will provide not only time for the duties, but make the pleasures all the sweeter.—K. E. S., in Christian at Work.

APPLEWHITE—Mrs. MARTHA ADALINE APPLEWHITE, daughter of Dr. E. R. and Eliza Applewhite and wife of Steven Applewhite, was born June 20, 1858. She was brought up, educated, married, joined the church, professed religion and lived in this section of Mississippi, and died August 31, 1887. She was respected by all who knew her, and loved by all her relations and friends. Sister Applewhite was a Christian woman amidst life's duties, toils, amenities and afflictions, and a triumphant Christian upon the bed of suffering and death. Her remains were laid in their silent resting-place, at Bethel, near Caseyville, Miss., on the first day of September, in the midst of a large congregation of friends and relatives, to await the voice of the resurrection trump of God to awake the sleeping dead. Her free and happy spirit has ascended to her Lord and entered upon the fruition "of the inheritance of the saints in light," and to "watch and wait" "at the beautiful gate" for the coming of the loved and left.

W. B. HINES.

SMITH—WILLIS SMITH was born in Alabama, June 4, 1841, and died in Madison county, Texas, December 14, 1886. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Oak Ridge Camp Ground, Jackson parish, La., October, 1880. His conversion was clear and satisfactory and led to a consistent Christian life. He died willingly; and, without any fear of death, said to his weeping loved ones: "Don't grieve for me. I will be so much better off in heaven than I am here on earth." He spoke of seeing his dear mother and a little babe, who preceded him to the heavenly world, as being present to accompany him home. Bro. Smith was twice married; the last time to Miss Annie E. Jones, of Jackson parish, La., who, with their two children and a large circle of relatives mourn his decease. Bro. Smith was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving father and a true friend. He rests in heaven.

J. L. WRIGHT.

GOLDEN—Mrs. MATILDA GOLDEN, (nee Collier), was born July 29, 1816, and died at Good Hope, Leake county, Miss., August 20, 1887. She was married to Mr. T. R. Golden in 1844. She was a consistent Christian from the time she united with the church to the close of life. Her hearing was difficult for many years past, and the ADVOCATE and Bible were an unusual comfort to her. She was truly a mother in our Israel. A husband and seven living children, many relatives and friends mourn her death.

C. M'DONALD.

COATS—Little RUTH REBECCA COATS was born in Livingston parish, La., February 12, 1882, and died in East Baton Rouge parish, La., September 12, 1887. The great and good God, who gave the little jewel, has taken it back. She was one of the most thoughtful and intelligent children I ever knew. There is another angel now before the throne to sing the everlasting praises of God; another golden crown, another sweet-sounding harp in heaven.

GOZA—The earthly home of our dear brother, B. F. Goza, has been made sad for time by the death of his precious wife, EMMA M. GOZA (nee Bufken), which occurred on September 7, 1887, after an illness of six days. Sister Goza was born December 12, 1848; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a girl; was married to B. F. Goza, January 21, 1869, and was converted at the family altar at home in 1876, since which time she has been faithful and true to her Christian obligations. She leaves a large family of children, eight in number—from the little babe three weeks old to the married daughter. While she leaves these she has gone to join the two angel-children that had preceded her to the glory-land. Within a year two of her brothers have gone on and joined the heavenly host. Oh, what a meeting at the beautiful gate! Two nights before her death, at the family altar, she joined us audibly in one of the most earnest prayers we have ever heard. She said she did not feel like she was going to die, but was confident that if the good Lord wanted her, he would give dying grace when it was necessary. No more does she pray for her loved ones on earth, but forever does she praise with her loved ones in heaven. May God comfort her heart-broken parents, husband and children, and sustain them by his grace and help them to meet her in heaven! "Earth has no sorrow that God can not cure." A faithful Christian, a true wife, an affectionate mother and a devoted friend has gone. Farewell; we will meet again.

A SORROWING FRIEND.

APPLEWHITE—Died, August 25, LULA MAY, infant daughter of J. W. and S. C. Applewhite, aged two years and ten days. Bright as the morning and pure as the dews thereof, this sweet flower was taken from earth and transplanted in God's garden. Her pattering footsteps fall no more in her earthly home, yet her words and tender form linger to hallow her memory through every hour. She is gone to bask in the radiant sunshine of God's presence forever—gone, but living and beautiful in the glory-land.

A SYMPATHIZER.

The Heroism of Women.

The number is legion who are chronic invalids, and are extremely puzzled to tell what ails them. They are miserable, extremely miserable. Especially may this be said of a very large class of females. They have a heavy, weighty feeling as if being dragged to the earth; a misery in their back; an all-gone feeling. Scarcely able to put one foot before another, and yet seeing the work must be done, they go on, a treadmill life from early morn till late at night, keeping about from the mere force of will. Arising in the morning but little refreshed by the few hours of broken sleep; no one but themselves knowing that incessant aches and pains had robbed them of that much needed rest.

CULPEPER, VA., May 31, 1886.

"DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—I wrote you my symptoms one year ago last February, when I was taking the Compound Oxygen, then given me by a friend, but I was so very weak and nervous at that time I doubt if it was sufficiently legible.

"My doctor treated me for catarrhal consumption, and gave me all kinds of medicines for suppression, but they only seemed to increase my pain. At last he concluded there was some organic derangement, and gave me surgical treatment, which instead of relieving me, increased my agony, producing inflammation that reached the brain, making me utterly sleepless and delirious for months.

"One day a friend came to see me who had a part of a Home Treatment of Compound Oxygen at her house, and persuaded me to try it. She sent it to me, and I commenced using it, but I must say with very little faith. After using it about a week my nose bled very profusely, and I felt great relief from the brain pressure that had kept me crazed for months. I began to sleep. My mind came back to me, though my doctor had said if I ever got better, or lived, I would never recover my mind. He seemed surprised that I had. He recommended surgical treatment, but I had suffered so much by that from him I would not trust it again. This was about a year ago, and I was an invalid until a month or so since, when I commenced to drag around a little, becoming so tired I could not rest. But since using Compound Oxygen I can rest and walk about, and the cold I had when the Compound Oxygen arrived soon disappeared. I am stronger and better than for years. Have resumed my old Sunday-school class, and played on the organ last Sunday."

There are very many people interested in the treatment which has done so much for this lady in Virginia. If you wish fuller information send to Drs. Starkey and Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., for their treatise, which is sent free.

There is nothing which contributes more to the sweetness of life than friendship; there is nothing which disturbs our repose more than friends, if we have not the discernment to choose them well.

The sea occupies three-fifths of the surface of the earth. At the depth of about 3,500 feet waves are not felt. The temperature is the same, varying only a trifle from the ice of the poles to the burning sun of the equator. A mile down the water has a pressure of over a ton to the square inch. If a box six feet deep were filled with sea water and allowed to evaporate under the sun, there would be two inches of salt left on the bottom. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of pure salt 230 feet thick on the bed of the Atlantic. The water is cooler at the bottom than at the surface. In the many bays on the coast of Norway, the water often freezes at the bottom before it does above.

Waves are very deceptive. To look at them in a storm, one would think the water traveled. The water stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. Sometimes in storms these waves are forty feet high, and travel fifty miles an hour—more than twice as fast as the swiftest steamer. The distance from valley to valley is generally fifteen times the height; hence a wave five feet high will extend over seventy-five feet of water. The force of the sea dashing on Bell Rock is said to be seventeen tons for each square yard. Evaporation is a wonderful power in drawing the water from the sea. Every year a layer of the entire sea fourteen feet thick is taken up in the clouds. The winds bear their burden to the land, and water comes down in rain upon the fields, to flow back at last through rivers. The depth of the sea presents an interesting problem. If the Atlantic were lowered 6,564 feet, the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. If lowered a little more than three miles, say 19,680 feet, there would be a road of dry land from Newfoundland to Ireland. This is the plane on which the great Atlantic cables were laid. The Mediterranean is comparatively shallow. A drying up of 660 feet would leave three different seas, and Africa would be joined to Italy. The British Channel is more like a pond, which accounts for its choppy waves.

It has been difficult to get correct soundings of the Atlantic. A midshipman of the navy overcame the difficulty, and a shot weighing thirty pounds carries down the line. A hole is bored through the sinker, through which a rod of iron is passed, moving easily back and forth. In the end of the bar a cup is dug out, and the inside is coated with lard. The bar is made fast to the line, and a sling holds the shot on. When the bar, which extends below the ball, touches the earth, the sling unhooks, and the shot slides off. The lard in the end of the bar holds some of the sand or whatever may be on the bottom, and a drop shuts off the cup to keep the water from washing the sand out. When the ground is reached, a shock is felt as if an electric current had passed through the line.—Electrical Review.

By its mild, soothing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of nasal catarrh, also "cold in the head," coryza, and catarrhal headaches. 50 cents, by druggists.

That church member who has so far fallen from his former spirituality as to affirm that he can frequent the theatre with a "good conscience," needs to recollect that a good conscience is not necessarily a pure and guiltless one. St. Paul said, "I verily thought I ought to do many things against the name of Jesus." His conscience not only did not condemn, but actually approved, actions far doing what he subsequently confessed himself to be "the chief of sinners." Hence the silent conscience of a worldly minded man is no proof that he is doing right when he sits with an ungodly crowd feasting his lower nature on the frivolities of the stage. Perhaps his conscience might give a different testimony if he would place it awhile in the light of the expressive fact, that "the friendship of the world is enmity with God * * * a friend of the world is the enemy of God!"

WHEN you get up in the morning with tongue heavily coated, a disagreeable taste in the mouth, skin hot and dry, eyes burning, head aching with a dull, heavy pain, and, in short, feeling as if you were "all broke up," you should at once take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pellets. 25 cents per vial.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Arguments have been made before the Supreme Court for a writ of error in the anarchists' case, and the case taken under advisement.

There is a water famine in two western tiers of Ohio counties, and there is much distress and sickness.

Gov. Gordon, of Georgia, has opened his campaign in support of the Democratic State ticket in Ohio.

Bills to regulate the telegraph service between the States will be introduced into the next Congress.

The President has appointed the twenty-fourth day of November as a day of thanksgiving.

Bandits and robbers are creating terror in Starr county, Texas, and the government seems powerless to protect her citizens.

The anarchists' friends are making all sorts of threats and writing letters to persons in authority in order to get up a big scare. The Supreme Court has not yet pronounced upon the case.

Up to October 26, there had been 225 cases of fever and 34 deaths at Tampa, Fla.

The New York health authorities are being severely criticised by papers all over the country for the inexcusable neglect by which passengers from the cholera-infected ship "Independente" were allowed to distribute themselves over the country.

There has been discovered a plot for the rescue of the condemned anarchists. The social democratic federation in Holland has addressed a threatening letter to President Cleveland on the subject.

The report is current that Postmaster Vilas will take Mr. Lamar's place in the Cabinet. Secretary Whitney is said to be in poor health.

The propeller "Vernon" was wrecked in a gale on Lake Michigan, and entire crew and passengers supposed to be lost.

FOREIGN.

The Home Rule Union in England has resolved to continue the holding of meetings in Ireland.

Earl Spencer, in a speech at Edinburgh, condemned the policy pursued by the government in Ireland, and predicted the return of Gladstone to power in a short time.

Gladstone, in an address at Leeds, said the government's policy in Ireland was going from bad to worse, and the length of the struggle was shortening rapidly.

A plot to assassinate Prince Ferdinand has been discovered.

A convention of the National League is to be held at Cardiff. The meeting will represent 2,000,000 of the Irish race settled in Great Britain.

The Emperor William bagged four deer and eleven boars on his late hunt.

Sir Wilfred Blunt has been convicted under the Crimes Act, and sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

Prince Ferdinand, in his address to the Sobranje, says that order, tranquility and security had been restored since his accession to the throne, and the people are now engaged in pacific labors. He has advanced 8200,000 from his private fortune to the Bulgarian treasury to hasten the completion of railways.

On account of the Caffarel scandal there is a crisis imminent in French politics, and President Grevy has threatened to resign because of the irregular proceedings against his son-in-law, M. Wilson.

It is now reported that Emperor William and the Czar will meet in Berlin.

Mgr. Persico's mission to Ireland has proved a failure, and the Pope is said to be much disappointed.

O'Brien's sentence has been affirmed by the Appellate Court, and he has been imprisoned. An unsuccessful attempt was made for his rescue.

It is said that President Grevy is preparing a Cabinet crisis in order to drown the Wilson commotion.

There is ill-will growing in Russia against Germany. The two Emperors are soon to have a meeting, but it will be entirely ceremonious.

The French Cabinet was outvoted in the Chamber, and M. Wilson's conduct is to be looked into.

President Grevy is reconciled to the proceedings, and will not resign.

Earl Lytton has been appointed to succeed Lord Lyons as British ambassador at Paris. The Queen will confer an earldom on Lord Lyons on his retirement from diplomatic life.

Consumption, Scrofula, General

Debility, Wasting Diseases of Children, Chronic Coughs and Bronchitis, can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Prominent physicians use it and testify to its great value. Please read the following: "I used Scott's Emulsion for an obstinate Cough with Hemorrhage, Loss of Appetite, Emaciation, Sleeplessness &c. All of these have now left, and I believe your Emulsion has saved a case of well-developed Consumption."—T. J. FINDLEY, M. D., Lone Star, Texas.

A Magnificent Offer.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT AT ONCE.

The American Agriculturist (English or German), for the balance of this year and all of 1888—fourteen months.

"Fences, Gates and Bridges." A most practical volume, published October 15, only work of the kind extant, elegantly bound in cloth and gold. 300 illustrations. Books on architecture abound, but this is the first work specially devoted to the subjects upon which it treats. There are chapters upon rail and other primitive fences; stone, sod, board, and barb-wire fences, hurdles, gates and fastenings, wickets and stiles, country bridges and culverts; and also a chapter on fence law. The large number of illustrations are in most cases representations of fences, gates, etc., in actual use, the utility of which is thus made clear.

Engravings of the Homes of our Farmer Presidents, 11x18, issued during 1886 and 1887, viz: Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Garfield, etc., etc., together with descriptions of same, by eminent American writers.

We will furnish all the above, postpaid, for three dollars for new subscribers, or three dollars and twenty-five cents for renewals—cash in full with order. This is the offer of the season; nothing like it has ever been known. Address NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 112 Camp street.

Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you the November number of the American Agriculturist, containing four hundred and seven editorial, contributed and descriptive articles, and two hundred and forty illustrations. Also specimen pages of "Fences, Gates and Bridges."

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

J. C. M'ALLISTER, Agent,
146 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for $2 75, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or $3 for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

A Baby Like a Gale of Wind.

Why is a newly-born baby like a gale of wind? Because it begins with a squall. Cold gales induce coughs and croup. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein will cure it.

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR., Publisher,

Dr. Taft Bros., Rochester, N. Y., offer a trial bottle of Asthmaline free; see card in this paper. Dr. Taft is a regular practitioner of 35 years' standing. The firm are entirely reliable.

Mr. Spurgeon has withdrawn from the Baptist Union, because he believes such Union is at the expense of truth.

A pastor in Cumberland has formed in his church "a good intent society," composed of poor persons who have no money to give, but yet desire to do something for the Lord Jesus. These give one hour in the week to some charitable work, or to some labor by which they earn a few pence, which is given to the service of the Lord. Each one, according to ability, does something distinctly for Jesus. These people find a blessing in so doing. Should we not each one regularly and systematically set aside a portion for our Lord and Savior, and say, "This is David's spoil"?—Exchange.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 14, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Wells, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

"THE GLORIOUS PSALMS."

Picked up by a Union soldier in a building once occupied by Confederate troops at Tullahoma, Tenn., November 7, 1863.)

Sing me the Psalms, the glorious Psalms of old.
That sounded first upon Judea's plains;
All other music lifeless seems, and cold,
Beside the melody of David's Psalms.

Sing me the Psalms that echoed from the hills,
Those favored hills where Israel's sons had birth.
Wake! wake! each harmony the soul that fills,
With rapture more allied to heaven than earth.

Sing Psalms of praise, when victory is given
O'er outward foes, or over hosts unseen.
Jehovah, JAH, still reigns in earth and heaven,
As strong to save as he hath ever been.

Sing when the earth is clad in softest green,
Join Psalms of gladness to the bird's sweet song;
Leading thy steps the quiet streams along.

Sing when all nature wraps a snowy shroud;
When ice-bound fountains hide torrents lush;
When azure skies are veiled behind the clouds;
Let wondering praises from thy psaltery gush.

Sing me the Psalms, ev'n when the burning tear
Tells of departure from the narrow way.
Oh David's song was sad when he was here;
O'erwhelmed with sin, he turned to weep and pray.

Sing, though affliction swelleth like a tide;
When deep to deep calls in thine hour of woe,
Thine anchor's safe within the Rock's cleft side—
Billows may toss, but can not overflow.

And every conflict but the last is o'er,
Bid mourners join in the triumphant hymn
That wings thy spirit to the heavenly shore.

"A New Heart and a Right Spirit."

BY REV. J. W. ELLISON.

(Ezekiel xxxvi. 25-27.)

This is what is thought to be regeneration. As the above expression refers to the mind and affections of man, and not to his constitutional nature, a faithful analysis of man's entire being will reveal the fact that the above state and experience will not measure up to man's original state in creation or generation, to which the word "regenerate" naturally refers for its meaning.

It should be remembered that words are used for their meaning. Theological terms should express neither more nor less than the principle and experience involved.

As we understand, man's original being was constitutionally spiritual or divine. By the fall this spiritual or divine feature was lost, and man became constitutionally sinful or satanic. This left him with the element of death in him, and he was dead to God, without any affection for him. Sin permeated man's entire being, as is represented by the scarlet wool, body and soul.

Regenerate must not only restore the spirituality that man possessed, but he must be sinless, without any bias to or taint of sin, "as white as snow."

As long as man's constitutional being is sinful, the spiritual or divine can not blend with man's nature; but, as it is stated in Scripture, God can put his "Spirit within" man as a distinct principle from his own nature, for this can be done without a blending or "renewal." I do not question "the new heart and right spirit" as an experience. I both know and preach it: but the question is, how to account for it.

As man's nature is sinful, thoroughly saturated with it, it can never be a natural feeling to love God; therefore, it must be spiritual, or the work of God's Spirit whom he has "put within" us.

"In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." And so it is. Man is dead or dying, and without the kinship of a Son, as was the case originally; and in bondage to sin until it can be removed from him. How, then, can he recognize God, or right or wrong, or have the liberty to do God's will? In the plan of our redemption, God, by virtue of Christ's death, has vouchsafed to "put his Spirit within" mankind, and that without respect of persons.

By this Spirit man's free moral agency is revived; and by this Spirit all that pertains to his humanity, his conscience, and his affections, are all revived. This certainly is a stupendous mystery.

"Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free." And yet sin is not removed from his being, for he is "mortal," and "weak," and "corruptible," and "natural"—dead. How, then, can he exhibit free moral agency and all other original features of his being? While it is mysterious, yet possibly it may be illustrated by a figure.

The moon is said to be nonluminous, yet we say it shines, yet only by throwing back the light from the sun: so while man is dead, void of any good or righteousness, yet, by virtue of Christ's Spirit in him, his dead humanity is revived and righteousness exhibited in him. Man is, therefore, a dependent: and his life and righteousness are to be accounted spiritual, and not natural.

When man exercises faith in the truth of the fall, he sees his sad state, recognizes his absolute dependence upon Christ every way; and, turning from self and this sad state, he flies to God, through Christ, for mercy and redemption, and then he is said to be converted, but not regenerated: for he just now fully appreciates that he is sinful and "needs" to be redeemed, or "baptized." As long as he sees and rests in the fact of his fall, he knows his weakness or dependence: and, trusting in Christ, the divine power of the Spirit is the more prominently exhibited. "I will most gladly, therefore, glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." I must believe in my dependence, else, being deceived, I may attempt to live without Christ. This is the evil of believing that I am regenerated now, for I would very logically and naturally think that my original state is regained, and then I would try to live within my own inherent restored strength. The truth is, and must ever be, while I am here, I am dependent. "Without me ye can do nothing." Take Christ away from man, and he is dead to the living God of all ages!

This Spirit within man is that which gives rise to his dual nature, of which we are wont to think and speak as his own: but it does not blend with us, and which Paul calls the "inner man." When we understand and believe the truth as we should, our original humanity appears, or our future being is seen, by reason of this "Spirit within us," and most mysteriously gives a "taste of the powers of the world to come."

By faith, this Spirit, or "Christ in me," our glorious heavenly and future being is brought to knowledge, but still so mysteriously that "we can not tell whether he is in the body or out of the body." But all this is Christ, or that through Christ, mysteriously, I become acquainted with my heavenly being (for my comfort) and state, "which it is not lawful for me to utter" or claim, as a present actual experience. "Of such an one will I glory: but of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities." By this we see that what he was now, was not changed or regenerated. He still claims that he is a dependent and a reflector.

This Spirit, or "Christ in me," when faith is constant, is so common with us that we are wont to speak of it and claim it as our own being: but as it is clearly stated in Scripture, as the Spirit of Christ, or "Christ in me," we should never lose sight of that fact, and become deceived. Herein lies the fallacy of the doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace." Nature is not changed constitutionally. We are dependent, all the same, and must be thoughtful, prayerful, and constant in faith unto the end.

This Spirit, or "Christ in me," Paul says, is only an "earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession," or until I am redeemed, or baptized with fire, and come forth "as white as snow."

This is why a resurrection is of so much importance: because what I am, apart from "Christ in me," must die or sleep, or die and sleep. God is to do something for us after we die, as redeeming the "purchased possession." But what or how I can not tell. Certain it is, we are laid away "in corruption," "in weakness," "in dishonor," and as "natural;" but shall be raised "in incorruption," "in power," "in glory," and a "spiritual body." Whether man's body and soul, both of which are polluted with sin, as will be seen in children who draw their being from us, dies or sleeps, or dies and sleeps, until the resurrection morning, I can not tell. But such is the language of Scripture. But surely, if there be a resurrection, there must be a regeneration. (Read St. Matthew xix. 27-29.)

"And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God: because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ, whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain: ye are yet in your sins: then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." It is evident here that the apostle argues that by death, or in death, in answer to our faith, we are to be purged from our sins, and delivered from the bondage of sin, and regenerated.

The undeveloped doctrine of baptism, as given to the Jews (Numbers xix, Hebrews vi, 2), is, indeed, very significant. Sin did fearful work, as will be seen by the burning of the red heifer, the disagreeable cedar, the bitter hyssop, and the scarlet—all of which will be overcome by the baptism with "running water." God's love has promised and will give us a regeneration, notwithstanding we go back to ashes. This water represents God's love. To remove sin, we see, required three baptisms, respectively on the first, third, and seventh days (a baptism of faith), thus indicating the hidden Trinity involved in the promise of redemption, or perfection, as indicated by the number seven. Thus to them the washing of regeneration was presented. When developed, we see it is "one baptism" in the name of the Trinity, and as foretold by the prophet, now, or after the typical age is past, "then will I sprinkle clean water upon you," one time, thus indicating the one "washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost," as will be the case with our new being, which the apostle declares has been shown to us now by the gospel, "after that the kindness and love of God, our Savior, toward man appeared." (Titus iii, 4-8.)

From Georgia.

BY REV. W. W. WADSWORTH.

Atlanta is just beginning, Mr. Editor, to resume the functions of its normal life. The great Piedmont Exposition is now a thing of the past. In many respects, it was a great success. The extent and variety of its exhibits were far beyond that of any local fair ever held in the South. The crowd was enormous exceeding anything that ever assembled within our gates. On Wednesday, the second day of the President's visit, and the day of the military display, it is believed our visitors were greater in number than the population of the city. The confusion, inconvenience, and suffering incident to such a vast throng can easily be imagined. The President and his wife were entertained in magnificent style, and seemed greatly pleased.

The State Fair, at Macon, opened on Monday morning, and is now in full blast. Jefferson Davis is in attendance, and the city is overflowing with visitors; but a cold rain has been falling steadily for thirty-six hours. While Mr. Davis will always hold a warm place in the affections of our people, because of his past relations to them, in the minds of thousands the lustre of his fair name has been tarnished by his antagonism of the great moral reform of the times. His letter to Bishop Galloway has been almost universally pronounced, in this section, by thinking men, "a weak document." It displays more of the garrulousness of an enfeebled old age, than of that masterly grasp of great questions which characterized the days of his prime, and made him a master of assemblies. That he should have made such a record in his last days must remain a grief to multitudes of those who sincerely love him.

The anti-prohibitionists have brought on another contest, under our local option act, in this county, and the campaign is rapidly rising to white heat. Sam Jones opened the battle at the Opera House on Sunday afternoon. Hundreds were not able to gain admittance to this largest audience-room in the city. Tomorrow night Senator Colquitt and other distinguished speakers will deliver addresses in the courthouse. The women and children—representatives of our best society and most influential people—have organized for aggressive work. Three large tents will be erected this week in different parts of the city, to be used for holding meetings. The Prohibition Campaign Committee meets every day at twelve o'clock, at their headquarters, for counsel. These meetings are largely attended by our citizens. The blue badges are fluttering in every direction, and the noise of the battle will soon be heard afar. The large increase of population and business, as well as a wonderful thrift among the hitherto destitute classes of the city, has demonstrated prohibition to be a great success. Scores of good men, who were afraid of the effect of change, and voted for the bar-rooms two years ago, are now rallying enthusiastically to the prohibition standard. Atlanta will never take a backward step in this great moral reform. By every token the prospect is bright for a glorious and final victory. Our only danger lies in the enormous corruption fund of the organized liquor power of the nation. Against bribery, in sums large enough to tempt the weak and hard working, as well as idle classes, there can be no argument. Only the power of God can save us from such an influence. Let the people everywhere, who love God and humanity, pray for us, that we may be triumphantly delivered out of the hands of our adversaries.

We have just enjoyed a delightful visit from Bishop Wilson. He preached at Trinity on Sunday morning, and at First Church at night, with that wonderful power that has made him known throughout the nation as one of the ablest pulpit orators of the day. He combines, in a rare degree, profound, yet clear thought, and the finest expression, with a deep spiritual fervor that is irresistible. He is a grand gospel preacher of the Pauline type, and may well be taken as a model, though, of course, not to be imitated by the young preachers of the church over which he has the honor to preside. Such success as he has achieved has been the result of a life of laborious study, as well as of natural gifts, and a full consecration to the Christian ministry. He never preaches science and philosophy—rarely uses even the words in a sermon—but magnifies and brings out the great fundamental truths of the gospel. A half-hour's conversation, however, will reveal to you the fact that he is at home in both fields, and is acquainted with almost every meritorious book that modern thought has produced. The well-trained mind will frequently be lost in admiration at his exquisite adjustment of word to thought, bringing out the most delicate shades of meaning. But the surprise will not be so great when it is known that in his private reading of the Scriptures the Bishop uses only the original tongue. What plan could possibly furnish a finer school of training! Never did our church so much need strong and mighty expounders of the Word of God—apostolic preachers of the gospel. But a careful reading of the books which contain the best thoughts of the world, and diligent, patient study is absolutely essential to that high plane of power which brings forth "out of the Scriptures things new and old," and moves the multitudes with the thrilling story of the crucified Christ. The crown of triumph can only be won amid the dust of the battle!

The Preachers' Meeting, on last Monday morning, appointed a committee to prepare a paper on the theater, endorsing Rev. W. A. Candler's sermon, and condemning the course of Rev. D. C. Kelley, D. D. Bishop Wilson was present, and, in response to a call of the meeting, expressed himself in unequivocal terms. He thought not only that Bro. Candler ought to be endorsed, and his "eminent" assailant rebuked by the whole church, but that the time had come to urge the battle along the whole line. His deliverance did us all good, and will bear fruit. If the preachers of Southern Methodism could feel sure that they would be sustained by our Bishops, after they have stirred up the temporary antagonism of our worldly minded, rich, and "fearful" members, they would enter the war, fight it to the end, and win a glorious victory in the name of Christ, the King. Thank God the church, at last, is on her mettle! O that our Zion may be purified!

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 26, 1887.

Rev. William Murrah, D. D.

BY BISHOP H. N. M'TYEIRE.

MR. EDITOR: A paragraph in the Christian Advocate a few weeks ago gave the church the sad news of the death of a minister who has served well, and deservedly filled an honorable place. Dr. Murrah was no common man. For long and able service, and for gifts adapted to counsel and to preaching, he had few equals. I knew him well. It was my good fortune, when stationed in Columbus, Miss., in 1848, to have him for my presiding elder: and ever since that time I have been within reach of his friendship and his influence.

He was born in Greene county, Ga., August 23, 1807, and died at his home in Pickens county, Ala., October 9, 1887. In his nineteenth year he began to preach, and was admitted into the South Carolina Conference soon afterward. He never located, though for several years he has been on the retired or resting list, a place on which he had well earned.

His naturally strong mind had increased its force and availability by a fair education. He was entering the junior class of the Georgia University, when he drew out for itinerant field-work. With mental power quite above the average he united emotional power. He wept, and made others weep. Often have I seen and felt his great argument from the pulpit baptized with holy unction. In "that day" many will own him as their spiritual father. Many more have been helped on their way by his edifying ministry, and by his tender, judicious pastoral care.

After a few years, on the original large Carolina circuits, he was stationed, for 1831 and 1832, in Charleston. Transferred to the Alabama Conference, his appointments were in Mobile, Tuscaloosa, Summerfield, and Columbus, Miss. (then included in the Alabama Conference). Districts were often blessed with his supervision. In 1874, at Bishop Paine's request, Dr. Murrah was transferred to the North Mississippi Conference, and stationed at the home church of the venerable Bishop Aberdeen.

Dr. Murrah was a member of several General Conferences—notably, that of 1844. Never had the church a truer son or a safer adviser. His common sense was uncommon. Physically, he was compact, and capable of much toil. His fine voice indulged itself in glorious song. The old Wesleyan hymns were his delight. Often have I heard him (before the custom ceased) sing a solo before or after sermon; and it either prepared the way for the truth, or made the truth sink in.

A lady of Mobile has told me that when Bro. Murrah was stationed there, it was his habit after the last sermon of the day (there were three: one to the white congregation at 11 A. M., one to the black at 1 P. M., and another to the white at 8 P. M.) to sing, solo:

"All praise to thee, my God, this night,
For all the blessings of the light."

"Ah," she said, "that was worth a sermon of itself: and my husband, not a church member, would go just to hear it."

We find fault with some men, in public assemblies, because they speak too often. My objection to Dr. Murrah was, that he spoke seldom and too little. One has a feeling that the right side (and he was generally there) is entitled to the benefit of his well-balanced judgment and his clear vision: that truth is, in a sense, defrauded by his silence, and denied her own by his modesty.

Seldom are ministerial dignity and propriety joined, as they were in Dr. Murrah, to such a keen sense of humor. He could laugh until the tears came.

Sunshine and shadows were his lot, as with all of God's children: but the grand old soldier endured unto the end. He was no stranger there, when everlasting habitations were opened to receive him. Widow and children beloved, and a multitude of friends left in the vale below, may mourn: but I doubt not our dear brother has received the petition contained in the third verse of his favorite hymn:

"Teach me to live that I may dread
The grave as little as my bed:
Teach me to die, that so I may Rise glorious at the awful day."

Notice.

MR. EDITOR: Please let me state to the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference that we have not received the definite terms and certificates—blank that must be used now, yet. Will have to send a certificate to each party to be presented to the railroad agent, and possibly at a coupon station. This we are trying to prevent. With the aid of a very efficient agent here, we are making the best arrangement we can.

ANTITHESIS.

BY T. W. CRADDOCK.

I.

Sadly the poet [illegible] complains,
That with [illegible] the years
No more [illegible] wood [illegible]
No love [illegible]
Nor stubborn world his hostile acts abates,
And Usurper greets and robbers [illegible] day by day;
Beauty, for taste, is [illegible];
Rich is dead, and only [illegible]

II.

The golden age was [illegible]:
The songs are sung, and greatness is no more;
What then we are [illegible] beasts below,
And wake anew [illegible] of yore?
Far from its source [illegible] stream of life runs low,
In words shallows [illegible] barren shore.

III.

Sadly One poet [illegible]
A nobler beauty than his elders knew;
The lovely falsehoods melt away like dew,
But truth remains, more beautiful than these;
His vision ranges over wider seas;
In deeper space, new planets meet his view;
He reads the legend in the rainbow's hue,
And starry spirits render up their keys.

A grander world, a higher life he knows;
His great ideals higher yet arise!
And over all his quickened fancy throws
A shining halo of transcendent dyes.
Old suns have set! Another sunrise glows
In golden promise over clearer skies.

The Sunday-School Lesson for November 20, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

JUDGMENT AND MERCY.

Matthew xi, 20-30.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matthew xi, 28.

CONNECTING LINKS.

The time, place and circumstances of the present lesson are the same with those of the last. Only one paragraph of four verses occurs between the two lessons. The Savior, passing from his testimony concerning John and his confirmation and fulfillment of prophecy, delivers a damaging opinion against "this generation." Although the words were more directly expressed against the people living at that time, still they are applicable in a general sense, and the reader of the Bible can apply the words, "this generation," to his own contemporaries. Men are universally unappreciative of the efforts made for their salvation, and each one has an excuse suitable to himself. John the Baptist came with his severe mode of life, and they were ready to charge him with asceticism, which can only be practiced by a crazy man. Christ came both eating and drinking, and they say: "Behold, a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." So it has ever been: if they can't find one excuse, they will take another. With some the plan of salvation is too simple; with others the Bible is too full of mysteries. Some preachers are too straight-laced; others yield too much to the world.

JUDGMENT.

Verse 20. "Then began he"—the preceding thoughts naturally suggest the condemnation which follows—"to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not." Christ wrought his miracles for two purposes: First, the relief of the suffering; and, second, the proof of his ministry. Hence, if men, after having witnessed his divine works, were not convinced and repented not, it was an evidence of hardness of heart and of a careless spirit which deserved to be rebuked. They had not only been unmindful of their own interests, but they had insulted the Savior by refusing to be convinced by his miracles.

21. "Wo unto thee, Chorazin! wo unto thee, Bethsaida!" If the translation were, "Alas for thee!" it would have been nearer the mind of the Spirit. It is not a curse nor an imprecation, but rather a solemn exclamation of pity for the woe they were bringing upon themselves. There are differences of opinion as to the locality and identity of Chorazin; but, as it is mentioned in such close connection with Bethsaida, it probably was in the same region. Hence, it is reasonable to adopt the opinion of St. Jerome, who locates it on the shore of Lake Gennesaret, about two miles from Capernaum. Bethsaida, on the western side of the lake, was the native place of Andrew, Peter and Philip. Doubtless the Master was very often there, and there wrought many of his gracious works. "For if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." Tyre and Sidon were cities of Phœnicia, lying on the Mediterranean Sea. They were [illegible] people, and [illegible] being [illegible] probably were never visited by the Savior. There is nothing in history to enable us to form the opinion of their probable repentance; the Master was simply speaking from his own knowledge of what they would do if they had an opportunity.

22. "It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you." If this refers to the cities themselves, the prediction has been verified, as travelers still visit the remains of Tyre and Sidon, but no one can tell where Chorazin and Bethsaida were. But, doubtless, this prediction refers to the people; and at the day of judgment they will have less excuse and will, therefore, be more severely judged because they had enjoyed greater privileges.

23. "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shall be brought down to hell." It was a most highly honored city, because there for a long time Jesus abode and taught and wrought. Inasmuch as it did not improve with these exalted privileges, it should be brought down to a corresponding estate of wretchedness and woe. "If the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day." Sodom was one of the four cities which had been destroyed by the fire and brimstone from heaven. The Savior said if it had had the same chances, its doom would have been averted, and it would have been still remaining. Inasmuch as Sodom had received, comparatively, little light and privilege, it would be more tolerable for it in the day of judgment. Sodom and Capernaum might be said to stand at the very antipodes of position and experience. How dreadful to think that the associates and fellow-citizens of the blessed Savior will experience greater wretchedness than the inhabitants of Sodom, whose name even to this day is the synonym of degradation and debauchery! "To whom much is given, of him much will be required."

MERCY.

Verse 25. "At that time Jesus answered and said." The words intimate that there were other sayings of Jesus not here recorded. He was not answering any spoken words, but, doubtless, knew the uprising of thoughts in the minds of his hearers about the mysteries of the divine dispensation of which he had just spoken. "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Those who are wise in their own eyes can never understand the mysteries of the kingdom of Heaven. It is only those who divest themselves of preconceived opinions, and, like little children, sit at the feet of the great Master and learn of him. To all such his ways will be just, his counsels will be wise.

26. "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." It was not done simply because God was sovereign and had a right to do as he pleased. It seemed good in his sight, because it was right and just and true.

27. "All things are delivered unto me of my Father." He does not say they are revealed unto him as to one who knew them not, but that they were committed unto him for administration, as is said in John iii, 35: "The Father loveth the Son and hath given all things into his hand." "No man knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son." No one can fully understand the character and attributes of the Father but the Son; and no one can understand the character and attributes of the Son but the Father. Only Deity can comprehend Deity. "And he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him." This revelation is to be understood not of the workings of the Father's administration fully, nor of his character, but the revelation of him in the pardon of sins, and in the comfortable communion of his Spirit. Now, that this will is not arbitrary and does not act through favoritism, without regard to man's conduct, is clearly shown by the following verse.

28. "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Here it is evident that Christ wills to reveal his Father to all who feel the need of him. To persons who may be discouraged by the word "labor," and be ready to say, Alas! what I do can not be dignified by that term, it will be comforting to know that the same word is here translated labor which is used where it is [illegible] being [illegible] were "[illegible] and [illegible] thus on the well." Be my disciples, be governed by my precepts, and I will give you rest; rest from care and sin and sorrow, and rest eternal.

29. "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." The yoke is an emblem of complete servitude. It is frequently so used in the Bible. Sometimes it indicates a bondage to an enemy; but in this connection it means a vassalage, which proves to be the truest liberty. It is only by becoming like Christ, "meek and lowly," that rest can come. One who is haughty will always be in the worst kind of slavery, dominated by pride and imperious ambition.

"Rest for my soul I long to find:
Savior of all, if mine thou art,
Give me thy meek and lowly mind,
And stamp thine image on my heart."

30. "For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." The plan of salvation enjoins nothing that is afflictive. Everything it commands to be done is for the real benefit of mankind, and everything which it forbids will invariably prove to be hurtful to man, if he does it. It is only to the rebellious that the yoke seems heavy. When once the will is brought into subjection to the will of God, the beauty and reward of obedience will be seen and felt, and the disciple can say as his Lord said in Psalm xl, 8: "I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart."

PRACTICAL INFERENCES.

1. Great wealth, high position, superior endowments correspondingly increase responsibility.

2. Only to those who become like the Savior will the Father reveal himself.

3. True freedom is to be enjoyed only by submitting to the yoke of Christ—body, soul and spirit.

(We exceedingly regret to inform our readers that circumstances which we can not control compel an intermission of Dr. Andrews' Sunday-school Lesson Notes. We have enjoyed them, and have been profited by them, and, no doubt, so have our readers; and we hope to be able to resume them very soon.—ED.)

A Pleasant Trip.

MR. EDITOR: After having been engaged for two months in protracted meetings on the Pleasant Ridge circuit, and having received 150 new members into the militant host, I pulled out for Atlanta, to see relatives and friends there, taking advantage of the cheap rates to the Piedmont Exposition.

I preached for my dear nephew's congregation at Asbury Chapel, the third Sunday in this month, and had a glorious time. My nephew, Rev. J. M. Tumlin, has been in Atlanta three years, and still likes the "Gate City." He treated me "like a prince," as he promised to do, and showed me through the city, viewing the beautiful and massive Kimball House, with its seven stories, and the new State Capitol, covering more than two acres of ground, which, when complete, will cost the State one million of dollars.

Trinity Church is being repaired and enlarged. When this is done, it will be commodious and beautiful. Dr. J. W. Lee is small in stature, but grows in the estimation of his large congregation at Trinity. I think he has about thirteen hundred members. It may be a little difficult to see him from the front entrance of his church, yet he will be heard and felt there. He is an able, consecrated man of God, and has grown by the inch during his three years in Atlanta.

The First Methodist Church has been repaired and improved, and stands out before the eyes of the observer as a building of God and worthy of Methodism. As I beheld the spacious auditorium, I thought it would be a grand treat to sit there and hear the Word of Life by Dr. Henry Clay Morrison, the popular pastor and successful preacher. I was told that he had a revival in his church almost every Sunday.

I attended the preachers' meeting on Monday morning of my stay there, at First Church. It was a general preachers' meeting, in order to inaugurate the campaign against liquor. The whisky men have called for another election in November. It will be a heated contest. Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, pastor of the First Baptist Church, presided. The inimitable Sam Jones was there, and made a characteristic talk. He said the whisky men [illegible] "[illegible]

He wanted the preachers to be plucky and saucy, but not mean. He wanted the preachers to charge the mind and conscience of their people with prohibition sentiments, and that a preacher who was not an uncompromising prohibitionist "belonged to the devil from his hat to his heels." He said they could not say too much against the liquor traffic if they staid inside of the English language. Sam Jones is reverenced and admired there, as he is in other sections of the country—South and North.

One morning I strolled out Peach Tree street to the monument of Benjamin Harvey Hill, who was born September 14, 1823, and died August 16, 1882. There his form stands in marble, the observed of all observers. His head slightly leans over his right shoulder, which was natural with him. This monument was erected by his fellow-citizens in commemoration of the indomitable courage, unrivaled eloquence and devoted patriotism that characterized the illustrious dead. Notwithstanding he was, perhaps, the greatest man that Georgia ever produced, he was a good hearer of the Word of God, and his face was an inspiration to his pastor at the First Methodist Church.

I saw President Cleveland and his wife, the lady of the White House. Both were greatly admired in Atlanta. The President is a strong, plain and practical man. Truly yours,

M. E. TUMLIN.

Letter from Rev. C. C. Grisham.

MR. EDITOR: As it is known to my brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, my health was such that I was put on the supernumerary relation this year. Oh, how sad to give up my beloved employ—circuit preaching! But, thanks be to God! my health has improved somewhat, and I have been able to do some work in the vineyard of the Lord. Have had charge of one church and some irregular appointments; have preached forty-six times, assisted in meetings.

I held a meeting of eight days at Lafayette Springs (a little village) in the Primitive Baptist Church—no other church in the place. We had a glorious time; the people shouted aloud, some were astonished, but we praised God all the time. The result was twenty conversions, fifteen accessions on profession of faith, the organization of a church with twenty-seven members, and we think more to follow, a beautiful lot deeded, and most of the money subscribed to build a house; so Methodism is planted there. Thanks to Bro. A. J. Foster, our beloved pastor, for his gospel and Wesley preaching, also Bro. Ferrell for two sermons. We give all the glory to God. Oh, that I may be able to do more for the church!

I ask an interest in the prayers of my brethren. I want to see you all at Conference. I think that prohibition and religion are increasing in this country, which we believe go together.

(By some unaccountable mishap this letter was mislaid. It should have appeared several weeks ago.—ED.)

Letter of Thanks.

MR. EDITOR: On the evening of September 26 I received two telegrams from Prof. Wiley (acting president), of Centenary College, that my son was dangerously ill with malarial (or swamp) fever. At that time we were engaged in a meeting at West Monroe. Meeting was discontinued, and I took the night train, but, failing to make connection at Vicksburg, I had to lie over twelve hours, so that not until three o'clock A. M., on the twenty-eighth, did I arrive at Jackson, La. Wife arrived twenty-four hours later. Found son better, but by no means out of danger. On the twenty-ninth he relapsed, and for days it appeared that no remedy could be found to check the progress of the disease; and, at times, it seemed that all hopes (human) had fled. But through a kind Providence, good attention, patient treatment, and a good constitution, he came through.

I write this more to express my appreciation of the many kindnesses and tireless attentions given to us and one son by the noble young gentlemen of the college, and also the good people of Jackson. For about three weeks all seemed to take great pleasure in supplying our necessities, and in pushing back the gloom of the occasion by offering to do all that a Christian heart and willing hand could devise and accomplish. May Heaven reward them for their toil and self-sacrifice made in so noble a cause as that of helping the sick, and shown in such a generous and cheerful way! It is bad to be sick, but it is a great comfort to one to know he is well cared for in those sad, dark hours of trial.

Yours truly,

T. H. M'CLENDON.

From the Work.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: I have not seen anything in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE from the Greenville district for some time; but be it known to all whom it may concern that we are neither mud nor dead, but getting ready for Conference, and will be able to report an advance of 25 per cent. on all the interests of the church above any year's work since the overflow of 1882; and, by this and the overflow of 1883 and 1884, we lost one-fourth of our members by emigration, and half of our property was destroyed. We are, therefore, encouraged by the fact that, notwithstanding our losses, seven hundred and thirty members will pay in 1887 more than twice as much as one thousand members paid in 1881; and yet we ought to do much more.

By the way, I see in the ADVOCATE, of this week, an article from our Dr. Sullivan, which has the right ring. We must have more training-schools where our boys can start right, and then good colleges through which they may pass to the university, for these training-schools will awaken in the minds of many of our sons a desire for the college or university who would otherwise remain in ignorance, and many of our sons would be qualified for usefulness by these training-schools who would, perhaps, not reach the college or university. May the time soon come when we shall have a good training-school in every presiding elder's district, and colleges well supported, and when every man may choose his school and not be taxed to pay the tuition of those who prefer to send their sons to a State school, for this is a burden that we are not willing to bear, and an unrighteous demand upon our means for which any man should be ashamed to ask! Is it not enough that we build their houses and furnish the apparatus without having to pay for the tuition of their children? There is a time when "forbearance ceases to be a virtue;" and we think that has come.

Yours fraternally,

J. W. HONNOLL.

SANDERSVILLE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have held five protracted meetings in the bounds of Sandersville charge. The churches have been wonderfully blessed, spiritually. I have, during last year and the present year, received 156 members into the church, which makes this a strong work when we count by number. We have some members that do their duty towards their pastor. Others are coming up by degrees; and I think if they would take our church paper, they would succeed much faster. We will be able to make a fuller report this year than that of last year.

I think, in 1888, the preacher that travels this work will be able to do something for our paper. I have tried during the two years of my stay among them, but have had poor success. But, knowing the condition of my people here, I can say they will be more able another year than they have been during the year 1886 and 1887. I think every member of the church ought to make it a rule to take his church paper, and let that be first among papers; then we would have full reports at Conference. I have enjoyed my work the past two years, being among those who have known me from my youth up. May God bless us all and save us!

L. J. JONES.

POPLARVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last letter to the ADVOCATE I have organized a church at Slidell with thirteen members, with a prospect of many more soon. Twelve joined by profession, and one by certificate.

I have been in bed the better part of two weeks with cold and fever, but am up again. Pray for me and my little flock.

Yours in Christ.

PALMER CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: Having been requested to send you, for publication in the ADVOCATE, the particulars of the Palmer Camp Meeting, I write you a short account of its fifth annual meeting, which commenced on Saturday, October 1, and continued until the following Thursday morning, with a large crowd in attendance, and a good supply of efficient preachers who did effective service. It is thought by some that the pulpit power was equal to that of the Seashore Camp Meeting, and the singing was excellent, which seemed to give life and vigor to the services. The following ministers were present and preached with the power of the Holy Spirit: Bros. Dr. J. B. Walker, H. D. Kimball, J. J. Lovett, J. N. Tucker and our zealous presiding elder, Dr. T. S. West, and with them our pastor, A. P. Cox, D. Merchant and the five local preachers of this charge, with a number of exhorters and others, who worked earnestly for the conversion of sinners. As a result, it is thought about thirty were converted, and many backsliders were reclaimed, and the church greatly revived and strengthened. The presence of the Lord was manifested in the opening services, and he continued to exhibit his presence and power to save through the entire service.

The children's service, Monday evening, was one of the grandest and most sublime scenes I ever witnessed. After a sermon, delivered by Bro. Lovett, and a short address from Dr. Walker, an invitation was given them to come to the altar, which was shortly crowded; then a prayer by one of the boys, Andron Walker, was offered for them. It is a glorious sight to see the divine power displayed in the conversion of the children, which has been the means of turning many old ones to Christ. May God continue to bless and save the children!

A. L. JORDAN.

FOREST AND MORTON.

MR. EDITOR: Having closed up our series of protracted meetings, extending over a month, we obey the order issued by yourself, and report eighty-five additions to the church. There was a general spiritual advance all along the Methodist lines, and running out also for the benefit of other churches. We expect in the future to reap additional fruit to that already gathered.

Right in the midst of our meetings we had the dedication of the Morton Church by the Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall. His coming among us, even in the social life, was a royal feast of no minor importance. And, then, his dedicatory sermon, with his other sermons, was a feast of fat things, well refined, and a real benediction to our people. His sermons were replete with profound wisdom, and intensely practical, touching human life at so many points, that it would be marvelous if anyone escaped the arrows of truth that fell thick and fast upon human hearts.

We have been incessantly employed in other meetings, or we should have sent our report sooner. J. W. HARMON.

DE KALB CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our camp meeting at New Hope was a success every way: many bright conversions, twenty-six accessions, and an advanced movement all along the line. Preaching was in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. We are greatly indebted to Bros. Norsworthy, our presiding elder, Peebles, Cunningham, Witt, Ware, Barr and Fulton. We have had, up to date, fifty-one accessions.

Our collections are coming up well. Crops good, and our people are cheerful. We have never served a kinder and more appreciative people. We have much for which to praise God and take courage.

W. G. BACKUS, P. C.

A well-founded faith is better than an ill-founded joy. A heart broken with the penitence of the fifty-first Psalm, is better than superficial hallelujahs on the lips. It is better to have the feet shod with the preparation of the gospel, and to walk through the valley of the shadow of death, than to be self-deceived with artificial wings that seem to carry one triumphantly over it. A sense of sin coupled with trust in Christ is the only safe way of life, out of life, into life.—Evangelist.

Why Don't Infant Children Take the Lord's Supper?

While I have no objection to my old friend, Dr. J. B. Walker's exposition of this question, in this ADVOCATE, of October 27, I could state it somewhat differently, but whether any better, or not, I do not know. The subject, if properly handled, is highly worthy of a place in any religious paper.

First. I am not able to see infant baptism alluded to in Scripture. I see no class baptism in the Bible; no male nor female, nor young nor old. The baptism in Scripture alludes to human persons, solidly and with no restriction.

Second. Sacrament is obligation—nothing more, nothing less. Different kinds of obligations have different kinds of names, as debt, marriage, etc. Religion, in its nature, has a twofold obligation, viz: duty (or obligation) to God, and duty to man. The former is personal; the latter, social. All high or superior obligations—those in which the public are supposed to be interested—are celebrated in some public, outward, ceremonial way to give it notarial significance. So there are naturally and necessarily two, and only two, sacraments in Christianity. There is no such thing as instituting a sacrament. They belong to all time and all conditions. Lord's Supper and baptism are instituted. They are called sacraments only by metonymy. They are modes of celebrating the sacraments. The old modes could continue no longer because the sacrifice they typified had transpired. So at the Passover—the last one administered that way—Christ said, Do it this way hereafter. And so the mode of celebrating the social sacrament was also changed.

Third. These obligations, and hence the sacraments, pertain to mankind universally, not to classes or conditions. Neither belongs to age, sex, station or other circumstance. They are absolute obligations. In the social sacrament there is no conceivable reason that its celebration should be postponed. It is absurd to suppose it contingent on the consent of the subject. It is the churchship of religion.

The personal sacrament must be postponed for physical reasons. How long must it be postponed? As long as the necessity continues. In its nature, it is celebrated by personal volition. A child can be a member of the church at a week old; but he can not acknowledge and discharge the personal obligation until his intellect is so much opened that he can recognize it as a religious act. So soon as this can be done, the child ought to partake of the Lord's Supper. This will generally be found to be about the age of seven or eight. The postponement is a natural necessity. Lord's Supper is the Passover, so expressly declared. The whole thing is dictated by plain Scripture and simple common sense.

Maybe this explanation is too much condensed for many readers. If so, it is easily elaborated. It may be found in more enlarged form in "Ecce Ecclesia."

R. ABBEY.

GLEN VIEW, Mississippi.

Mansfield Female College.

Our fall term opened under the shadow of death. My dear wife, who had been a faithful servant of the college and of the church, expired on the very day the school began. She had been long declining, but, like other invalids, had so often baffled her disease, that death came unexpected at last. No tribute that I could offer here would begin to do justice to that devotion and earnestness with which she had obeyed that injunction of the great apostle—"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things." I can say truly, after a life-long acquaintance and a marriage union of sixteen years, that truth and honesty and justice and purity and good report were the characteristics of her life. The work that she performed in this college, the devotion of time and strength for four years to the daughters of its patrons, probably cost me her life. And at last, when she felt that she could be no longer useful, she died at the very beginning of the session, as if to remove any hinderance that her extreme illness might put in the way of its progress.

On the day after the sad funeral rites had been performed we resumed our labors, and, while we have not been favored with that amount of patronage which we were led to expect from the brilliant close of the last year, we are still hoping for increase. We have never been so well prepared for pupils as at this time. The faculty is stronger than it has ever been, by the accession of Profs. Watts and Huddle and Miss Eugenia Watts—all educated in the best schools of Virginia. Our music teachers both spent the summer at the Cincinnati Conservatory, and have been rewarded with a large class of pupils. The preparatory department is larger and better organized than it has ever been. Various repairs and improvements have been made on the buildings and grounds, and an elegant new office has been erected for the use of the president. At the same time prices have been reduced to the rate of four dollars per week, without music, and five dollars, including that branch, payable monthly or by the term. Mrs. Huddle is proving herself a most excellent matron, so that the college will lose nothing in this respect by the death of Mrs. Grace.

I may add, in conclusion, that our church is now enjoying a revival of religion, and that several of our pupils have already connected themselves with the church. Will not our brethren in the field make mention of these things in their pastoral visits, and recommend their own college—the best in the State for its location, buildings, past history and present facilities for giving a refined, Christian culture—to the families of our people, and induce them to fill up all our rooms that are yet vacant? We hope so.

F. M. GRACE.

A Strange Idea.

MR. EDITOR: A few days since I was asked by an intelligent-looking gentleman—a former student of Centenary College—if there was not a kind of reserve, or sinking, fund from which we supplemented, at Conference, the salaries of poorly paid preachers. This same question was asked me by a lady of long standing in the Methodist Church, and who was also regarded as of superior intellect, soon after I entered the itinerancy. Is it possible that these represent anything like a minority even in the church? Can it be that our people have gotten hold of the idea that the church is a kind of banking institution that a kind of community of goods exists among us? Whence comes such ideas in this day? Can it be that because the preacher returns from Conference in a somewhat neater suit than he has worn during the year—which is the gift often of a friend or the result of close economy—that, therefore, the conclusion is drawn that there is a regular commissary department connected with every Conference? Perhaps another ground for such conclusion is the knowledge of the fact that the pastor has been stinted to within an inch and a half of starvation, and yet owes no man anything. He has by an economy, unknown to most of his members, lived on a pitiful salary, and to their surprise leaves no debts behind.

I am not surprised, however, that the rules of economy, as practiced by the Methodist itinerant, should work results of astonishment to the unthinking world. Has a man can give all his time to the circuit and support an orthodox family of a Methodist preacher (By "orthodox" I mean a family of wife and seven children—not less); how he can do such on a salary of $400, and sometimes less, is a question which, I confess, I have never been able to solve. It is done though, and no Conference savings bank is opened for their relief. Our D. D.'s and LL.D.'s have written for us works on mental and moral science, philosophies of ecclesiastical and civil government; but I think the best works on political or domestic economy could certainly be written from the experience of the "Methodist circuit rider," if some one would only undertake the work.

For the benefit of any reader who may have adopted such notions I would simply ask these plain questions: (1) When the basis of the pastor's salary is, "What can he live upon" as an assessment, how can he reasonably be expected to have anything to contribute to a general sinking fund? And (2) when the great majority fall short of the amount assessed, by what means can this sinking fund be perpetrated? Brother, think on these things!

After all, Mr. Editor, this idea may explain some of the figures which occur in our minutes. A circuit with nearly 300 members pays its pastor a little more than $400. Another with six hundred members assesses less than $500, and falls short in payment. Another, claiming all the dignity of a station, and having a membership exceeding 400, pays a little more than $1 per member. Surely such figures as these (and these are only samples) indicate that this strange idea must exist in some places. What is to be done? I am confident that those to whom this might be of benefit do not get the ADVOCATE. I write, with the embarrassing truth before me, that such as this is intended for never receive the papers. All their information ecclesiastical, at least—is received from the preachers. To speak much on the subject of money is destructive to the influence of the pastor to do good, and, therefore, embarrassing. Perhaps our presiding elders might accomplish something in this line, and do no one any injury.

FITZ JAMES.

The Pure Juice of the Grape.

MR. EDITOR: Do not the churches make a mistake in patronizing the drinking saloons to procure for sacramental purposes the factitious compound called "wine," which contains intoxicating poison, without a drop of grape juice in it? And does it not make us prohibitionists appear inconsistent (if not ridiculous) to accept, for the purpose of celebrating the death of the Savior of the world, the demoralizing poison which we are moving heaven and earth to prohibit the world from drinking?

Strong evidence has been adduced that the Savior used "at the Last Supper" the unfermented juice of the grape; and that can always be had yet for sacramental purposes. Ought we not, then, to follow the example of Christ in that particular? The wine used to-day is no more the juice of the grape than whisky is the corn of which bread, the staff of life, is made. The unfermented juice of the grape is not only harmless, but nutritious and wholesome; but commercial "wine is a mocker," as "strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Most of the so-called wine is not made of grape juice at all—has not a drop of it in its factitious make-up. And if the pure juice of the grape be fermented, a tertium quid is formed which has no longer the innoxious, nutritious and wholesome properties of the original "fruit of the wine," but a deadly poison instead which undermines the health, dethrones reason and obtunds the moral sensibilities, while it stimulates all the worst passions and appetites, and overwhelms the unfortunate drinker in utter ruin in time and eternity.

It is to be hoped that the churches will all use none but the pure juice of the grape for sacramental purposes in the near future.

Romish Assumption.

Immediately after the celebration of the Centennial of the Federal Constitution, in Philadelphia, we mildly criticised the action of the committee in choosing as the only officiating clergymen of the occasion a Protestant Episcopal Bishop and a Romish Cardinal. After mature reflection, the only change we would make would be to add severity to our condemnation of the act, particularly as it related to the choice of Cardinal Gibbons. His presence on the occasion was a gross impropriety, and his conduct insulting to the people of the country. He appeared in all the "pomp and circumstance" of an oriental potentate, attended by Archbishops, Bishops and priests in full official robes, and all this at the Centennial of the Constitution of our Republic, one of whose purposes was to free the people from the tyranny and folly of such "lordships" in Church and State. The entire show was singularly out of place on such an occasion. More than this, the Cardinal was guilty of an act of discourtesy, and offered an insult to Bishop Potter and the entire county, by refusing to appear on the platform until after the Bishop had made the opening prayer. He would not so far recognize the prayer of a Protestant Episcopal Bishop as an act of Christian worship as to be present while it was being offered. After the prayer was over he and his carobed retinue proceeded in pompous procession from Independence Hall to their places on the platform. And still further to show his contempt for all other acts of worship than those of his own church, he pronounced the benediction at the conclusion of his prayer, although Dr. Witherspoon had been engaged for this service. These things need but to be stated to disgust every true American. They were a gross outrage to the proprieties of the occasion and an insult to the intelligence and liberty of the country.

And yet, after all this, the Cardinal held a reception, a kind of State reception, and the President of the United States and his attendants, together with the governors of several States, and other public officers, called, with others, to pay their respects to the representative of Pope Leo XIII.! We wonder what the fathers of the Republic would say to this toadying to the representative of the very church whose intolerance made the New World an asylum for the persecuted and a land of freedom of conscience for the enthralled! Whatever they might say, we can not but feel that the whole affair was to this country a burning disgrace.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Was America Ever Discovered?

At the time when Columbus started in search of the New World, nearly every man, woman and child in Europe insisted that there was no New World to discover. When he came back crowned with success, a large proportion of these good people adhered to their theory; and if they were alive to-day many of them would, doubtless, insist that America had never been discovered at all. A man will give up anything in the world more readily than a pet theory. For example, look at the individuals who still maintain that consumption is incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured thousands upon thousands of cases, and will cure thousands more, but these people can't give up their point. Nevertheless the "Discovery" will cure any case of consumption, if taken in time.

CIDER VINEGAR BY SUNLIGHT.—Our best cider would not make vinegar when stored in the cellar. The cider seemed to lose its character, and to become insipid. We succeeded in making vinegar by placing the cider in a small keg behind the kitchen stove, and yet had to buy vinegar. Last spring we removed nine barrels into the sunshine, on rails, to keep the barrels from decay, with a bottle in each bunghole. To-day we have found that all has become vinegar. Some barrels being shorter than others, we mixed the different grades, filling those partially empty within eight inches of the bung, painted the hoops, and rolled into the cellar, and placed there on supports six inches above the cellar bottom, with faucets in the barrels containing the sharpest vinegar, and bungs out. One barrel, left in the cellar, has not changed at all in the past four months, showing that it is the heat of the summer sun that made the vinegar. An old vinegar barrel containing mother will receive a pail of cider every two weeks without being much reduced in strength.—New York Tribune.

Briefs.

Local preachers, 303; members, 55,643; infants baptized, 1,256; adults baptized, 2,751; Sunday-schools, 487; officers and teachers, 3,233; scholars, 27,-965; churches, 513—value, $726,-340 75; parsonages, 72—value, $70,301; raised for foreign missions, $17,872 53; domestic missions, $3,786 04; church extension, $3,372 93; Bible cause, $397 70.

We have received the minutes of the seventy-first session of the Missouri Conference, from which we gather these facts: Local preachers, 151; members, 33,-922; infants baptized, 520—adults, 2,155; Sunday-schools, 307; teachers, 2,585; scholars, 19,592; collected for widows, orphans and superannuates, $3,335 32; Bishops' Fund, $1,-107 60; collected for foreign missions, $7,301 84; domestic missions, $1,127 91; church extension, $2,250 51; number of churches, 364½—value, $1,627,-200; parsonages, 78—value $151,-950; money for building and repairing, $33,757. The Conference has two male colleges, two female colleges and one high school; and these have in real estate $185,000; and in endowment $135,000.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The goodness and mercy of God which have followed the American people during all the days of the past year claim their grateful recognition and humble acknowledgment. By his omnipotent power he has protected us from war and pestilence and from every national calamity; by his gracious favor the earth has yielded a generous return to the labors of the husbandman, and every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment; by his loving kindness the hearts of our people have been replenished with fraternal sentiment and patriotic endeavor, and by his unerring guidance we have been directed in the way of national prosperity.

To the end that we may, with one accord, testify our gratitude for all these blessings, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by all the people of the land.

On that day let all secular work and employment be suspended. Let our people assemble in their accustomed places of worship, and with prayer and songs of praise give thanks to our heavenly Father for all he has done for us, while we humbly implore the forgiveness of our sins, and a continuance of his mercy. Let families and kindred be reunited on that day; and let their hearts, filled with kindly cheer and affectionate reminiscences, be turned in thankfulness to the Source of all their pleasures and Giver of all that makes the day glad and joyous.

And in the midst of our people and our happiness let us remember the poor, the needy, and the unfortunate, and by our gifts of charity and ready benevolence let us increase the number of those who with grateful hearts shall join in our thanksgiving.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twelfth.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President:
THOMAS F. BAYARD,
Secretary of State.

Help from the Sanctuary.

Reader, do you attend regularly the preaching of the Word? Do you go whenever the opportunity offers, especially when you feel like it? Did you ever make any sacrifice to be present at the public services? When you have been busy with your work, and the thought came, "To-night is prayer meeting," did you so order the work for the balance of the day as to be on hand when the church met together to pray? These are not idle questions. The Christian is engaged in the grandest sort of work. He is a builder in the most magnificent sense of that word. He is rearing that which will last longer than the Pyramids. When earthly monuments have crumbled, and the proudest structures of mechanical ingenuity have mouldered into dust, the Christian work will still abide. He is building a Christian character; and the Word of the Lord assures us that character is the only thing that will stand the testing and consuming fires of the last day. When the apostle, referring to that awful time, says, "He shall be saved, yet so as by fire," he means that a man's character is the only thing that will emerge from that dreadful burning. Then the matter of most importance to every one of us is, that we so build our characters upon "the foundation that is laid," and after the pattern given in the Scriptures, as to be able to pass, as gold, through that ordeal.

In this great work we need help. Wisdom and courage, patience and perseverance are the needed graces. Besides his necessary working-tools, the architect needs a trained eye. So the spiritual builder needs an eye quick to discover faults and flaws in his work. The apostle prayed for the Ephesians: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened." Now, it is the deliberate judgment of the wisest of God's people, based upon the Word of God and corroborated by their own experience, that in public worship the spiritual worker receives a richer furnishing for his work than he can find anywhere else! The Psalmist understood it thus, for his prayer was: "The Lord send thee help from the sanctuary, and strengthen thee out of Zion." In the sanctuary are afforded opportunities of confessing Christ, privileges of praise and seasons of prayer together with the saints. The mind of the worshiper is brought in contact with the life-giving Word of the living messenger of God. The promises of a loving Savior gather freshness and sweetness because mingled with "the sweet-smelling savor" of the adoration of the saints. There the prayers of God's people ascend together, like perfumed incense, to Heaven; and the glory of grace descends, and hearts are awed and subdued before the gracious presence of the gracious God. In that communion a loving Christ reveals himself to the waiting and worshiping soul as the balm for its wounds, as the healer of its diseases, as the comforter for its sorrows, as the strengthener of its weakness, as the enlightener of its darkness, as the supreme Lord of all its affections. Thus "help from the sanctuary" comes, and "strength out of Zion" is afforded.

Many a forlorn and dejected Christian has gone away from the prayer meeting as from a Bethel, where faith had seen the ladder reaching up to God and the angels ascending with the prayers of devout hearts, and descending again with hands full of blessings, which promised refreshment for many a tiresome day in the future! Many a weary child of Christ has departed from the public preaching of the gospel, as the apostles came down "Tabor's glorious height," with the law and prophecy and the gospel mingling their lines of light into a coronal of beauty for the brow of the meek One who walked by their side, and who was their personal Savior, and never afterward can they doubt that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world.

Reader, be careful to put yourself where the Lord can "send you help from the sanctuary." Go to church whenever you can.

The Irrepressible Conflict.

The thoughtful student of passing events can not fail to see that the contest between good and evil, between light and darkness; between the church and the world is increasing in intensity. Every aggression on the part of the forces of the church is meeting with a most determined opposition, and is contested with a fury inspired by the prince of this world. Every true man or woman who raises the voice of warning to the unwary, or corrects with rebukes the sins and sinners of the day, who pictures sinful folly in its true colors and paints the abounding worldliness in its hideous aspects, is certain to receive blows dealt from unexpected quarters. There is, and has always been, an antagonism between good and evil that nothing can reconcile. Righteousness and unrighteousness, infidels and believers, Christ and Belial can not have fellowship together. When they meet, the dreadful alternative is, that one or the other must go down in disaster and defeat and utter ruin. There can be no compromise by which peace may be patched up. Neither side can receive a capitulation from the other. The contest can be settled only by the complete destruction of one side or the other. The church of Christ champions the cause of good, of righteousness and of God. The "world that lieth in the wicked one" champions the cause of evil, of unrighteousness and of Belial. In this conflict, reader, upon which side have you ranged yourself?

"Impudent Impotence and Impotent Impudence."

This is the alliteration and vigorous characterization employed by Dr. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, in an address before the Episcopal Church Congress, recently held in Louisville, Ky. The subject under discussion was the change of name from the Protestant Episcopal Church to "the American Church." The great Boston divine, the foremost Episcopal clergyman on the continent for pulpit power and popular gifts, resisted the proposition with signal ability, and so well sustained his argument as to elicit frequent and rapturous applause. He pronounced the proposition "preposterous," in that it arrogated to the church the claim of universal and exclusive domination in America. When the great orator said, "It is because of our impudent impotence and impotent impudence that we are separated from the people of America," high-churchism shuddered with a chill of sickly horror. Such blasphemy, and from within the church! But, too honest to belie his convictions and too brave to conceal them, the eloquent author of "The Ephanies of Our Risen Lord" turned a calcium light on "the preposterous claims" of a pretensious, puerile ecclesiasticism, and plead for a church whose only mission is to save the lost, and whose ministry are called and ordained by the Holy Ghost.

The following report of the address by Dr. Phillips Brooks, written by a correspondent of the Christian at Work, will give the reader a good idea of the breadth and trend of his able argument:

He was glad to see that the subject was treated seriously. The party who are anxious for a change of name have only one aim, and that is they wish in some way or another to take some name that absolutely declares that we are the only church in America. This I repudiate. it is false. Multitudes in the church do not believe this, the church does not teach it, it can not be found in the Scriptures. We do not believe in apostolic succession. We recognize the leading of the Spirit, and do not believe it is necessary to trace everything back to history! There are two kinds of churches, those governed by Bishops, and those which are not. The Protestant Episcopal Church is one governed by Bishops, and that is the difference, and (with emphasis) the only difference between us and other churches. We are told that the change of name would enlarge the church. We certainly need enlargement—we are a little thing; but the enlargement we need is to find the truth of Jesus Christ in the Bible, to discern a deeper spirituality: this is the "enlargement" we need. What keeps our church away from the American people, said Mr. Brooks, is that it copies too closely the English Church; and we should insist on our members being more American. Another thing which separates us is our preposterous claims. It is because of our impudent impotence and impotent impudence that we are separated from the people of America. Again, another reason for our smallness is because we separate ourselves from other churches. We must understand that "the American Church" consists of all the Christian churches in America. If we expect other churches to unite with us, we must abandon our nonsensical theory of apostolic succession. The next General Convention will be a most critical one. But let us stand for liberty, and call ourselves a church of Christ, and not "the church." I quarrel with none who are opposed to me in their belief, but when it comes to putting it into the name of the church it is going too far.

Those were brave words, and timely spoken. A "deeper spirituality" is the condition of "enlargement," beyond all question. Not by high claims of ecclesiastical pedigree, nor by preaching a smooth gospel to fashionable folly and slumbering consciences, can any church prosper, but by the development of a true spiritual life. With clear conversions and earnest consecration will come speedy and constant "enlargement." There is solemn significance in the orator's words, "We are a little thing." Measured by the strength and growth of other evangelical churches, that is a sad fact. But why this smallness? should be the prayerful inquiry of every churchman. Dr. Brooks has indicated not only the reason, but the remedy. Whether his solemn warnings will be heeded is very doubtful. We shall hear the same loudness from the "little thing," as before, and the same vain looking for of "enlargement" where it can never be found. "Impudent impotence and impotent impudence" will never make a great church, although it may claim to be the "church of America."

What Our Papers Say.

A recent number of the Texas Advocate, in an encouraging article on "Help for a Troubled Soul," has these edifying words:

We are conscious that we need to become more akin to God before we can really find our way to God; and as one has said, "We look back upon Christ, and wonder at the intimacy and blessedness of the fellowship that he had with the Father, even while he was in the world." If we could only have the same fellowship with God; if we could share this trust, then indeed should we be blessed, and doubt no more forever. Let us try to grasp the mighty truth that it is to this Christ calls us; even to this blessed experience do we find access through him. We are to come to the Father by him—that is, we are to be made so completely one with himself, through the power of the Holy Ghost, that his access to the Father shall be ours, his vision of God's face our vision, his trust in God's love our trust, his love for God our love. We are to be members of his mystical body, and the life that dwells in him is to dwell in us; and he is to reveal the fullness of the perfection of his life through us. In the words of one whose holy life was the best witness of his holy heart: "Whereas, in former days we cried to God and he did not seem to answer us, tried to struggle in God's presence and were beaten back again and again, and could never find our way in the light and glory in which God dwells, now we speak to God face to face, and are conscious that we are his children, and that he regards us with all the tenderness of a Father's love, and this has come from our entering into fellowship with the very life of the Lord Jesus Christ, who has made his Sonship ours, his access to God the high prerogative of all who are spiritually one with himself."

In an able article, on the "Enduement of the Spirit," the Standard, of Chicago (Baptist), closes with this paragraph:

What is there, then, for us in the promise of the Spirit? Just this—all that we need, all and more, in filling the place assigned us as the Lord's servants, and in doing the work he has given us to do. We have a right to ask for "enduement," rich and gracious, always at call and always abundant, for all that is appointed to us and expected of us. Is not this enough? To any one of us it is not of the least consequence whether what John, or Peter, or Paul had we may have. They had their place and work, and God richly endowed them for it. We have ours, and God will in like manner endow us. But let us be sure to realize and appreciate what is our privilege even in this aspect of it. There are "greater works" needed now than were needed in the Savior's time or in the time of the apostles. To so carry on the Lord's work in this amazing period of the world's history: to meet the exigencies of the hour as they hourly arise: to make the Christianity of the nineteenth century that sort of Christianity which the nineteenth century needs: to trample down the barriers which rise between the truth as it is in Jesus and the souls it would save: to so deal with the myriad forms of modern infidelity and false religion as that they shall not ruin the world our gospel is given to redeem: to do any part of this work, however small, which falls to the lot of any one of us—these are the "greater works." Truly, truly, does the Christianity of our time need a baptism of the Spirit such, perhaps, as has never been had since that pentecostal day itself.

A Tribute.

I feel like expressing my emotions of sadness and joy this morning while reading in the ADVOCATE of the death of Bro. Landrum. No preacher in the Louisiana Conference knew him better than I did. He was with me his first year as preacher in Louisiana. I was present when he withdrew from the Conference, and asked him of his faith. He said, as to the reality of religion it was unwavering. I met him in Galveston, Texas, when he was deeply penitent; said he had made a mistake and, by the grace of God, would make amends. He did. I knew much of his inner life, and never knew anyone with a more sincere and honest heart. Knowing him as I did, I was not at all surprised to hear that he died a triumphant death. Like many other pilgrims, after passing over a rough sea, he had a safe landing.

JOHN PIPES.

We have often wondered what the peculiar reason was for Paul to lay such special emphasis upon the injunction to the Corinthians to abound in the grace of liberality, and why he put it in such a peculiar way. He said, "See that ye abound in this grace also." Grace is generally defined as something "free," and human tongues delight to expatiate on "free grace." The graces of religion are cultivated by their own exercise, and in all the graces, except this one, this exercise is an inexpensive one. The cultivation of the grace of liberality, like all the balance, requires the practice of liberality. There is no other way for graces to grow, and as liberality is the most costly of all the graces, there was need for Paul's special admonition—"See that ye abound in this grace also."

Notes.

We commend to all our young preachers this paragraph from the Examiner:

It is well known that there are men who seldom preach a sermon or make a public address, without having sundry scraps in it of their own personal history or idiosyncracies—so many of them, that it would be an easy matter to make a complete history of their lives and personal tastes, by simply noting down what is heard from themselves in their speeches or sermons. The habit is a vicious one and comes of thoughtlessness or of excessive self-esteem. As a rule hearers do not care a fig about such scraps of personal information. There are preachers and public speakers from whom not a word is heard about themselves, and we earnestly commend their example to every young man who means to become a minister of the gospel.

Another thought for the young preachers: Excepting the grace of God, a preacher's largest and best capital, that which will be drawn upon most frequently is good health. The apostle warns us about "receiving the grace of God in vain;" he also exhorted Timothy to care for his health. Grace and health are a preacher's capital, and one is not to be used at the expense of the other. Health is the basis of high thinking, and high thinking is the basis of true preaching. The grace being the same, the healthy preacher will preach a more effective gospel. Look to your health, young brethren.

We suppose that "praters" is a race that will never come to an end, but sometimes they can be headed off. If any of our pastors are troubled by the seventh-day "praters," orating everywhere and distributing their tracts, to prove that Saturday is the true Sabbath, we recommend them to procure Dr. Harrison's little tractate, entitled "The Christian Sabbath." It effectually puts a quietus upon all such pratings, and if generally distributed among our people, will arm them against all these seventh-day people. His little book on the "Scripture Mode of Baptism" is also a first-rate weapon against that class of Christians who insist on "burying you in baptism" whether you will or no. Both may be procured from our House in Nashville for ten cents apiece.

The prayer of the church, that God would open the heathen nations for the reception of the gospel, has been abundantly answered. The world is now open. The prayer of the church that God would send forth laborers into his vineyard has also been abundantly answered. Young men and women in every part of our great country are offering themselves to the Mission Boards of the churches for service in foreign fields. The numbers offering are unprecedented. Now the church needs to pray that God will give the means to send them. Let the church everywhere pray for a baptism of the grace of liberality, and God will answer. Reader, did you ever pray to God to make you more liberal with your money? Try it once—a dozen times!

A feature of gospel work inaugurated in Richmond, Va., by the pastor of one of our churches is worthy of imitation by the pastors of churches in other cities. Our observation is that there is too little mutual help by the pastors and members of our churches in cities. Anything that will tend to band all together in a bond of union and strength against the common enemy is worthy of serious consideration. If there ever was a time when the churches should stand shoulder to shoulder, now is the time. Here is the new feature which commends itself:

Rev. W. E. Evans, of Park Place Church, has organized a society of picked men and women of his church for the purpose of holding revival meetings in churches in the city where their services may be needed. Their first field has been Denny Street Church, where God has blessed their labors, and up to this time about twelve persons have been converted. This is a good move. Let the strong help the weak. Let other pastors along the line of the strong churches follow in a work like this.

We copy from an exchange:

Two sisters had a thirst for knowledge. They were longing for the opportunity to go away to college. They had counted the cost and found it far exceeded their slender purse. They were asked by a friend, "can't your father help you?" "Yes, but it costs so much to train his colts; he is fitting them for the race course." And so it is, there are not a few fathers who expend more to fit their horses for the race course than their children for the race of life.

We have seen a man actually get mad when the teacher's little bill of $2 a month came in. We have seen the same man spend cheerfully more than a year's tuition to get ready for a camp hunt that would last about six days. The services of a good and competent teacher is the cheapest thing in this country. In other words, such services can not be computed in money. As the late Christian Reid once said to his law-class in regard to attorney's services—"They are simply invaluable."

Personals.

Dr. Barbee, our Book Agent, passed through our city, last week, en route for the Texas Conferences. He gave us an interesting chat about Nashville matters.

Messrs. Jones and Small have an appointment for a five-weeks' meeting in Kansas City, beginning January 1.

We beg pardon of the Knights of Labor. Last week the printer made us say that they want to take in the liquor dealers; but we wrote, "The Knights of Labor want take them in."

The death is announced of Rev. Dr. Nelles, chancellor of Victoria University, Ontario. We met him at the Methodist General Conference, at Philadelphia, in 1881. He had the true Christian spirit, and we heard him preach a fine sermon on "Eternal Life," which completely captivated the large audience at Grace Church.

Jenny Lind, the Swedish singer, is dead, aged sixty-six years.

The American Woman's Suffrage Association held a session recently in Philadelphia, and there were in attendance sixty-three delegates, representing thirteen States. They say that 1,000 newspapers publish a weekly column in the interest of woman suffrage.

The scoundrelism of this country is amazing. It has been ascertained that the "life-preservers on the ill-fated "Vernon" were filled with grass, and that about thirty-six persons were weighted down to a watery grave by them! What next?

Rev. J. A. Parker, our pastor at Ruston, La., is making earnest prohibition speeches in Lincoln parish, besides attending to the duties of his pastorate.

Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, began a series of articles on Georgia in the last New York Christian Advocate. We express the hope that he may be able to open the eyes of some of that paper's readers.

Rev. John F. Hughes, the veteran presiding elder of the Tennessee Conference, has been appointed to the Nashville City Mission. He has been thirty-six consecutive years a presiding elder. Men of experience are the men for mission work, other things being equal.

A writer from Atlanta, Ga., in the Western Christian Advocate, has this sentence about the Methodist Episcopal Church in Atlanta: "The Methodist Episcopal Church here is no more popular than the Church, South, is in the North." Curious!

Our brethren up North do some strange things. Take this as an example: The Dakota Conference has elected Bishop Fowler a reserve delegate to the next General Conference!

Dr. Lyman Abbott will supply the Beecher pulpit until a successor to Mr. Beecher is chosen.

The papers report that Messrs. Moody and Sankey have decided to abandon tabernacle work and hereafter to work in connection with churches. It is also understood that they will hereafter work separately.

Bishop Seymour, of Illinois, in the recent Episcopal Congress, spoke of the non-Episcopal Churches as "hordes of petty sects." How he must have "scringed" under Dr. Phillips Brooks' terrific arraignment of the "impotent impudence" of the dogma of apostolic succession! The spirit of Martin Luther must have been in that Congress!

An industrious and sober young man could find a home in a Christian family, and have the benefit of acquiring an education, by giving part of his time to the work of a farm. For particulars write to Mr. J. C. H. McKinney, Anguilla, Miss.

Bro. Marcy Lyons' meeting at Parker Chapel, last week, resulted in twelve conversions and five accessions to the church.

Bro. Kimball says that the results of Rev. Sam Small's meeting, in Morgan Street Church, are 18 accessions, 50 backsliders reclaimed, and 50 new conversions.

Bros. Marcy Lyons and Walter Dunstan were recommended for admission on trial in the Louisiana Conference by the Carondelet Street Quarterly Conference, on Monday night last; and C. B. Carter, by the Felicity Street Quarterly Conference, Wednesday night last. Verily, as Bishop McTyeire said, "New Orleans Methodism is a live branch."

Whatever we may think of Mr. Gladstone's present position before the world, we must acknowledge that these words of his deserve to be remembered:

It is our supreme duty to do what we can to make it as easy as possible for men to do right, and as difficult as possible for them to do wrong.

The Case of the Anarchists.

This case has excited attention in all parts of the world. The diabolical deed committed by them, and the high-handed and underhanded measures resorted to, to escape punishment have alarmed the fears of all thoughtful people. The universal opinion of the lovers of good order and obedience to law was freely expressed—that if these men are suffered to go without punishment, the foundations of civil society are broken up. The case has gone through all the courts, and the men are doomed. Here is a summary of the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the application for a writ of error in the case:

The court holds, in brief:

First—That the first ten amendments to the constitution of the United States are limitations upon federal and not upon State action.

Second—That the jury law of Illinois is upon its face valid and constitutional, and that it is similar in its provisions to the statute of Utah, which was sustained in this court in the case of Hoyt vs. the territory of Utah.

Third—That it does not appear in the record that upon the evidence the trial court should have declared the juror Sanford incompetent.

Fourth—That the objection to the admission of the Johann Most letter and the cross-examination of Spies, which counsel for the prisoners maintained virtually compelled them to testify against themselves, were not objected to in the trial court, and that, therefore, no foundation was laid for the exercise of this court's jurisdiction, and

Fifth—That the questions raised by General Butler in the case of Spies and Fielden upon the basis of their foreign nationality were neither raised nor decided in the State courts, and, therefore, can not be considered here.

The writ of error prayed for must consequently be denied. There was no dissenting opinion.

Items of Interest.

In the recent municipal elections in Kansas, 25,318 women cast their votes. As the total vote was a little more than 90,000, it shows that the women out there are not "indifferent to suffrage."

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church raised last year $190,000.

The one hundred and twenty-first anniversary of the old John Street Methodist Church, New York, was celebrated October 30.

It is said that $3,000,000 are spent annually in this country to secure patents that never amount to anything. There must be many geniuses here.

For the year ending June 1, the total number of ocean wrecks was 839; sailing vessels, 566, steamers, 261.

The first of this year the Montana Legislature offered ten cents bounty for every dead prairie dog and five cents for every dead ground squirrel, and the money began to go out of the treasury so fast that an extra session was called to repeal the law.

One of the most serious social items floating about is, that "in one day in September over one hundred divorces were granted in Chicago."

The decrease in the number of saloons in Minnesota since high license went into effect is a little less than one-third.

The prohibition election in Tennessee resulted as follows: For prohibition, 117,504 votes; against, 145,137 votes—majority against prohibition, 27,633.

NOVEMBER 8, 1887.

Bishop Hargrove gave this deliverance to one of the Conferences in the far West. Preachers will take notice.

A preacher or a choir has about as much right to introduce a new Bible as a new hymn book. A preacher ought to feel as much responsibility for the doctrines taught by the choir as for those taught from the pulpit. He ought, therefore, not only to see that our own book is used, but he ought also to select the hymns.

Books.

CHOIR AND CLASS. By S. W. Straub. Publishers, S. W. Straub & Co., 243 State street, Chicago. 301 pages, well bound, with illustrated title and moulded edges. Price, $9 per dozen.

This is a new singing-book, and contains about two hundred pages of sacred music for choirs, mostly anthems. They seem to be exceedingly well adapted to church use. The publishers offer to mail one copy to any choir leader or singing teacher for examination, with a view to adoption, for sixty cents.

From W. J. Shuey, Dayton, Ohio, we have received the following:

THE COMING REVIVAL. A series of tracts.

CHRISTMAS SELECTIONS.

CHRISTMAS CHEER.

AT THE MANGER.

The tracts and selections are fifteen cents a copy, or $1 50 per dozen. The others are five cents a copy, or fifty cents per dozen, postpaid.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR 1888.

In connection with the International Sunday-School Lessons for 1888, it is now highly probable that no one book will prove of greater value or excite more widespread interest than the Bible Studies, prepared especially for these lessons of 1888, by the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., late pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and the well-known evangelist and writer on religious subjects. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York and Chicago, are early in the field with this volume. It covers the Old and New Testament International Lessons by a plan of treatment which is decidedly new and interesting.

The publishers have done well by the Bible Studies. Its size and pocket-form, and the style of manilla or cloth binding, make it convenient to handle. The type is clear and the paper good. The publishers offer it by mail, post-paid, on receipt of fifty cents.

We have received from the Publishing House at Nashville the following pamphlets:

THE SCRIPTURE MODE OF BAPTISM.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

Both by W. P. Harrison, D. D., Book Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Price, ten cents each.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHER. By John B. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. Price, ten cents.

EUREKA SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASS BOOK. Published by E. Glaeser, 5 Clinton Place, New York. Prices, $1 and $1 50 per dozen, according to size.

THE PEOPLE'S HYMN BOOK. A selection of the most popular Psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, with appropriate tunes. By Samuel B. Schieffelin. Printed page, seven and a half inches by four inches. Pages, 140. Price, in board covers, twenty cents, $15 per hundred; in flexible cloth cover, twenty-five cents, $20 per hundred.

THE DO SOCIETY; OR, THE THUGEE CONFESS. By Mrs. P. B. Howard. Southern Methodist Publishing House. Price, fifty cents.

Of this little book, the Sunday-school Editor says:

"The author of this entertaining little book has furnished, in the course of a pleasant story, much valuable counsel to young Christians wishing to do good, but at a loss how to begin or what to do. 'The Do Society' will furnish suggestions and many instructive illustrations to guide such persons. In every page the Savior is honored, and in every lesson true religion and sound morality are taught."

A more readable book of travel has not been written for many a day than Dr. Mackenzie's "Some Things Abroad." Not because the author has found out any new route of travel, or that he has seen things that no one else has seen, but because he puts these things in a fresher and different light, and because, furthermore, he touches upon those little things which really make the individuality of a people, but which are too often overlooked by travelers and book writers, or regarded as of little importance. Dr. Mackenzie has the gift of a fascinating style, and he is possessed, moreover, of a quiet humor, which makes his book doubly enjoyable. A good thing about the make-up of this book is a copious index, by means of which you easily find out what the author has to say about any place without a perplexing hunt through the whole volume.

THE ELECTRIC THEORY OF ASTRONOMY. By H. T. Kavanaugh, M. D., D. D.

This book is not without merit. The author informs us that it is the result of fifty years of preparation. The prime purpose of the work is to show that, according to known laws of electric action, we can account for the revolution of the earth upon its axis, its magnetism, and its polarity by self-adjusting forces which secure a uniform and unwavering course of action through all time. The theory is plausible, and the arguments to establish it are ingeniously presented. It is too speculative, however, to be of practical value to science. The style is pleasing and lucid.

The chapter on the "Office and Influence of the Moon" will prove of great interest to those who are accustomed to consult her majesty as to the times and seasons for planting seed. After citing a variety of phenomena, which he claims are due to the moon's influence, the author says: "In the light of all these facts, we ask the visionary, captious objectors whether those old sayings, so universally used by old farmers, that there is a right and wrong time of the moon for planting certain kinds of seed, are to be denounced as 'superstitions'?"

Dr. Kavanaugh is evidently in love with his theory, and looks for it to bring about a revolution in science.

W. R. M.

A Positive Gentleman.

Which is the most positive gentleman? Certainly Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein is certain to cure coughs, colds and croup. It is pleasant and effective.

Notice.

The class of the fourth year will please meet us in Winona, Monday, November 21, so we can begin the examination in the afternoon of that day.

Brethren, please be prompt.

JOHN W. BELL,
G. W. GORDON, Com.

We have received this item of good news just as we go to press:

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Thompson, Bro. John Beville, of Jackson, Tenn., and myself in great revival here. Began last Thursday. Up to date, twenty-one have joined our church—more to follow. The house is crowded every evening with attentive listeners. Pray for us, and come and help us. Yours, etc.,

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

On a first glimpse at the sea. "Astonishing! Who would have thought there could be as much water as that?" "True; and remember you only see what's on top."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

Housekeeper (to new cook just imported): "Bridget, how do things keep in the new refrigerator?" Bridget: "Well, mum, they all seem to kape poorly well, barrin' the olive which 'pears to mill ivery blessid day."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart: it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the ADVOCATE; but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm confections made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been unSurely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy. Therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the case, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

GRANDPAPA'S SPECTACLES.

Grandpapa's spectacles can not be found;
He has searched all the rooms, high and low, round and round.
Now he calls to the young ones, and what does he say?
"To whence for the child who will find them to-day."

Then Harry and Edward and Nellie all ran,
And a most thorough hunt for the glasses began;
And dear little Nell, in her generous way,
Said, "I'll hunt for them, grandpa, without any pay!"

All through the big Bible she searches with care,
That lies on the table by grandpapa's chair;
They feel in his pockets, they peep in his hat,
They pull out the sofa, they shake out the mat:

Then down on all-fours, like two good-natured bears,
Go Harry and Ned, under table and chairs;
Till, quite out of breath, Ned is heard to declare,
He believes those glasses are not anywhere.

But Nellie, who leaning on grandpapa's knee,
Was thinking most earnestly where they could be,
Looked suddenly up in the kind, faded eyes,
And her shining brown ones grew big with surprise.

She clapped both her hands, all her dimples came out;
She turned to the boys with a bright, roguish shout—
"You may leave off your looking, both Harry and Ned,
For there are the glasses on grandpapa's head!"

MR. EDITOR: We are two little neighbors that live across the street from one another. We play together every day. I, Walter, am several years the oldest, and have no mamma or papa, but live with my auntie, who has a sweet little girl baby, named Ethel. I love her very much. My pet dog died the other day. I, Carol, live with my mamma and papa. I have a sweet little baby brother, named Coleman. I have two little kittens. Mary Twerdie and Velvet Paws. M. T. is named for Walter's teacher, who gave it to me. Carol's mamma reads us the little folks' letters in the ADVOCATE. We live on the banks of the Tombigby river. The boats come up here from Mobile when the river is high. One boat, the "Gardiner," was burned just below here last winter. We have lots of fun watching for boats in the winter, for our roads get so muddy we can't get far out of the house. We have our church, Hebron, three miles from here. Dr. Jones is our Sunday-school superintendent. He is so good and kind. All the children and old folks, too, love him. We had a nice time at Hebron, on Children's Day, in May. We have the famous "Gilderoy" for our presiding elder. We all love him.

Your little friends,

WALTER M. CONNER,
CAROL W. OATS.

STONE, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I live in the country. My father takes the ADVOCATE, and I am anxious to tell you how much your valuable paper is appreciated in our home. I am fond of reading and enjoy the children's letters very much. All our family are Methodists, and I am proud to say the people in this part of the country are church-going people: even our baby cries to go. Papa has eight children; two of them are twins. We go to school to our cousin, Miss Leona Chesney, of Natchez, Miss. I study Scholar's Companion, fifth reader, History of United States and England, grammar, third geography, and am cipherring in reduction ascending. Hoping to see my letter in the children's column, I remain,

Your little friend,

DORA DAVIDSON.

DARRINGTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I see so many little folks writing to the dear old ADVOCATE, I thought I would write, too. My sister is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and I always like to read the children's letters. I am a little country girl. I don't go to my Sunday-school now, but I did go when I was in Franklin. All of the children just love Bro. Clay. He is so kind and good. My sister says she just loves to hear him preach. Everyone loves him, young and old. I will close by asking a question: Where is the word "lady" found in the Bible? With many good wishes for your excellent paper. I remain, Your little friend,

Darbys Fluid dispels all forms of epidemic diseases by destroying the spores or germ poison that cause contagion.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy eleven years old. I do not go to school, but mamma teaches me at home. I study history, arithmetic, spelling and writing. I go to Sunday-school, and like it very much. My father and mother are teachers. We learn to sing and have essays to read in Sunday-school. The last one I read was on obedience, and our minister, Mr. Pugh, from Amite, who was present, said it was well read. As this is my first, I will close. I may write again.

Sprinkling the Flowers.

"Mamma," said Harry, "may I water your flowers this evening when you are gone away?"

"Yes," said his mother, "if you will be very careful not to step on the beds."

"I will," said Harry.

"Be sure you give them plenty, dear, for the ground is very dry. Do it at seven o'clock."

Mamma went away, and Harry wished the afternoon would be gone, for he was very anxious to water the flowers. He thought it very nice to hold the little red sprinkler and watch the fine spray as it went down upon mamma's pretty garden pets. He always noticed that their little faces of blue and pink and purple and white seemed brighter after it; and sometimes fancied they smiled up at him as if they wanted to say, Thank you. As it grew later the sky became dark and looked like rain. Harry looked up at the clouds, and hoped it would not rain before seven o'clock.

But it was sprinkling when he filled his watering pot at the fountain and began his work. He hurried with all his might, hoping to finish before it rained hard.

But before he was half done big drops came down. Then the girl came to the door and called:

"Master Harry, come in out of the rain this minute!"

"O Sarah," he said, "do get me an umbrella and let me water the flowers."

But she only laughed, and he went in with a very woe-begone face and was put to bed. He soon forgot his troubles in a nap which lasted till morning. Then he ran to mamma's room.

"O mamma," he said, "I didn't get all the flowers watered. It rained, and Sarah made me come in."

"Why, dear," she said, laughing, "there was no need of watering them when it rained."

"Dear me! I never thought of that," said Harry.

He looked out of the window and saw the raindrops shining like diamonds in the sunshine. Every tree and bush and flower looked bright, fresh and sweet.

"Mamma," he said, "do you think God has a great big sprinkler to water with?"

"No, I think not," said his mother.

"Anyway, I think he sprinkles better than I can," said Harry.

"Yes, I think so, too," said his mother.—Our Little Ones.

UNCOVER THE FAULTS.—Robert felt weary one morning, and concluded not to arise as he was called; as might be expected, he fell asleep, and awoke much later than he had intended. Being usually a helping hand in his little home, he slighted his first task, by smoothing up his rumpled bed instead of making it carefully, for he thought, "Who will discover the condition of the covers if the outer one is made to look all right?" So great was his hurry that he brushed his hair, forgetting altogether to wash his face or say his prayers.

When Uncle Rolf discovered that the face had not been bathed, Robert, much confused, though it wise to tell an untruth to cover his neglect. The untruth, as may be supposed, only added to the difficulty, and Robert lost his breakfast, his fair name, and his self-respect, while he wounded the loving Christ.

The root of the whole difficulty rested in Robert's heart; had he been truly honorable he would have managed the whole thing differently. A deceitful heart leads to the covering up of faults; an honorable heart leads to uncovering the faults.

Boys, look out for the first fault, and be brave about it; for a covered fault, like a buried seed, presently springs up multiplied many times.—Christian at Work.

Words of Commendation.

"He never speaks words of commendation," said a young man of his employer, "but if we make any slight mistakes in our work, he is always sure to censure us severely." As this remark fell casually upon my ear, I began to think how few were the words of commendation spoken in the different departments of life in comparison to the fault-finding ones. A few words of commendation, spoken at the proper time, have cheered many a heart that was sinking beneath its burden. If a clerk has been faithful and painstaking, a few words of commendation will make him feel your appreciation of him, and tend to make him more determined to please you in future. Speak words of commendation in the home. Nowhere are they needed as much as in the family circle. The tired father who comes home at night, weary and worn with the cares and disappointments of business, feels a new strength and impetus for the next day's struggle, if the smiling faces and thoughtful kindness of his family are shown him at the home-coming time. And the patient, faithful wife finds the long day indoors, which has been full of duties and wearying work, only hours spent in love's labor, when the husband and the children show her their appreciation of her self-sacrifice and constant ministrations in their behalf. Words of encouragement and commendation to the children, when they have performed their little tasks perseveringly and as well as they could, are only what they justly deserve and merit. Especially should they be shown appreciation when they have planned some kindly act "all their ownselves," to increase the happiness of the home-dwellers. And the help in the household, those who lighten the work of our homes, and who wait upon us and interest themselves in the home part of our lives, how it helps them to have a smile and a few words of commendation when the kitchen is neat and orderly, or the silver shines with an extra brightness, and the pudding for dinner was just right. There are very few times and places where words of commendation may not be used to great advantage. There is always some good in everybody, that the tact of a kind heart may bring out into notice by just such words.—Evangelist.

DECAY OF FAMILY LIFE.—An English journal deplores the tendency of modern life to be drawn from home by an endless variety of concerts, lectures, classes, temperance meetings and missions, whereby each member of a family becomes dependent upon external excitement for happiness. They meet only at hurried meals, and an evening at home without an engagement is almost insupportable. The division of life into seasons for country and city has much to do with this state of affairs. Churches and societies feel that they have but little time in which to work. Nor is this condition of things confined to cities. The large towns, and even the rural districts, speedily imitate, as far as they can, and reproduce the life of cities. Many a family has no time for morning prayer, the late hours of the preceding night compelling very late rising; and the day begins with hurried dressing, hurried breakfast, and then a rush to business or to school. Do not be driven into such a way of living by fashion, by business, by philanthropy, by the Sunday-school, or even by the church.—Congregationalist.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene L. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine

in use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how

RATCLIFFE—BERTHA E. RATCLIFFE was born in Orangeburg district, S. C., January 11, 1793, and died at her home, near Barlandsville, Jasper county, Miss., August 7, 1887, aged eighty-eight years, six months and twenty-six days. She was married in early life to John D. Ratcliffe, who died in 1863, leaving her a widow twenty-three years. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at an early age, and a quiet, consistent Christian lady, loved by all who knew her. It was the privilege of the writer, as her pastor, to visit her often for nearly two years; preached at her house and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and conversed with her freely about her future prospects. She was always bright and clear on the subject of her soul's salvation. She has gone to her reward, and our loss is her eternal gain. The following note from her children will close this obituary notice:

"Our mother was one of those meek and quiet Christians who are most loved and admired by those who know them best. Her extreme old age and feeble health rendered life a burden for many years; yet she never murmured—she said the Lord knew best. Her heart was always so full of love and gratitude that there was no room for complaint. 'God is so merciful and I am so unworthy,' was all her complaint. Our mother has furnished a Christian pattern worthy of our imitation. Her death was peaceful and her last words to those around her bed were, 'Meet me in heaven.'"

J. C. BROGAN, P. C.

GEANS—JOHNNIE GEANS was born November 14, 1872, and was drowned in Tippah river, Marshall county, Miss., July 23, 1887, aged fourteen years, eight months and eight days. Johnnie was a very industrious boy, and after finishing his week's work at twelve o'clock, Saturday, he was permitted to join some of his friends in the river to engage in a little social amusement during the evening. Unfortunately for Johnnie, a bathing was proposed, and as soon as he reached swimming water he sank and drowned before his companions could procure assistance enough to save him. It is supposed, as he could swim, that he cramped. A messenger immediately carried the sad news to his parents, which was like a dagger to their hearts. He was found at twelve o'clock that night, not far from where he sank, with his eyes closed and his arms folded across his breast, as if perfectly resigned to his fate.

Johnnie professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, just a few days before his death. He expressed himself to his mother, the night before he died, as being ready to go whenever the good Lord saw fit to call for him. Alas! how little did that fond mother think it would be so soon. What a consolation it must be to her to know that the one she loved so fondly is safe at home—free from every temptation and trial that he would be subject to in this life.

PARKER—MRS. LELA PARKER (nee Roper), daughter of Dr. Daniel N. and Carrie M. Roper, formerly of Frankfort, Ky., was born near St. Martinsville, La., and died, after two years of patient suffering, near Floyd, La., July 21, 1887, in the thirty-second year of her age. Gifted with rare beauty of person and sweetness of spirit, another of earth's purest ones has passed to the glory-land. Gentle, kind and unusually affectionate, it is believed that she was loved by all who truly knew her. "The first and great commandment" to love God, and "the second, which is like unto it," to "love" our fellow-men, seemed fully met in her character.

From early childhood she was quiet and meditative, and always gladly obedient to her parents; loving a step-father as her own "papa." A model for her brothers and sisters, ever ready with gentle reproof when needed, yet never seeking, nor needlessly exposing the faults of others. But in domestic and social circles always first to draw, with kindly hand, the mantle of charity over the imperfections of any. Like the Savior, whom she adored, self-forgetting in her labor for the happiness of others. Even in failing health, assisting a widowed mother in maintaining the family. She had a reverence for all that pertained to the sacred. She loved the services of the sanctuary, which she failed not to attend while health permitted. Her Bible was her loved companion. The weary sufferer has gone to her rest and her reward.

COUSIN ALBERT.

RATTS—MRS. THERESA RATTS, whose maiden name was Lembaugh, was born in Rowan county, N. C., January 5, 1821, and died May 29, 1887. She was married to Borrell R. Ratts, April 3, 1845, and they joined the Methodist Episcopal Church early in life and lived in the faith of Christ until they departed this life. Bro. Ratts died nearly five years before Sister Ratts; but, as the sunlight through clear, cold or cloudy sky gives light and warmth, life and cheerfulness to every living thing, so was our sister to her family, her church and her neighbors and to all. Her bright smiles were a genuine benediction to all that knew her. Truly consecrated to God, she ever reflected the spirit of Christ, whom she loved so well. She is with the angels in glory; it is well with her. God bless the children, and may they all follow the steps of the mother!

J. H. EVANS.

WILLIAMS—LUCY LURA, daughter of Issachar and Ida Williams, was born October 27, 1886, and died June 11, 1887. The empty cradle is a dear and sacred thing in that dear home, and the mother's arms ache for their accustomed burden. "The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be his name."

M. L. J. HOOVER.

A Luxury and a Necessity.

Mr. A. G. La Grange writes from Garden City, Minn.: "We have used up the old supply, and want to lay in a new supply for winter use. We do not like to be without it in the house. It is next to bread—a family necessity; in fact, I think all well-regulated families will eventually keep it, both as a luxury and a necessity; and when that happens I think a few years will be added to the average duration of human life. My daughter has experienced great benefit from the use of your treatment. Nothing could be more satisfactory."

What we want to make us true men, over and above that which we bring into the world with us, is some sort of God-given instinct, motive, and new principle of life in us, which shall make us not only see the right and the true and noble, but love it, and give up our wills and hearts to it, and find in the confession of our weakness a strength, in the subjection of our wills a freedom, in the utter carelessness about self-respect, such as we have never known before.—Charles Kingsley.

DON'T suppose, if you have that pain through the right side and shoulder blade, that yellowness of the skin and whites of the eyes, and furred appearance of the tongue, that these indications are of little account, or will depart of themselves; much better take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets and remedy the trouble. 25c. per vial.

People don't believe in fairies nowadays; nevertheless, good spirits still exist, and help us, in our times of trouble, better even than the little people we used to read about. One of these household spirits is called Love.

SARDIS, MISS., October 8, 1886.

Dear Sir: I am under many obligations to you for the bottle of Antidote sent me by mail. It "busted" my chills after the first dose, and I have not felt so well for a long time. Will do all I can to make the medicine known here.

A Peril of the Sea.

It is estimated that about one-eighth of the vessels "never heard from" are lost by collision with sunken or floating wrecks. The pilot charts of the Hydrographic Office show as many of these wrecks and derelicts as are reported; but, owing to the indifference of many of the captains who encounter them, the list is not always complete. The Navy Department some time ago sent out the "Despatch" to hunt up and destroy some of these wrecks, and she gave an excellent account of herself, destroying six of the most dangerous ones during her limited cruise. We have knowledge of what one small steamer has accomplished in this line, and at what a trifling expense. It seems to me that Congress should be induced to make a sufficient appropriation to keep a vessel like the "Despatch" continually at this work; and, if the subject of clearing the ocean of these floating dangers were submitted to an international congress for the purpose, the high seas could be so divided among the various nations that the expense would be very trifling, and one of the greatest menaces to sailing vessels and steamers alike would be practically removed. Several of the sunken wrecks along the coast have been struck by passing vessels a number of times, with more or less damaging results. There is urgent need of legislation for the removal or destruction of these dangers, as shown by the fact that the ship "Adelphus" remained a sunken obstruction off Cape Henlopen, most dangerous to navigation, from February 1 to August 10, 1886; and that quite a number of other such derelicts, sunk months ago, remain where they went down; and, though reported as dangerous by vessels passing them, no attempt has been made to get rid of them, as they do not come under our only law for the removal of such obstructions, which gives power to the War Department to destroy all such in our harbors, bays, or rivers, after due notice of thirty days. The law should provide for the removal of all such obstructions off our coasts.—Lieut. V. L. Cottman, in the Forum.

DISTRIBUTION OF AN INSECT SPECIES.—The Anonia plexippus an American butterfly, is now engaged in distributing itself over the world. It is extending itself both eastwardly and westwardly. Its natural range appears to be from the Hudson Bay Territory to the Amazon and Bolivia; but some thirty or forty years ago it began to wander. It has established itself and become abundant in the Sandwich Islands. The first specimens were observed in the Marquesas Islands, by a Roman Catholic missionary, about 1860. It is now the commonest butterfly there. It has appeared in the Society, Cook, Harvey, Samoan, Friendly and Feejee Islands, the North Island of New Zealand, Norfolk, Australia, Tasmania, the New Hebrides, Solomon Islands, New Guinea, Celebes and Java; and it was abundant in New Caledonia a few years ago, but has become more rare there. In the eastward direction it has made its way to the West Indies, has been long established in Bermuda, furnished one specimen in the Azores in 1864, was found in South Wales in 1876, at La Vendee—the only specimen yet found on the continent of Europe—in 1877, and in Kent in 1881.

TOO GOOD TO ABBREVIATE.—In a letter to Chaplain McCabe, Frederic J. Masters says: "You will be glad to hear that our Chinese brethren have collected $267 for missions this year. This is over $4 per member. Besides this, they are up to their apportionment in the other collections. They have done more than in past years toward pastoral support, and have sent $230 to China to help build a church and school in their native guen. Nearly all our members are poor, most of them being cooks and factory men. One brother, a small store-keeper, gave for himself and family $40 for missions. Fourteen of our members who had removed to Los Angeles during the year, have paid their missionary money twice over—once to the church at Los Angeles, and they have just sent us $23 that our collection here might not suffer through their removal. These are the men San Francisco newspapers tell us can not be converted."

Men Who Win.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS THROWN AWAY—HIS AIM WAS SUCCESS.

A close student of human nature is rarely willing to place large matters of trust in the hands of another, until he has seen the one whom he is to trust. He looks for the fresh health and vigor, the honest, frank countenance and manly form, and, in fact, all that is attractive in men. He doubts the dyspeptic with sallow skin, drawn-out features, the evident weak and irritable nature. He feels as Shakespeare makes Julius Cæsar say:

"Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o'nights
Yon Cassius hath a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much; such men are dangerous!"

He does not doubt the honesty of the poor unfortunate, but he fears disease of the body will affect the mind, bring misfortune upon the individual, and loss to himself.

It may be injustice to the weak, but if the man has not the mental strength, or if he is wrapped up in his misery, he can not take in the situation of the world, does not see that ideas are broadening, and that isms and teachings are advancing! How can an employer hope for success from such a man? The dyspeptic look, the wax-like complexion and sallow features show disease. The far-seeing man notes all these signs, and knows that the great light of man, the brain, is affected, or will be, at no distant day.

He discards the poor victim of disease who goes wearily out into the world. Discouraged at last he takes to his sick-bed. He seeks medical aid. Lacking the broad ideas of the successful man of the world, he tries the same medical treatment that he has tried many times before. The same bigoted counsel is sought, the same drugs are administered by the same old family friend that treated him months and years before, and his parents before him, and in such a way he drags out his miserable, unsuccessful existence.

Is he to blame? Why not? When he sees daily, and hears from every side, proclamations of a remedy known as Warner's safe cure, which is becoming more popular daily, hourly, while he is becoming weaker.

J. A. Gettys, insurance agent of Chillicothe, Ohio, suffered for nearly three years with dyspepsia in its worst forms; having periodical spells of vertigo, fainting and chills. He wrote over his own signature: "I spent about $500, had the best medical attendance, tried all the remedies recommended without success, until I was induced to try Warner's safe cure. I used three bottles, have gained twenty pounds and feel like a new man."

Such a man as we have described, nine times out of ten, unconsciously to himself or to his physician, has a kidney disorder, which is fast wasting his body and life. He sees the merits of Warner's safe cure at every turn, and hears it proclaimed from the house tops, and yet he does not use it, because it is said by his illiberal physician that it is not professional, and not admitted by the code. Meanwhile the man of the world presses forward, cares not a fig for this or that school; his aim in life is success, and he looks hopefully forward to the world beyond, believing and trusting in man in this world, and to his faith for the world beyond.

It is better that joy should be spread over all the day in the form of strength than that it should be concentrated into ecstacies, full of danger and followed by reactions.—Emerson.

For constipation, "liver complaint," or biliousness, sick headache, and all diseases arising from a disordered condition of the liver and stomach, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets—a gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

Religion gives part of its reward in hand, the present comfort of having done our duty; and, for the rest, it offers us the best security that heaven can give.—Tillotson.

HEADACHE: I can offer the miserable complaint-racked sufferer from Sick Headache a sure cure. I have taught many others how to prepare working oils. I can will send recipe for home. Take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets 25 cents per vial.

No man is ever off duty. In all places and at all times he is to be armed, watchful, ready for his work. The Scriptures make no provisions for "putting off" the armor of God.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The steamboat "Peninah" was burnt in Red river, near Alexandria.

Quite a number of people were poisoned at a supper in Franklin parish.

Two suspicious cases of fever have been reported at Sanford, Fla.

Col. S. M. Robertson has been elected to Congress from the Sixth District, Louisiana.

A gasoline explosion in a grocery in St. Louis buried seventeen persons in the ruins, eight of whom were taken out dead.

The Supreme Court has refused to grant a writ of error in the case of the condemned anarchists.

The gossips say if Mr. Vilas is transferred to the Interior Department, Congressman Blount, of Georgia, will be appointed Postmaster General.

The friends of the anarchists are using every means in their power to influence Gov. Oglesby to commute their sentences.

The talk now is that the President's Cabinet will be recast the latter part of this month: Lamar going on the Supreme Bench; Vilas, to the Interior Office, and Dickinson, of Michigan, in the Postoffice.

The mayor and aldermen of Birmingham were arrested, by indictment of the grand jury, for perpetrating a nuisance. Each gave bond to appear at the proper time.

The epidemic at Tampa is waning.

The troops gained a decisive victory over the rebellious Crow Indians, in which one of the chiefs was killed.

The Fifth National Bank of St. Louis has closed its doors.

It is thought that the cholera on the steamer "Britannica," in New York harbor, is completely killed off.

Order has been restored at the Crow agency, and all is quiet.

There are three new cases of fever and one death at Tampa.

The forest fires in West Virginia have had the curious effect to make the trees bud and put forth new leaves.

A motion to arrest Mayor Guillotte and Henry Larquie, of New Orleans, for contempt of court, has been entertained and ordered printed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The gallows upon which the anarchists are to hang has been prepared.

FOREIGN.

The decision in the O'Brien case was severely denounced by Mr. Dillon, in a speech at Limerick.

M. Waddington, minister of France to England, will resign.

False reports of Emperor William's health had a bad effect upon the Bourse.

O'Brien has been transferred from Cork to the prison at Tullamore, and is to wear the prison uniform.

The Home Rule Union of London has adopted resolutions of sympathy with Blunt and O'Brien.

A meeting of the English Cabinet resolved to continue its present vigorous policy in Ireland.

Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a speech to a large crowd, at Birmingham, upheld the government's policy toward Ireland, and said it was resolved to proceed boldly and firmly and bring it to a good conclusion.

The Queen has expressed her thanks to the mayors and municipal officers throughout the kingdom who contributed to make the jubilee a success.

The two Emperors of Germany and Russia, it is said, will meet on the seventeenth.

News from Stanley, under the date of August 8, have been received. He is still pursuing his way, and expected to communicate directly with Emin Bey by the fifteenth.

The commission in the case of the Caffarel scandal, has been given the widest powers, and inquiries will reach back as far as 1877.

O'Brien resisted the attempt to put the prison garb on him, and violence was not used on account of the state of his health.

The Crown Prince of Germany has had a recurrence of the growth in his throat, rendering another operation necessary.

The programme of ceremonies attending the celebration of the Pope's Jubilee has been published. The ceremonies begin December 31.

Earl Granville, in a speech at Haley, said he believed he would live to see the enactment of home rule, though not all its blessings.

There is talk of a railway between Kurracher and Upper India, which will enable producers to place wheat in London at a shilling per quarter less than at present.

Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, Wasting Diseases of Children, Chronic Coughs and Bronchitis, can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Prominent physicians use it and testify to its great value. Please read the following: "I used Scott's Emulsion for an obstinate Cough with Hemorrhage, Loss of Appetite, Emaciation, Sleeplessness &c. All of these have now left, and I believe your Emulsion has saved a case of well-developed Consumption."—T. J. FINDLEY, M. D., Lone Star, Texas.

A Magnificent Offer.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT AT ONCE.

The American Agriculturist (English or German), for the balance of this year and all of 1888—fourteen months.

"Fences, Gates and Bridges." A most practical volume, published October 15, only work of the kind extant, elegantly bound in cloth and gold. 300 illustrations. Books on architecture abound, but this is the first work specially devoted to the subjects upon which it treats. There are chapters upon rail and other primitive fences; stone, sod, board, and barb-wire fences, hurdles, gates and fastenings, wickets and stiles, country bridges and culverts; and also a chapter on fence law. The large number of illustrations are in most cases representations of fences, gates, etc., in actual use, the utility of which is thus made clear.

Engravings of the Homes of our Farmer Presidents, 11x18, issued during 1886 and 1887, viz: Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Garfield, etc., etc., together with descriptions of same, by eminent American writers.

We will furnish all the above, postpaid, for three dollars for new subscribers, or three dollars and twenty-five cents for renewals—cash in full with order. This is the offer of the season; nothing like it has ever been known. Address NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 112 Camp street.

Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you the November number of the American Agriculturist, containing four hundred and seven editorial, contributed and descriptive articles, and two hundred and forty illustrations. Also specimen pages of "Fences, Gates and Bridges."

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

J. C. M'ALLISTER, Agent,
146 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for $2 75, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or $3 for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

DIAMOND DYES AND LACTATED FOOD.—The manufactures of the old reliable establishment of Wells, Richardson & Co., of Burlington, Vt., are well known for their purity, and their patrons need have no fear of getting an inferior article, as they have shown their desire to attain to greater perfection in all their lines of manufactured goods. Be sure and ask for the Wells, Richardson & Co.'s goods.

"Life and Writings of Bishop Parker."

One copy of this superb work will be given for three new subscribers when accompanied by the cash in full.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR.,
Publisher.

In this number of the ADVOCATE will be seen the full and winter announcement of F. B. Hardon, who is so well known to many of our older patrons, and we cheerfully introduce him to all of the readers of the ADVOCATE. The stock of millinery goods on hand is ample, and of the latest fashions. Mrs. Hardon will be found presiding in the cosy little parlor at 29 Chartres street, which is a guarantee that customers will have the best attention and lowest possible prices.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

J. C. MORRIS.—The announcement is made in this issue of the ADVOCATE of the arrival of the fall and winter stock of this old established firm. All the latest inventions of house-furnishing goods will be found in stock, with a large and assorted stock of holiday goods. Orders sent to this house are under the immediate supervision of Mr. Eugene Dyer, and will receive his personal attention. Catalogues sent on application.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of November will be "red-letter month" for our agents. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 16-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference. North Mississippi agents can have it sent to Winona, if so desired. This offer is for agents only, as above stated, and during November only for Mississippi agents.

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Biddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

GRANT US THY PEACE!

Grant us thy peace! Our summer time is over,
The days of dreaming and delight are past;
Heavy and chill the wintry shadows gather;
One boon we crave, the sweetest and the last.
Grant us thy peace!

To others give the cup of joy full-flowing,
The bounding health, the strength for nobler strife;
We, too, have known the sunshine of thy favor;
Now, in the storm and bitterness of life,
Grant us thy peace!

The New Year comes with festival and gladness,
In happy homes he sits, a smiling guest;
But from his face we turn in silent anguish,
We, who have lost our sweetest and our best—
Grant us thy peace!

It is enough; be this henceforth our portion:
If less of earth, yet more of heaven and thee;
Until that hour of rapture and of triumph,
When thy beloved voice shall set us free,
Grant us thy peace!

The Theater and the Church.

BY REV. R. ABBEY.

The McKendree Church episode has at least waked up things. So now, Doctor, please to suffer a few words varying the subject a little. I have nothing to say about Emma. Perhaps enough has been said about her. Her performance was a little unusual, it is true; but what more could be expected from a smart, spoiled child, now a flattered, pampered theater-woman? A thousand times more important is the matter of $1,000, in one week, paid by members of that church for theatrical purposes.

This lends me to say some words about "The Theater and the Church:" first, conjointly, if you please, and then, maybe, a word or two severally. And this leads me to say that Dr. Kelley is more nearly right than many seem to suppose, when he places the church and theater so close together. For the theater is, and always was, both a church and religious institution, or, rather, I would say, it was always a religious institution, and for the last 1800 years or so has been a church institution. Does this surprise anyone? Then listen.

So we must look a little into the history and character of the stage. I have little or nothing to say myself, but will merely cite you to the history; of course, briefly.

"The art of dramatic representation has undergone great changes. In ancient Greece, partly from the character of the subjects selected, and partly from the origin of the drama itself, costume and acting were conventional, artificial and stereotyped. On this point we quote the words of Witzchel, who has written a hand-book for students on the Athenian stage. (Eng. trans. by Paul; ed. by T. K. Arnold, Lond., 1850.) 'There can be no doubt,' says he, 'that the somewhat fantastic costume which was handed down without any change from one generation of actors to another, was closely connected with the religious character of their tragic performances. The peculiar fashion and brilliant colors of the tragic wardrobe belonged rather to the Dionysian solemnities than to the stage. That Æschylus, by whom the greater part of it was invented, kept steadily in view the original intention of tragedy, is evident from notices which we find in ancient writers of his theatrical dresses having been worn in other religious ceremonies and processions. It is only reasonable to suppose that he would have given to the tragic stage a wardrobe of a very different description, had he not been influenced by the conviction that theatrical performances were in some sort a religious ceremonial.'"

Again: "The above description is, in the main, applicable to the Roman as well as the Greek theaters. The only additional point which it is necessary to notice is that, among the ancients, the acting of plays was not, as it is now, a regular and daily, but only an occasional affair, at festival seasons and the like. With the fall of the western empire, the disappearance of classic paganism and classic tastes, and the triumph of the Christianized barbarians of the north and east, theatrical performances ceased. But the liking of such things is not artificial. It is natural and irrepressible, and gradually, as the ancient culture resumed something of its former sway, efforts were made, not, indeed, to re-enact the majestic tragedy of Greece (for its language was scarcely known), or the pungent comedy of Rome, but to throw into dramatic form the 'mysteries,' 'miracles' and 'moralities' of the Christian religion. The rudeness of these medieval plays may, perhaps, suggest to us what Greek performances were before the days of Thespis. In fact, they were introduced as a means of edifying, as much as of amusing, the ignorant laity; were customarily the works of monks, and were performed on festive occasions in the churches." (Lib. Use. Know., Vol. 14, p. 338.)

Now, who will question not only the intimacy, but the identity of the theater and the church? The above historic extract goes back to the origin of the theater, or thereabouts, and shows that it was a religious institution.

Again: "Ancient art fell with pagan Rome. In the early ages of Christianity, anyone connected with the theater was not allowed baptism. The unwise zeal of the fathers was followed by an edict of the Emperor Julian to the same effect. The two Apollinarii, father and son, and Gregory, of Nazianzen, attempted to introduce religious plays, or mysteries, drawn from Scripture, to amuse the Christian people during the operation of Julian's law. In a short while, instead of the drama proper, there was nothing to lighten up the surrounding darkness but such productions as the saturnalian pageants, the Feast of Fools, and the Feast of the Ass."

Again: "In other European nations (other than Italy, 1529), as soon as dramatic composition rose to any degree of purity, it became thereby disconnected with the church. But in Spain this is by no means the case, for their best poets, while writing for the stage, have busied their pens in the composition of religious dramas. * * * So great was Calderon in the composition of religious plays, that by letters patent he enjoyed a monopoly of these productions for thirty-seven years." * * *

"Dramatic exhibitions in England, if they did not originate in the church, were, nevertheless, speedily appropriated by the clergy. Ecclesiastics were frequently the composers of the religious pieces, or mysteries, and they were found not seldom to be the actors. The mass of people, no doubt, owed a good deal of grotesque amusement, and were of occasional information to the biblical and legendary history which those rude attempts at the drama were fitted to convey. Those old religious plays are generally divided into two classes: miracles, or miracle plays, and moralities, or morals. The former were founded on scriptural narratives, or on the legends of the saints. The latter arose from the former by the increased introduction of imaginary features. These pious pastimes existed long before the Reformation." (Same, Vol. 5, pages 104, 105.)

Again: "The Old Testament, no doubt, contains numerous instances of dramatic dialogue, as in the book of Job, and of lyric poems placed in a dramatic connection, as Solomon's Song; but there is no instance in Hebrew literature of the existence of the drama, properly so called. The Hindus have an early dramatic poetry; but, unfortunately, this poetry dates back only to a time when the intercourse between Greece and India was close and frequent. It is to Greece alone that we, accordingly, must look for the invention of the drama, and to Athens, in particular, for its perfection. But even here it was originally exhibited only at a few festivals of a single god—Dionysus. There can be no doubt that the origin of the drama is to be sought for in the enthusiasm attendant on the worship of Bacchus." (Vol. 5, page 102.)

A little further excursion among the books would furnish almost any amount of information touching the history and character of the theater. Its relation to the church, if that is admissible, is easily seen. The church was the theater, and the theater was the church, though usually different parts of "worship" was acted in this and that way respectively. Women or girls on the stage is a new thing.

"The employment of female actors is of French origin, and dates from the first half of the seventeenth century. But they were not permitted, without molestation, to tread the English stage till 1661. Before this innovation female parts were performed by youths." (Vol. 14, page 339.)

Any amount almost of good reading of this kind could easily be furnished if needed. And yet away down here in almost the last decade of the nineteenth century some people are gravely discussing various questions as to how near these two "moral" and "respectable" and "religious" institutions do and do not approach each other! But it seems there's another church that is neither pagan nor papal. Maybe that's the church that Bro. Candler represented on the occasion of the recent flare-up in Nashville, and, if so, it changes the aspect of affairs considerably.

There is some difference in some matters of doctrine, usage, and morals, too, in this so-called "Christian" Church, before and since a Reformation it passed through some years ago. This church, in its reformed condition, is, and always was, in high, peremptory, uncompromising and non-debatable hostility to the theater, ancient or modern, in Nashville and out of Nashville. It holds this high and dogmatic relation to the theater because it rests on the Bible, and not on public opinion, editorial or dictatorial or mediatorial. We are not much in need of irreligious information, nor theatrical dictation, nor theater-going Methodist mediation touching the theater. We have no debates or discussions on the subject. If anybody wants to know how Protestant Christianity holds the theater, either at Ephesus or Nashville, we hand him a Bible. That answers all questions and shuts out all debates before they begin.

As to the distinction in theatrical plays touching the question of morals, there is no such distinction only as the rule may apply to churches, families or anything else. There are few things that could not be improved, or degraded. Theatrical morals is a question of degree, not of kind. A theater is a theater the world over. Its morality, as some men count morality, is never looked for or seen. There are degrees between moral chastity and crime. You don't know what you are going to get, or in what form of wink, sign, innuendo or gesture it may come till you go.

In England the degree to which licentiousness may be introduced in theaters, by words, actions, or otherwise, is regulated by law. Every play, or change of one, must be first submitted to the lord chamberlain, for license, seven days before production, under penalty of £50. (Sixth and Seventh Vic., C. 68.)

In this country we have no protection. Any religious man, familiar with the theater before his conversion, will tell you the moral chastity of the stage is notoriously low, and generally on a down grade.

DELTA VIEW, Mississippi.

Rev. J. L. Forsythe.

IN MEMORIAM.

BY REV. C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

The Rev. James L. Forsythe, late of the Mississippi Conference, was born in the north of Ireland, near Port Rush, February 4, 1815. His parents were pious, and strove to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. They were highly respectable people, and reared a large family, all of whom occupied honorable positions in society. Several of the brothers came to this country, and settled in the Northern States and in Canada, making useful and respected citizens. He, himself, came to this country in about the seventeenth year of his age. His time was spent at first mostly in school teaching. He led prayer meetings, superintended the Sabbath-school, and was known as the religious youth. No one was surprised when he acknowledged the divine call, and was licensed to preach the gospel. He was admitted on trial in the Missouri Conference in 1836. His education and culture, accompanied by his quiet, but earnest piety, gave him at once a prominent place in his Conference. His first appointment was to Paris as preacher in charge. Afterwards he was made pastor at Columbia, at St. Charles, at Danville, at Lexington, and at St. Louis. He was elected deacon at Columbia in 1838, and was ordained by Bishop Soule in 1839. The delay was occasioned, doubtless, by the absence of a Bishop. He was ordained elder by Bishop Waugh in 1840.

In 1840 he was transferred to the Mississippi Conference, where he lived and labored in the gospel ministry, without any break or intermission, until he was taken up to his reward, from Madison circuit, Jackson district, on Saturday, September 17, 1887. His first appointment in Mississippi was to Port Gibson, where the session of the Conference was held that year. Just forty-six years from that time another session of the Conference was held in the same place. It was the conclusion of the fiftieth year of his ministry. By the request of his brethren he preached a semi-centennial sermon on the first night of the Conference. The sermon was rich in interesting incidents of the past, and was highly appreciated by his ministerial brethren, as well as by the large audience who heard it. He has filled all the most important stations in the Conference; was never local, and never on the supernumerary or superannuated list. He was put in charge of circuits, stations and districts, and was for two years president of Fayette Academy. In all these positions he secured for himself the approbation of his brethren, and made a record which entitled him to the front rank in his Conferences. In the earlier years of his ministry his preaching was at times accompanied with great power, and he was considered a successful revivalist. He rejoiced greatly in his calling, and felt that the diligent cultivation of the fields of labor assigned him was at once a duty and a delight.

His ministrations were the cause of the conversion of Bishop Marvin, of precious memory. The Bishop always regarded him as his spiritual father, and delighted to refer to the services which led to his conversion. It was beautiful to see them together; the Bishop still willing to sit at his feet, and looking up to him with gratitude, while he seemed oppressed with the honor of having given so distinguished a son to the church.

Bro. Forsythe was twice married. The first time in St. Louis, on November 4, 1841, to Miss Maria Theresa, the daughter of Capt. William Shepard, of New Orleans. There were born unto them seven children, three of whom died in comparative infancy; another, the first wife of Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the Mississippi Conference, died just as she had attained a beautiful and accomplished womanhood. Two daughters and a son survive.

His first wife was an invalid for many years, and it was in the tender care with which he ministered to her in her declining years, and smoothed her passage to the grave, that his real character of gentleness and tenderness shone forth. No one could have been more attentive or more unselfish in his devotion. For the many years of her illness his patience never flagged, and his unwearying attention was equal to every demand upon him.

His second wife was Miss Laura Steele, of Georgetown, Miss. They were married on March 17, 1880. She proved a helpmeet, indeed, and inspired him with a renewed interest in his Master's cause. The last years of his life were made joyous and successful by his association with her, and in his last illness she proved, indeed, an angel of mercy, anticipating every wish and striving to alleviate every pain. One little son, now six years old, was the fruit of his last marriage. The father's last prayer was for this precious one. Among his last utterances were: "Tell the brethren, my brethren of the Mississippi Conference, whom I love, and have loved for so many years, to look after and take care of my precious little lamb and my wife. Don't forget to pray for them."

His last illness was most protracted and painful. For over three months he suffered. His case seemed to baffle the skill of the many physicians who attended him. At least, none of their remedies gave permanent relief. He gradually grew weaker, and his disease progressed steadily forward to a crisis. He bore all his sufferings with Christian meekness and resignation. The promises of the gospel and religious services always gave him comfort, and produced a marked impression of quietude and resignation as long as he retained consciousness.

Bro. Forsythe was in many respects a model man. Kind and gentle to everyone. Discreet, prudent, and of clean lips. He preached the truth as he learned it from the Methodist standards, and had no disposition to deal in vagaries. He was most orthodox in all his teachings. He was a safe man; could be trusted with any interest. His counsel could always be relied on as just the course that ought to be followed. It would be difficult to find a man more beautifully rounded in life and character. His living and dying most consistently and comfortingly illustrate the relinings of grace and the triumphs of faith. We shall sadly miss his genial association and his valued friendship, but his memory will ever furnish an inspiration to a pure life and to a consecrated ministry.

The trivial matters of this life would make a very curious study, if one could trace them from their inception to the hour when their influence ceased to work.—Pansy.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I have only time to write you a few lines by this mail. We have so much work that we must do, we have but little time to write letters. Send us the brother from Mississippi as soon as you can. I want him on the Hiroshima work. Send him at once. I can't tell you in words how bad we need him. We have just had our first annual meeting, and from all our circuits were reported more than seventy church members, and over one hundred on probation. We have forty-six members on the Hiroshima circuit, and forty-six on probation.

I have been holding a place in Osaka (the large city near us, in twenty miles of us) for one of the young men coming to us, and then I hope to return to my work on the Hiroshima circuit. I have opened two places of Christian work in the city of Osaka and near it, and in each place I have about twenty persons who are engaged in reading the Bible. Already some have asked me to baptize them, but we want them to receive further instruction. I feel truly thankful to God that so many have given of their means to send a missionary to help us. We will give him a hearty welcome as a brother in Christ.

Say to the dear Christian friends who wanted to send Bibles to the Japanese, that if they will direct to me, at Kobe, Japan, and place in the office, they will come safely. Many thousands of Japanese all over the country are reading the English Bible. Pray for us.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, Japan, Oct. 14, 1887.

Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Looking over my notes this morning, I find there have been reported eight hundred and eleven accessions to the church, and we are hoping the final report will reach one thousand. There have been two hundred and eleven infants and one hundred and sixty adults baptized. We have secured three new parsonages, and are building five new churches. The financial outlook is equally gratifying. I have held nine of the fourteen Quarterly Conferences on my last round, and there is good prospects for the full payment of every assessment on these charges, from the pastor down to the last item on the list. The "self-denial" offering is between five and six hundred dollars. If we should go to Conference with an evenly balanced sheet from this district, it would only be a just tribute to the faithfulness of the noble men in the field. I have never known a more consecrated and faithful band of preachers and official members than are working together in this district. We have tried to impress upon preachers and people that faithfulness to the Lord was the sure road to a solid prosperity, and I am thankful that the church in the bounds of this district is realizing the truthfulness of this gospel.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting at Biloxi closed last night with an overflowing congregation. The result was thirty-five additions to the church. The number of conversions and reclamations is not known. The interest is intense. We regretted to part with Bros. Bowen and Beville, who left on Thursday for Moss Point. Dr. Abbey remained to the close. Biloxi has moved to the front in finance as well as zeal. Pray for us.

CALLING THE ANGELS IN.

BY MARY ARTHUR PAYSON.

We never doubt—Some day, some day,
We mean to check the fevered fret
That is wearing our very souls away,
And grant to our hearts a boon
That is only enough to let them hear
The footsteps of angels drawing near.

We mean to do it. He never will ask,
When the builders of this heart shall enter,
We'll sit an hour or while the stars come out,
As the patriarchs sat at the door
Of their tents, with a heavenward-gazing eye,
To watch for the angels passing by.

We've seen them afar at high noontide,
When fervently the world's hot flashlights beat;
Yet never have bidden them turn aside,
And tarry in converse sweet;
Nor prayed them to hallow the cheer we spread,
To drink our wine and break our bread.

We promise our hearts that when the stress
Of the life-work reaches the longed-for close,
When the weight that we groan with hinders less,
We'll welcome such calm repose
As banishes care's disturbing din,
And then—we'll call the angels in.

The day that we dreamed of comes at length,
When, tired of every mocking quest,
And broken in spirit and shorn of strength,
We drop at the door of rest,
And wait and watch as the day wanes on—
But—the angels we meant to call are gone!

An Old Preacher's Talk.

DEAR BRETHREN: As I may never be permitted to meet with you in another fourth Quarterly Conference, permit me to make a few remarks.

I am now in the seventy-ninth year of my age. I am thankful, truly thankful, that God has spared my life so long. I often take a retrospect of life, and wonder at the infinite care and boundless love a kind Providence has led me. And as Moses said of the children of Israel, so I can say in reference to myself: "He found me in a desert land, and in the waste, howling wilderness: he led me about, he instructed me, he kept me as the apple of his eye. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings, so the Lord alone did me," etc.

How swiftly my days and years pass away! They "are as a shadow," "swifter than a weaver's shuttle," yet life is not a burden. Every day I am getting older; I am still clinging to the cross of my Savior. It is elevating in its influence; its attractions are onward, upward and heavenward. It presents to my mind the highest objects of pursuit, inspires my soul with most lofty purposes, and influences my life by the most noble motives. Yes, brethren, the cross of Christ is the moral lever to elevate the world and raise us to immortal happiness and glory. For fifty-three years I have been trying to preach the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and from the beginning of my ministry I had regular monthly appointments, and filled them punctually, until the last three or four years, when my strength failed and my health declined. While preaching the truth in its application to others, I would never overlook myself; for if I am not benefited by the doctrine I preach, I can have but little hope of having any influence over others, and so I endeavor to apply the truth to myself, and to realize it in my own heart, not only as a blessed comfort, but as an inspiration to that which is right in all the relations of life. My church labors are nearly done. I can not labor much now, but, thank God! I can try to pray, and so, by faith and prayer, I can do something to promote the interest of the church and advance the cause of my blessed Redeemer. I am to-day a living monument of God's mercies. While others have died, who bid fair for life and more fair for usefulness, I am still permitted to live. While daily surrounded by dangers and trials, privations and temptations, I have passed through all safely. What God has done for me is worth more than all the wealth of this world. He has guided me in the days of my youth, and now crowns my years with goodness and makes my old age more happy than in the prime of life.

Brethren, through the long pilgrimage of life there are memories that never die. It is always pleasing to renew the happy scenes through which we have passed in other days—the pleasing associations of childhood. Our loved ones that are gone, the innocent pleasures we have enjoyed, the tender affections we have indulged, the hours of devotional exercises in which we have engaged—all come up, like a sweet dream, from the depths of the past, and breathe a gentle fragrance upon the spirit as we advance to manhood or womanhood. The happy home of our childhood, the green fields over which we have roamed, the hills we have climbed, the wild shade where we have wandered and sported in merry glee, the forms and faces, the smiles and tears of the loved ones who have gone down to the silent grave—all these form a lovely picture upon which the eye of memory ever reposes with pleasure.

I now turn my thoughts to the hallowed spot—the graves of a kind father and affectionate mother—of that father, who counseled me and guided me in the days of my youth, and of that mother, whose warm kiss I can almost still feel on my cheeks, or whose warm tears dropped on my boyish head. They are gone, and have long slept in their graves; but, whenever I think of them, a glow passes over my whole soul. I sometimes have a mournful feeling at the thought that I can hear their voices no more; that I can see them no more here: that I can no more enjoy their sympathies, their prayers, their counsel. But my mourning is turned into joy when I think of them above, and the humble hope of meeting them there springs up in my bosom. Happy they who, in the joyousness of Christian hope, can anticipate their entrance into another world, where parents and children shall meet to part no more. I promised them that I would meet them in heaven, and, by God's grace and help, I intend to fulfill my promise.

I often think of my sisters, nursed on the same lap, dandled on the same knee and rocked in the same cradle that I was. We are separated and scattered abroad, perhaps, to meet no more in this world; but I hope to meet them again in a better, brighter and happier world than this.

I often think of the companions of my early days, my schoolmates and class-mates with whom I first began the journey of life, and with whom I spent many happy hours, and whose hopes and prospects were as bright as mine. Where are they? The most, if not all, are in their graves. I can but recollect those days of former years, and I am disposed to drop the silent tear, and say: "Farewell, my old companions. I hope to meet you in glory, and praise our Savior in the heavenly land."

Brethren, when I have gone to the silent grove, and prayed to my heavenly Father in faith, in earnestness and in sincerity, I have enjoyed the brightest manifestations of his love and have realized the richest blessings of his grace. God has blessed me with a happy family—a good wife, five children that grew up to manhood, and thirteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren; but, in the dispensation of his providence, God has taken from us three of our children, four of our grandchildren and one great-grandchild. We deeply feel our loss, but bow submissively to his will. They are gone—gone from the sorrows and sufferings of earth—gone, we have every evidence, to the "rest that remains for the people of God." They are separated from us here by death; but it has not disunited us. They are still our children; we are still one family—one in memory, one in hope, one in spirit. They still dwell with us in our sweetest and fondest recollections, and we, too, are with them in the bright anticipation of our reunion with them in the glories of heaven. We believe we will see them again, meet with them and join them again in endless bonds and in eternal peace. Oh! what shouts of victory, what anthems of joy will thrill the souls of husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters when they meet "on the other shore!"

"Then eyes with joy shall sparkle,
That brimmed with tears of late;
Orphans no longer fatherless,
Nor widows desolate.

"There, hand in hand, form-linked at last,
And heart to heart enfolded all,
We'll smile upon the troubled past
And wonder why we wept at all."

"All things work together for good to them that love God," and we are assured that nothing will or can befall the Christian, whether it be prosperity or adversity, sickness or health, ease or pain, life or death, but what will tend to the promotion of his ultimate good. God will give us grace to enable us to perform the duties of life, to live to his glory—grace to support us amid the trials and conflicts of life and enable us to endure unto the end.

Brethren, I have been called upon to endure many trials and pass through many conflicts. But God declares that his grace is sufficient. In my pilgrimage I have seen the innocent prattle of childhood hushed, the blooming form of beauty fade, the vigor of manhood perish and the faltering steps of age totter into the grave. I have seen the brightest hopes dashed to pieces in a moment, and the fondest expectations cut off forever. "Once I was young, but now I am old, yet I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

Now, brethren, in conclusion, I am determined, by the grace and help of God, to try and get to heaven. Come what will—life, death, disappointment, losses, pain, feebleness—come one, come all, yet may my God grant me this: that I fail not of heaven at last. Let me be saved, and it is enough; let the waves roll, let the thunders peal, let the lightnings flash, and disease make pale and tremulous—all right! Blessed be God! Brethren, I may never meet with you in another fourth Quarterly Conference. If not, how

"Sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and harps in our hands,
To meet one another again."

Preston Mission—1848, '49, '50.

MR. EDITOR: From the Minden Conference, January, 1848, I was appointed by Bishop Paine to this mission, which I served three successive years—1848, '49, '50. It was situated on the Mississippi river, seventy miles above the city of New Orleans. This mission was designed mainly for the benefit of the negroes of the estate of the late Gen. Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, which estate had been inherited by Colonels J. S. Preston and Manning, who had married his daughters, and were also of South Carolina. We always understood that the mission was established at the instance of Mrs. Wade Hampton, who was a devout Christian. There were from six hundred to a thousand negroes on these premises.

A large sugar-house was provided with seats and pulpit suitable for preaching. I remember well my first service here, the bright day, the text, and the enjoyable occasion. The congregation was large, composed of proprietors, managers and servants. The darkies had turned out in full force, arrayed in their best bib and tucker, in honor of the new preacher. Oh, my! how they did sing! To-day I would go further and pay more to hear that singing repeated than I would to hear the celebrated Gilmore Band, now in St. Louis in the interest of the Exposition. I have heard both. The Preston family were staunch Episcopalians, but showed their appreciation of these services by communing with their servants on sacramental occasions. From a hundred to a hundred and fifty of these negro children received oral instruction from Caper's Catechism every Sunday morning. Many of them could repeat it by heart from beginning to end; and they could sing like nightingales.

Here I realized more fully than ever the importance of adapting my preaching to the capacity, moral condition and circumstances of the hearers. For the same reason that I would preach to this people from the text, "Let him that stole, steal no more," I might preach in St. Louis from, "They that be drunken, are drunken in the night." Having no traveling or pastoral visiting to do, I had much time for reading and study, of which I availed myself, and have found it a lasting benefit.

There were some incidents occured during my stay here worthy of note. The Asiatic cholera made its appearance on this coast in its most malignant form, and caused great terror and gloom among the people. In many places the negroes were released from their ordinary work, and would wander about in groups with despair depicted in their countenances, as if waiting each for his time to die. They usually died in about ten hours after taken. Thus thousands of these people were suddenly hurried into eternity with little notice.

Another incident. One cool day, having to baptize by immersion a number of applicants for church membership, we all repaired to the riverside. The water was rough, the shoal uneven, and, as I was wanting both in faith and practice in the administration of this mode, by pure awkwardness, I came out about as thoroughly immersed as the rest. A gentleman took me in his carriage to his home, had a good fire, and while I was changing my clothes he prepared a toddy; then, with a significant look, he said: "I think you need and deserve a good brandy toddy." But, suffice it to say, notwithstanding "Voulez-vous du vin?" was the common salutation on entering almost any house in all this French community, I kept inviolate my temperance principles.

Many of these sons of Africa, though ignorant and superstitions, gave evidence in life and death that they had been born into the spiritual kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. And I shall be greatly disappointed if I do not see many trophies for Christ from the Preston mission in the kingdom of Glory.

Last, but not least, Solomon said: "He that findeth a wife, findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favor of the Lord." Here I realized the truth of that Scripture. J. P.

ST. LOUIS, Missouri.

From the Work.

FRANKLINTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me, through the columns of the ADVOCATE, to return thanks to all who assisted in building our mission church—McFerrin Chapel. It was begun under the most discouraging circumstances, and the work has gone on under many embarrassments; but we were laboring for the Master, and we would not be discouraged. Our progress was impeded, but our purpose not prevented. The house is not completed, but can be used. To-day we closed a meeting there, with six accessions to the church. Because of the inclemency of the weather, we had but three services. Bro. N. B. Young was with us, and preached two soul-stirring sermons. The people now have the gospel, and God a house, where was neither eight months ago. Therefore, I send our most sincere thanks to all who aided us in building this house; but I give God the glory and praise, for he changed opposers to helpers, and gave us grace and courage to press on.

Mr. Editor, I love this kind of work, and if all our pastors would work up the destitute places in reach of their charges, many precious souls that perish would be saved. True, it requires time and labor, and sometimes there is not a cent of remuneration (as in this case), but these things come not into the account. He that is sent to save souls must save them, or lose his own. Building this church has compelled me to study at night and on horseback; but, though feeble in body, thank God I am none the worse off by it, and those who sat in darkness now have the light of life. "Go out and compel them to come in," is the way it came to me.

Mr. Editor, I am happy to tell you that this charge is immensely improved in all respects, and the croakers are put to silence by the joyful shouts of God's new-born. We rejoice over more than one hundred accessions, a good work of grace, and finances reasonable. The way is now open for much greater prosperity next year.

We thank this people for their kindness, praise God for his goodness, and hasten on in obedience to the voice of duty.

Yours,

J. G. SIBLEY, P. C.

FLORA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: When the year is young, the brethren, newsettled, publish first impressions of new changes, and chronicle hopes that stretch through the months ahead. Time "rounds up" and rolls back the months with their lights and shadows, and the brethren come again, amid falling leaves, to tell what they have done.

Our first part for Flora was written early in the year, and part second may as well be written now.

Our last quarterly meeting is in the past; we shall not have time for more protracted ones.

Within the limits of four churches we have met many, all new faces, and will leave all, we trust, old friends. A year broadens a man much this way, and adds to his knowledge, if we regard it, a volume, with every member a chapter, and each one's conduct a page. The friendships of the year, like springing tendrils of a vigorous vine, bind us closer to our fellows, and them to us. Tears have fallen down the face in sympathy with the living around their dead. They have married about us, and settled happily down to the joys and cares of life. Children have been christened; some have walked up the aisles and handclasped the preacher in token of light in their darkness and desire of Christian fellowship.

Taking the world as a field, the circuits are small sections, suited, supposably, to our abilities of cultivation. We have tried to subsoil carefully with and in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. The results are in divine hands and under sight of all-seeing eyes. Men say, and it is a pleasure to believe them, that the condition of our churches is better than at beginning of the year; that the fields have been thoughtfully subsoiled. God grant that it is so; our judgment hesitates to give expressions of assurance.

Our presiding elder, "in simplicity and godly sincerity," has held up wavering hands, and powerfully preached the Word. Brethren, our neighbors, have helped us "with the spirit and with power," leaving their homes for days, and blessing the preacher and people in protracted meetings around the circuit. Sunday-schools have sprung into vigorous life, with earnest teachers and officers, and bright with healthy young faces.

Assessments are coming up. The self-denial week resulted in some $15, a sum proportionate to the ability of—the membership, perhaps. The Flora Auxiliary Woman's Missionary Society has to its credit, thus far at headquarters, more than $50. A few ADVOCATES, not enough, are taken. Between three and four hundred dollars have been raised for church repairs. One has been ceiled and painted inside; another, the Flora Church, has painter and carpenter now busy making it attractive inside and out.

The Lord has blessed the preacher and his family in pleasant neighbors and some warm friends. We have shaken but seldom with chills, and the burning of fevers has been but a touch.

Our intention to bring up a clear score next month is rock bottomed, and the provision "D. V." is mainly as regards health. We have our shadows as other brethren; but lives, like faces, are thrown into stronger relief against backgrounds of shadow.

Pray for us that there be light in the heart.

W. H. HUNTLEY.

EAST BATON ROUGE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: On the fourth Sunday in September our pastor (Bro. George D. Anders) commenced a protracted meeting at Deer Ford. The good Lord was with us from the beginning. There were twenty-five accessions to the church, and about thirty bright conversions; and in many hearts the good seed was sown that will spring up in a bountiful harvest for another reaping. Bro. Anders was ably assisted by Bro. P. A. Johnston. He preached several effectual sermons, which were highly appreciated. They were full of Christ, and delivered with intense earnestness and love for souls. He remained with us until Thursday night. The Lord wonderfully blest his labors during the meeting. Deer Ford is now on a "boom." It has a live Sunday-school, a splendid Saturday night's prayer meeting, and a young men's prayer meeting on Wednesday night. There have been, within the space of six miles during the past month, forty young men and women that took up their cross and prayed in public. What a blessed thought—not ashamed of Jesus!

One week after our meeting closed, a protracted meeting began at Bay Ridge, a little church about the distance of four miles from Deer Ford. The church was greatly revived. Day and night the altar was crowded with penitents asking the prayers of God's people, many of whom were fathers and mothers well advanced in years. The meeting resulted in twenty accessions and quite a number of conversions. Bro. Anders was assisted in this meeting by three local preachers, who did faithful work in the vineyard.

I must tell you about our new church. The good people of Deer Ford neighborhood concluded last spring to tear down the old church and build a new one. Accordingly, about four months ago down came the old house, and now we have a beautiful new house of worship, which, when finished, will cost about one thousand dollars. Our dear Bro. Johnston was invited to preach the dedicatory sermon on the fourth Sunday in October. He kindly accepted the invitation, and preached from the text, "God with us." He was with us, and in such power that he came and took full possession of the meeting on that grand occasion. Our church, though a very large one, could scarcely afford sitting-room for the congregation. After the church was dedicated, Bro. Johnston received about twenty-five members into the church, and baptized several children. It was, indeed, a service over which angels looked with delight, and one that deserves to be remembered as an epoch in the history of East Baton Rouge circuit. Bro. Anders has held a protracted meeting at all the churches on the work. They were all closed with encouraging results. He is doing a great work on this circuit. Since the first of January there have been one hundred and fifty conversions, sixty family altars have been erected, and has made more than three hundred pastoral visits this year.

The people of this circuit have all the love for Bro. Anders that a people could have for their pastor; not only Methodists, but of all denominations. We are devoutly praying he will be our pastor for next year. Pray for us. E. A. G.

OCTOBER 26, 1887.

SCRANTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: As the brethren have been writing in regard to the results of their labors this year, I thought it would not be amiss to say something about the Scranton work. It will be remembered that this work has only three appointments, two of which are very weak, in point of number. The Catholics are largely in the ascendency here. We have added to the church this year about thirteen members. Have had only two protracted meetings, which resulted gloriously. The churches were greatly benefited. We had six conversions. I can not say, with some of my brethren, that I will be able to bring up all of my collections. Wish I could; but when we consider the weakness of the churches, we think we are doing well. We shall leave the work, we trust, in a better condition than when we found it.

To God be all the praise.

Your brother in Christ,

J. D. HAYS.

ORANGE GROVE, Mississippi.

MANSFIELD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We have a gracious revival in progress at Mansfield, with twelve conversions and an equal number of accessions to date.

The college is doing finely, with a fair attendance; and its friends declare that its prospects were never so bright. The buildings and grounds have undergone such improvements that they would scarcely meet with recognition by old acquaintances, while the addition of Rev. M. S. Watts and Prof. Huddle to its professorial force constitute its moral advantages—greater than that of any similar institution in the South. Both are first-class as to scholarship and other attainments.

Pray for us.

J. M. BEARD.

NORTH WILKINSON CHARGE.

MR. EDITOR: I have gone through with all of my meetings, which resulted in fifty accessions and about sixty or seventy conversions. With an increase of prayer meetings, and many new family altars erected, this charge has improved in many respects. This is my second year on this work. Last year and this, up to date, we have built three churches, improved the parsonage, and received one hundred and eighty members into the church. Many thanks to Bros. J. Wilson Brown, V. D. Skipper, and G. D. Anders, who assisted me in two of my meetings this year. To God be all the glory given.

N. J. ROBERTS.

Dr. William M. Taylor tells that in his early boyhood, after having heard a sermon in which the preacher dwelt much on "the approprinting act of faith," he asked his father what was meant by that expression. The old man gave the same reply which had been given him by his mother to the same inquiry when he was a lad, viz: "Take your Bible and underscore all the 'my's,' the 'mine's' and the 'me's' you come upon, and you will discover what approprination is."

Our Contributors.

An Open Letter to the Bishop.

Rev. and Dear Sir and Bro.: I very much dislike to "torment you before the time;" but, knowing that there are many facts in the private work and surroundings of the preachers which you do not know, and which, in the great rush of business and press of responsibilities, the presiding elders often forget, I deem it my imperative duty to trouble you with this communication. Besides this, I have often heard our Bishops say they desired advice. Please do not, therefore, regard me as meddling with the episcopal prerogatives, but simply as coming to the rescue—as turning on the light—in the important work of stationing the preachers.

I am sure, reverend and dear sir, that since it is of myself I speak, you can not regard me as a meddler—"a busybody in other men's matters." Perhaps if I present my points seriatum, it may help me somewhat and make the situation easier for you to grasp. It is of great importance that you understand the case thoroughly, because the welfare of the church is wrapped up in the welfare of the preachers. And, then, there is such thing as fitness of things, and this principle applies to preachers and stations, as well as other "things."

Be assured, my dear Bishop, that nothing but a desire to give you information, which I am sure you need, prompts me to write this letter.

It is true that, with possibly one or two exceptions, I have never brought up all my collections for missions, especially foreign missions. But this is easily explained on the ground that I have always been on poor circuits or on missions, and always among people who do not believe much in missionary work. From these facts you can see at once, if I had been on a better class of appointments, the case would have been different. No man ever loved the missionary cause more than I, and no man ever desired more keenly the evangelization of the world; but on these poor appointments I never can do much for foreign missions.

With respect to domestic missions, the case is somewhat different. My work has usually been of a missionary character, having been among people who do not pay for the gospel they hear, not to say anything about the gospel that other people hear. Hence it could not be expected of me to do much for domestic missions.

Now, in regard to the "collections for widows and orphans and for superannuated, or worn-out, preachers," this everyone regards as the most important collection "ordered by the church," except one, which fortunately is generally very light. Of course, I allude to the "Bishops' collection." It is to be regretted that our "Conference collection" is usually very heavy, in consequence of which I have not been able, as a general rule, to collect the assessment upon my work. However, I have always tried, and never failed to collect a small amount—at least from ten to twenty-five per cent. of the assessment. I have often wished I was pastor of a large, rich church, so that I could do more in this glorious cause.

The minor collections—church extension, education, General Conference expenses, etc.—I have never been so situated as to participate much in these branches of our work. I have never had a charge where I did not have something to do in the matter of building or repairing churches, and hence my people have always felt that all they did was along the line of church extension. However, I have often reported some collections for that purpose. As for the other two collections—education and General Conference expenses—I have not had to go to the General Conference. My brethren would never elect me, and none of my people go as lay delegates, so they do not feel identified with this branch of the work. Of course, you know how hard it is to get money from the people for an enterprise in which they feel no interest. Sometimes, though, I collect a dollar or two for this important object. The question of education is an important one; but, as my people are generally poor, or, if not poor, uneducated, I usually succeed but poorly in that collection.

However, my dear Bishop, there is one collection that I always do my best to bring up in full, and I seldom fail of success. The Bishop is the chief pastor, the human leader of our church; and the people understand that (I make them understand that), and the result is, I seldom fail to bring up in full the collection for the Bishops. Besides this, the collection is usually quite small, and this, added to the importance of keeping our chief pastors free from want, makes it easy to get.

These matters I have thought fit to mention, so that you can see I understand the work of our church, and am willing to do it whenever, "in the providence of God," I may have an opportunity.

Now, what I have to say, Bishop, is this:

1. I have been preaching over twenty-one years. I ought to be "of age" by this time.

2. I have gone to every appointment to which I have been assigned.

3. My people have always liked me.

4. They tell me I am a fine preacher, and ought to be sent to some large city. Of course, I do not mean to brag on myself. I laugh when the sisters tell me these encouraging things; but, as you have never heard me preach, I thought it best to let you know what some of the good people think of me. One example will help you to understand. I visited a family on my work, and when I left I kissed all the little children and gave the baby an apple. As I passed out through the gate I overheard (I could not help hearing it, and I suppose it is no harm to repeat it, for you understand, Bishop, I do not say it myself, but simply state what another said of me, which is, you know, of more weight than if I were to say it for myself)—I heard the good sister say, "Sissie, there goes the best preacher in the world"!!

5. They say I am wasting my time; I should go where the intelligence of the people is such as to appreciate me.

6. I have prepared several sermons to preach at Conference; but generally brethren from the more important appointments are called on to do the preaching, so you have never had the pleasure of hearing me. This I very much regret, as it might have changed things somewhat.

Under the circumstances, and in view of the facts stated, I feel at liberty to ask you to try to put me in position to do something for the church, more than I have been able to do. If you want a transfer for St. Louis, or Richmond, or, perhaps, San Francisco, you are at liberty to use me.

Your humble servant,

JACOB SHANKS.

N. B.—I forgot to state that my family has, in my opinion, all the fitness for city life. My wife is a lady of very fine taste, and is very popular, especially with the young men. She is quite lively, when well, and talks a great deal to the young people about marrying, and sometimes about joining the church. She is willing to go anywhere where I can be properly appreciated. My children are all smart, and when dressed up are handsome. If near the church, they would very materially enlarge the Sunday-school. They are all large enough to go to school, and two of my daughters ought to be studying music and French. Taking my children altogether, a livelier, jollier set could not be found; no moping or drooping around. You could hear them sing for two blocks around. They say their speeches so nicely, too. My wife's health is bad—in fact, she is always sick, and city life might help her. Besides; my eldest daughter, Miss Eliza Jane Shanks, will now soon be marriageable, and it is all-important, you know, that she should just now be in the very best of society. J. S.

Conference Boards and Bishops' Cabinets.

MR. EDITOR: In my previous communication, about "Domestic Missions," I referred to some difficulties in the way of administering our disciplinary rule: that the "Conference Board shall have absolute control of the missions it may establish with the consent of the president of the Conference." So long as the "Mission Board" is not admitted to the Bishops' Council, and our charges continue to undergo the frequent changes incident to our flexible policy, it is impossible that the Board, as such, can have "absolute control," etc. None of our charges are strictly missionary ground, being partly self-supporting. In late minutes of our Conference they are not designated as missions: working as we do now, the name of the fund ought to be changed. We appropriate to a charge, unable of itself to maintain a preacher such as the Bishops' Council concludes it ought to have, an amount which, added to the possible "quarterage" he may there receive, will give said preacher a living. But, as a man with considerable family might be the very preacher needed at that place, reason dictates that a larger appropriation shall be made. It were better (if the right men could be had) always to send single men to places thus aided, and so more nearly equalize things. But that would sometimes involve the very difficulty you expose, viz: sending inexperienced men when the wisest and best should be at work. But how can the Board outside the Bishops' Council know either the metes and bounds of the proposed mission, or the actual need of the right man for the place? The difficulty is partly obviated by the fact that the presiding elders are ex-officio members of the Board. But they, being bound to secrecy, can not bring out before a Board meeting all the facts essential to an intelligent judgment. Hence the usual custom with us has been to assemble, finally, just on the eve of Conference adjournment, and blindly ratify the appropriations sent us by Bishops' Council. All then is hurry. So a brother must be bold indeed who would venture an adverse opinion on any of these suggestions. Thus the order is reversed, and the Bishops' Council controls the missions with the hurried consent of the Board. Bishop Parker, when presiding over us at Yazoo City, fulfilled the spirit of the law as nearly as existing conditions admit. Early in the afternoon before the night of adjournment he called the Board into his council, and gave opportunity for a full understanding of what had been proposed in our line. If there had been adverse decision, I suppose alterations would have been made to suit the views of the majority of the Board. Free and satisfactory discussion was had, but no changes ordered that I now recall. Truth is, the presiding elders, acting as a check one on the other, and being, as they should, our best-informed men, are more qualified to judge of the needs of different portions of the work than the average member—lay or clerical. Our Boards being appointed for four years, change of location in the ministerial wing often defeats the intention of having one from each district. The lay brethren appointed are sometimes forgotten by their brethren at District Conference, and do not come. So our Board is never full. A member of this Board ought to be considered ex-officio, a delegate to Conference, and should never fail to be present.

I trust all the members named in our last year's minutes will answer to roll-call in December.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

The Modern Dance.

The following brief, pointed and forceful remarks on dancing were written by Dr. A. T. Pierson. We commend them to the attention of all our readers.

"The modern round dance is to me especially abhorrent; for one, I will not put myself where I am compelled even to look upon it. I am too well acquainted with both its origin and its history to countenance it; and, after watching for twenty-five years its effects upon modern society, I have set my face forever against it, as an iniquity and a snare. True, it did not have its roots in pagan idolatry, but it did have its origin in a worse than pagan laxity of morals; and the fact that pure-minded persons may possibly engage in it with entire innocence of wrong feelings or intent proves nothing as to its influence on society generally.

"Now, let me ask you, if you had a family of children, how long would you tolerate in your house a man who, perhaps immediately upon introduction to your daughter, should lay hands upon her person with the familiarity and freedom of the modern waltz? I am simply astonished that there can be any doubt upon this point with sound-minded, sensible, reflecting persons. The modern dance simply licenses or makes lawful what, outside of the customs of the dance, is regarded improper, immoral, insulting. Society wisely regulates the ordinary social gatherings of men and women in the parlor, even when they are well acquainted, by certain wholesome barriers of restraint. A man who, especially at first acquaintance, should violate these restrictions, as he may do in the waltz with impunity, would be kicked out of doors as a scoundrel! But the devil has invented in the round dances a polite and popular method of making such gross familiarities allowable, under the sanction of fashionable custom. Hence their attraction to the people of the world; hence their ensnaring influence to the disciples; and the better the class of men and women who countenance the devil's device, the more conspicuous his triumph."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Hopeless, But Not Last.

It is folly for any physician to declare that he covets hopeless cases, or patients who have been "given up" by other practitioners. Sensible men, with pride in their art, and reputations that they prize, do not seek to imperil their noble profession or their own fame. Insurance companies avoid taking risks on threatened lives. Of course every practitioner whose heart is not stone does take cases that imperil his success. He does so because he loves his fellow-man. At the same time disease is most effectively grappled with in its earlier stages. Neglect of apparently trifling disorders leads to the many complicated cases which baffle the highest skill, when any one of the maladies existing alone could be handled by the physician with certainty. When the system has become the slave of some over-mastering physical complications, a complete regeneration alone suffices to restore health. The blood, the nerves, and the digestive and urinary machinery must be thoroughly overhauled. For this nothing has ever been found that equals the Compound Oxygen Treatment. The New York Tribune recently declared that the successful application of oxygen gas to medicine has stimulated the most urgent search for new methods of making it unattended with the long and expensive process that has so long been used. Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., have met with unprecedented success in apparently hopeless cases of lung and heart diseases in the administration of their Compound Oxygen, and this encourages them to urge its merits. They have many imitators, some of whom, even with imperfect appliances, effect a few cures. But the best is not only the cheapest, but the safest. Drs. Starkey & Palen have a large office practice that employs themselves and several assistants during the day. They have introduced a system of Home Treatment, by which they send the Compound Oxygen to all parts of the country for a very low price. It should not be understood that they prefer to treat patients at long range. On the contrary, their large and magnificently appointed offices, 1529 Arch street, are crowded daily. One visit, at least, is always desirable, but where that can not be had the next best thing must be done. The sufferer should write a full description of his or her condition to Drs. Starkey and Palen. They will give an honest opinion of the case, and their advice will cost nothing.

REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, D. D.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1887.

The Publishing Committee.

The annual meeting of the committee was held in the ADVOCATE office, November 9. There were present J. D. Cameron, W. T. J. Sullivan and T. C. Wier, of North Mississippi Conference; James A. Godfrey, W. L. C. Hunnicutt and T. L. Mellen, of Mississippi Conference; S. H. Werlein, C. Keener and C. W. Carter, of the Louisiana Conference. This is the first time, in the writer's knowledge, that a full committee has been present. The committee did its work in a deliberate manner, looking carefully into all matters pertaining to the paper, both in its editorial and publishing management, and planning wisely for future advancement. The resolutions we publish show the mind of the committee in regard to the management for the past year. At an early day we will publish the annual address of the committee. In the meantime, as we are closing up the business of the year, let the preachers bear us in mind, and try to collect all our accounts and greet us at the Conferences with many new subscribers. Now is the time to work for the paper, for now the people have some money.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The Publishing Committee of this paper passed the following at its late session:

Whereas, We have learned that, in the providence of God, the Rev. W. Murrah, D. D., one of the founders of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, has been called from labor to his reward in heaven; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Murrah this paper has lost a warm friend and a strong supporter.

Resolved, That the church has lost one of her best preachers and wisest counselors.

Resolved, That we mourn the loss we have sustained in his death, but rejoice that we believe our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolutions be spread on our minutes, also that a copy be furnished the editor for publication in the columns of the ADVOCATE.

The editor and publisher were very gracefully complimented by the Publishing Committee, in its session here on the ninth instant, by the unanimous adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Publishing Committee endorse the editorial management of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE under Rev. Dr. Carter, and are much gratified at the present state and prospects of the paper.

Resolved, That we are much gratified with the energy and wisdom displayed by Bro. Hugh Jamieson, Jr., the publisher of the ADVOCATE, in the management, and that we commend him as worthy of our confidence and co-operation.

When you feel that you have won a compliment in a legitimate way of not working for it, it is one of the most enjoyable things of life. The editor and publisher feel that way, and are enjoying the grace of the above compliments.

In the hurry of closing up the business of the Conference year let our agents—the preachers—not lose sight of the fact that one important interest is to close up the ADVOCATE business by collecting all unpaid subscriptions. Be sure and call attention to this, and bring up the money to Conference. There will be some of these to represent us; and we hope to make close collections.

Responsibility for Success.

There is no doubt that every conscientious pastor desires success in his work and uses every legitimate means to conquer it; and yet the painful fact comes out that success is not always conquered. The congregations, as a rule, expect the pastor to lead the old ones and when success is not [illegible], many are ready to [illegible] the failure upon him. This ought not to be done until the congregation has done its duty in this matter. A general may plan a campaign in great wisdom, and yet his troops must execute the plan in all its details ere "victory will perch upon his banner." Here are some hints to the laity which may be of service:

In order to build up a flourishing congregation two things are essential. First, talking up the services; let the people advertise the church by speaking well of the sermons and of the various parts of worship. Second, paying the pastor well and promptly; as may readily be understood, a minister who is generously supported will do more efficient work and do it with more acceptance to all than he possibly could if his support was meager and paid in small installments. It is altogether probable that Mr. A. is not as eloquent a speaker as Mr. B., yet it is usually true that those who enter the house of God desiring a blessing will not be disappointed whoever of the Lord's servants may be in the pulpit. Some crumbs from the Master's table will fall into their hungry souls for their refreshment.

There is a hint of the way to get a blessing in the services: "Those who enter the house of God desiring a blessing will not be disappointed," no matter who ministers. We have heard preachers who, to judge by the rules of men, could not preach at all; but when the heart has been "in frame," we have never failed to realize a blessing. There is always a blessing in the services appointed by the Lord, if our hearts are open to receive it.

The point in the following extract is of vital importance; and it refers to a custom somewhat prevalent, and which can not be too strongly condemned:

Instead of adversely criticising the language, the manner and appearance of the minister, instead of returning home after sermon to disparage the service before the children and to the neighbors, if all would feel a personal responsibility in upholding all that was praiseworthy and good, the effort would be in every way admirable for the growth and usefulness of the congregation. Under such an inspiration even the dullest preacher would feel new life coursing through his veins, and his ministry would be blessed. And, indeed, do not successful business men adopt such plans in their affairs? A merchant talks up his goods in order to induce persons to buy. A shop becomes a fashionable center because many who trade there talk to their friends of the advantages and excellent qualities of the goods. There is a vast gain to any enterprise in thus talking in its favor by those who are its well-wishers. On the other hand, almost any church, shop or business may be seriously crippled by the silence of its friends, even though they utter no word of disparagement.

Brethren, "talk up" your church. A church that is worth anything at all is worth talking about. Study out the fine points in your pastor's preaching and the good traits in his character, and let people know that you have a preacher that is worth talking about and worth any man's while to hear. He is the messenger of God, and, as such, is entitled to all the commendation before the world that truth will allow to be spoken.

Try these two "essential" things, and see how far the experiment will succeed in filling your house with worshipers, and your pastor's heart with glad joy. If you want him to work like a Turk and preach with a strange new power, give him some token of your appreciation. The heart of a true preacher hungers for the genuine sympathy of his people in his efforts to advance the kingdom of God; and oftentimes the only sympathy he gets is in his closet, and, but for that, sometime his anxieties would run him crazy.

"Easy made easy" will ruin the preacher and distress and hurt the church of God.

Trained Ministers the Need of the Church.

BY "GILDEROY."

I find much to cheer in our ecclesiastical outlook. The tide is rising everywhere. Only one thing discourages even to distress—the ominous lack of academic, not to say collegiate, training of those who come forward for admission into the traveling connection. "Brush College" has served the church well; but its days are numbered. We can no longer depend upon it to meet the demands of the hour. With the growth of important stations we are not receiving cultured men to supply them. Our Baptist brethren in ——— State are sending out annually from fifteen to thirty young men into their pulpits, each carrying a college degree. Methodists must wake up, or see their glory depart.

These wise and weighty words were written by one in position to know the needs of our church. O that our people would heed them! It is exceedingly difficult now to supply some of these important stations in some of our Conferences. We have men enough, and they are good enough, so far as personal piety goes, but they lack the culture necessary to qualify them for the work. We need trained men—men thoroughly equipped for the work; and this demand is increasing every day. The distress at this point is very great: far greater than many of our preachers and people are willing to allow.

The agony of cabinet work often—yea, most generally, comes in right here. Here is the station, and here the man. The man is pure, true, faithful, a capital preacher of his kind, a faithful pastor, and all of that; but, alas! he lacks the culture necessary in a preacher for that charge. He can not have that power and command over men he ought to have without it. It is not a question of piety alone, nor of visiting from house to house. It is a question of preaching, of the contact of trained intellect with trained intellect—preaching that will command the respect of cultured men and women. If we do not wake up and meet this demand, our glory will depart speedily. It is waning now in some quarters. The writer of the words quoted knows this statement to be true. What is true of important stations is also true of towns, villages and circuits all over the land.

Quarterly Conferences need to wake up. More care should be taken in the matter of licensing men to preach, and recommending men to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection. There is laxness—indeed, careless indifference—in some quarters at this point. The church is to blame for her own misfortunes. She receives tardily, or under protest, the pastors and preachers sent out by herself. Young men of grace and good natural gifts must be helped to the training needed to fit them for our pulpits.

Annual Conferences must wake up, too. Not every good man will make an efficient preacher of the gospel. Take time, examine every man closely, and pass him along carefully, not as a matter of favor, but of merit. This will be best for the man, and best for the church. Mark what I say: It will be best for the man. Keep him on trial until he tries with all his might and main. This course will lay the foundation for real manhood, for a successful ministry.

We should magnify the course of study. There is all the more need for this in those who have not enjoyed an academic or collegiate course of training. Impress on young men in every possible way the absolute need of constant, hard study. Often our sympathies get the better of our judgments. We should wake up to the demands of the hour. The mastery of our course of study would go far towards making amends for the lack of culture. All of our best laymen, both male and female, know exactly what preaching is. They know a sermon from an exhortation. They can not be imposed upon. This class of laymen is largely and rapidly on the increase. There is a general toning up in the culture of our people all along the line. The ministry must go in front of the people, or the church will go down. This is a solemn fact, and there is no way to go round it. It must be met. The Sunday-school is making theologians and preaching teachers out of a great host of our people. The demand is upon us. It must be met.

Let our Methodist people everywhere wake up.

NOVEMBER 3, 1887.

The Anarchists.

At last, after going through all the phases of legal action, from the Criminal Court to the Supreme Court of the land, after having exhausted all means in reach to stay the execution of the law, four of the condemned anarchists paid the penalty of their crime on the gallows last Friday, two having their sentences commuted to life imprisonment, and one having committed suicide by blowing his head to pieces with a bomb. Thus ends this celebrated case. The law has been vindicated, and anarchism condemned in a most emphatic manner. The public breathes freer. The law is yet supreme. The following, from the Daily Picayune, expresses our sentiments on the subject:

It will be admitted that in this case the interests of society were clearly and directly at stake. The condemned anarchists belonged to a class avowedly at war with the established institutions of society, they were members of an association organized to violate the law, and they had been actively engaged in arranging the details of a revolution which they proposed to achieve by wholesale murder and arson. To pardon them or to commute their sentences would have been to encourage their associate conspirators to persist in their barbarous enterprise. It would have been said that the governor was afraid to do his duty; that the State had been overawed, and the ignorant and discontented would have rallied in increased numbers under the red and black flag of anarchy. Sentimentalism is out of place in dealing with an evil of that description.

TO OBITUARY WRITERS.—Please read the notice at the head of the obituary column. If your obituary runs over the thirty-five lines or 210 words, please count the additional lines, and send five cents for each additional line. If you leave this matter for us to do, then you entail upon us work which takes up much valuable time, for we not only have to go over the obituary, but we must enter upon a correspondence in regard to the matter. Anybody that can count can easily tell how much money, if any, to send. While you seek to be generous to your departed friends, don't forget to be just to us.

The readers of our paper are to be highly commended for the interest they have manifested this year in our mission work. They are pretty generally up with the regular collections; they contributed as much as any other section of the church to the self-denial fund, and have raised and paid up over one thousand dollars to help Dr. Lambuth in Japan. We are proud of such readers, and pray that they may increase a thousand-fold next year.

What Our Papers Say.

The Episcopal Methodist has this fine paragraph on a most important subject to every Christian and every sinner in the world. Speaking on the subject of "Prevailing Prayer," it says:

Now a true prayer is the expression of a felt want, which we believe God can and will supply and as an exercise of the soul requires such intensity of desire and earnestness of effort, as will bring us into a condition of absolute trust in the promises of God; not to be sure that we can work ourselves into a spiritual fervor, which will have merit; but by the aid of the Spirit of God we attain to the faith of reliance and find our want met in Jesus Christ, our Lord; who is alone our all-satisfying portion. Therefore a few minutes spent in an attitude of devotion, while not by any means valueless, does not meet the want of the soul. There must be importunity and waiting patiently on God. The Master himself passed a whole night in prayer, when it is known that a simple petition from him to the Father would have found instant answer; but his humanity needed just such continued religious exercises to tone it up to its association with his divine nature, and to fit it for the work and suffering before him.

Contrary to some people, we believe that a man may have doubts in regard to religious matters and yet be honest about it. In other words, we think that there are some honest doubters; and they are to be dealt with in a manner different from the other doubters. The following, from the Holston Methodist, strikes us as appropriate. A "lazy assent" to anything is not worth much.

Some of the best minds are tempted to infidelity; but temptation is one thing and sin is another. The struggle with doubt is often an unhappy one; and small minds can not sympathize with the struggler; but will rather berate him and decry his religion. A faith that has conquered doubt, the faith of a man that swallows nothing without investigation, that conquers every inch of ground, is a stronger, healthier faith than that of him who takes everything on credit. The faith of such a man is not a mere prejudice, a mere profession, a lazy assent to current belief, but a profound conviction, arrived at through legitimate processes and deeply grounded in the truth and its environments.

There is nothing more important to mind and soul than the kind of intellectual food that is taken. When books and magazines and pamphlets are sown broadcast over the land by the busy press of the day, it is well to look into the kind that comes into our houses. Said a brother editor to us: "A silly or bad book that comes into this office never gets beyond that stove." In regard to this subject, the St. Louis Advocate says:

If these books were written according to the rules accepted and acted upon by all able, imaginative writers from the time of Aristotle down to the present, the case would not be quite so bad; or if they really taught anything that was worth knowing, they might, for the sake of that, be endured; but as it is, with an exceptional case here and there, they do little or no real good any way, and beget in the mind of the reader a distaste for plain, solid facts and truths, and not infrequently contaminate the moral feelings and lead to vicious conduct. To a large extent they are supplanting the reading of real history and useful biography; the latter of which, when the characters are true, noble and good, is about the best reading matter that can be put in the hands of young people. They show men and women as they were, and life as it is, and not as weak and distempered minds may choose to represent them.

This "wind-up" of the Nashville Advocate, on the subject of "The Length of Sermons," is so entirely to our liking that we exhort all our young preachers to read it carefully:

Without, therefore, being disposed to countenance any merely thoughtless and empty clamor for brevity in the pulpit, and, without being willing to see the services of the sanctuary shorn of their dignity and power, we venture to offer a few words of exhortation. Much time may be saved by a prompt and expeditious method of conducting the opening and closing services. Begin on time. Have the hymns and lessons selected before going into the pulpit. Let the prayers be of moderate length, vital from beginning to end, and containing not a single word that does not represent the real state of the preacher's heart. If announcements are to be made, make them once for all; do not repeat them, nor dwell upon them. When the time comes for the sermon itself, get to the main subject as soon as possible. Plunge in medias res. Extended and stately introductions are out of order. One of the most intellectual preachers we ever knew usually wore out his congregations and broke the force of his sermons by his interminable preliminary remarks. Do not spend too much energy in the matter of applications. A real truth generally applies itself, and may be safely left to do its own work. And when you are done, quit. Iteration is the worst of rhetorical faults, revealing the poverty of the speaker's resources, or suggesting a suspicion of the congregation's intelligence.

Notes.

The tremendous clamor which Emma Abbott raised, and which the newspapers have kept up, so completely upset everybody that the real gist of Bro. Candler's sermon has been lost sight of. The main point in that sermon, the practical point, the sharp point, we hear very little of. Miss Abbott's rejoinder turned the attention away from it before the echo of the preacher's voice had ceased. Dr. Kelley wrote strange words which kept attention away from it. He says he can explain his words to the satisfaction of the church. We don't see how he can do it: but he ought to have a chance, since he asks it. If his words are such as to justify the church in asking him to resign his present position in order to her vindication, how about the deeds of those Methodists who spent a thousand dollars in one week at the theater where Miss Abbott was playing? That was the practical point in Bro. Candler's sermon, and it seems to have been entirely overlooked. The devil was very wily in drawing attention away from that. We venture the assertion, that the arraignment and trial and expulsion of Methodist theater-goers will do more to vindicate the church than ten thousand newspaper articles can do! One act of discipline in such a case is an argument against the theater and in vindication of the churches which the world can understand, and it is the only thing that will bring the church in a line consistent with her own teaching on that subject. "One thousand dollars spent in one week" by the members of one church in attending the theater! That is what raised the devil, and he raised Miss Abbott, and she raised Dr. Kelley, and by this time the original charge, though a most tremendous one, is completely hidden. Let us come back now and insist that those who help the theater by their presence and money shall be disciplined as well as those who help it by their words!

As a general rule, preachers of the gospel have as much of the lawful pleasures and enjoyments of life as any other class of men. The largest factor in the make-up of their enjoyments is, no doubt, to be found in the fact that they are living and working to contribute to real and permanent enjoyment of others. And yet, they have their times of depression, when the "billows go over them." Our experience is, that a small audience on Sunday depresses a preacher more than anything else. But even that may be a blessing if the following from the Sunday-school Times is true:

A large audience has the advantage of enthusiasm; a small audience has the advantage of impressibility. A large audience gives more to the speaker; a small audience gets more from the speaker. The nearer a congregation comes to being the one speaker to the one hearer, the larger the hope of a personal message being received as personal by him who listens to it.

Climaxes and anti-climaxes are very curious things sometimes. The one goes up, and you can't tell to what a height it will go, and the other goes down, and you can never guess the depths it will reach, and sometimes they go up and down, so that you can't tell where they belong. The following from Gov. St. John belongs to the latter class. Is it a climax, or an anti-climax?

The saloon-keeper is just as good and refined as the saloon he keeps, the saloon he keeps is just as good as the law that licensed it, the law that licensed it is just as good as the church member who voted for it.

Personals.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union is holding its fourteenth Annual Convention in Nashville, Tenn., during this week.

Dr. Steel, in a letter to the St. Louis Advocate, says, that in the recent Episcopal Congress in Louisville, the clergy "hissed" each other's speeches! We have thought that those preachers were the "pinks of propriety," but, perhaps, we made a mistake.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, of Mobile, Ala., has been elected by the Episcopal House of Bishops, Bishop of Western Texas.

The Board of Missions of our church is to have a called meeting in Nashville, November 25.

Volapuk, the new language that is to become universal, is to be taught in Tulane University, in this city.

The Holston Methodist has been offered for sale by the stockholders. The price is $5,000, and the only condition is that the purchaser shall be a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We sincerely sympathize with our brother, Rev. Fred White, in the loss of his daughter, Edaline. She died November 3. May the great Healer apply the balm of his grace to the sore hearts!

Let all the little folks, especially the old little folks, read the article in the children's column headed "Trials of a Small Boy." That boy has a future before him.

The Supreme Court of Mississippi has confirmed the decision of Judge Cooper denying a writ of habeas corpus in the Hamilton-Eubanks case.

The New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Meeting have resolved to hold a union thanksgiving service in Carondelet Street Church, Thursday, twenty-fourth instant, at 11 A. M. Rev. S. H. Werlein was elected to preach the sermon.

Lincoln parish, La., voted for local option the other day, the majority being 697. In Union parish the majority for local option was 191.

The Methodist Book Concern and Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church have purchased in New York City property at the corner of Fifth avenue and Twentieth street, for which they are to pay $139,000.

It is a good evidence of the growth of prohibition sentiment, that more amendments on that question have been submitted for the votes of the people during 1887 than during the last twenty years before.

The general sentiment of the church organs about the Kelley-Abbott affair at Nashville, is that Dr. Kelley should resign his office of Treasurer of the Board of Missions. Dr. Kelley thinks he can make an explanation and statement which will set him right with the church. He ought to have the opportunity to do so, and will no doubt have it. In all this clamor, there seems to be one very bad thing lost sight of! What has become of the Methodists of McKendree Church who spent the thousand dollars in opening that theater?

BOOKS.

NATURAL LAW IN THE BUSINESS WORLD. By Henry Wood. Lee & Shepard, publishers, Boston. Price, thirty cents.

We have already noticed favorably this admirable little book. This is the cheap edition in paper binding. Business men of every kind should read it.

IN PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS. By Count Leo Tolstoi. Published by D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, seventy-five cents.

Count Tolstoi's writings have already made the author famous. He has ardent admirers and severe critics. This book is made up of simple stories, told in a simple style; and the moral inculcated is, that if you would be happy, you must do good to your fellows.

Of this book, the Independent says: "The letters are supposed to be written by a mother in heaven to her son on earth. She describes herself as the wife of a German pastor, who is with her in heaven. Heaven is conceived, after the example of Luther, as a sanctified and transfigured earthly existence; and the special point of the volume is to illustrate, in an almost unending series of examples, the happy ways in which the heavenly life comes to the aid of the life on earth, solving its mysteries and contradictions, completing its work, rounding out its unfinished experience, rewarding its faithfulness, and filling in the lost or wanting chord which is required to raise life into a harmony."

BOSTON SCHOOL-KITCHEN TEXT-BOOK: LESSONS IN COOKING FOR THE USE OF CLASSES IN PUBLIC AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS. By Mrs. D. A. Lincoln. Roberts Brothers, publishers, Boston. Price, $1. It can be had here from Wharton & Bro.

There are twenty lessons, with questions on each and receipts for each. There are tables of measures, and weights and costs of materials, etc. Indeed, the whole work seems to be a book for every housekeeper. It has the merit of having an alphabetical index.

PERIODICALS.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal st., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

LAUDAMUS. A Hymnal. Compiled by J. R. Kendrick, D. D., and F. L. Ritter, Mus. Doc., and Director; both of Vassar College.

Price, Cloth, $1.25; Boards, $1.00.

The compilers' aim in this new book has been "to admit only such hymns as approve themselves to a fair critical judgment, while they cultivate the spirit of devotion." The tunes are arranged for three-part singing, (female voices), with a bass part for the convenience of the organist or pianist; and they comprise the best of those already familiar to American congregations, besides a great number of fine melodies from English, German and other sources. "Laudamus" is the most important work of the kind yet published, and should be examined by all ladies' schools and seminaries.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and opinions are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused the death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

SLUMBER SONG.

BY E. ALICE KINNEY.

Run, little brooks, from the uplands brown,
Run, run to the sea!
Fly, little birds, where the sun goes down,
Back to the greenwood tree!

Beat, little waves, on the rocky shore,
Sing on the pebbly beach!
And teach us the sweet truths o'er and o'er
That you always used to teach.

Crowd, little birdies, 'neath mother's wings,
The night is dark and cold;
Hide, white moon, from all earthly things,
The mouth is growling old.

Nestle closer, O, baby head,
To the tender, snow-white breast!
Sunnily sleep on thy downy bed,
Sleep, sleep and rest.

For the years come and the years go,
Hearts of youth grow cold;
The roses bloom, but soon the snow—
The world grows old.

From Aunt Loretta.

My Dear Nieces and Nephews: The editor gave the boys a good talk last week. Hope all the ADVOCATE boys read it. The girls, too, could read it with profit. An English gentleman, traveling in this country some time ago, made the remark that "there were no boys and girls in America; they were born men and women." He judged from some ill-bred girls and boys whom he met, no doubt, but should not have been quite so sweeping in his remarks. I believe there are some real honest, rollicking boys and old-fashioned true-to-nature girls yet. To those I would say that the enchanted ground and days of childhood is your grandest place and time to make your mark in the world. The pictures you are drawing on memory's page to look on in future years will be shaded or brightened by the way you are living now. Live now as you wish to live when you are men and women. "Dare to do right and dare to be true."

Carrol Mellen, you have won a laurel leaf. Hope you will win enough to make a wreath while you are climbing the hill. Now get your own Bible, find, read and mark St. John iii, 16, and you will learn how "love" was God's greatest gift to man. All the nieces and nephews may do the same. Everyone should have a Bible of their own and read at least one verse every day. I may send you another puzzle some day. God bless you all!

Trials of a Small Boy.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

Well, I s'pose the first thing to do is to tell who I am. My name is Thomas Stanton, and my father's name is Thomas Stanton. That is the reason, I guess, why I am called Thomas, but I am always called Tom unless I am naughty or do something dreadful.

O, I most forgot. Yes, and my mother's name is Margaret Stanton, and she is an awful good mother, too. And my sister's name is Bessie Stanton, and she has got curly hair. And my big brother's name is Robert Stanton; he goes to college now and wears tooth-pick shoes and parts his hair in the middle like a girl. Huh! 'Fore I'd try to look like a girl.

And then there is Freddie; he is about two years old, and when he is cross or mad he just goes "ya-ya-ya!"

Well, now, that's all there is of us but the dog and seven cats, but they ain't folks, so I won't put them in.

Well, one day we couldn't find Freddie and I looked and ma looked, and we all looked, even the old dog, but we couldn't find that baby. At last I went way back of the house in a big field and there I found him with the can of oil that belonged with father's reaper that stood there, and he was just soaking his feet with the oil, for he was barefooted; he did that I s'pose so he could go better, but it didn't do any good, for when I tried to lead him back to the house he just hung back and howled, "Ya-ya-ya!"

Now, if I had done so wouldn't I have got licked though? But you see it was the baby, and so they only hugged and kissed him.

Wish I could have stayed a baby, then maybe they would laugh at me instead of saying "Thomas William Stanton!" in such an awful way when I do things I hadn't ought to that my hair most stands up on my head.

And then 'nother day when all the folks was gone over to Aunt Sue's visiting and left Freddie and me alone, what do you think that awful baby done?

You see I had been out to the barn trying to make a tomahawk, cause Jimmie Smith said he knew I couldn't; and I had got it most done when it broke, and I thought I'd go to the house and get a string and see if I couldn't tie it together long enough to show Jimmie Smith that I could make a tomahawk, even if I didn't have anything but a piece of an old scythe and some shingles and my jack-knife to do it with. So I went in the house, and if you will believe it, there on the floor sat that baby with a whole apple pie in his lap and a knife in his hand, and he was just digging away at that pie, now I tell you. First he'd take some and then he'd feed some to Carlo (that's the dog). He'd got it most eat up, but I took the rest away from him, and then he set up such a ya-ya-ing. Oh my! But he stopped after a while; he had to, I guess; he didn't have breath enough to hold out.

So when ma got home I told her about the pie; I thought she'd be mad, but my! they all laughed at that baby and said "little dear!" and "too cute!" and everything like that, you know.

So one day, about a week after that, Bridget baked a lot of pumpkin pies and set them to cool in the pantry; I was going past the window and seeing those pies made me think of Freddie. And then I thought seeing they hadn't cared about the pie, and all laughed so and called it such a joke, that I would try and please them again. I do like to please folks, and then, besides ma only lets me have one piece of pie a day, and it ain't very big either; so I took the biggest pie I could find and a spoon and sat down in the middle of the floor just as the baby did.

My! wasn't that pie good though? I had got about half through when ma came to the door. She gave one look and then called father. I expected they would all laugh, and say it was cute, and all that, just as they did about the baby; but I kept right on eating till I heard that awful "Thomas William Stanton!" which most made my hair stand up, and I looked just in time to see my father going out to the barn and calling me to follow him.

Then he made me tell him why I was so "awful wicked" as to eat a whole pie, and I tried to explain and told him about the baby, but it didn't do any good: and he gave me an ——

But no, I shan't tell you what it was, but it hurt awfully, though.

But my! Don't I wish I was a baby?—Northern Christian Advocate.

BOY CHARACTER.—It is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of noble character as a man. He may so speak and live the truth that there shall be no discount on his word. And there are such noble Christian boys, and wider and deeper than they are apt to think is their influence. They are the king-boys among their fellows, having an immense influence for good, and loved and respected because of the simple fact of living the truth.

Dear boys, do be truthful. Keep your word as absolutely sacred. Keep your appointments at the house of God. Be known for your fidelity to the interests of the church and Sunday-school. Be true in every friendship. Help others to be and do good.—Child's Paper.

HEROISM AT HOME.—How useless our lives seems to us sometimes! How we long for an opportunity to perform some great action! We become tired of the routine of home life and imagine we would be far happier in other scenes. We think of the life's great battle-field and we wish to be heroes. We think of the good we might do if our lot had been cast in different scenes. We forget that the world bestows no such titles as noble as father, mother, sister or brother. In the sacred precincts of home we have many chances of heroism. The daily acts of self-denial for the good of a loved one, the gentle words of soothing for another's trouble, the care for the sick, may all seem as nothing; yet who can tell the good they accomplish? Our slightest word may have an influence over another for good or evil. We are daily sowing the seed which will bring forth some sort of harvest. Well will it be for us if the harvest will be one we will be proud to gather. If some one in that dear home circle can look back in after years, and, as he tenderly utters our name, say: "Her words and example prepared me for a life of usefulness; to her I owe my happiness," we may well say, I have not lived in vain.—Christian at Work.

A WOMAN'S AUTUMN.—Oh, mothers, do not fold your hands across your empty lap, and say at fifty, "The story is told." If home has been so all-absorbing that outside interests have fallen away from you, find the broken thread, or take up a new one, and you will soon find yourselves among the world's creators. The summer sunshine went with the children, but your autumn may be long and bright, with real "halcyon days" here and there. Your daughters, now young mothers, will feel that your example has given them a larger life-lease, and the world must needs acknowledge its errors. The promise for the "golden age" for women is fair, but its realization will never be reached until home training undergoes the needed reformation and its girls and women secure a physical poise which shall give judgment and stability to all their undertakings. Upon the women of to-day devolves a mighty task, but, when filled with glory and honor, it teems with rich possibilities.—Dr. Elizabeth Chapin.

WHY NOT?—"Why do you not use those luscious sweet apples in place of raisins or currants in your cake?" was a friend's suggestion that put me on the track of filling batter for gingerbread and cake with pared sweet apples, cut in long, thin sections. Fruit so prepared resembles candied citron in cake, and loaves disappear only too fast. This is the recipe I use for old-fashioned, every-day gingerbread: One pint of molasses, one pint of rich buttermilk, two-thirds of a cup of shortening, two eggs, one quart of cut apples, two large teaspoonfuls soda, two-thirds teaspoonful of ginger, same of cassia, flour to make a smooth batter, bake in three loaves.

The mother is to impress her children with those spiritual characteristics which she has the best opportunity to give. No one has the power like a mother to surround the children with a right spiritual environment. She may present the mould for a righteous life. If she has to do this, she must be gently led every day by the Great Shepherd of the flock.

Doctor's Bills.

Nearly all diseases originate from inaction of the liver, and this especially the case with chills and fever, intermittent fevers, and malarial diseases. To save doctors' bills and ward off disease take Simmons Liver Regulator, a medicine that increases in popularity each year, and has become the most popular and best endorsed medicine in the market for the cure of liver or bowel diseases.—TELEGRAPH, Dubuque, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886.
122 E. 27th st.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which rendered me that, for two years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold or any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in many cases of pulmonary, inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, it has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

SMITH—EUGENE SMITH, son of G. W. Smith, was born October 3, 1873, and died September 20, from injuries sustained by a fall from a tree on September 19. Without warning, in a day, cut down as by a single stroke of the great reaper, Death, yet we do not fear but that all is well with his soul, for thus God has opened for him the portals of an eternity in glory, through Jesus Christ, who has said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." He was all that the pride and ambition of those who loved him could wish—possessing a sweetness of disposition, a clearness of intellect and strength of character, that promised for him a successful and honorable career. But the mysterious and invisible hand has beckoned him away, where "whatever his hands are set to do, is wrought with tumult of acclaim." Beloved by all who knew him, his untimely death has created a void in his home and his class, which will not soon be filled. A pure little Christian and an exemplary Sunday-school scholar, he would have been awarded on the Sunday following his death the prize offered in his class for best lessons and good conduct. Shall we grieve that God has seen fit to want him instead?

May he, who alone can comfort the afflicted heart, give to those whom he has caused to suffer "the oil of joy for mourning and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness," enabling them to say, in the fullness of resignation, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

HIS SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHER.

DECELL.—MRS. M. J. DECELL, daughter of James and Martha Stanfill, and wife of George Decell, was born near Monticello, Miss., November 11, 1836. When a child of seven years, her parents moved to Copiah county, Miss., and settled near Pleasant Valley Church. There, at the age of sixteen, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was soundly converted at the same time. On this solid foundation the superstructure of a beautiful Christian character was reared to be read and known of all. Her "light" was such as "shone more and more unto the perfect day" upon all around her, evincing to all the truthfulness of her profession and the soundness of her conversion. When through the deep waters she passed, they did not overwhelm; when through the fiery test she passed, she was not consumed. But the gold was refined, and with sweeter luster shone to intensify the evidence by which Christ and Christianity was represented. With a rich experience, with love and zeal for souls and with telling pathos in her prayers, she was largely useful at camp and protracted meetings. Sister Decell was highly esteemed, and, though dead, she still speaks by her living piety to her loved ones and others. She passed up to her mansion in heaven on July 25, 1887, wherein "there is not a wave of trouble," etc. May such be the religion of her loved ones! WM. H. HINES.

FLOWERS—MARIAN A. FLOWERS, daughter of G. H. and Julia Flowers, was born in Franklin county, Miss., August, 1883; died September 15, 1887, aged four years, one month and eight days. Beautiful flower, plucked from the parent stem and transplanted in the sun-bright clime of the city of God, and blooms to fade no more. May the parents so live that they may meet the loved one on that bright and beautiful shore where parting will be no more! E. A. FLOWERS.

There is nothing more intolerable than headache; no derangement of the system which so unfits one for social enjoyment or the most simple duties of life. If it comes every day at nearly the same time, you may safely charge it to Malaria, and Shallenberger's Antidote will immediately relieve you. Don't allow prejudice to prolong your suffering. Get the medicine, and be cured.

WRIGHT—MRS. SARAH E. WRIGHT, whose maiden name was Black, and the wife of Dr. R. J. Wright, was born in Louisiana, October 13, 1850; was united in marriage to Dr. Wright, September 6, 1876; departed this life on September 30, 1887, in the thirty-seventh year of her age. She was a member of the Baptist Church until married to the doctor. On that day she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the doctor being a member of the Methodist Church. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother. She was also devoted to the church, and labored and toiled to get our church at Roxie. She was devoted to the Sunday-school, and a faithful worker in the same. Her last illness was short and very severe, and death soon done its work. She passed away without a struggle, calm as a summer's evening, leaving no word to console husband and children. Yet her life and work leave on the mind of those who knew her best that with her all is well. We sorrow not as those who have no hope. In the family circle she will be missed; at the church and in the Sunday-school her presence and influence will also be missed. But God can supply those vacancies. Our loss, we trust, is her eternal gain. May the riches of divine grace sustain the afflicted husband and motherless children!

E. A. FLOWERS.

GOZA—Whereas, Our heavenly Parent has seen ill to remove from our Woman's Missionary Society, at Rehoboth, our much-loved friend and sister, MRS. EMMA GOZA; therefore, be it,

Resolved, That though we can not understand the mysterious providence which has taken our sister from a sphere of usefulness from our society, even in its early infancy, and from the loving embrace of fond husband and helpless little ones; yet in the shadow of this great mystery we can trust God, knowing that he is "too wise to err and too good to be unkind." Thanking him, too, that he has ever permitted us to be associated with one so patient and cheerful, even in hours of pain and affliction—one so submissive to the divine will in all things.

Resolved, That we emulate her sweet Christian character, and that we adopt her watchword, "Thy will be done," until we, too, shall have passed the "pearly portals."

Resolved, That our society extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, praying that God's grace may be sufficient for them in their deep affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.

MRS. M. R. GOFF, for Com.

WRENN—Little CARRIE PRUDENCE WRENN was born September 2, 1885; died January 1, 1887. The only child of A. G. and Minnie Wrenn. She was a precious jewel, and sweetened life with her many smiles that were akin to heaven. Her short stay on earth was like dewdrops on the roses, yet endless and unfading in memory and in heaven beyond, in that cloudless sky, shines in glory. PAPA.

A Business-like Offer.

For many years the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy have offered, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of Nasal Catarrh which they can not cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents. This wonderful remedy has fairly attained a world-wide reputation. If you have dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous purulent, bloody and putrid; if the eyes are weak, watery and inflamed; if there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice being changed and has a nasal twang; the breath offensive; smell and taste impaired; sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility, you are suffering from nasal catarrh. The more complicated your disease, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians.

The spiritual life begotten of the Holy Spirit is the true starting-point of the soul for heaven. By faith it becomes a child of God, and is adopted into the family of believers. It begins a career in which trust, diligence, patience, love, brotherly kindness, and all Christian graces and virtues are called into action. These become the means of its growth and development, and we should seek occasion for their exercise. There is hardly a greater mistake than to shun legitimate religious work. It is a false view that looks upon it as a burden, as something disciplinary, and of the nature of cross-bearing. We may indeed make it such by our reluctance to enter upon it and lack of faith; but God intends it as a source of enjoyment. One who attempts to live within himself becomes spiritually impoverished and enfeebled.—Central Christian Advocate.

SOMETIMES an extreme tired feeling comes over us, when any effort to move the limbs or body, is attended with weariness and exhaustion; at such times, Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm, by its genial action on the Liver and Kidneys, restores health and vitality.

The more you drink into the love and spirit of Christ, the more happy and honorable and useful you will be.

DR. J. H. MCLEAN'S Liver and Kidney Pillets are a remedy and specific for chills and fever. Mild in their action, they are agreeable to take, and a certain cure.

How They Found "the Physical Basis of Life."

Nor is this the only case, though it is the most important, in which Mr. Murray has had strength to be a great iconoclast. Along with the earlier specimens of deep-sea deposits sent home by naturalists during the first soundings in connection with the Atlantic telegraph cable, there was very often a sort of enveloping slimy mucus in the containing bottles which arrested the attention and excited the curiosity of the specialists to whom they were consigned. It was structureless to all microscopic examination. But so is all the protoplasmic matter of which the lowest animals are formed. Could it be a widely diffused medium of this protoplasmic material not yet specialized or individualized into organic forms, nor itself yet in a condition to build up inorganic skeletons for a habitation? Here was a grand idea. It would be well to find missing links; but it would be better to find the primordial pabulum out of which all living things had come. The ultra-Darwinian enthusiasts were enchanted. Haeckel clapped his hands and shouted out "Eureka" loudly. Even the cautious and discriminating mind of Prof. Huxley was caught by this new and grand generalization of the "physical basis of life." It was announced by him to the British Association in 1868. Dr. William Carpenter took up the chorus. He spoke of "a living expanse of protoplasmic substance," penetrating with its living substance the "whole mass" of the oceanic mud. A fine new Greek name was devised for this mother slime, and it was christened "bathybius," from the consecrated deeps in which it lay. The conception ran like wildfire through the popular literature of science, and here again there was something like a coming plebiscite in its favor. Expectant imagination soon played its part. Wonderful movements were seen in this mysterious slime. It became an "irregular network," and it could be seen gradually "altering its form," so that "entangled granules gradually changed their relative positions." The naturalists of the Challenger began their voyage in the full bathybian faith. But the sturdy mind of Mr. John Murray kept its balance—all the more easily since he never could himself find or see any trace of this pelagic protoplasm when the dredges of the Challenger came fresh from bathysmal bottoms. Again and again he looked for it, but never could he discover it. It always hailed from home. The bottles sent there were reported to yield it in abundance, but somehow it seemed to be hatched in them. The laboratory in Jermyn street was its unfailing source, and the great observer there was its only sponsor. The ocean never yielded it until it had been bottled. At last, one day on board the Challenger an accident revealed the mystery. One of Mr. Murray's assistants poured a large quantity of spirits of wine into a bottle containing some pure sea water, when lo! the wonderful protoplasm bathybius appeared. It was the chemical precipitate of sulphate of lime produced by the mixture of alcohol and sea water. This was bathos indeed. On this announcement bathybius disappeared from science, reading us, in more senses than one, a great lesson on "precipitation."—The Duke of Argyll, in the Nineteenth Century.

No, we are not bound to go forward through life ignorant of our relations to God, or merely hoping that all is well with us now, and will be well with us when we have accomplished our probation and gone to our final settlement. We may now assure ourselves of his favor, which is life, bask in the radiance of his smile, and exult in the prospect of an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. We may have this assurance in the exercise of our own reason, and in the operation of the same mental processes by which we convince ourselves of the esteem of our friends and of the love of our families. The conviction, too, may be equally as satisfying and equally as strong. And above all, the soul and completeness of all, the Spirit bears witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. Let us realize our privilege, and also realize that our privilege is our obligation.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Personal Charms.

HOW THE DELSARTIAN THEORY OF DEVELOPMENT BEAUTIFIES WOMEN.

What is the Delsartian method? If ladies can secure cultivation of the voice, so as to read and converse in sweetly modulated yet strong and deep tones, and by the same course of training acquire grace of carriage and the development of chest and lungs that ensures health and adds to personal charms, the methods employed are worthy of investigation.

So thought our reporter, who called upon Mme. Gray, the noted teacher of Oratory and Physical Culture, at one of our leading hotels.

As he entered the room, a lady, tall, but well proportioned, came with graceful movement toward him. A well-shaped head, crowned with a wealth of iron-gray hair, dark, brilliant eyes, beneath finely arched brows, were noted as she approached. When she spoke, it was with a voice sweet and low, yet with a wonderful compass.

"What is the secret of this power of vocal expression you seem to have?"

"Secret? There is no secret," laughed Mme. Gray. "Time was when I had one of the weakest and thinnest of voices. Anyone can accomplish what I have done. It is so easy to acquire a full, resonant voice, that will never tire or grow hoarse. All vocal disabilities may be overcome, hesitation, stammering, stuttering soon disappear under proper training."

"Does this training affect the physical system?"

"Yes, it will develop the bust to almost ideal perfection. Gentlemen will add four or five inches chest measurement in as many months."

"It is desirable from a point of beauty, then?"

"Yes, ladies gain the roundness of waist, taper of arm and hand, and the perfect poise, ease and grace in movement that add so much to personal charms."

"Health, I should think, would be benefited also?"

"Indeed it is. Lung and throat troubles decrease, narrow chests and thin arms are developed, and female weaknesses largely overcome."

"It seems to be a regular panacea?"

"No, I am sorry to say that some organs can not be made good in this way after they have been injured as mine were by a sojourn near a Southern swamp. Before I tried physical culture and Warner's safe cure I was a confirmed invalid. I was consumptive in early life, and it is only a few years since I overcame a serious liver trouble. I owe much to Warner's safe cure, and I do not hesitate to acknowledge it."

"And the consumption tendency?"

"Disappeared after the use of this remedy and when I had learned how to breathe. Not one in twenty breathe in such a way as to fill the air-cells, to expand the strong muscles at the base of the lungs, which should do the labor of expelling air. Hence, if kidney disease prevails, the lungs affected by the kidney poisoned blood soon give way."

"Is not your system the Delsartian theory?"

"Yes, and I greatly rejoiced when this grand teacher gave to the world his ideas. They correspond to those I had long taught, for I am a pioneer in this work, and have devoted life and energy to teaching the world that women may gain vocal accomplishments, health, grace and beauty all at the same time by these methods of cultivation."

"You are yet teaching?"

"Yes, at the School of Oratory and Physical Culture at Syracuse, N. Y., a permanent institution, now in very successful progress."

Was it not a pretty thought, that of the gay young Southern girl, dancing with a sort of ecstacy among the falling leaves, whose brilliancy she had never seen in her sea-coast home? To one near her, saddening over their fall, she said: "Just think how much more room it gives you to see the beautiful blue sky beyond!" Is it not true that as our little joys and pleasures and earth's many lovely things fade away, they open spaces for us in which to see God's heaven beyond?—"Manners Makyth Man."

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 220 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Col. Fred Grant, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State of New York, was defeated by Fred Cook, the Democratic nominee.

The prohibition amendment was defeated in Oregon.

Prohibition was carried in Dakota, and also the proposition to divide the Territory.

The fifteenth session of the American Public Health Association convened in Memphis, November 8.

Local option has been carried in Union Parish, La.

The Democrats are pleased with the results of the late elections. Having carried New York, they consider they have the key to the situation in 1888.

A negro boy, eleven years old, has been sentenced for life for murder committed in Georgia.

The warm weather caused an increase in the number of yellow fever cases in Tampa.

The Governor of Illinois has commuted the sentences of the anarchists, Fielden and Schwab, into imprisonment for life. Louis Linng, one of the anarchists, killed himself in jail by exploding a bomb in his mouth, which tore his head to pieces.

The New Orleans division of the Texas and Pacific railroad, with the terminal plant in this city, was sold at auction a few days ago and bought by a representative of the bond-holders for $5,000,000.

Fifteen desperadoes broke jail in Tahlequah, Indian Territory.

The anarchists, Parsons, Spies, Engel and Fischer, were hanged November 11.

Grading on the Pine Bluff, New Orleans and Monroe railroad has commenced at Pine Bluff.

Gen. Sparks, Commissioner of the General Land Office, must resign, or he will be removed. In either case the appointment of his successor will lie with Mr. Vilas, who is to succeed Secretary Lamar in the Interior Office. Mr. Bryant, Assistant Attorney General is mentioned as Sparks' successor.

A tailor in New Jersey has been mobbed for displaying a red flag draped in mourning for the hanged anarchists.

An anarchist newspaper in Rhode Island is flaunting its insulting folds to the breeze.

The mayor of Chicago gave a special permit to the friends of the anarchists to have a procession in connection with the funeral of the hanged men.

It is understood that Don M. Dickinson, of Michigan, has notified the President that he will accept the position of Postmaster General.

Diphtheria prevails as an epidemic throughout the Miami Valley. At Lewisburg the schools are closed, and children forbidden to go upon the street.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Mayor Guillotte and Lessee Larquie for contempt, require the evidence of the contempt to be filed.

General Sparks will reply to Secretary Lamar to vindicate his position; but his official head will come off anyhow.

FOREIGN.

There is talk of a railroad from Vera Cruz across the continent to Acapulco, and all under English control.

Nine bandits have been executed at Matamoras, Mexico.

It is said that President Grevy will resign if his son-in-law, M. Wilson, is proven guilty. If he resigns, he will probably be succeeded by M. Ferry or M. de Freycinet.

The Prime Minister of Italy, Signor Crispi, has informed the American Minister that his government will exercise the greatest vigilance in the inspection of vessels carrying emigrants to America.

Emperor William's health is very feeble, and serious fears are entertained in regard to the Crown Prince's condition.

O'Brien has been removed to the prison infirmary on the doctor's orders.

The committee of the French Chamber of Deputies to investigate the Caffarel scandal consists of ten members of the extreme left, six radicals, three of the moderate left, and three of the right.

Victor Lesseps, son of Count Lesseps, has written a letter in which he repents the promise that the Panama Canal will be opened February 9, and that no further loan will be required.

The existing commercial treaty between Austria and Germany has been prolonged for an indefinite period.

There has been a severe earthquake in Greece.

The consultation of physicians in the case of the Crown Prince resulted in an agreement that there is no cause for alarm.

In the Caffarel trial several sensational incidents have been brought out to the discredit of M. Wilson.

At last the doctors have agreed that the Crown Prince is afflicted with cancer, and the opinion has made a deep impression in Europe. His death is simply a question of time.

The Empress of Germany is quite sick.

The Emperor and Czar are to have a meeting in presence of Bismarck and M. de Giers, to-day, Thursday, the seventeenth.

Rt. Hon. George J. Groschen has been elected to the rectorship of Aberdeen University, over Rt. Hon. John Morley.

A mob in Trafalgar Square, London, on Sunday, was charged, clubbed and put to flight by the police. A number of men on both sides were wounded, and many arrested.

SICK headache is the bane of many lives; to cure and prevent this annoying complaint use Dr. J. M. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillers, they are agreeable to take and gentle in their action.

The Youth's Companion

is superior to any illustrated Family Weekly published. That it is highly appreciated is shown by the fact that it has won its way into 400,000 families. The publishers issue a new announcement and Calendar, showing increased attractions for the new year, which with sample copies will be sent free to all not familiar with the paper. If $1.75 is sent now, it will pay for THE COMPANION to January, 1889, and you will receive the admirable Double Thanksgiving and Christmas Number, and other weekly issues to January 1, 1888, free. The leading features of the YOUTH'S COMPANION Announcement for 1888 just published are its Six Illustrated Serial Stories, by Trowbridge, Stephens, and others, its Two Hundred Short Stories and Tales of Adventure, its articles by Eminent Writers, including the Right Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone, Professor Tyndall, Gen. Lord Wolseley, Louisa M. Alcott, Gen. George Crook, and one hundred other popular authors. Address Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

Farmers and others who have a little leisure time for the next few months will find it their interest to write to B. F. Johnson & Co., of Richmond, whose advertisement appears in another column. They offer great inducements to persons to work for them all or part of their time.

THE GREATEST ART PUBLISHERS.

If a dozen ordinary men were asked to name the greatest painter now living, the chances are that they would give a dozen different answers. Anybody, though, particularly any artist, will tell you that the house of Raphael Tuck & Sons are the greatest art publishers in the world. There can be no doubt of that. Their publications are before you, no matter where you find an art dealer's establishment. Their largest house is in London, but they have others almost equally extensive in Berlin, Paris, Leipzig and New York. Their headquarters in New York City, by the way, is in charge of Mr. Samuel Gabriel, at No. 298 Broadway, where the firm's latest productions can be viewed. The collection there displayed of reproductions of the most noted works of all the modern masters is worth going far to see. So extensive have Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Sons' operations in America become that Mr. Adolph Tuck will visit the New York agency about the middle of next month and make arrangements for still further extensions.

The factories of Messrs Raphael Tuck & Sons at Leipzig, employ an army of more than three hundred experienced designers, lithographers and transferers. Besides this they have their own paper and card-board mills, where are prepared the materials for their art printing. Altogether the firm employs more than one thousand people in their printing, cutting, imbellishing, finishing packing and shipping departments. They send their publications all over the world. These consist of large and handsome oleographs for framing purposes, artistic studies for painting and drawing, circular and shell plaques, wall pockets, etc., for wall, mantel and cabinet decoration; Christmas and New Year cards, and a thousand and one artistic notions, designed to beautify the homes of those who have learned to appreciate the beautiful. Messrs Raphael Tuck & Son may truly claim to have done more to render art popular than any other publishers in the world. They have reproduced and sold at popular prices all the paintings in the world-famous Berlin gallery, and the works of some of the eminent foreign and American artists. In Christmas and New Year cards alone Messrs Tuck & Sons annually print more than 2,000 designs. Among their latest novelties is an exquisite line of Porcelain Studies of superior quality and thickness and bevelled, and each inclosed in a wooden safety box, guarding it against risk of breakage in transmission through the mail. All the designs are by well-known artists, and the best that has been thus far brought out is the portrait of Mrs. President Cleveland, generally acknowledged to be the best picture of her extant.

Mr. Spurgeon opened the Wesleyan Mission, in West London, by a grand sermon on Jeremiah vi. 16. There were two thousand persons present.

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

J. A. BRASELMAN.—The fall and winter announcement of this enterprising merchant will be found in this issue of the ADVOCATE. Always to the front with everything new in the dry goods line and house furnishings of the best quality, together with a full line of staple and fancy goods, Mr. Braselman has not hesitated to put prices down to rock bottom in the face of strong opposition and large capital. A full force of male and female clerks, polite and attentive, will be found to give immediate attention. Country orders will have immediate attention at the old stand, corner St. Andrew and Magazine.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

BY H. G. LINCOLN.

Born in the spring-time, nurtured in beauty,
Dying in glory at close of the year:
There was beauty in living, more beauty in dying;
Thus beauty to death should ever be near.

To the breast of their mother in autumn descending,
She covers them up in her white robe of snow;
But the hues of the rainbow that decked them in dying,
Still live in the sunlight and shine in its glow.

So truth, love and virtue on the tree of life budding,
Are leaves of the spirit born never to die,
Through seeming death living, true joy ever giving,
Immortal as God, as broad, deep, and high.

—The Christian Register.

(Editorial.)

"The League of Freedom and Justice."

The following, from the Daily Picayune, will be interesting to our readers, as showing the trend of thought and action by a certain class of citizens in this city:

In response to a call for a meeting of German citizens, about 500 of the people of that nationality assembled at Screwmen's Hall, at 7:30 o'clock last night, to organize the "League of Freedom and Justice." The assembly was called to order by Temporary Chairman Joseph Voegile, with A. Rengstroff, vice president, and Sol. Marx, secretary.

The lists of membership were handed in by the members of the temporary organization, and nearly 4,000 names were found to have been signed. The league is to consist exclusively of German-speaking citizens, whose aim and object was to be as follows:

First—Abrogation of the Sunday Law.

Second—Opposition to high licenses and to prohibition.

Third—Improvement of the city's interests, and protection for the citizens and property.

Each list was headed with the following pledge: "We, the undersigned, bind ourselves by our words of honor to become members of the league, and obey all the laws or orders of the central assembly, or of the officers of the ward organizations which are represented in the central assembly; to register ourselves as voters, and to exercise our rights as such at the forthcoming primary, State and city elections, and to vote only for such delegates or candidates as shall promise to sustain the principles of this organization."

Here are some significant things to which we beg leave to call the reader's attention. Here is a society of, at present, 4,000 persons banded together for the express purpose of abrogating the Sunday Law and opposing high license and prohibition. They have also bound themselves to obey "all the laws or orders of the central assembly, or the officers of the ward organizations represented in the central assembly, and to vote only for such candidates as promise to sustain the principles of their organization." The meeting above referred to is represented to have been quite an enthusiastic one, "the greatest harmony and good feeling prevailing, and some stirring addresses being made."

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." With a great deal of work, and after a lapse of weary years, the people of Louisiana secured the passage, by the last Legislature, of the Sunday Law. From the quotation taken from the Picayune, they are given to understand that they can hold their victory only by fighting for it. It is an undeniable fact that the Sunday Law has been a blessing to the whole State of Louisiana and a special God-send to this city. Now, if the friends of the measure—those who worked so long and earnestly to secure that boon—sit still and allow this German "League of Freedom and Justice" to undo their good work, then our "last state will be worse than the first." The Sabbath law is the protection to all the moralities of the code. Its position in the Decalogue makes it the hinge upon which all moral precepts turn. If it is nullified by the abrogation of the State law, which protects its sanctity, then are we undone, and all sorts of licentiousness will come in like a flood. It occurs to us that this league, which has gone to work to abrogate a law whose constitutionality has been affirmed by almost every Supreme Court in the land, and whose beneficent results have been proved by the history of every State and city where it has been duly executed, has perpetrated a piece of impudent impertinence which calls for rebuke!

Our paper goes to very many of the voters of Louisiana, and to these we have to say that this devil must be fought with his own fire. He has unwittingly given us the cue. Let all the lovers of order, all who believe in God and respect his law—every man who believes that "righteousness exalteth a nation"—"vote only for such candidates as shall promise to sustain the principles of" righteousness. That is the rebuke which must be given to this league which insanely proposes to improve the interests of the community and protect citizens and property by nullifying a law of God.

Thanksgiving.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

As a Christian people, who do not believe that the world is ruled by blind chance, or irresponsible and irresistible forces, but by an intelligent and beneficent Providence, and that the Most High rules in the kingdoms of the children of men, it is eminently proper that we should, in our national capacity, from the Chief Magistrate to the humblest citizen, be called to recognize and thank the beneficent Author of all our mercies. God has rolled the seasons round, seed-time and harvest have come, and we have received again the kindly fruits of the earth—a wide rain of benedictions has been poured upon our extended fields.

As a Christian nation, we should continually seek to teach our children that we live under the rule of an all-wise Providence; that it is God who setteth up and putteth down; that majesty and power cometh from him.

As a nation, we have been saved from the great scourges of pestilence, famine, and war; and this day we may say, without patriotic egotism, that we present to the world the most magnificent spectacle of national well-being the ages of history have ever seen. We live under the reign of just and equal laws, which we have enacted: laws administered by men whom we have elected, and who are responsible to us for their administration. In God's providence we are in a position to command the respect of the world, and to protect all our rights.

Our future, as a nation, promises to realize our most patriotic hopes. If we are faithful to our trusts, it may for long years be said to us: "Happy art thou, O favored people: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency, and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places."

As citizens of Louisiana, we have abundant cause for thanksgiving. All our staples have yielded to industry a bountiful harvest, and our rich valleys have been saved from destructive overflows. As Louisianians, we have, for the first time in our history, lived under the beneficent reign of a State Sunday Law, and have begun to reap its fruits in more temperance, better order, less criminality, and less costly criminal litigation. Let us, as citizens of this good commonwealth, be thankful for what Providence has done, and for what, under our more favorable conditions, we may be able to do for education, charity, and religion.

As Christian men, we never had more cause for thankfulness than now. The ever-increasing victories of the cross, in multitudes of revivals, in all parts of our wide land, and throughout the world, the deepening and fast-spreading interest in missions, the many godly men and consecrated women volunteering for evangelical labors in foreign fields, are most hopeful and brightly prophetic of the Redeemer's universal triumph.

Let us, then, as good citizens, as believers in God, gratefully keep Thanksgiving Day. Let us crowd to his sanctuaries, and praise God, from whom all blessings flow. Let households and friendships gather about their firesides and well-spread boards, and let charities to the poor brighten and commemorate the day, that it may be to us all, long, a pleasant memory.

A Secular Editor's Views of the Theater.

While the attention of the church is being called to the theater by the press, incited specially by an instance of theatrical impudence recently exhibited in a church at Nashville, Tenn., this ADVOCATE would furnish its readers with the soundest views on this, one of the most insidious forms of Satanic deception known in our day. The devil tempts chiefly by deception. With sugar-coated poisons he destroys his victims. He will deceive, if it be possible, the very elect, while he assumes the garb of an angel of light.

The church has always opposed the theater, and must continue to do so while the theater remains what it is. Everybody expects preachers to preach against theaters, and some may attribute their utterances to mere professional performance. But if any suppose all the secular press is sold to Satan and fights the church on this high moral question, they are greatly mistaken.

The following judicious editorial, from the Wilmington (N. C.) Star, is but one of many from the pens of secular editors who realize the holy functions of the church and applaud her when she reproves sin.

W. L. C. H.

The Star says:

"In the past the Star has several times discussed the influence of the theater. After an attendance upon dramatic representations extending through several decades, we are constrained to say that we believe the tendency is evil. It is not to be gainsaid that an ideal theater might do good, but there is no ideal theater as yet. A play of excellent moral teaching, with nothing in it to offend the most refined taste, the tenderest sensibilities or the sincerest religious convictions and principles, with a company of chaste, cultivated, refined players, with an audience of equal character, and there would not be anything really in the surroundings for the most censorious and strait laced to condemn. But there has never been any such theatrical entertainment and surroundings, and there will probably never be. We strongly suspect that if such a theater could be created that it would offer but few attractions for that large class of attendants who relish French plays, are greatly entertained with plots that turn upon the ruin of wives and maidens, are surcharged with vicious rhetoric and worse morality, and are pestilential to young and old from beginning to end. It is not denied there are plays that are not vitiated by impurities of any kind, but it is well known to all play goers and play readers that the latter-day drama is as positively tainted with vice as it is puerile, sensational and vapid. So much so is this the case that the advocates of the drama and distinguished theatrical critics have written essays upon essays in denunciation of the low grade of plays and the sad decadence of dramatic art.

"The theater, as now organized, will not begin to do. It is a school of vice if not a school of scandal. Many of the most accomplished and eminent of actors have been prompt to condemn the general tendency of the modern stage. The theater has been the theme through the last two thousand years of poets and satirists, of theologians and moralists, and they have all denounced the depraved influences that cluster around the arena of Thespis and Melpomene. This may be said without condemning the grand tragedies of the Greeks, or the equally inspiring and awing tragedies of English dramatic literature.

"We have before us the sermon of Rev. W. A. Candler, pastor of McKendree Methodist Church, Nashville, on the theater. It was a sermon delivered by the pastor to his people, and was prepared for the purpose. He began by saying:

"'It seems to me a duty incumbent upon me at this time to give the reasons why the Methodist Church forbids her people attending the theater. I do not give it primarily to dissuade any who have attended from going, because they ought to be bound by a vow stronger than any persuasion could be.'

"All know how great, numerically, is the Methodist denomination in the United States. We do not suppose of the thousands of its ministers there is one who does not condemn the theater. Right or wrong, justly or unjustly, we take it that all Methodist ministers are agreed as to the immoral influence exerted by the theater. Mr. Candler was discharging a duty, as he conceived it, in instructing his people on this matter. It is a well-prepared, thoughtful sermon, showing study and research. When an enthusiastic disciple or advocate of the stage was pleased to attend upon the services, he or she was bound by every law of decency, propriety and respectability to listen respectfully and in silence. No theatrical displays could be possibly in order in the house of God. No desire to make oneself more conspicuous, and thereby secure a wide advertisement and arouse the enthusiastic applause of inconsiderate and unwise people, could be a sufficient excuse for a rude outburst of indignant feeling and a sensational interruption of the orderly services in a Christian Church. There is nothing in the sermon that could so offend any well-regulated mind as to excite to an unseemly interruption of the services. Nothing was said that has not been said a thousand times in a thousand pulpits against the vitiating characters of the theater. Nothing denunciatory of the pure, admirable women who have adorned the stage do we find. Mrs. Siddons, Lady Martin, Fanny Kemble, Mary Anderson, Madame Modjeska, Charlotte Cushman, among the histrions, and Jenny Lind, Malibran, Miss Abbott, and others among singers were untouched and unrebuked by the preacher's rhetoric and citations. It was the Peg Woffingtons, the Rachels, the Bernhardts, the Pattis, the thousand debauched women of the stage who might wince and cry out under the lash of public opinion and the excoriations of the pulpit.

"The Star, on this Sunday morning, chooses to refer to this matter again in the interest of society and morality. It has stood, and it will stand on the side of truth, morality and the Bible. It will not yield to the wild clamor of the unreasoning multitude that take the side of the theater against the Christian Church. It believes that the eternal safety and welfare of the people depend upon upholding a pure religion, and it will do nothing to lessen the force and influence of the pulpits of our country. Northern papers may sing the praises of the theater and denounce Christian teachers for opposing it, and Southern papers may do likewise, but the Star will stand by those who are for maintaining a pure religion and a pure morality."

"A CARD."

"Finding that my views in regard to the attitude of the church towards theaters and theater-going have been widely misinterpreted, I had prepared a paper, giving not only a statement of my views, but arguments and illustrations in support thereof. On second thought it has occurred to me that a paper such as this might not be so clearly understood as a simple statement of my position, while the former course might provoke discussion, which judicious friends of the church think would not now, at least, be profitable. In the interest, therefore, of candor, clearness and peace, I write this card.

"The circumstances which led to the criticism first made by me on the sermon have, perhaps, been sufficiently explained heretofore. As I have before said, that the criticism should have been made at the time it was, has been a source of deep regret. I prefer to say further, that for all that related to any of the persons concerned, either directly or indirectly, I have equal regret.

"I think it proper to state that I have never written a sentence or uttered a word on the subject of theaters or theater-going, not in full harmony with the teachings of evangelical Christianity, on these and kindred topics; nor have I, at any time, differed either in theory or practice on questions of amusements from the law and prevalent practice of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"I am in nowise responsible for the widespread prominence given to a criticism of mine made in the same local paper in which the sermon criticised had been published. I am, if possible, less responsible for the fact that the Christian Advocate chose to republish my criticism after the circumstances had become known to me, which, if known at the time, would have prevented its first publication, and in a setting which has helped lead to a widespread misrepresentation of my views. When the excitement created by an untoward incident and increased by the adverse criticism of the secular press, has subsided, all candid people will, as I believe, see how thoroughly I have been misunderstood.

"The first article was confined to criticism of certain points of the sermon, does not go beyond them, and neither gives, nor was intended to give, the writer's opinion of the theaters of to-day, nor of theater-going. Incidentally it was said, 'the theater is not yet clean:' again, 'the stage needs purification'—which, to a candid mind, when the excitement is over, will convey readily the fact that I stand in opposition to theaters and theater-going while these facts remain. So far as I state principles at all, they are found below.

"To teach and advise, the choir, and preacher may make deductions from experience: but the church denies 'the right of any man or body of men to control the individual conscience where the Bible is silent.'

"'It is not amusement as such, it is not books as such, it is not theaters as such, but all of these that can not be used in the name of the Lord Jesus that the church forbids. From my childhood to this good hour I have been loyal to this teaching of the church.

"I understand that other church papers have given much more prominence to this total misunderstanding of my purpose and my views. Beside the Christian Advocate, I have seen only the Southwestern, the Arkansas, and the Episcopal Methodist. If others have commented, they have forgotten to send me their papers. I ask all who have published references to my views, to publish this card, and would be greatly obliged if they will kindly send me papers referring to this matter. Up to this time I blame no one for misunderstanding me. I hope this card will make my position clear.

"The first paper was so imperfect as to leave room for wide misunderstanding of what my opinions are. This misunderstanding has, as I think, been added to from a misapprehension of the standpoint from which I wrote. Fully believing that I held the true church view of the question with which I was dealing, well assured that I knew largely the practice of the church bearing on the points at issue, and that in opinion and practice I was in hearty agreement with the church, I did not, in the criticism of the sermon state, or think it necessary to state, any opinion as to attendance on theaters of to-day. My eye was turned only to points either historical or bearing upon the past and future potency and efficiency of Christianity in purifying our earth. My purpose was to save the church from what seemed to me might be hurtful, in the extreme views of the sermon, and to do the preacher good as well.

"To make evident this misunderstanding, it is necessary for me to bring before the reader the point in the sermon which was as it appeared to me extreme. No exception was made to the general statement that attending the theater would be violation of the oath of the church—a violation of an oath is perjury—perjury is under all circumstances a gross immorality—and by church law demands a trial—the preacher having no option, would not be failure to bring to trial, on the construction, be perjury on his part, as he violates his own vow to the church thereby? A long list of pastors, myself included, had taught the evils of the theater and kindred amusements to this congregation—done what we might in the pulpit and in private to lead the people to higher spiritual development. I do not believe the charge of perjury could be made to lie. This extreme view I regarded, then and now, as hurtful, and am not willing to see it accepted as either the law or the practice of the church. I stand and have ever stood opposed to attendance upon the theater as we find it, and in favor of proper discipline in each case. I am equally opposed to characterizing every act of attendance as an act of perjury upon the part of the member, and every failure to try the member, an act of perjury upon the part of the preacher. In this I have the prevalent practice of the church with me, for the offense when direct immorality did not appear, has so far as I know, been dealt with by pastor and member without formal trial unless the case became incorrigible. I stand with and for the church in this. For this reason I felt justified in speaking. If my position in this be not sound, then the church law and practice alike must be changed.

"I write in love both to the preacher and people. No one can regret the tone at which I wrote for the personal environments more than do I, as I now look back to them. The principles announced in the correspondence I hold in love and firmness, and in fullest allegiance to church law and practice.

A WORKER'S PRAYER.

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek
Thy erring children, lost and lone.

O, lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wayward feet;
O, feed me, Lord, that I may feed
Thy hungering ones with manna sweet.

O, strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the rock and strong in thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

O, teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart;
And wing my words that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O, give thine own sweet rest to me,
That I may speak with soothing power
A word in season, as from thee
To weary ones in needful hour.

O, fill me with thy fullness, Lord,
Until my very heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word
Thy love to tell, thy praise to show.

O, use me, Lord—use even me,
Just as thou wilt, and when and where,
Until thy blessed face I see,
Thy rest, thy joy, thy glory share.

THE "PREACHERS' WIVES' LOAN FUND" FOR PARSONAGE BUILDING.

Our plan for raising a loan fund—by making each preacher's wife a life patron at $5—has been well received at the Annual Conferences, where it has been properly presented. Montana made 10 life patrons, $50; Missouri, 37, $185; St. Louis, 9, $45; Southwest Missouri, 25, $125; Pacific, 39, $195; Los Angeles, 20, $100; Kentucky, 23, $115; Indian Mission, 29, $145. All these have not been paid, but will be, in due time. At some of the Conferences the matter failed to be presented; but by individual effort Louisville reported 4, $20—making, altogether, 196 life patrons, or $980 that have been subscribed. We consider this a good start, and feel confident of success.

Bro. Partridge, of Florida, in suggesting this plan, intended it to be a demonstration on the part of the preachers of their personal interest in the parsonage movement among the ladies, and that they should by thus combining give substantial encouragement to a work, the need of which they, above all others, in the names of their wives, should acknowledge. I have varied a little from his original idea in urging, as I still do, that it would be a graceful compliment to a faithful pastor for his congregation to make his wife a life patron of this loan fund. This has been done in many cases, and highly appreciated. The sum is too small to be a burden; and I trust that every Methodist—man, woman or child—who sees these words will feel specially called upon to act in this matter. If your Conference has not met, send the $5 by your pastor to Conference to make his wife a life patron. Let him have the pleasure of saying it was done by some member or members of his congregation. If your Conference has passed, ask your pastor or presiding elder, if the money has been paid, to make his wife a life patron; if not, send the $5 with the name, using her husband's first name, to Dr. Morton, either through the Conference Treasurer for the Woman's Department of Church Extension, or direct to Rev. David Morton, D. D., 520 West Chestnut street, Louisville, Ky.

A loan fund not being given, but lent, comes back, and is lent again; in this way making a parsonage building agency that will never cease to be at work building parsonages for years to come. This loan fund, like all church extension loan funds, will be handled by the General Board for the good of all.

All money that has been, or shall be, raised on this loan fund should be forwarded at once, with a list of life patrons, to Dr. Morton, that the fund may be put to use as soon as possible, in response to calls on hand.

On the list of life patrons be particular in marking those that are paid, for the names of all life patrons, paid for by March, we intend to print in the annual report of the Board of Church Extension; and sincerely hope we will by that time have the name, and the money it represents, of every wife or widow of a Methodist preacher in our connection.

God only can calculate the amount of comfort that, in all years to come, this effort, so small for anyone, will give to the wives and children of many faithful servants of God.

QUARTERLY REPORT.

Societies Organized.

East Texas Conference—Members: Kilgore, 14.

Holston Conference—Members: Old Town, Va., 15; Lepoir's, Tenn., —; Louisville, Tenn., 18; Fountain Head, 13.

Indian Mission Conference—Members: Prairie View, 32; Boggy Depot, 12; Atoka, 10; South Canadian, 19.

Kentucky Conference—Members: Lancaster, —.

Louisville Conference—Members: Bewleyville, 9.

Mississippi Conference—Members: Carlisle, 5.

Missouri Conference—Members: Centenary, St. Joseph, 20; Savannah, —.

Memphis Conference—Members: First Church, Jackson, 22.

North Carolina Conference—Members: Fayetteville, —.

North Mississippi Conference—Members: Corinth, —. (This society was organized and should have been mentioned last quarter.)

Pacific Conference—Members: Oakland, 12; Woodland, 13.

St. Louis Conference—Members: Cook Avenue, —; Centenary, —; First Church, —.

West Texas Conference—Members: San Saba, —.

Whole number of societies organized during the quarter, 26.

Scholars Added to Sabbath-School.

Western Virginia Conference—Members: Ashland, 2.

Missouri Conference—Members: Glasgow, 2; Hundley Chapel, 10; Centenary, 9.

Mrs. Maddox, of Perth, Miss., has organized a class of 21 at her own house—whole number, 44.

Our report for the summer quarter, especially for so hot and dry a summer, is fully as good as we could expect, but we hope for better things during the fall. We note, however, with pleasure the increased membership of many of our societies, and hope all will make special effort along this line, and that our next annual report may show greatly increased membership in every society. Our financial report is much better this quarter than ever before. We can not give that every quarter, but a full and exact report will be given at the end of the year in March.

The Loan Fund.

A plan for raising a loan fund for parsonage building is now being submitted to the Annual Conferences, and is received with great favor by all heard from. Five dollars makes a preacher's wife a life patron of this fund, and our desire is that the wife of every preacher in the whole church shall have her name on the list of life patrons. The list will be printed in the Annual Report of the Board of Church Extension. This fund, once secured, will be a permanent parsonage building agency.

Let Us Have a Conference Revival.

How many of us, who are members of the Mississippi Conference—laymen and preachers—desire to have a revival during the session of our Conference next month? Will Bishop Keener allow me to put it to the vote?

Supposing that the ayes have it. Now, in anticipation of the meeting of our Conference, I would like to call attention to the words of our Master (St. Mark xi, 24): "Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Paul's words to the church at Rome were: "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God," etc. Do we not see how the Savior and his devoted servant couple desire and prayer? May I ask, then, brethren, how much do you desire a gracious revival at Jackson?

Will Bro. Andrews allow me to ask him how much he desires it? He asked me to pray for a meeting recently held by Bro. Lewis and himself, and I tried to do so; but, as we say, the meeting was rained out. Will he let me ask him to covenant to pray with me every day, from this time until the meeting of our Conference, at sunset? (I suggest this time because most of us are more apt to see the sun set than to see it rise. I fear that if I were to propose sunrise, we would not have many prayers; and yet we claim to be followers of Wesley, who was generally preaching before sunrise), that God will most abundantly revive his work during the session of our Conference?

Will Bro. Andrews and Bishop Keener let me propose that Bro. J. G. Jones be appointed to lead a sunrise prayer meeting in the Sunday-school room of the Methodist Church in Jackson, beginning on Wednesday morning, the day upon which our Conference is to convene?

How many of you, brethren, besides Bro. Andrews, will meet me at a throne of grace at the hour of sunset—every day—from this until December 14?

I have been lately re-reading "The Power of Prayer"—a book I fear that is not much in demand these days. Let me say here, in parenthesis, that the author is Samuel Irenæus Prime, and that I recommend it to all who have never read it.

Brethren beloved, shall we have a Conference revival like those our fathers used to have? And will not all the spiritual members of your congregations, brethren, covenant with us to pray most earnestly for the gracious and abundant outpouring of the Spirit upon us during the session of our Conference?

From the Work.

MOREAU STREET CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: It may be of interest to some of your readers to hear how we are getting along with the work in this part of God's vineyard. The work has been moving along slowly, but, we trust, surely, during the past three years that we have been with this people. There are difficulties connected with the work which, being taken into consideration, make a small advancement appear to better advantage. Among certain classes there seems to be a cast of Romish influence prevalent, even though the classes referred to are not connected with that branch of the church. In gaining accessions to our church, a peculiar notion that many of its rules are unnecessary strictures has to be overcome, such as theater-going, dram-drinking, Sunday excursion travel, Sunday base ball, dancing, etc. The work is retarded through such evil devices, because the public is largely drawn away from the services of the sanctuary, and the power of the gospel falls upon empty pews. It is well to state, however, that we are, together with other Methodists of the city, pulling out of old grooves, and are carrying the gospel to the people upon the public squares, and there, during the past year, hundreds and thousands have heard us gladly. As a result of such efforts, we have succeeded in establishing a mission Sunday-school, the attendance of which has been as high as one hundred and twenty scholars. It is very likely that before another Conference year closes there will be a neat chapel erected, and soon organize a church membership.

Bro. Sam W. Small's visit has been the most pleasant event, in many respects, that has transpired in this church for many years. He came in the power of the Holy Spirit, to labor not to gratify the curiosity of the public, but to try and accomplish a good work for Methodism in the Third District of New Orleans, where there is only one English Methodist Church. He found out from us, while in West Virginia, the true condition of Moreau, before we had even hoped to secure him to assist in carrying on a meeting. Some have said that they believed he was afraid to attempt a meeting in this city, lest failure would follow; but that he was ready to preach the gospel to them who are in New Orleans also, he has unmistakably proven, and through him the gospel was shown to be the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. He cried aloud and spared not, and faithfully rebuked those who are worshiping around an altar inscribed in principle, if not word, "To the unknown God." Thank God that we still have men possessed of a Pauline spirit, who are not afraid to "beard the lion in his den," and yet feel complacent under the protecting wing of the Most High! He preached in Moreau, all the way through, to convict of and persuade from sin. Up town, in Carondelet Street Church, he set forth the dreadfulness of many of the leading vices of the day, and urged the church to stand faithfully by the cause of Christ, and push the battle to the very gates of the enemy. His address in behalf of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was certainly a most masterly one to an audience of over two thousand people. He made them applaud, laugh and cry, and just seemed to sway the masses at will. Great is his power as a temperance worker, and would to God that he could be turned loose in Louisiana for one year!

The crowds that attended Moreau were the largest in the history of the church, and penitents flocked to the altar from the first to his closing invitation. As near as we can estimate, there were fully fifty conversions, and as many backsliders reclaimed. The number of accessions were eighteen, and more that will likely join. The whole membership is quickened, and more willing to do anything God calls them to do than we had hoped to see while their pastor. The farewell service of Bro. Small was the most affecting one we ever witnessed. Old and young, saint and sinner, wept as he so lovingly and pathetically exhorted them to be faithful unto death, and then bade all a loving farewell, if to meet on earth no more, to strive to meet in heaven. God bless this true man of God who, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, has done so much for our struggling church.

Bro. P. A. Johnston, of Mississippi, carried on the meeting, and preached with power, benefiting and endearing himself to our people.

Mr. Editor, we have written at length, but hope you will pardon us, for not half has been told of the good things we enjoyed.

H. D. KIMBALL.

AMITE CITY.

MR. EDITOR: Though October, as doubtless you have observed, is the most pleasant month of the year in this latitude, the last has not kept up its fair reputation, for the chilly winds from the north have made it, comparatively, quite unpleasant for us. We were anxious to have a fine day for the dedication of our new church, on October 30, and though the sun shone with its usual brightness, old Boreas sent upon us a puff of his cold breath, which made the frail flowers of humanity tremble by his icy touch. Notwithstanding the unpleasantness of the day, the church was crowded to witness the dedication, and to hear a grand sermon by Bishop Galloway. All pronounced his discourse a masterly effort, and one very appropriate for the occasion. He had an intelligent audience, and the surroundings were well calculated to elevate and inspire true devotion. The singing was excellent, and the house, which is quite a neat building, was, on this occasion, most beautifully decorated with evergreens and a profusion of flowers, which gave the scene an attractive appearance. After the sermon, the Bishop set apart the church to the service of God. It must have been gratifying to him that he was not called upon to "take up a collection" to meet any indebtedness on the building. It was a joyous occasion, and those who had exerted themselves to build the house of God were glad that their labors had been rewarded.

In the afternoon the Bishop delivered a very interesting address to the Union Sunday-school, the substance of which, with some elaboration, I would be glad to see among the Sunday-school literature. It is worthy to be crystallized in permanent form. Do not suppose that we are carrying on a union school in the Methodist Church. Each denomination has its own school, which is taught in the morning, and then all unite in a school in the afternoon at the Presbyterian Church.

By the request of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Bishop Galloway, at night, favored us with one of his stirring addresses on temperance and prohibition, which was listened to with profound attention by a large audience.

A few words about Amite City and this pastoral charge: I have heard it remarked that this town is the prettiest one on the Central railroad. It is certainly a very desirable place for a residence. I have spent four very pleasant years here. Anyone who can enjoy nature embellished by art, and who can delight the eye in rural scenes, would be struck with the beauty of the place. You will find intelligence and refinement here. I—probably I ought to say, we—have enjoyed the association of the Christian people, and can claim among my warmest friends some of all denominations. There are but few places that I would give equal preference to when I might rest after life's battle is over, and have these Christian friends strew nature's beautiful flowers upon my grave, as tokens of friendship and Christian love. The people are generous and kind; and were their purses as large as their hearts, there would be no lack in those things that render a church prosperous in all things. The church members are in peace and harmony with each other, and with other denominations. We have had a gracious revival during the year, and a young men's prayer meeting and a ladies' prayer meeting have been organized. Although I regret that more has not been accomplished, I am glad I can leave, for my successor a neat church and a harmonious membership. But let him not suppose that he can take his otium cum dignitate, as there is much work to be done and two hard battles to be fought—against the saloon and the dance. This people have twice voted "no license," and yet, by the strategy of the enemy, they have been defrauded. We have been voting by wards; but it is the purpose of the prohibitionists to obtain a vote in the entire parish, when we are sure of gaining a decided victory.

The efficiency of the itinerant system is manifest in its operations on this work. Three churches here are without pastors—reason: "Can't pay the preacher." But the itinerant must stay. I have, with much pleasure, answered the calls of other denominations in the duties of the ministerial office.

I may say that the preacher has had several "poundings" and a Conference outfit, and bundles and packages, etc., have frequently found their way to the parsonage. That pastor must be of a stoical nature whose gratitude is not awakened and whose energies are not stimulated by such attentions and marks of kindly feelings.

Fraternally,

J. M. PUGH.

PRAIRIE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: God hath blessed us. We rejoice in his love. Glory be to his name forever. All the congregations have been blessed: two, much strengthened. Twenty members have been added. A new society organized at Muldon. Number of ADVOCATE subscriptions more than doubled. Number of family altars doubled. Three hundred and fifty dollars expended for improvements. Finances good. The pastor rejoices because some of the members "walk in the light;" he mourns because others "abide in darkness."

Holy Spirit, for the sake of Christ, bless us more abundantly.

PREACHER IN CHARGE.

MANSFIELD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting closed Sunday night with twenty conversions, and the accessions will, perhaps, reach this number when the returns are all in. It was a most gracious work, and one whose influence will long be felt in this church and community. Truly,

J. M. BEARD.

CHRISTIAN FRUITFULNESS.—You remember the beautiful first Psalm: the Christian is there compared to a tree that brings forth his fruit in his season. He has sometimes a time of affliction—then the fruit of submission and self-examination is in season; sometimes a period of prosperity—then the fruit of watchfulness and prayer is in season; sometimes a period of temptation—then the fruit of faith and close cleaving to Christ is in season; sometimes a period of spiritual indolence and self-indulgence—then the fruit of repentance and self-abasement is in season. At all times faith, repentance and love are in season; and when they wither, it is evident that the tree wants watering with copious showers of divine influence. Prayer, as in Elijah's case, must open the windows of heaven, which have been closed, that there may be "an abundance of rain." Then how sweet to know that the heavenly Gardener is watching and training this little tree! Through his intercession it has not been cut down; and his blood has purchased the blessings it needs to revive and sustain it.

Mrs. Sherman.

Critic's Corner.

Word-Studies.

Catholic. This is a pure Greek word. Many words have come into the English language without having gone through the process of transformation. Instead of having been "translated" into English, they have simply been "transferred." The word "catholic" belongs to this class. It is in Greek, katholikos, and has been taken out of Greek soil and transplanted into English soil. So we must go to its original home to find its meaning; and when we do this, we find its meaning to be "general," "universal." So the phrase, "Catholic Church," means "universal church." What is "universal" can not be confined by geographical lines or restricted to nationalities. And this word, in this, its true, meaning, is the true word to apply to the church of Christ, because it carries in itself the aim and purpose of that church on earth. It is, then, a manifest misnomer to say "the Roman Catholic Church," as much of a misnomer as it is to say "the Methodist Catholic Church."

Church. The New Testament word, ekklesia, means "an assembly called together by the public crier." The root-meaning is, "called out." In the Bible this is the fundamental idea of the church; it is "called out" of the world. But, strange to see, the word "church" is itself an untranslated word, with a different meaning from ekklesia. The dictionaries give it this way: English, church; Scotch, kirk; German, kirche; Old Saxon, kerika; Greek, kuriakon. Now, this last word, in Greek, means the same as the Old Testament, Bethel—"the Lord's house." We see clearly, then, where we get our two meanings for the word "church," for we do use it in two different senses. We say, "The church needs a revival," and, with equal correctness, we say, "The church needs repairing." In the first we use the sense of ekklesia; in the second, the sense of koriakon. The first is the Christian community; the second is the house in which it worships.

O.

(We invite short notes of a critical kind for this column.—ED.)

A great deal has been said lately in the religious papers about the theater. The secular papers have also said much, and we give an extract from one of them. The Augusta (Ga.) Gazette has this anent Miss Abbott:

"Miss Abbott made a mistake. She violated the very highest of proprieties. She will not see it while it shall seem to be a profitable error, but she will feel it in time. The butterfly newspaper press and the fluttering beaux of the opera, light enough to float and meander in mid-air without wings, may chirp and chatter within her engaging and gifted presence, and toy with the blossoms that garnish her bosom, and turn somersaults in and out of her scented gloves, and stand on their heads on the illusive edge of her zephyr fan, and play bo-peep behind her perfumed handkerchief, and chorus to her: 'We glory in your spunk!' but when the opera is over, and the stage has been swept, and the butterfly beaux and handy-legged newspapers have been dusted together in a pile, they wont fill a match box nor outweigh a soap balloon.

"'Cheek' and 'spunk' and 'back-talk' may do for the circus ring and the sawdust side-show. But if Emma Abbott is to maintain the chaste and proud distinction she by every right may claim, she must not hope to advance her standard by seeking to stare a religion she professes to respect utterly out of countenance."

The women of the country should give more time to rest and relaxation and less to routine housework. They should make fewer pies and less cake and do more sitting down in the rocking-chair on the porch. They would be far more useful in their families as the years go by. The woman who stays at home every day but when she "goes to meeting" on Sunday, who is always "doing for the family," will soon have no idea beyond the family circle, but none there to its advantage. She will be worn out physically and mentally early in life, and her children will begin to ignore her before they are gone.—Chicago News.

The Sublime and the Ridiculous.

THE SUBLIME.

A body of our troops had sustained themselves for hours against fearful odds, the fighting had been hard, prodigies of valor had been performed; but the number of our troops was being fast decimated, demoralization was setting in, and soon the rout must become general. Behind these wavering heroes a line of battle was formed for their relief. As this relieving column was being thrown forward, in passing the crest of a ridge, it crossed an open space—a narrow field running parallel with their line, and where the whole line came out in full view. Standing on a stump, near the center of the column, was an officer of high rank, who, lifting his plumed hat, waved it high in the air, and shouted: "Charge them, my brave boys. Save your comrades-in-arms, your country's flag, your country's honor, your homes and your firesides." This was responded to by a shout of cheers from thousands of throats. They met the broken ranks of their routed countrymen-in-arms; then the column of the victorious foe. With the sight of that commanding officer, with his animating gestures still in mind, and his trumpet voice shouting to the charge still ringing in their ears, they struck them with a force which scattered them like thistles before the wind.

To change the scene: The day had been hot, the fighting hard, the casualties great. The enemy was posted on a hill, his guns were so planted as to command any approach our men could make after leaving the cover of the woods. Three times our men had rushed from the woods into the open space at double-quick; three times they had recoiled in rout and disorder before the tempest of fire which met them there. The day was far gone into the afternoon, yet the position must be taken, or all the bloody work of that day must be repeated the next at greater disadvantage. Another attacking column was formed in the woods. The general had taken in the entire situation, as the sequel seems to disclose. There was a depression in the plain, after passing the first half of the field, where the enemy could not depress his guns, and where the troops would be safer than where they were first formed in the woods. It is evident he meant to reserve the ardor of his troops, that it might culminate in its most resistless force, where it would be unchecked by the (then) useless guns of the enemy. The order from the aides was, "Forward!" Just then the commanding officer was seen riding out in front, and was heard shouting, "Come on, boys." He was followed by his command in well-dressed line of battle. It was met by a tempest of lead and iron, but the general still led on. Then came another storm of grape and canister, opening great gaps in the advancing line; the general himself went down, the column wavered. The general was seen to rise from his horse, which was shot, and move on in firm and leisurely step, as a fugleman before his company at drill, his plume nodding, his full uniform shimmering in the low declining sun, his sword describing fiery circles round his head. Another time the enemy's guns roar, the flame and missiles leap out; but this time they have little effect—a few men only are struck in the head. The supreme moment has come; the soldiers themselves now saw their advantage. The general waved them on with loud shouts to charge at double-quick. This was responded to with a blood-curdling yell from all along the line, at which many brave men in the opposing line turned pale. They rushed on up the hill, passed the batteries, capturing every gun, and struck the column drawn up to support the guns like boys at their toy soldiers in mimic fray.

THE RIDICULOUS.

These men in those sublime scenes, where the truly sublime was exhibited in those battles where the greatest human strength was put forth, lived in the minds of thousands for long years after, and who, as the central figures of those grand battle struggles, were the last objects to the sight of hundreds who went down in death with these grand figures in their eyes; these men, we are told, may be seen monthly, at stated times, seated in a room, in the city of New Orleans, in a capacity similar to that of counters of the game for gamblers, and are paid a salary of thousands annually to give character and dignity to a scheme of gambling and fraud carried on by a lottery company manipulating millions of dollars from unsuspecting thousands in Louisiana and adjoining States.

Local Preachers—A Suggestion.

Lay preaching is nearly coeval with Methodism. Thomas Maxwell was Mr. Wesley's first local preacher, and his success was so extraordinary that Mr. Wesley soon gave up his prejudices against lay preaching, and licensed many worthy and talented laymen to assist in preaching the gospel among the Methodists. They soon took the name of local preachers, to distinguish them from the regular itinerants, since which time they have been one of the strong arms of Methodism wherever it has been established.

Robert Strawbridge, a local preacher, was the first to establish Methodism in Maryland, and a few years later Philip Embury, another local preacher, organized the first Methodist Church in the City of New York. Local preachers have in numberless cases introduced our church into new places, and have been of great service in originating and building up our churches through our whole history. We greatly need them. We can not do well without them, and should encourage them in their work everywhere. As men called of God to preach, they deserve our reverence, esteem and confidence. Now for my suggestion.

A few years ago an effort was made to establish a Local Conference in the bounds of the Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference. It has only had a very limited success. But few local preachers met in Conference; none from a distance. At the last meeting there were barely enough for a legal quorum. The cause of their absence, no doubt, grew out of the fact that they have to engage in secular employments for the support of their families, and, after attending to their home Quarterly and District Conference, have no time to travel fifty or seventy-five miles across the country and spend two or three days at a Local Conference, when everything they want done can be done as well, if not better, elsewhere. This brings me to my main suggestion, which is, that our local brethren can transact all their business at the District Conference, to which they belong, as well—and I think, better—than in a separate Conference with only a small minority present. All local preachers are legal members of the District Conference, and ought to be in attendance. While there they can have a separate meeting, if they desire it, to confer together about when, where and how they can do their best work for the next twelve months; what places in the district are, comparatively, without preaching, prayer meetings or Sunday-schools, and by proper attention might be nursed into a regular church and congregation. In consultation with our local brethren, we paid considerable attention to this matter at our District Conference at Brookhaven, last year, the result of which has been the systematic and well directed labors of our local brethren, in connection with the neighboring pastors, enough outlying territory has been organized to make, at least, two pretty fair pastoral charges. Most of our local preachers love to preach, because they feel called of God to preach, and they wish to do as much as their providential circumstances will permit them to do to advance the Redeemer's kingdom. I suggest this transaction of their business at the time and place of the District Conference as the easiest and most effectual way of doing it.

I will be glad to have their views on the subject. It seems to me a separate Local Conference of respectable size and efficiency is hardly practicable in our wide country. I am willing to aid and encourage any plan that will give more prominence and efficiency to the local wing of our ministry.

J. G. JONES.

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

"I never had any faith in luck at all," says Mr. Spurgeon, "except that I believe good luck will carry a man over a ditch if he jumps well, and will put a piece of bacon into his pot if he looks after his garden and keeps a pig. Luck generally comes to those who look after it; and my notion is, it taps, once in a lifetime, at everybody's door, but if industry does not open it, away it goes."

A Pious Horse-Trot.

In these days of semi-gambling for the Lord, in those religious shows, where grab-bags, ring-cakes, post-offices, bean-bag-throwing, age-betting, weight-guessing and girl-kissing at a price are indulged in so frequently, all in a pious way (as the end sanctifies the means), is not too much time wasted? Could not some great, grand scheme be introduced to secure all the money expected by such means at one effort during the entire year.

This is the horse-trotting season. Would it not be well to secure the services of such horses as Maud S., Jay Eye See and other "good steppers" to trot for the Lord? As "pool-selling" seems to be sanctioned by high authority, the churches in certain sections could be pooled and vast sums realized. I call attention to several desirable attractions of this enterprise:

1. It is, I think, a new thing under the sun. Whoever heard before of "trotting for the Lord?" People everywhere are fond of novelty, and doubtless great crowds would swarm to the scene of operations.

2. It would be a liberal movement on the part of the churches and would have a tendency to break down bigotry and superstition. The church and the world would decidedly meet on one common level, and who knows but that there would be an easier access to the hearts as well as the pockets of the wanton and the profane?

3. It might have a tendency to ease the consciences of gamblers in general and of horse gamblers in particular. If the owners of the horses have any scruples as to any of the measures used in the years gone by, they might be greatly relieved by loaning or giving the services of their trotters for so high and noble and Christian a purpose.

4. Being a well-meant and Christian endeavor, doubtless the Lord would sanction it, and the revenue would be unprecedented.

5. Who knows but that by such a promiscuous intermingling of the church and the world some might be attracted from the horse-trot to the church services on Sunday and on other occasions? It might be that a certain class would be attracted to revival seasons and be thus benefited. Can it be that any of our Methodists will be so squeamish as not to sanction a great, general "horse-trot for the Lord?" Why should this be considered any more harmful than other forms of gambling already indulged? Money success would be great.—M. E. L., in Northern Christian Advocate.

A Woman's Confession.

"Do you know, Mary, I once actually contemplated suicide?" "You horrify me, Mrs. B. Tell me about it." "I was suffering from chronic weakness. I believed myself the most unhappy woman in the world. I looked ten years older than I really was, and I felt twenty. Life seemed to have nothing in it worth living for." "I have experienced all those symptoms myself. Well?" "Well, I was saved at the eleventh hour from the commission of a deed which I shudder to think of. A friend advised me to take Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription. I did so. In an incredibly short time I felt like a new being. The 'Prescription' cured me, and I owe Dr. Pierce a debt of gratitude which I can never repay."

Be a good listener. To appear interested in the conversation of others is a mark of good breeding. There is something better than the gift of the tongue; it is the gift of holding the tongue.—Thoreau.

Briefs.

"Oh, praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him all ye people: for his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth forever! Praise ye the Lord!"

Mr. Wesley was once asked this question: "Why are not more people converted?" And he gave this reply: "Because we do not pray enough." This was his deliberate answer to a question vital to the prosperity of the church, and to the salvation of the individual. Our Lord said: "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint."

Are there not too many Christians, like soldiers, "marking time"? They look soldierly, they seem to be on the march, but they make no real progress; yet the command of the Great Captain is, "Go forward!" There is too much of the "make-believe" about a good deal of our religion! There is nothing equal to integrity; nothing so good as wholeness!

If your prayers for the success of the gospel do not stimulate you to put forth effort for that success, then you may question the sincerity of those prayers. Importunate prayer is not always followed by the blessing desired, but it is invariably followed by earnest effort to secure that blessing. Martin Luther said that his best day's work was preceded by three hours of prayer.

Senator Colquit, of Georgia, in an article in November Forum, says the school enrollment in Georgia has increased from 49,578 in 1871, white and black, to 309,594 in 1885. In 1871 the colored children in school numbered 6,664; in 1885 they numbered 119,248, and he thinks they now number at least 140,000. This has been accomplished since the carpet-bag ascendency and misrule ceased, and, of course, under the system and policy inaugurated and carried out by the Georgians themselves.

It is said that the literature of a people is the outgrowth of its life. How then can we account for the fact that the Israelites were always prone to idolatry, while their literature continually pointed to the one God and the requirements of his law? Simply in this way: What is true of other peoples and their literature is not true of the Israelites. Their literature was not the outgrowth of their life, but a revelation of life above their life. This fact discloses the consistency and credibility of the Old Testament history. It can be explained in no other way.

From the November number of the Woman's Missionary Advocate we gather these facts in regard to the progress the Woman's Board of Missions is making. There are now: Auxiliaries, 1,525, with 31,689 members; Young People's and Juvenile Societies, 673, with 20,394 members; subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, 8,311; receipts during the last quarter, $11,509 06. We regret to see that only 125 subscribers for their Advocate are reported from Louisiana Conference, and 151 from Mississippi Conference, and 231 from North Mississippi. It seems to us that these three Conferences ought to give more than 507 subscribers to their admirable paper!

This Day.

This is the day set apart by the Chief Magistrates of our land for the people to assemble in their houses of worship to return thanks to Almighty God for the blessings of providence and grace that have been so liberally dispensed by his bountiful hand during the past months of the current year. The custom of having such a day is growing in favor in all parts of our country, and the people generally see more beauty and appropriateness in it than ever before. When pretended atheism, with loud-mouthed babblings, seeks to blot out the remembrance of the divine Being and his goodness to the children of men, it is well for those in authority to rebuke such teachings by calling upon all the people to observe a day of thanksgiving, when the praises of hearts and lips shall sound forth to the honor of the Lord Most High. The custom is a specific recognition of the existence and goodness of God, and of our dependence upon his bounty for "life and breath and all things." It is a distinct recognition of the Bible fact that nations themselves, as well as individuals, owe their existence and the perpetuity of their institutions to the providence of him who is the God of nations. It is a recognition of the central truth in all God's providences, brought out in the history of nations, that "righteousness exalteth a nation, while sin is a reproach to any people."

Looking back over the past months of the year, we may see many occasions and remember many things which should awake in the heart of the nation a feeling of gratitude to God. There has been no serious disturbance of our peaceful relations with the other nations of the world. War and pestilence and famine have been keep away. The general business of the land has been healthy. The harvests are abundant. The prices of our products are good. In some notable cases of disorder the supremacy of protecting law has been firmly maintained. The churches have had a year of unusual prosperity. Missionary effort, at home and abroad, has yielded larger returns for labor expended and money given than during any previous year. The benefactions of the wealthy to charitable purposes have been unprecedented. Schools and colleges and churches and hospitals and asylums have been reared all over the land. The temperance cause has advanced more rapidly during 1887 than during the past decade. Science has made more adventurous explorations into the mysterious realm of nature, and come home laden with spoils which astonished the most credulous of her devotees. Invention has kept pace with the growing wants of our civilization. The social evils that yet afflict us have been calmly discussed, and the discussion has opened a new door of hope for their peaceful settlement. And so there are thousands of other matters which might be mentioned; and they all call for gratitude from the hearts of the people of this nation.

"What troubles has he seen
What conflicts has he past
But out of all the Lord
Hath brought him by his love!"

The special providences of God in his daily life, the blessings of grace—"every morning fresh and every evening new"—the mercy that has withheld the merited chastisement for his sins, the church and her beautiful ordinances, the Bible and its holy teachings, the religion of his Savior and its radiant hopes, the heaven of the good and its anticipated rest—all unite to cause him to sing on this glad day:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all creatures here below,
Praise him above, ye heavenly host,
Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

The Publishing Committee.

ANNUAL ADDRESS.

The Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE met, according to appointment, on November 9, in the editorial room, and had a pleasant and profitable session. All the members of the committee were present. A thorough examination of the status of the ADVOCATE was had; and it was found that the paper was, perhaps, in a better financial condition than for some time past.

The publisher, Mr. Jamieson, a Methodist true and tried, has thrown into the management of the publishing department a good deal of intelligent enthusiasm, the result of long business connection with the ADVOCATE. The committee expressed much satisfaction with the plan adopted by Mr. Jamieson of proposing valuable premiums to those who would secure new subscribers for the paper. The plan has the promise of excellent results, and Mr. Jamieson deserves special commendation for this enterprising departure.

Since the last annual meeting of the Publishing Committee, the paper has undergone notable changes in its facial and typographical features. A more fairly attired weekly can not be found among all the sisterhood of Advocates. The type is quite new; the press is one recently purchased, with all the latest improvements, and the workmanship can not be surpassed.

There is a determination to conduct the paper on a solid and secure basis. The "pay-as-you-go policy" prevails. The subscription list is not as large as it has been at different times during the history of the paper, but the actual number of promptly paying subscribers will compare favorably with that of any year in the past.

The Publishing Committee, as representatives of the three patronizing Conferences — Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana—pledged their Conferences to sustain the paper and increase its influence and patronage. It was decided that more minute and specific information concerning the paper should be furnished the patronizing Conferences, and more earnest appeals should be made for its support by the brethren. The Publishing Committee are of the opinion that if every ministerial member of the patronizing Conferences will give substantial effort to the circulation of the paper, a grand rally among the entire laity can be effected.

It is due the able editor, Dr. Carter, to say that the Publishing Committee, by a unanimous vote, passed a resolution endorsing the editorial management of the ADVOCATE, and expressing much satisfaction in its promising outlook. The editor has been physically disabled during the past year, and found it impossible to execute a contemplated plan of extended visitation to District and Annual Conferences. We are glad to be able to inform our brethren that his health is now much improved, and that they may look for his pleasing countenance and cheery voice whenever the duties of his office will admit of his absence from the city.

It is among the possibilities of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to become one of the great religious weeklies of the country. To this end money is the desideratum. Able correspondents, in this and other lands, for small compensation, are willing to add to the attraction of the paper. Because of this lacking valuable articles have been declined. Let all the patronizing Conferences double their subscriptions, and Dr. Carter will give us a paper that will compare with any other religious paper in the United States.

A great city like New Orleans, with a population thoroughly cosmopolitan, infected largely with Romanism and European infidelity, demands a strong religious organ to give voice and expression to healthy scriptural teaching. Perhaps no territory within the bounds of Southern Methodism, in this respect, requires the same attention. An attractive and trenchant newspaper, exponent of Christianity, is read by persons who would otherwise never come within hearing of the voices of our pulpits. The educational power of the religious press can not be estimated. The great centers in which the secular press exerts great and dominant influence upon the sentiments and opinions of the populace must have the counteracting and more morally luminous presence of vigorous religious papers. On this ground also the ADVOCATE calls for active support. It should be regarded as a standard-bearer; and where her pure banner flies, the church in its entire connection should extend a helping hand. Not only three Conferences should patronize it, but all the Conferences should take stock in a paper which, in this Roman Catholic city, dares assert, with fearless voice, and maintain with unwearied persistency, a Christianity without formal and traditional and papal incumbrances.

S. H. WERLEIN,
For Committee.

City Mission.

The last bi-monthly meeting of the New Orleans City Mission was an occasion long to be remembered. Intensely spiritual, thoroughly practical and full of enthusiasm were the prayers, the singing and the talks that night. It was good to be there to catch the inspiration of the courageous words uttered, the prayers of faith offered, the heart-felt singing of the songs of Zion, and, above all, to be fired up for mission work by the thrilling personal experience of a Carondelet Street layman. Born a Romanist, he was in his young manhood led to Christ through the influence of a Methodist mission. We have been over and over again impressed during this year that the time is fully ripe for a grand onward and outward movement into the lanes and by-places of the city, letting in upon its multitudes living in sin, ignorance and misery the blessed beams of Christian light, knowledge and help. The work so far accomplished by the City Mission is ample proof of its being surely needed in New Orleans, and is also prophetic of the wonderful possibilities for permanent good within its grasp. We have a number of mission schools at work, and all our churches have felt the effects of our out-door services, while the ministry and laymen who have borne a part in its work have been led to see more than ever the necessity of direct aim in preaching and of personal effort for souls. We are to have a city missionary to take general and special charge of the work of the Mission, and there are many, no doubt, who are asking God to so influence Bishop Key that he shall send us just the man for the place. The people are rallying and subscribing liberally for his support, and we feel mightily encouraged. We will have the man, if he can be found; and, with a picked band of consecrated men and women, who are eager for the work, at his back, he will, in God's sufficient strength, move out into this inviting field of labor, already "white unto the harvest."

In the Methodist Times, Mr. Editor, you loaned us, we were amazed to read of the magnitude of the work being done in West London by those two leading men of the Wesleyan Conference who were set apart unto that mission work. Many thousands are being reached who seemed heretofore hopelessly beyond the range of Christian effort, and pounds sterling are being contributed in princely sums for the support of these brethren and their delightful work. We have not so large a field as they; but ours is sufficiently large, and of such a character as to challenge us, as Christians, to the putting forth of our best of head and heart, and the spending of much of our substance to win these "heathen at our doors" to the knowledge of the truth.

Fellow-Methodists, do take upon your heart our City Mission work, and, by constant prayer, intelligent labor and cheerful offerings of money, help it on to success. The field is before us, and God has opened the way and bids us "go forward." "Let us go up at once and possess it, for we are well able."

J. A. SAWYER.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 15, 1887.

Our brother of the Southwestern Presbyterian, just down the street from us, has this in regard to the first purpose of anarchy:

To meet anarchism successfully, we must meet it in its beginning. The American people are already confronted with an issue which lies at the very beginning. It is the question of protecting our people in their right to the Sabbath. Our motto must be, "The Sabbath for the citizen." The real meaning of the anarchist is not understood. He does not demand the abrogation of the Sabbath simply for himself; he demands it for all. His purpose is that no one shall have a Sabbath. His purpose is that the day shall be destroyed. In this he is logical. For the Sabbath is in his way. It gives the poor man rest, and a home. It gives his family decency and food. It makes him a better citizen by bringing him under the sacred influences of domestic life; it gives him a chance to read and to think; it helps to make him independent, and it makes him contented. It puts down blackguardism; it limits the number of those who fatten by stimulating the bad passions and vices; it makes the people united and the country prosperous. On the other hand, as the experience of all cities proves, nothing so brutalizes men and boys, nothing inflicts such misery and degradation, and so paves the way for anarchy, as putting the drinking-saloon above the Sabbath and the brewery above the people. Everywhere the Sabbath stands for law and order. Hence a despised and desecrated Sabbath will always be the corner-stone of anarchy.

Minter City, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I intended to write you sooner in regard to this charge, but much work has hindered. Three meetings held—one week each—resulting in nine conversions and ten accessions. Still the work is looking upward.

At our last Conference, Sunnyside and McNutt was formed into a separate charge, and now another church is ready to form half of another new charge. Our assessments were much larger than last year; still we will pay from 25 to 100 per cent. above assessments. We already have more than double on foreign missions, i. e., by counting: Lambuth fund, $20; self-denial, $30; missionary quilt, $32 65.

Our church extension, which is so often below with many, will be fifty per cent. above assessment. A Parsonage Aid Society, just organized, has gone to work in good earnest. The land is secured on which to build another new church. So "Minter City and Strathmore" is now one of our best charges.

Very truly,

J. L. FUTRELL.

Notes.

We have read in the London Methodist Times a most interesting account of the opening of West London Mission by the Wesleyans. The beginning of the movement was most hopeful and auspicious, the large St. James Hall being filled to overflowing with the very people the mission was designed to reach. Ministers of several denominations were present, and by their prayers and words of cheer much encouraged the promoters of the scheme. The money for the mission work is coming in hopefully, and we doubt not Methodism has made an advance which will tell for good in the future of the great city of the world. The gospel is to capture the earth by capturing and holding the great cities. We are the more interested in the movement spoken of above from the fact that this great city of the South, in which we are working, needs just such a work done in it as the Wesleyans propose to do in West London. The masses here are not reached by the gospel. They will not go to our churches! If they did go, we could not seat one tenth of them! It is safe to say that our sittings are ordinarily not over two-thirds full! And yet the people are perishing! What is to be done? What can be done? And yet there are hopeful signs. During the past year much mission work has been done, and we propose, by God's help, to do better next year. The Methodists here are a feeble folk in numbers, and there is not much wealth among them; but they are taking courage from past events. Their faith is enlarging and strengthening and their liberality is growing; but we hunger for the sympathy and prayers and aid of our brethren throughout the land. "Brethren, pray for us, that the Word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified, as it is with you."

The death of Jenny Lind has brought to remembrance the furore created by the famous singer when she first visited the United States. Her debut was at Castle Garden before an audience of 5,000 people, and the receipts of the evening reached the enormous sum of $26,000, which were devoted to charitable objects. The prices paid for tickets to her concerts were unparalleled, ranging all the way up to $650 for a single ticket. The Swedish singer's generosity knew no bounds, amounting during her brief stay in America to $50,000. The American Art Journal tells this story of Jenny Lind and Daniel Webster.

Her concerts in Washington were attended by the President and his family and every member of the Cabinet. It happened that on the day of one of these concerts several members of the Cabinet and Senate were dining with M. Bodisco, the Russian Minister, whose good dinner and choice of wines had kept the party so late that the concert had progressed quite far when Daniel Webster, Crittendon and others came in. Whether from the hurry in which they came, or from the heat of the room, their faces were a little flushed, and they all looked somewhat flurried. After the applause with which these dignitaries were received had subsided, and silence was once more restored, the second part of the concert was opened by Jenny Lind with "Hail Columbia." At the close of the first verse Webster's patriotism boiled over. He could stand it no longer, and, rising like Olympian Jove, he added his deep, sonorous, bass voice to the chorus. Mrs. Webster, who sat immediately behind him, kept tugging at his coat tail to make him sit down or stop singing, but it was of no earthly use. At the close of each verse Webster joined in, and it was hard to say whether Jenny Lind, Webster, or the audience was the most delighted. At the close of the air, Webster arose, hat in hand, and made such a bow as Chesterfield would have deemed a fortune for his son, and which eclipsed D'Orsay's best. Jenny Lind, sweetly blushing at the distinguished honor, courtesied to the floor, the audience applauding to the very echo.

The wise man has said: "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." These words are as applicable to churches as to individuals. As the man who puts forth effort only for self-existence is doomed, so a church that is not reaching out its helpful hands to those in need and in reach of it must dwindle, lose its power and die. The city church that is not endeavoring to evangelize the near-lying districts by Sunday-schools and preaching services has a "hard time" to get along, and it is getting along toward its death. An anti-missionary church, as well as an anti-missionary man, is dead, and God has no use for dead things. Those individuals and churches that are earnest in mission work are a fine commentary on Solomon's words, "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth."

Dr. Benjamin Richardson, the leading sanitary authority in England, in a recent lecture upon the Mosaic Sanitary Code, said, "The rest upon the seventh day is a most important provision for health, which, if strictly obeyed, would insure to any nation an extra term of life."

Personals.

From the Southern Reporter we learn that our pastor, Dr. Wier, of Sardis, Miss., is preaching some strong sermons, and preaching them with earnestness and vigor. That is the special need of the times: strong sermons preached with earnestness. There is still great power in the gospel.

The Central Methodist appears in a new dress. We offer our "right hand of fellowship," and congratulations on this evidence of growth. All such improvements cost money, and we hope the Central in its new outfit will captivate and capture very many new subscribers.

Our young friend, Rev. Josephus Stephan, whom we knew as a little boy during our pastorate in Baton Rouge, La., is to be married, November 28, to Miss Mattie Keith, of Bonne Terre, Mo. We wish the young couple all happiness.

Prohibition ruins everything: in proof of which we offer this clip from the New Mississippian, of fifteenth instant:

After twelve months of prohibition in Jackson, we point proudly to our advertising columns, where there is not a single advertisement of houses for rent, but advertisements of tenants wanting houses to rent. With every available dwelling in the city rented, the incoming citizens cry aloud and advertise for houses.

In digging for the foundation of the Southern Brewery, on Canal street, the other day, the workmen shoveled up some curious pottery and a human skull! Typical and prophetic! Breweries and skulls!

If the brethren will make special efforts during the next few weeks to raise their Conference collections, they will be able, like Job, to say, "I caused the widows' heart to sing for joy."

It is stated that Robert Louis Stevenson, the author, is smoking himself to death. He smokes cigarettes.

For the year ending October 31, the Methodist Episcopal Church has collected for missions $1,386,000. So says J. W. Philips, the Treasurer of the Missionary Society of that church!

Sir William McArthur, ex-Lord Mayor of London, ex-member of the House of Commons, and a distinguished Wesleyan, died recently in an underground railway carriage.

Bro. Candler has revised his sermon on "The Theater," and published it in pamphlet form. Let every one interested in this subject get this pamphlet. It can be had at our House in Nashville at ten cents a copy, or $1 per dozen.

Mr. Beecher's church has resolved to call Rev. Charles A. Berry, of Wolverhampton, England, as its pastor. He shares in the liberal views of Mr. Beecher.

The Christian Index, referring to the speech of Mr. Grady, of the Atlanta Constitution, at a prohibition meeting in Atlanta recently, says that "at times its eloquence was maddening." The speech was in defense of prohibition.

Of Senator Colquit's speech on the same occasion, the same paper says: "It was his masterpiece. It was one of those speeches that lift men out of their animalism and make them feel that they are akin to God."

Rev. A. B. Earle, who has been in charge of our church in Gretna for the past five months, left for the South Carolina Conference last Monday evening. Bro. Earle has done a fine work among us, and our prayers and good wishes accompany him to his field of future labor.

The following resolutions were passed by the Preachers' Meeting:

Whereas, Rev. A. B. Earle is about to sever his connection with us; And, whereas, His stay with us has been very pleasant and profitable; therefore, be it

Resolved, That our prayers shall accompany him on his journey to his future field of labor.

Resolved, That we recommend him to the brethren in South Carolina as a worthy brother and faithful minister and pastor.

That old sermon, brother, which once kindled fire in your own heart and flashed its light and warmth into the consciences of your hearers, has somehow lost its power. What is the matter with it? The thoughts are the same; perhaps, the words are the same, and yet the results of its delivery are far different! It needs to be taken to pieces and reconstructed. It needs to go through a process of intellectual reproduction. It needs to be born again. Don't throw it away yet, but by prayer and study try to bring your own heart into closest sympathy with its grand thoughts and see if the old fires will not again be kindled by it. It has been said that one of the most pathetic things is the crater of an extinct enthusiasm," and that is a pretty good illustration of an old worn-out, fireless sermon. If, after earnest and fair trial, you can't put fire into it, then—put it in the fire.

PILLS and fever are the result of a malarious climate, but they can be cured by Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets, they are pleasant to take, mild in their action and a certain cure.

Band of Hope at Parker Chapel.

Last Friday night it was our good fortune to be present at Parker Chapel on the occasion of a public meeting of the Band of Hope. The floral decorations were truly artistic and evidenced the refined taste of Miss Kate Riggs, to whose personal attention the beautiful display was due. The pastor, Rev. Clayton M. Lyons, took charge of the exercises; and, after reading and prayer, a most interesting program was successfully carried out by the little folks, interspersed all along by spirited singing. We felt highly honored in being called to the front for a temperance speech. Fathers, mothers and children filled the auditorium, and listened attentively to some earnest words that we know came from the heart. The coldest of speakers might well be fired up in the advocacy of the cause of our noble women and the precious boys and girls of the Band of Hope. God bless the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union with the peerless Miss Willard at their head! God bless the Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union with Mrs. Merrick to lead them to victory in this most hotly contested field of battle! God bless all the Bands of Hope, and especially the Parker Chapel Band under the able management of Miss Riggs!

A number came forward and signed the pledge. We have not just at hand, a la the Nashville Convention, a palmetto and a pine to wave, but we say to that little band of "temperance boys and temperance girls"—Long may you wave!

The Sunday Law.

In view of the fact that strenuous efforts are being made, in this city, to influence the next Legislature of Louisiana to repeal or modify the existing Sunday Law, the Evangelical Preachers' Union have issued the following circular:

ROOMS OF THE EVANGELICAL PREACHERS' UNION,
November 16, 1887.

Reverend and Dear Brother: Strenuous efforts are being made by the enemies of our Sunday Law to have that law repealed by our next Legislature. Several thousand voters in New Orleans have leagued themselves together for the purpose of opposing every candidate for legislative honors who does not pledge himself to carry out their behests. Fearing that the people in the interior of the State shall demand to hold on to the Law, the leaguers express themselves content with a Legislative measure which will exclude our city from the operation of the Sunday Law. Failing in this, as a dernier resort, the legislators to be elected shall insist, that the existing law operate on Sunday only, from sunrise to 2 o'clock P. M., reclaiming Sunday evening and night for pleasure and business.

Petitions are being circulated by various committees for the purpose of securing signatures of parties pledging themselves by their vote to promote the changes proposed.

Ought we not by moral suasion counteract this wicked movement? We ought, and we will do it! As an effective means of accomplishing this object, the New Orleans Evangelical Preachers' Union requests you, on Sunday, November 27, 1887, to preach a sermon on the "Proper Observance of the Sabbath;" apprising your hearers, if you see fit, of the impending danger.

By order of the Evangelical Preachers' Union.

Counting the congregations and Sunday-schools, of which there were less than a dozen, who contributed to this fund, the number of contributors is 403. The largest individual contribution were two of $50, both from Mississippi. The smallest contribution was 50 cents, of which there were 20.)

A great Frenchman has said, "The church is a great thought which every man ought to study." It is more than a great thought; it is a great fact whose dimensions every man ought to try to measure. Some of the most wonderful things in the New Testament are said of the church. Dr. Whedon was of the opinion that Paul was speaking of the church when he said, "That ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints, what is the breadth and length and depth and height." But whether that is so or not, we know he says in the same chapter that the manifold wisdom of God is made known to the heavenly world by the church. Heaven learning of God's wisdom through the church on earth is one of the most stupendous facts revealed in the Bible.

Louisiana Conference agents will be offered the satchel premium during December. Get up your lists, and be ready to forward them after November 30.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

A teacher in this city recently asked a class to write an essay on "The Result of Laziness," and one of the bright, but lazy boys in a class handed in as his composition a blank sheet of paper.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND.

A Consumptive Cured.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of California, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of Consumption. He could be seen in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this receipt free, only asking to pay expenses. The Receipt will cure Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Influenza, Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach, and will break up a fresh Cold in twenty-four hours. Address CRADDOCK & CO., 1509 Race Street, Philadelphia, naming this paper.

Price, Cloth, $1.25; Boards, $1.00.

The compilers' aim in this new book has been to admit only such hymns as approve themselves to a fair critical judgment, while they contain the spirit of devotion. The tunes are arranged for three part singing, female voices, with a Bass Part for the Convenience of the organist or pianist; and they comprise the best of those already familiar to American congregations, besides a great number of fine melodies from English, German and other of the Catholic hymnals. In the most important sense, "Laudamus" is the most important work of the kind yet published, and should be examined by all ladies' schools and seminaries.

OTHER NEW PUBLICATIONS.

MARCHESI'S METHOD OF SINGING. By Mathilde Marchesi, Op. 45. Two Ladies Duets. Part I., Op. 31, Part II., Op. 32. Complete in one volume, 8vo, pp. 88, for Practice of the Art of Singing. Price, $2.50. Contains new and practical elementary and progressive exercises. Should be examined by all teachers of vocal culture.

Our Young People.

WHAT BECAME OF A LIE.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

First, somebody told it,
Then the room wouldn't hold it
So the busy tongues rolled it
Till they got it outside;
When the crowd came across it,
And never once lost it,
But tossed it and tossed it
Till it grew long and wide.

From a very small lie, sir,
It grew deep and high, sir,
Till it reached to the sky, sir,
And frightened the moon;
For she hid her sweet face, sir,
In a veil of cloud-lace, sir,
At the dreadful disgrace, sir,
That had happened at noon.

This he brought forth others,
Dark sisters and brothers,
And fathers and mothers—
A terrible crew;
And while headlong they hurried,
The people they flurried,
And troubled and worried,
As lies always do.

And so, evil-hooded,
This monstrous LIE goaded,
Till at last it exploded
In smoke and in shame;
When from mud and from mire
The pieces flew higher,
And hit the sad liar,
And killed his good name!

Thanksgiving Missionary Quilt-Roll.

Not quite all of the following names were reported by the specified time; but the quilts in these respective charges were reported finished by the first part of October. Others have quilts completed, or nearly so, who either did not furnish names of contributors, or did not get them finished by that time, who justly deserve praise. Possibly, still others have worked faithfully who have made no report. That all who have aided in the good cause evermore may continue to be workers in the Lord's vineyard, and whether their names are here enrolled or not, by faith in Jesus, may have them written in the beautiful book of life, where no name will ever grow dim and fade away—where they will forever remain effulgent with the purity and brightness of heaven, is the sincere wish of

A Pill in Time, Saves Nine.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are preventive as well as curative. A few of these "Little Giants," taken at the right time, with little expense and no inconvenience, will accomplish what many dollars and much sacrifice of time will fail to do after Disease once holds you with his iron grasp. Constipation relieved, and Liver regulated, the Blood purified, will fortify against fevers and all contagious diseases. Persons intending travel, changing diet, water and climate, will find invaluable. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In vials convenient to carry.

A LITTLE GIRL'S RELIGION.—A little girl of twelve was telling, in a simple way, the evidence that she was a Christian. "I did not like to study, but to play. I was idle at school, and often missed my lessons. Now I try to learn every lesson well to please God. I was mischievous at school when the teacher was not looking at me, making fun for the children to laugh at. Now I wish to please God by behaving well and keeping the school laws. I was selfish at home; didn't like to run errands, and was sulky when mother called me from play to help her in work. Now it is real joy to me to help mother in any way, and show that I love her." Such a religion is essential to the best interests and moral growth of youth, and will make life cheerful.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVean, 282 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. WILLIAMS—JUDGE JAMES ANDERSON WILLIAMS was born May 27, 1816, in Darlington district, S. C.; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when quite a young man; married October 20, 1835, and died in great peace and strong faith, October 3, 1887, at his residence, St. Helena parish. Having embraced Christ in early life, and by yielding to his gentle Spirit, he became a genial Christian gentleman. Such cultivation soon brought him into great esteem with his fellow-citizens, so that he was chosen to serve them as clerk of the court for several years, and subsequently as judge of the parish court of St. Helena. He was emphatically a Christian, a man of faith, and a hard Bible student; a man of prayer and of strong devotion to his church. As a husband, he was not to be surpassed, except by such as may have had larger capacities, untiring in his energetic thoughtfulness for her comfort, and tender in all his sympathies for her invalid; state and as a father, wisely indulgent and godly in his government, thereby securing the highest respect and fondest love of all his children. Owing to afflictions for several years he spent a quiet home life, with his faithful daughter and grandchildren, who, with their father, were inmates of his godly home. May God bless the bereaved ones with great comfort and sustaining grace, and finally bring them to meet again in heaven, where there will be no more death, nor partings, nor tears!

J. W. ELLISON, Pastor.

HUFF—MOLLIE GARFIELD HUFF, daughter of George W. and Charity L. Huff, of Amite county, Miss., was born March 13, 1883, and died July 11, 1887. Though only about four years of age, her parents had taught her of heaven and heavenly things. No doubt, the blessed Savior had made himself known to her, and she loved to talk of him and of heaven. While in good health she would express a desire to go to heaven, and the night before her death she said she was too sick to get well, and told her parents she was going to that beautiful home above. Of the four children God gave to her parents, he has taken three away. Babes in Christ in heaven. Into what glorious maturity they will grow! The parents lean on Christ and find comfort, such as the world can not give.

J. WILSON BROWN.

EDMUNDS—On Friday night, August 12, 1887, at the home of Mr. W. G. Hope, near Farmersville, Collin county, Texas, WILLIAM HARMON EDMUNDS passed away. He was born in St. Helena parish, Louisiana, May 10, 1859, and was twenty-eight years, three months and two days old. Though born and raised in Louisiana, he was far away from the home of his nativity and those who loved him best in a strange land, but not among strangers. He was with dear friends who tenderly and attentively nursed him, and, with the assistance of an eminent physician, did all that care and attention could; but God claimed him for his own, and his young life went out forever, and those who loved him best will mourn his death as only a fond mother and loving sisters and brother can mourn.

A FRIEND.

ROBERTS—MAMIE M. ROBERTS, daughter of Thomas J. and M. L. Roberts, died October 16, 1887, aged about one year and six months. She was dedicated in baptism to the God that took her by Rev. Archie White. Death has scarcely ever plucked a sweeter flower from the fields of earth. Her death was indeed a sad blow to her parents and brothers and sisters, who loved her so ardently. Surely there is another world where these thousands of lovely infants help to make its brightness and its glory, for to them there is never any death. There we trust this whole family will be forever unbroken in the glorious resurrection.

ECLECTIC, ALA., Oct. 20, 1886.

Dr. A. T. SHALLENBERGER, Rochester, Pa.

Dear Sir: Last February I received from you a bottle of your Antidote for Malaria, and gave it to a young lady attending school here, but who had not been well enough to go for several weeks, and was quite broken down in health. In a few days after taking the medicine she was back in school again, and has not lost a day the entire summer. I think it is the best medicine I ever knew. Yours very truly,

R. C. WILLIAMS.

COLE—We have never been called upon to chronicle three deaths so sudden as those I now mention:

EDITH COLE, eldest daughter of Watt Cole and Emma Q. Thorn, died on Peters avenue, New Orleans, October 10, aged ten years; LOTTIE died on the fifteenth, aged seven years; and MAGGIE, on the twenty-third, aged three years—their only three daughters. These three little angel-sisters passed from earth to heaven in about two weeks. They were members of Parker Chapel Sunday-school, and were always in their places in the Sunday-school, and took an unusual interest in studying their lessons. To say the least of them, they were extraordinary children for sprightliness and good deportment. We shall miss them very much from their places in our Sunday-school. But, oh! what must be the loss of the heart-stricken parents and their dear only child, a son. We condole with them sincerely. May the loving father in heaven bind up their wounded and bleeding hearts, and bring the entire family to dwell with him above where parting is unknown! Bereaved ones, "Earth hath no sorrow that heaven can not heal."

J. D. P.

EAST—MRS. KISSIAH EAST, wife of Thomas W. East was born August, 1833, and died October 7, 1887, aged fifty-four years. She was married April 1, 1855. She was a kind and loving wife, a good and affectionate mother, a good neighbor, and a special friend to the poor. Her walk from girlhood was that of a true child of God. She professed religion, January, 1853, and lived a consistent Christian ever since. A heavenly vision has been present with her fourteen years. The praises of the heavenly host also have been heard by her fourteen years at intervals up to a few days before her death. Then the praises were continual. She was sick in prison for a number of years, but bore her affliction with patience to the end. She used her utmost exertion to set her house in order before death, giving her children instruction as to the way to meet her in heaven. She gave instructions as to her burial, and made mention of her departure from this life, and told her husband and children not to grieve after her, and to meet her in heaven.

THOS. W. EAST.

The Despair of Science.

Rheumatism and Neuralgia, two remorseless demons of human suffering, have puzzled the masters of medical science. They are finally agreed that the first is a blood disease, and that the second is an affection of the nerves. For their cure, until recently, the faculty prescribed similar remedies. Principal reliance was placed on external application in both affections. Lately several of the most distinguished physicians of Philadelphia have prescribed nitro-glycerine to neuralgic patients.

Now, the dynamite, or nitro-glycerine, treatment of the old-school faculty has not yet resulted in any cures. Skeptical sufferers from acute neuralgia or rheumatism, in the majority of cases, would prefer to have the dynamite placed directly upon the affected part and exploded promptly. Cures are, after all, the vindication of a new departure in the healing art. The Compound Oxygen treatment solves the question as to the complete eradication of both rheumatism and neuralgia from the system. Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., send a Home Treatment which can be used with perfect ease and safety at the patient's residence. The effects of the Compound Oxygen are felt immediately; the system takes a new tone and life becomes full of enjoyment again. A postal card sent to the above address will secure an interesting pamphlet on the discovery, application and cures made by Compound Oxygen.

A tree will not only lie as it falls, but it will fall as it leans: and the great question everyone should bring home to himself is this: "What is the inclination of my soul? Does it, with all its affections, lean toward God, or away from him?"—J. J. Gurney.

Darbys Prophylactic Fluid

Use it in every sick-room. Will keep the atmosphere pure and wholesome; removing all bad odors from any source.

Will destroy all Disease Germs, infection from all Fevers, and all contagious diseases.

The eminent physician, J. Marion Sims, M. D., New York, says: "I am convinced that Prof. Darbys Prophylactic Fluid is a most valuable disinfectant."

Let our Lord's sweet hand square us and hammer us, and strike off all kinds of pride, self-love, world worship and infidelity, so that he makes us stones and pillars in his Father's house.—Samuel Rutherford.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,

The great design, both in judgments and mercies, is to convince us that there is none like the Lord our God, none so wise, so mighty, so good, no enemy so formidable, no friend so desirable, so valuable.—Matthew Henry.

SOUR stomach is one of the first symptoms of a coming bilious attack, and if remedied in time a severe spell of sickness may be prevented. Take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pills. 25 cents per vial.

MISCELLANEOUS.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health can not exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid, the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Edison's Latest Invention.

Mr. Edison has invented an improved phonograph which exceeds in wonder anything his brain has heretofore evolved. It supersedes letter writing. The operation, he says, is simplicity itself, and is thus described:

"The merchant or clerk who wishes to send a letter has only to set the machine in motion, and to talk in his natural voice and at the usual rate of speech into the receiver. When he has finished the sheet or 'phonogram,' as I call it, it is ready for putting into a little box made on purpose for the mail. We are making the sheets in three sizes, one for letters of from eight hundred to one thousand words, another size for twenty-five words, and another size for four hundred words. I expect that an arrangement can be made with the postoffice authorities enabling the phonogram cores to be sent at the same rate as a letter. The receiver of a phonogram will put it onto his apparatus, and the message will be given out more clearly, more distinctly than the best telephone message ever sent. The tones of the voice on the two phonographs which I have finished are so perfectly rendered that one can distinguish between twenty different persons, each one of whom having said a few words. One tremendous advantage is that the letter may be repeated a thousand times if necessary. The phonogram does not wear out by use. Moreover, it may be filed away for a hundred years and be ready the instant it is needed. The cost of making the phonogram will be scarcely more than the cost of ordinary letter paper. The machine will read out the letter or message at the same speed with which it was dictated.

"I have experimented with a device for enabling printers to set type directly from the dictation of the phonograph, and think that it will work as a charm. It is so arranged that the printer by touching a lever with his foot allows five or ten words of the phonogram to be sounded. If he is not satisfied with the first hearing, he can make it repeat the same words over and over again."

Making Postage Stamps.

In printing steel plates are used, on which 200 stamps are engraved. Two men are kept at work covering them with the colored inks and passing them to a man and girl, who are equally busy at printing them with large rolling hand-presses. Three of these little squads are employed all the time, although ten presses can be put into use in case of necessity. After the small sheet of paper upon which the 200 stamps are engraved, is dry enough, they are sent into another room and gummed. The gum used for this purpose is a peculiar composition made of the powder of potatoes and other vegetables, mixed with water, which is better than any other material, gum arabic, for instance, which cracks the paper badly. This paper is also of a peculiar texture, somewhat similar to that of bank notes. After having again been dried, this time on little racks that are fanned by steam power for about an hour, they are put between sheets of pasteboard and pressed in hydraulic presses capable of applying a weight of 2,000 tons. The next thing is to cut the sheet in halves; each sheet, of course, when cut contains 100 stamps. They are then passed to two other squads, who, in as many operations, perforate the sheets between the stamps. Next, they are pressed once more, and then packed and labeled and stored away in another room, preparatory to being put into mail-bags for dispatching to fill orders. If a single stamp is torn or in any way mutilated, the whole sheet of 100 is burned. Five hundred thousand are burned every week from this cause. For the past twenty years not a single sheet has been lost, such care has been taken in counting them. During the process of manufacturing the sheets are counted eleven times.

Frequent thoughts of death, judgment and eternity are very profitable and useful for many purposes.

ONE of the first symptoms of a derangement of the digestive organs is constipation, and should be promptly attended to or inflammation of the bowels may follow. Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pills will promptly cure and are agreeable to take. 25 cents per vial.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is merely attended, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, loosing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, there to prey upon the system—especially moths—as who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK must be shown

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A careless boy dropped a cigarette upon a bale of cotton in the Union Cotton Compress, Little Rock, Ark., and a fire broke out consuming three blocks of buildings and five thousand bales of cotton, and the loss is over $300,000.

Gen. Sparks has replied to Secretary Lamar, and tendered his resignation as Commissioner of the General Land Office.

About 300 delegates were in attendance upon the National Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Nashville, Tenn., during the past week.

What is thought to be the richest gold mine in the world has been discovered ten miles from Prescott, Arizona. The ore averages $1,000 per ton, and thousands of tons are in sight.

The Apaches have made two raids upon the ranches in the Labinal mining district in Mexico, 150 miles south of El Paso.

An official list of the next House of Representatives shows that there will be 168 Democrats, 153 Republicans and 1 Independents.

The resignation of Gen. Sparks, Commissioner of the General Land Office, has been accepted by the President.

In the Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperence Union, Nashville, Tenn., there were representatives from every State except Nevada, and every Territory except Idaho and Arizona.

Two fires in Memphis have destroyed 18,100 bales of cotton. Losses on cotton, compresses, sheds and cars estimated at $780,000.

The Saratoga Hotel, Chicago, had a fire damaging the building about $12,000 worth. No one hurt.

It is now said that there is a probability that Senator Colquit, of Georgia, will succeed Secretary Lamar in the Interior Office.

The Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institute has elected Prof. S. P. Langley, secretary of the institution, in place of Prof. Baird, deceased.

Forest fires are creating great damages in many places in the West and along the valley of the Mississippi.

The steamer "Sirius", from Rio, has been quarantined at New York on account of small-pox on board.

The main building of Barnum & Shaw's show, at Bridgeport, Conn., has been destroyed by fire and many of the animals were burned to death. Loss $700,000.

A terrible storm, carrying devastation in its path, has swept over the great lakes.

Sixty-seven ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held services in the churches in Nashville, last Sunday.

FOREIGN.

The evidence before the committee of the French Chamber examining the Wilson-Caffarel case, is inculpating many people. The sale of the decorations seems to have been quite widespread.

Mr. Froude, the historian, in a letter, says, "England never yet succeeded in governing Ireland constitutionally and never will."

The Crown Prince relies more on his good constitution and unbroken physical strength than medical remedies or doctors' knives. Austria has expressed deep sympathy with him.

Great agitation prevails among the French Deputies over the revelations of the Caffarel scandal. They recognize the eve of a grave crisis. The Minister of Justice has resigned.

The Italian Parliament was opened the sixteenth instant, and King Humbert made a speech which was greeted with warm applause.

Emperor William has received messages of sympathy for the Crown Prince from Austria, Russia, France, Belgium, Holland, England, Italy and Spain, and the United States.

In the French Chamber it has been decided to prosecute M. Wilson, the vote being 537 to 3.

The government has abandoned the prosecution of Mr. Saunders for addressing the crowd at Trafalgar Square. The News says this is of itself a "direct discouragement to constitutional methods and a distinct incitement to violence."

O'Brien is greatly changed since he went to prison, and now refuses to take nourishing food.

The Empress of Germany is suffering from paralysis of the lower jaw

It is now said that the Crown Prince's malady is undoubtedly soft cancer of the worst kind.

The Czar and Czarina paid a brief visit to Emperor William at Berlin, on the eighteenth instant, and left the same day for St. Petersburg.

A Law and Liberty League has been formed in London, John Bright and Mr. Snead being among its supporters.

Lord Lytton has been elected Rector of Glasgow University by the casting vote of the Chancellor.

The French Cabinet have resigned. President Grevy hesitates to resign, fearing that such a course will establish a mischievous precedent.

Archbishop Raoul has been expelled from Guatemala by the government for interfering in temporal concerns.

The steamer "Scholten" collided with the "Rosa Mary" ten miles off Dover and sank in twenty minutes. One hundred and thirty-two persons are missing.

The meeting of the Emperor and the Czar, it is said, will not result in improving the relations of Germany and Russia.

M. Goblet has been requested by President Grevy to form a Cabinet. M. Clemenceau has also been invited to a conference with the President.

School-Girls.

Why do school-girls like northeast winds? It brings chaps to their lips. Should it bring colds to their heads, let them take Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Consumption, Scrofula, General

Debility, Wasting Diseases of Children, Chronic Coughs and Bronchitis, can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Prominent physicians use it and testify to its great value. Please read the following: "I used Scott's Emulsion for an obstinate Cough with Hemorrhage, Loss of Appetite, Emaciation, Sleeplessness &c. All of these have now left, and I believe your Emulsion has saved a case of well-developed Consumption."—T. J. FINDLEY, M. D., Lone Star, Texas.

The English government has abandoned the prosecution of Sullivan, Lord Mayor of Dublin.

"I Cure Fits."

This heading is a familiar sight to most newspaper readers, as it has appeared regularly in the best publications for many years past. Dr. H. G. Root, of 183 Pearl Street, New York, has a world-wide reputation as a successful specialist in this distressing disease and has no doubt cured more cases than all other doctors combined. As an evidence of good faith the doctor sends a free sample bottle of his remedy to all sufferers who write for it. If they give their express and post-office address.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of November will be "red-letter month" for our agents. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 16-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference. North Mississippi agents can have it sent to Winona, if so desired. This offer is for agents only, as above stated, and during November only for Mississippi agents.

Text: "Husbands, love your wives." 1. Never find fault with her before others. 2. Per contra, remember the counsel of the good Book: "Her husband shall praise her in the gates;" that is, before folks. 3. Bear all her burdens for her; even then she'll bear more than you do in spite of you. 4. If you want her to submit to your judgment, never ask her to submit to your selfishness. 5. A woman's life is made up of little things. Make her life happy by little courtesies. 6. Love is a wife's wages. Don't scrimp in your pay.

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

ROBERT RANDLE, P. E.

Gen. Lord Wolseley.

Who took part in the siege and relief of Lucknow, and was severely wounded at Sebastopol, and who has been at the head of the British army in Ashantee and Zululand, has written a paper on "Young Men in Battle," for the Youth's Companion, giving instances of daring and fidelity which he has seen among youthful soldiers in his various campaigns. The article is full of thrilling incidents.

It is reported in Rome that the Pope has disapproved of the lawlessness and political fanaticism of the people of Ireland, and sent instructions to the clergy in reference to their future attitude regarding relations between landlord and tenant.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can not be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 14, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for Board and Tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month or four weeks, extra.

Instruction on French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and simple regular college or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of the body receive one-half tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Trustees have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and improving the buildings and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

THE UNANSWERED PRAYER.

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

"Lord, who am I, that thus should call
Thy servant to a task so great—
Forgotten in my low estate,
I, void of wisdom, power and all
The needs that on such service wait?

"The people know not who thou art;
They would not heed my prayers or tears;
A fugitive full forty years,
Within the lonely desert's heart,
How could I move their hopes or fears?

"I am not eloquent. My speech
Is slow, my tongue is slorn of grace.
I dare not take the prophet's place,
Without the prophet's power to reach
The heart of a despairing race.

"Send whom thou will! All choice is Thine:
Thou canst fulfill thy settled plan
Through other hands more meet to be
Upborne in thy so vast design:
But, Lord, I beseech thee—send not me."

Had Moses failed to go, had God
Granted his prayer—Christ could have been
For him no leader safe to win—
No pillared fire, no cloud by day—
No wonders in the land of Zin—

No smiting of the sea—no wells
Ecstatic, shed on Sinai's steep—
No Nebo, with a tomb to keep
His burial! Only forty years
Of desert-watching with his sheep!

Autumnal Musings.

BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

"Where there is a will there is a way." This is an old, trite, and generally true adage. Will and way ought to be equal partners in every department of business, whether in Church or State. They should ever harmonize in purpose and plan, in spirit and agencies. This is not always as true in practice as plain in theory. Will may be too large-souled, too generous, too ambitious. Way may be so awkward or impetuous or imprudent as to embarrass, if not to defeat, the plans of will. Will may be a momentary impulse rather than a fixed development of character. Way may be dull in comprehension, lacking in enterprise, slow and inefficient in movement. Every mind should have its "committee of ways and means" always in session.

The will may sympathize with want and distress, yet it requires way to exercise kindness of action, so as to avoid the extremes of penuriousness or of extravagance; to furnish aid to the needy without offending the pride of the recipient by too great display of self-complacent charity. Self must be kept hid closely behind the benevolence of the action done "for Jesus' sake."

The way of performing manifest duty, to which will moves us, has very much to do with the character and results of the action. Kindness may impel us to assist the needy; but there must not be extravagance in attention to one needy call, so as to induce bankruptcy to all the other claimants on our benevolence or our assistance. The will has no right to select pet schemes and foster them to the neglect of the wide demands, which are so many, for human as well as divine aid in our sin-disordered world.

It is right we should endeavor to correct error and to recall the erring; but reproof or rebuke may lose all its intended benefit by too harsh a tone, look or word. The spirit may be too censorious, and not enough forgiving and kind, and may injure rather than benefit, harden rather than soften and recall the offender back to duty and right. Punishment should be inflicted on violators of law; but if attended by appearance of passion or of resentment, the design is utterly lost. Indeed, the culprit finds in the spirit of the punishment palliation of offense if not confirmation in evil practice.

Correct methods are fully of as much value in carrying out wise and good designs, as the designs themselves. Adaptation of means and to circumstances is an important element of correct action. We best aid the needy by helping them to help themselves. Self-love is propitiated and proper pride is not humiliated by the absence of the idea of reception of cold, naked charity. Human nature revolts at dependence even on the mercy and kindness of God, much more at reception of charity from our brother-man.

The tender union between will and way should be seen in dispensing these acts of delicate, refined friendship and Christian affection between a flock and their pastor, which so kindly express esteem, exhibit grateful appreciation, and call out reciprocal, refined gratitude and attention. Large gifts, if attended with pharisaic pretension, have not the sweet fragrance of the offering of the widow's mite attended by the loving spirit of grateful Christian affection.

Method is of incalculable value in visiting the sick and the unfortunate. There is a time when silence should not be interfered with while nature and medicine are in fearful combat with disease. Undisturbed quiet is often the best of remedies for a sick body or a wearied mind. How to enter a sick room, how to behave when there, and the time and method of withdrawal, make up an important fine art in true charity. Silence is often more golden than words; a kind look may shed a gleam of healthful sunshine. The best efforts of best medical skill may be defeated by the funeral look and the depressing words of benevolent will, but of awkward, blundering way. There is the absence of usual prudence and good sense to crowd the sick-room with those whom mere idle curiosity has brought there, and whose protracted muttered conversation but taxes the nerves of the sick and drives away much needed curative repose and slumber. The same train of thought may apply to care of the convalescent, and the suitable and sufficient supply of nourishment, amount of company, permission of exercise.

In religious matters we see the largest, most frequent antagonism of pious will and ignorant, untrained way. Take one scene. A revival is in progress. The gospel is clothed with power. Prayer is energized by the Holy Spirit. Saints receive a new baptism from on high, and sinners are cut to the heart, and mourners in Zion crowd the altars of God. What nice discrimination is necessary in reading spiritual want and in furnishing proper supply. The hymn, the prayer, the advice should be perfectly suited to humble the penitent in the dust, and then to help to faith in Christ. The head and heart and hand of "a master in Israel" are necessary now. Souls are struggling into life; souls are smitten down by the lightning of God's truth and Spirit. Let that bungler close his effort to lead in singing by starting hymns and tunes entirely out of place. Let that zealous young disciple be still, while experienced piety quotes promise, helps to remove doubt, and prays with, as well as for, a present salvation to the mourner in Zion. The keen ear hears when words of pardon are spoken; the educated soul responds to the newly sent blessing, and the work of grace is begun aright.

It is an evidence of good sense and good piety for way to know how and when to keep out of "the way of the Lord," as well as when and where and how to work in the vineyard of the Master.

SARDIS, KY., Nov. 14, 1887.

Chilocco Industrial School for Indians.

BY REV. T. C. BRADFORD.

MR. EDITOR: On leaving Mississippi, I promised some of our brethren to write to the ADVOCATE. Will you be kind enough to allow me a little space?

This, you are aware, is a government institution, founded about four years ago, for the education of children from the wild tribes of Indians. It is located in the northern part of the Indian Territory, and only about six miles from Arkansas City, Kansas—a most beautiful and rapidly growing city of eight thousand inhabitants, with street railways, numerous banks, factories, flouring mills, electric lights, etc. One of the most noteworthy features, however, is the number and beauty of its churches and school buildings—all of the most substantial material and modern architecture. But I purposed writing of the Indian school.

Our main building is of native stone, four-storied, very handsome, and of capacity sufficient to accommodate one hundred and eighty boarders. Besides this, we have numerous shops for industrial training; also barns, granary and cattle-shed—all situated in the midst of a gently rolling and apparently boundless prairie.

These children are very much as other children—learn many things about as readily, and excel in geography, spelling, history, penmanship and drawing. Some of them, also, are becoming pretty good farmers, tolerable carpenters and blacksmiths, good shoemakers and tailors, under the skillful training of heads of these several departments. Many of the girls, too, are fair seamstresses, cooks and laundresses.

We have now one hundred and forty pupils, male and female, and will probably very soon have as many as we can accommodate, as the cold weather usually brings them in pretty rapidly. They are frequently brought to us without names, and we are expected by their parents to supply this little deficiency. So it occurs that we have a Clark, Benson, McTyeire, Galloway and Green Andrews. One of the first essentials, however, to a comfortable and safe matriculation, you will not be surprised to learn, is an abundant supply and vigorous use of soap and water.

Religious. Our morning and evening service, consisting of Scripture lessons, singing and prayer, is held in the school chapel, and is at times intensely interesting, as many of the children sing well and appear to enter with spirit into the service. We have preaching every Sunday morning, Sabbath-school in the afternoon, and a service of some kind in the evening. A goodly number of the pupils are church members, and two of them are willing, when called on, to lead in prayer, and, I trust, will some day receive a divine call to carry the gospel to their own people. I assure you these wild tribes need the "glad message," and I am pleased to know that our dear Bishop Galloway has recently sent them a missionary. He will need the prayers and material support of the Southern Methodist Church in the States.

Personal. This work, of course, is novel to us, but we (Mrs. B. and I) are rapidly becoming used to it, and more and more interested in it. Our employees are whites, and most of them Southern Methodists. So you see we are at home even in the Indian Territory. Indeed, we are becoming pretty well Territorialized, for besides seeing, almost daily, flocks of prairie chickens, we have witnessed a prairie fire at night, and seen the Indian in his wild state and native "nobility."

There is hope for the red man. He is going upward, however slowly, in the scale of civilization; and you would probably be surprised to see the progress made by some of these children in the short space of one or two years. I enclose you a letter from a pupil of Haskell Institute to one of our school.—You will see from this that they are catching the right spirit. Remember us, dear brother, when you go to your closet.

Mexican Border Mission Conference.

BY REV. ROBT. W. MACDONELL.

The Mexican Border Mission Conference met in third annual session at Monclova, Mexico, November 10, and adjourned November 14. Bishop W. W. Duncan presided. R. W. MacDonell was elected secretary, and S. G. Kilgore and I. S. Rivera, assistants.

Pedro Grado, Pedro Vasquez, Carlos Quesenberry, Jose M. Chavez, and Marcelino Pineda were admitted on trial. Ignacio Escalante was continued on trial. Four were admitted into full connection, and two located, one of them at his own request (Bro. Rush McDonald), who goes to Vanderbilt University to pursue his studies there. Pablo G. Verduzco, Nicolas Rodriguez, Luis Gomez, Manuel San Miguel, and Jose Chavez (head) were ordained deacons. Jose M. Guzman, Manuel Flores, and Encarnacion Rodriguez were ordained elders. One faithful worker had fallen at his post (Romain V. Palomares), who, a miracle of grace him-self, became a blessing to many of his countrymen, some of whom to day are ministers of the gospel. The Conference room was, indeed, a Bochim, a place of weeping, when the Committee on Memoirs presented their report.

The following figures are extracted from the statistical report, and show the results of the year's labors. Local preachers, 18; members, 1,705; a gain of 139. The increase was larger, however, as over a hundred American members had been turned over, at the beginning of the year, to the West Texas Conference. Infants baptized, 176; adults, 250; Sunday-schools, 61; officers and teachers, 123; scholars, 1,542. Collected for Conference claimants, $122 79; for church extension, $193 21; for missions, $718 98; for Bishops, $14 61; for education, and paid to Instituto Fronterizo Monterey, $45 50; for Bible cause, $16 41; number of churches, 15—value, $27,135; parsonages, 5, valued at $2,637 50. Laredo Seminary, Frontier Institute, and the Girls' School at Saltillo were reported to be in a flourishing condition. A new school had been opened in Durango, Mexico, that had enrolled twenty-five pupils during the year.

The attendance on the Conference sessions and services by citizens of Monclova was encouraging, though the room in which they were held did not furnish sufficient accommodations. The weather was miserable for three days, and admirers of Mexico, who had enthusiastically praised her clear skies and balmy atmosphere, kept in the background; but Sunday and Monday Old Sol shone out, and those who were strangers to the soil became enthusiastic also. Bishop Duncan gave satisfaction to all, both in the presidential chair and in the pulpit. He gave special emphasis to the work of church extension, and assisted at the missionary anniversary in an address in behalf of missions. Rev. Joseph Norwood, of the Central Mexican Conference, was present a part of the session, and interpreted the Bishop's sermon on Sunday morning. A collection of $405 was taken in cash and subscriptions at the anniversary of the Mission and Church Extension Boards, and will be divided between the two. The next Conference will be held at Del Rio, Texas.

APPOINTMENTS.

MONTERREY DISTRICT.—A. H. Sutherland, P. E. Monterey, A. H. Sutherland; Instituto Fronterizo, P. C. Bryce, Pedro Grado; Saltillo, to be supplied (by J. J. Mercado); San Francisco, Pedro Vasquez; Huajuco, Nicolas Rodriguez; Cadereita, Encarnacion Rodriguez; Lampasas, Andres San Miguel; Laredo, M. San Miguel.

SAN ANTONIO DISTRICT.—Santiago Tafolla, P. E. San Antonio, I. S. Rivera—Elias Robertson, supernumerary; San Marcos and Bandera, J. P. Rodriguez; Lodi and Medina, Santos Romo; Corpus Christi and San Diego, Luis Gomez.

TAMAULIPAS DISTRICT.—Alejandro de Leon, P. E. Mier, Alejandro de Leon; Camargo, Eulalio Chavez; Rio Grande City, Carlos Quesenberry; Reynosa, Basilio Soto; Cerralvo, to be supplied (by Marcos Pompa).

MONCLOVA DISTRICT.—C. A. Rodriguez, P. E. Monclova and San Buenaventura, D. F. Acosta; Cuatro Cienegas, Marcelino Pineda; Santa Rosa, Josue Acosta; Zaragoza, Jose Chavez; Guerrero, Manuel Flores; Piedras Negras, Jose M. Guzman; Del Rio, Matilde Trevino.

DURANGO DISTRICT.—R. W. MacDonell, P. E. Durango, R. W. MacDonell, H. C. Hernandez; Chihuahua, S. G. Kilgore, Ignacio Escalante; Sonora, John E. Corbin, P. G. Verduzco; Sinaloa, Jefferson D. Scoggins; La Laz, Adolfo Cardenas; Paso del Norte, Maximo Villareal—Local supply, Pedro Garcia.

William Monk, W. T. Thornberg, and W. P. McCorkle transferred to West Texas Conference, and stationed as follows: Pecos mission, William Monk; Fort Davis, W. T. Thornberg; El Paso, W. P. McCorkle.

R. A. Durham, transferred to Texas Conference; J. F. Carl, to Northwest Texas Conference.

SAN MARCOS, TEX., 1887.

Reduced Rates to the Mississippi Conference.

Members coming to the Conference to be held in Jackson, Miss., December 14, can secure round-trip tickets at one and one-third fare over the following roads, viz: Alabama Great Southern, Illinois Central, Louisville and Nashville, Louisville, New Orleans and Texas, Mobile and Ohio, New Orleans and Northeastern, and Vicksburg and Meridian.

Ask the agent at the station where you board the train, to sell you a special ticket to be furnished to members of Conference. You will be required to certify that you are going to Conference, and to sign your name. You will keep these special tickets until you return; then you can buy tickets at one-third the usual rate.

Do not fail to buy the special tickets, as the old plan of getting the secretary's certificate at Conference will be of no avail. I have been informed by Mr. Slaughter, Commissioner Southern Passenger Association, Atlanta, Ga., that special tickets "are placed in the hands of ticket agents who will furnish them to delegates and members, upon application, at the time the ticket for the going journey is purchased."

The Natchez, Jackson and Columbus road can make no reduction that will be serviceable to members of Conference.

C. G. ANDREWS.

What is the Bible? It is the hive of all sweetness. It is the armory of all well-tempered weapons. It is the tower containing the crown-jewels of the universe. It is the lamp that kindles all other lights. It is the home of all majesties and splendors. It is the marriage-ring that unites the celestial and the terrestrial, while all the clustering white-robed denizens of the sky hovering around rejoice at the nuptials.

A Column of Clips.

He is ever waiting till his servants are willing to be led on by him to something better than they have yet attained to; not constraining them, but waiting to be constrained by them; revealing out their unformed wishes into definite acts, and ever crowning those acts by further revelations of himself. Thus he is constrained, but it is by the love of himself which he himself first kindles within.—Isaac Williams.

It is possible to emulate the exploits of a Don Quixote in our religious life, and to run a tilt at any number of spiritual windmills; but this is not watchfulness. A clerical brother of mine, alarmed from his slumbers by a policeman, who reported his church open, imagined that he had captured a burglar by the hair of the head in the tower of his church, when he had only laid violent hands, in the darkness, upon the church mop. It is quite possible to convert a deep into a burglar in our own spiritual experiences.—W. H. M. H. Aitken.

How shall we define this golden attribute of mercy? Is it not the one perfection which we creatures give, or seem to give, to our Creator? How could he have mercy were it not for us? Mercy is the tranquility of his omnipotence, and the sweetness of his omnipresence; the fruit of his eternity, and the compassion of his immensity; the chief satisfaction of his justice, the triumph of his wisdom, and the patient perseverance of his love. Wherever we go there is mercy, the peaceful, active, broad, deep, endless mercy of our heavenly Father. If we work by day, we work in mercy's light, and we sleep at night in the lap of our Father's mercy.—F. W. Faber.

The fact is, that man has in himself the double capacity of believing on proof, and of believing above proof. Faith and reason climb the ladder hand in hand until the top-most standpoint of the visible is reached, and there Reason pauses but Faith goes on—goes on and goes up, not treading vacuity, but planting its footsteps on the rungs of a ladder invisible, indeed, but just as existent and as strong as anything which appears to sight. Reason cries out to Faith: "Come down; you are in the region of superstition!" "It is true there is something which stands above our reason; there is something the existence of which can no more be made manifest to reason than the non-luminous rays of heat or the actinic solar rays can be made perceptible to the optic nerve.—Charles F. Deems, D. D.

Do you suppose that sin is to be driven out of the human heart by some fine theory, some sentiment, some easy method? Until you know what sin is the gospel will be an extravagant and astounding tragedy. If there is no mystery in redemption, there is equally a mystery in sin. This is the motive that follows the disease. Here is the solution of the mystery of the cross. The ghastly cross follows the ghastly sin; the tragedy of redemption is God's answer to the tragedy of crime. You find nothing in the atonement in the way of mystery that does not find in the way of sin. We could not guide us away by soft words from the chains of hell. It could only be done by blood. You have been thinking sin a trifle. I wonder not then, you have been thinking the cross a tragedy extravagant beyond the necessity of the case. If you have been calling sin "infirmity," "mistake," I wonder not that you are frightened by the awful transactions that are here in the four gospels. You need the whole blood of the whole heart of the dying Savior to help you to get rid of sin and to be delivered from its bondage.—Dr. Joseph Parker.

The power of Christian song in maintaining sound views of doctrine has not been estimated at its true value. Hymns are powerful educators. No sermon ever preached has made the conditions of salvation so plain to the lowliest mind, or pointed so many hearts crushed beneath the burden of guilt to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, as Charlotte Elliott's "Just as I am, without one plea." We much doubt if any of the formal treatises on the atonement has helped men to understand the subject as well as Toplady's "Rock of Ages, cleft for me." And Charles Wesley's "Jesus, lover of my soul," has helped innumerable hearts to recognize in Christ their consolation and strength as no theological essay could do, however profound and scriptural. We do not disparage theology, we do not belittle the work of the pulpit when we say that there is something better can do, and that something is best done by Christian hymns. This function of Christian song is so well appreciated by unevangelical bodies that they have felt compelled to publish hymn books of their own, from which all traces of objectionable sentiments have been carefully expunged. Even agnostics and atheists have attempted to compile hymn books. Very dreary have been the resultant books, but the effort bears witness to the potency of hymnology as an educator of the Christian consciousness.

IN MEMORIAM.

[illegible]

Come through the long grass to the river side,
Beneath the mossy stone,
Where the pale whose names and deeds
To all the world are known
[illegible]
[illegible]
Above the almost [illegible]
Of Lyman and De Lee.

One eve I plucked a little flow'r,
Sin-kissed from tears dispersed alone,
And laid it on the breast of him
Who guided Christian hopes,
The twilight zephyrs gently stirred
The clover in the vale;
And poor blind Mary sang for me
Her songs from Bedford dale.

And when I sought another grave,
Between a tear and smile,
I came to be a boy again
With Crusoe on his isle.
I blessed the book—the last of all
My boyhood's treasures new
And thanked the necromancer great
For all the joys I knew.

How gently sleep the honored pair!
The years that come and go
But add new lustre to the names
Of Lyman and De Lee.
To-night the stars look softly down,
The sky its dew-drops yields,
And love [illegible] the famous dead
In quiet Bonhill Fields.

Programme for the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial, Woman's Missionary Society.

The Woman's Board of Missions, at a called meeting, November 1, took the following action:

Whereas, The Woman's Board at the last annual meeting called for the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial for the members of the Woman's Missionary Society preceding the Christmas holidays; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the date of this week be fixed from December 12 to 18, inclusive.

Resolved, To secure concerted action and union in prayer, that a programme be prepared by the secretary, and all auxiliaries and members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and those interested in the cause of missions not allied with the society be requested to observe this programme closely, and lend their influence in bringing to the church rich results.

In compliance with the order of the Board, the following programme is submitted with the urgent request that, wherever practicable, the auxiliaries will meet at the church each day for united prayer. If this is not possible, that at a stated hour of the day prayer be made at home. The Young People and Juvenile Societies are expected to take part in both prayer and self-denial, and all pastors are earnestly requested to call the attention of the women of their respective charges to this programme, and to aid them in carrying it out, not only where there is an auxiliary organized, but where there is none, and effort be made at that time to organize.

Monday, December 12—China.

Let prayer be made for this mission and its missionaries, remembering all by name, and their work as follows:

Shanghai—Miss Haygood, that the plan for the Home and School, delayed by her ill health, may be successfully carried out, and that it be remembered in the offerings. Also for Misses Muse, Hamilton, Atkinson, Lipscomb, Hughes, and Mrs. Campbell.

Nantzinng—Misses Rankin, Kate Roberts, and Reagan. Miss Rankin requests that special prayer be made for the new work so wonderfully opening to her in Kading.

Soochow—Dr. Philips, that physical strength will be given her to bear up under the great strain of her profession, seeing that medical missionaries of all Boards are more liable than others to break down early. For Miss Lou Philips and her work, and Misses Kerr and Gordon. Also for the medical candidates in course of preparation.

Tuesday, December 13—Mexican Border Mission.

Laredo—Misses Naunie and Delia Holding. Miss Toland, and all the assistant teachers in the Seminary. Special request is made for prayer that the "Laredo Building Fund" may be remembered and increased.

Saltillo—Misses Lelia Roberts and Gilbert.

Wednesday, December 14—Brazil.

Piracicaba—Misses Rennotte, Watts, Marvin, and all the assistant teachers in the College.

Rio de Janeiro—Misses Bruce and Jones. Let special prayer be made that God will remove the present opposition and obstacles to the establishment of the Girls' College in that city, remembering also the call for a lady of first-class qualities to go to assist in that work.

Thursday, December 15—Indian Mission.

Muscogee—Harrell Institute and its teachers.

Friday, December 16.

For the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the home church in the quickening of faith and zeal, the revival of interest in the lukewarm, the awakening of the indifferent, and the bringing of more laborers into the foreign field. That those who direct the work may be endowed with wisdom and power from on high.

Saturday, December 17.

That God, who ruleth the hearts of men and women, may move upon all to devise liberal things, that they bring unto him who, "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor," a free-will offering of what would otherwise be expended upon the pleasure or useless indulgence of self, children, and friends, who should be influenced to exercise like self-denial.

Sunday, December 18.

Let special prayer be asked for the Woman's Missionary Society in all the churches at the morning service. In the afternoon or night let a public meeting be held, with suitable services and prayer for the general work. At this time let the offerings of the people be gathered up as "an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savor."

(As some may desire to add to their offerings after this date, such additions may be received at any time. All money given in observance of this week of prayer and self-denial must go through the regular channel to the treasury of the Woman's Missionary Society, to be used in its work.)

THAT WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL—HOW SHALL WE KEEP IT?

At the last meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions much embarrassment was felt when appropriations for the ensuing year were to be made. The missionaries had sent estimates of what would be necessary to carry on successfully the work in their different fields. A depleted treasury forbade the appropriations of such amounts. With sorrow and shame it was confessed that the more than half a million women in our church were not contributing enough to keep twenty devoted women in the foreign fields with means sufficient to do the work as it should be done. Now, growth is the law of life; to cease to grow is to begin to die. This is not less true of spiritual than of physical life; not less true of individual than of church life. The church that is satisfied to be comfortable and prosperous in its own borders is doomed—it is already dying; the fate of the Laodiceans will be hers. The same rule applies to the individual Christian.

When the Woman's Board of Missions was organized, it was not with the idea that when a few schools were established, a church built, a hospital opened and equipped, the work was done. These are only the foundation-stones of a building, the purpose of which will not be accomplished till the "whole earth be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Its consummation will not be reached until he "bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings of, 'Grace, grace unto it!'"

Our work is expanding. On every side open doors are inviting entrance, while a reasonable degree of success is encouraging the hearts of our young women in the fields now occupied.

The demand for "more money" was so imperative that the Board resolved, in order to meet the emergency, to set apart the week before Christmas as a time for special prayer, self-denial, and giving. Few are so obtuse as not to see the fitness of the time chosen. The Christian world is busy preparing to celebrate—what? The birth of him who was God's great, unspeakably great, Gift to man. It is a time of giving and receiving; gladness fills the air; homes that are colorless, if not really dark, during the year are happier at this season. None are so poor but they would give something to make brighter for somebody the hours of that short winter day. It may be no more than a smile, a kiss, a kind wish, or a tender prayer; but it is "blessed to give," and all would share the blessing. He who gave himself for us, said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Do our women believe this word of his? If they do, now is the time to give proof of their belief.

What would be thought of the wife who, at this glad time, gave freely to others, but neglected her husband, presumed to be her dearest earthly friend? or of the husband whose wife received no token of loving devotion, while others were enjoying his gifts? And yet the church, the bride of the Lord, does can it be true?—it does often forget the Bridegroom at this happy season. Earthly friends are kindly remembered, while he who made the day what it is, whose birth brought the first ray of hope to a dying world, is forgotten. "If you do good to them that do good to you, what thanks have you?" A subtle selfishness may underlie this thing of making ourselves happy by the happiness we bestow. And if we give to those from whom we receive, we are bound by this principle to give to him, for "what have we that we have not received?" The poor are always with us as his representatives—"whensoever we will, we may do them good," and he assures us that "inasmuch as we do it unto the least of these, we do it unto him." Of the poor, surely none are so poor as they who are ignorant of his love and his salvation. When he would give the church a perpetual reminder of his infinite love, he instituted the Lord's Supper. When he would give the church a work whereby they would prove their love, he said, as he ascended into heaven, "Go teach all nations." These were the last words a bereaved church heard fall from his lips. The measure of their (and our) love was to be, "as I have loved you." His love meant prayer, sacrifice, self-denial, suffering, death. So must we love. How, then, shall we keep this week of prayer and self-denial? True prayer is always heard, always answered, not always as we desire or expect, perhaps; but, if offered in accordance with scriptural instructions, we may be sure of that for which we pray, in one form or another. There is no presumption in praying, "Thy kingdom come," or in praying the Lord to "send forth more laborers." Since Christ gives us these words, we may boldly pray them, provided we are doing what we can to answer these prayers. Prayer without effort in the direction of the prayer savors strongly of pious mockery. Let there be no saying of prayers! After honest self-examination, let us ask God to teach us what he would have us do, and to make us ready for his will, whatever it may cost. Let not that Old Testament saint, who would not offer to God that which "cost him nothing," put us to shame who are living in the full blaze of gospel light. Recognizing that every good thing we enjoy we owe to this gospel, and in token of our earnest desire to extend its blessed benefits to the women of other lands, let us, from day to day, lay upon the altar a gift, consecrated by prayer and faith. What and how much it shall be, each must decide for herself, after taking counsel of her own heart, her conscience, and her God. Various customs prevail in different households at this season. Some set apart a certain amount for purchasing gifts for friends. Don't forget the Friend of friends. One-tenth of this amount is a small proportion to give to him to whom we owe our all. Our Mrs. Purdys may lay aside at least the value of one chicken in every ten sold; so of butter, eggs, milk, etc. There is ready market now for things of this kind. Don't fail to remember that the "Lord hath need," and give as you never gave before. If each Mrs. Pickett remembers each "benefit," and renders accordingly, she and her society will be amazed and rejoiced at the result. Try it! None are so straitened but that a gift of some value may find its way to the altar. In preparing your feast of good things remember not only the poor who are at your door, but the soul-hungry of other lands who have never tasted "the bread of life" or had a draught from the fountain of living waters. Let the price of some dainty which you deny yourself go into the mite-box for his sake. It will give keener relish for your Christmas dinner.

Thus far, only those of limited means have been addressed. God has intrusted large wealth to the stewardship of some of our women. Elegant homes, rich attire, sumptuous tables, prove that they have money, for without money, and much of it, they could not have these things to possess and enjoy. O for words to reach the hearts of these in behalf of our perishing sisters beyond the seas! Our women are not cruel; it is because they do not stop to "consider" that they do not give. The price of one handsome dress, of a piece of furniture merely ornamental, of a superfluous vehicle, or of an excursion not needed, how these would swell our receipts! The silks, the laces, the velvets, the jewels, without which you can do so well, would clothe these wretched ones in "robes of righteousness:" would furnish the "wedding garment" to those who, lacking it, will not be admitted to the marriage-supper of the Lamb. Dear sisters, you expect to be there. Will you not, by some act of self-denial proportionate to your means, lend your aid to swelling the company who shall gather at "that day" to do honor to the King's Son? You will, perhaps, give an entertainment during the holidays, the price of which, laid on this altar, might bring a feast to those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness," though perchance they understand not the exact nature of their longings. They only know they are miserable. You know the cause and the remedy. What will you do? We say not, "Don't give that entertainment," but we beg that in all things it be so ordered that the personal presence of Jesus himself would be no embarrassment; and, further, that, after a careful calculation, you lay on God's altar, in token of your love, a sum equal to the cost of it. If you can not do both, for this one time try the experiment of putting God and his suffering poor first. We believe it will prove the rarest, richest entertainment you ever gave. You may not know in this world the good your gifts have done, but God is keeping a strict account of what you do, and what you give; and, solemn thought, of what you do not, and of what you do not give. He will be faithful and just in his rewards. "He surrenders much who surrenders all, however little that may be, and he surrenders nothing who keeps back anything."

The call sounds in your ears. If there be responses according to our ability, giving as "God has prospered us," a sum will be realized that will enable the Board to furnish what is needed for "extension of work," and to hasten on their way the young women who are saying, "Send us." In addition to this, the reflex influence on the heart and life of each "cheerful giver" will be fresh evidence that it is "more blessed to give than to receive."

Let us pray! and as we pray, let us determine, with God's help, to answer our own prayers by coming up to the full measure of our duty as individuals. Lord help us!

"Review of the Modern Fathers."

A NEW BOOK.

I have always pitied the man who felt it his duty to write a book. Like offenses, books must needs come; but, alas! for the luckless authors. The death-day of the happiness of many authors is the day on which their books were issued. "Why don't the people, specially my many friends, buy, read, approve, acknowledge manifest merit?" Then come the critics with dissecting knife, and make sad havoc among the choicest chapters. Meanwhile, the capital invested is not productive of profit. Scenes, sad; drop curtain. But I do not mean to discourage anyone. Write on. In the bright galaxies of the literary sky there is more room for stars, suns, planets and satellites—even comets and meteors are welcome.

Rev. John M. Crow, A. M., of the Louisville Conference, has given us a new book. As a star, it is not a sun, for that title I ascribe only to the Bible; it is not a satellite, for the author is quite original and disdains to strut in borrowed feathers. It is a planet whose light is received directly from the sun. The book contains an elaborate consideration of the theories of modern Methodist writers, and of the historic and scriptural doctrines of Methodism. It is indeed a unique critique of books found in the libraries of all good Methodists. As common parlance has it: The author makes the feathers fly. If it were not intrinsically a serious matter, it would be amusing to see Drs. Harrison, Miller and Marvin, agreeing to disagree, engaged in fierce contest. One of them is building up; the other one lustily tearing down, and the third one scattering the debris. Capping the climax, the author of the "Review of Modern Fathers" comes now and demonstrates that the building site was not held in fee simple. It is a battle of the giants.

One thing, certainly, Bro. Crow has made plain—that is, not blindly to accept the views, doctrines and precepts of any man, be that man Bishop, doctor of divinity, or eminent divine. Nothing is easier for a theologian of speculative cast of mind than to build up a vague, charming, attractive theory in regard to original sin, imputed righteousness, nature of the sacraments, etc.—a theory which is, perhaps, nothing less than a conglomerate of heretical nonsense. Sad that some theologians should deem themselves capable of seeing the invisible, and complacently bask themselves in a light not derived from the Bible. Not that Bro. Crow loves the authors whose errors he lays bare any less, but that he loves the revealed truth more.

From the Work.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT, TERRY CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: At our last Annual Conference my name was read out for this circuit, most of which was once known as the old Georgetown circuit. Most of the year the writer and family lived on the north end of the work, but now living on the south end, in the clever little town of Gallman, in a comfortable house, which is expected to be bought for a parsonage—only waiting for the deed to be made. It is a good home for the preacher. We have also built, at Gallman, this year, a good house of worship, nearly completed—50x35. The writer preached in it last Sabbath to a fine congregation. We hope to build another on the work soon. There is no better Board of Stewards and a kinder people anywhere than on this work. Our sojourn at Terry and vicinity was made very pleasant indeed by kindnesses shown us. May the blessings of the Father abide upon them!

There are three Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies and one Juvenile. I am doing what I can to bring up all the collections, and hope to make a fair showing in this matter. Have sent $27 25 as the result of week of prayer, and self-denial, and some on "Children's Day," and forwarded some missionary funds. A goodly number of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE taken. Have had gracious revivals on the work, and some accessions, while the year has been one of toil, yet very pleasant—made so by the cleverness of our people.

The country through here is developing very rapidly, and our church must keep abreast with the rising tide. Terry, Crystal Springs and Gallman are large shipping points for vegetables, fruits, etc. No whisky saloons, thank the Lord!

Yours, etc.,

GEO. BANCROFT.

MARVIN CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: The closing of the Conference year with preachers is a time of reflection, meditation, penitence and vows; a time of examination as to whether we have kept the faith and vows already made; a time, probably, of regret, time wasted, opportunities lost, so little done; a time, with some, of great rejoicing. God has owned the labors of his servants in the salvation of sinners. I write from experience, and know whereof I affirm.

On Marvin circuit we have much to be grateful for—much to regret. Finances better. The membership in good working order. Several new subscribers to the ADVOCATE. One new church taking the place of an old one; and Sunday-school interest reviving.

By the way, we have organized a Sunday-school Conference on the circuit, to meet each fifth Sunday to discuss subjects of Sunday-school interest. Dr. W. M. Flowers, layman, was the moving spirit in this work; and it promises much for the Sunday-schools on the work.

We have had over fifty accessions this year, yet we are not all Israel who are of Israel; and the worst of it, they don't care to be. The labors of some have ended, and they have passed to their reward.

Critic's Corner.

Word-Studies.

Dedicate. This word is very common in church parlance. We speak of "dedicating" a house to the worship of God. In our book of discipline there is a section entitled, "Form of the Dedication of a Church." In the "sentence of dedication" this phrase occurs: "We solemnly dedicate," etc. The word "dedicate" does not in itself carry the idea of a religious act. It is used frequently when nothing religious is intended. An author "dedicates" his book to a friend. Here the word is used in a proper sense, and yet a sense entirely different from that in which it is used when we "dedicate" a house to the worship of God. A man may "dedicate" himself to a certain object without any religious ceremony whatever. The object to which a thing or person is "dedicated" seems to determine the character of the dedication. While our use of the word in our Discipline is quite correct, it does not seem to be the best word for the service to which it is applied. In religious rites and ceremonies it seems to us that words which have a specific meaning should be used. No ambiguous words should be tolerated where clearness of thought is so necessary. In religious formulæ no word of a double meaning should be used. In place of the word "dedicate," which may be used in several senses, we would use the word, Consecrate. This is a word of specific meaning, and always carries the idea of something religious. While "dedicate" means to set apart a thing to a certain use—which use can only be determined by the manner of dedication—"consecrate" invariably means to make a thing sacred by a religious act. A thing can not be "consecrated" without a religious ceremony; and that ceremony is, and must be, formal. When a thing is said to be "consecrated," there can be no doubt as to the purpose of it or the manner in which it was done. One of the definitions of "consecrate" is: "A species of formal dedication by virtue of a religious observance." So a "dedication" may turn out to be a "consecration;" but not necessarily so. The "sentence of dedication" in our book of discipline, when used at the proper time and place, and the Scripture lessons and prayers and hymns laid down in the "Form of the Dedication of a Church," constitute a religious rite by which we "set apart from all unhallowed or common uses" a house for the worship of God. That, then, is an act of "consecration," because it makes the house sacred. There is a meaning in the act which can not be mistaken. Since, then, "dedicate" may have a secular meaning as well as a religious meaning, and "consecrate" can only have a religious meaning, we think the heading of Sec. 8 in our ritual would be better if it read: Form of the Consecration of a Church.

A Systematic Plan.

MR. EDITOR: I believe that we all agree that we need a systematic plan of education in our church, beginning with primary schools, in connection with each congregation, and passing up through district high schools and Conference colleges to the church university. I suggest that to the effective accomplishment of this the General Conference authorize the Board and faculty of Vanderbilt University, with the aid of one competent representative from each Annual Conference, to adopt a curriculum, beginning with the alphabet and ending in the text-books of the various departments of the university. Authorize our Publishing House to publish, or keep on sale, this series of school books to supply the various schools that may be established. I think that a plan of this kind would, in one decade, fill our Conference colleges with well-trained students and our university with a thousand or more students preparing for the various professions. The university might add a normal department, and we could then educate our children at home, in our own schools, with our own books and teachers.

Centenary College, Jackson, La.

I feel a deep interest in Centenary College; partly because I am connectional in my feelings, and partly because I had the honor to occupy one of her chairs for a short while. I desire to speak, through the ADVOCATE, to the Methodists of the patronizing Conferences in behalf of this college.

1. Schools are essential to the proper development of Methodism. Methodism reaches the masses, and glories that through our system "the poor have the gospel preached unto them;" yet her mission, as a church, is not only to reach and save the masses, but also to elevate them. Born in a university, our church must plant schools and colleges wherever we would hold and develop the territory conquered by our pioneer itinerants. So necessary are schools to church work, that it may be stated, as a rule, that the church which controls no schools in this country can not succeed.

2. Grouping our Annual Conferences together according to location, there should be a Methodist college in each group.

The section of country that includes the patronizing Conferences of Centenary is too large a territory to leave without the influence and support of a well-equipped college. Such a college should exist in that section because (1) it is the duty of the church to furnish Methodist institutions for the education of her children, and because (2) such a college compounds the support thus given her and returns it increased manifold in support to the church. The church, to my thinking, will cripple herself in that country if she fails to place Centenary upon solid footing.

I write this almost under the shadow of our great Vanderbilt, my alma mater, whom I love and for whom I expect to labor; but I am not of the class who would ignore our colleges that did such noble work for us before Vanderbilt existed. I would not have our educational energies all concentrated upon one great institution.

Central College, Emory and Henry, Randolph-Macon, Wofford, Centenary, et id omne genus, are still to be valuable colaborers with the faithful itinerant in strengthening and enlarging Methodism in our Southland.

3. I was pleased to see a statement that Greenville, Miss., had raised one thousand dollars this year for Centenary. That is getting at the matter right. The annual collections ordered by the Conferences is well, but not the best. Centenary needs—and needs it now—to have an endowment. I could give several reasons why there should be raised an endowment fund at once. Let that institution be placed on an independent footing, with a good endowment, so that she may command the best talent to occupy her chairs; then let the patronizing Conferences join hands with her as their very important ally, and she will not disappoint them in results.

4. Centenary is the property of our church, and is the only college for boys (if I am correctly informed) in Mississippi or Louisiana that is under control of Methodism. She should not be regarded as a mendicant to whom an annual eleemosynary contribution is to be made. If the good people of that section will make a bank account to the credit of Centenary, endow her chairs and refurnish her large edifice, under the blessing of God, she will become an impregnable fortress, a high tower of strength for Methodism.

Exodus xx, 10.

"There is no doubt in my mind that, in regard to the command in the verse quoted at the head of this, there is more or less of sin among God's people, through heedlessness or ignorance, than obtains as to any other of the commands of the first table. But heedlessness or ignorance is no excuse for the setting at naught so plain a command as the one referred to. Nor will any euphemisms of man avail as against the plain 'thou shalt not,' or 'thus saith the Lord.'

"The command reads plainly: 'In it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy MAN-SERVANT, nor thy maid-servant, NOR THY CATTLE, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates.'

"I have double underscored in the above quotation, as I wish to call special attention to a matter wherein, I think, many Christians not only sin themselves, but are the occasion of sin in many others as regards this plain command. I am well aware that certain works—those of necessity and mercy—are not only permissible, but are enjoined by our Lord, upon the Sabbath; but I do not admit that any necessity can be shown in the matter whereof I shall speak. If such can be shown, I believe I am open to conviction, and ask the showing. The command reads, 'Thou shalt not do ANY work, thy MAN-SERVANT, nor thy CATTLE;' and yet many make the attending the worship of God in his house the occasion of violating God's command. Yet to Saul's plea of keeping the cattle (which God had commanded to be destroyed), in order to offer them as sacrifice to God, Samuel replied, 'To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken, than the fat of rams.' How can riding in a street car on the Sabbath, to attend a church miles away, be excused by any Christian, when there is not one of them that has not a house of God, and most every one of them a house of their own sort, within easy walking distance of their homes?"

What comment does it justify to see those who profess to love God, and to have a regard for his holy day, crowding into a street car (whose underpaid and overworked driver is denied all his right in and to the God-given day) to go to worship God, who commands their man-servant and their cattle, "Thou shalt not do any work!" What respect do such show to God's command when they thus countenance such open violation of it? Will anyone attempt to deny that the driver of a street car is as much entitled to the rest and privileges of the Lord's Day as any other man? Can any necessity be pleaded for the denial of it to him, or any mercy be shown in its denial? If not, how can a Christian justify his doing that which countenances the working of the car driver and mules on the Sabbath.

The leading editorial of the Southwestern Presbyterian, of last week (from which I cut the extract that begins this article), entitled "Elements of Anarchy," closes thus:

"Everywhere the Sabbath stands for law and order. Hence a despised and desecrated Sabbath will always be the corner-stone of anarchy."

I endorse that sentiment. I commend the whole article to the perusal of those who love the Sabbath. Here is another little extract:

"To meet anarchism successfully, we must meet it in its beginning. The American people are already confronted with an issue which lies at the very beginning. It is the question of protecting our people in their right to the Sabbath. Our motto must be, 'The Sabbath for the citizen.'"

And I ask Christians the following: Has the car driver any right in the Sabbath, and will you protect him in that right?

Romanism and the Bible.

In view of the fact that the Church of Rome is denominated "Christian," and numbers within its pale some of the most elevated, self-sacrificing men and women of the world, it may seem strange to affirm that Protestantism, the exact opposite of Romanism in all, or nearly all, of the doctrines and practices of Christianity, must depend solely upon the Bible for its triumph over Rome.

The scarcity of Bibles among Romanists is very poorly realized by Protestants. Every Romanist has what he calls a Bible—a book purporting to be the Book and yet when you read it, it is not the Bible. A version by Pope Sextus is the cash memo of the average Romanist: at least, this Sextinian version of the Bible, interspersed with canons and prayers and popish dogma, is the book this writer has generally, if not everywhere, found amongst them, and upon this they rely "for reproof, for correction and for instruction in righteousness." Recognizing the production of the ingenuity and vanity of the Church of Rome as the Bible, no conscientious man can be anything else than a Romanist. The book was prepared for that purpose: To the reader of this book priestly arrogance is a Bible truth: so are penmnce, priestly pardon, infallibility, indulgences, confession to the priest, and all the peculiar tenets of Romanism.

Men may write and preach, and do all that, but not until the hold upon this pretended book is broken will it be of any use. To the Romanist this is gospel. All else is nonsense and heresy: all else is profanity and blasphemy. This thought moved Tyndall; it urged Luther on; and nowhere has the power of Rome been broken till this false book has been displaced by the "pure Word of God." Missionaries in "Catholic countries" is not what we need. Bibles, colporteurs is the need of the hour. The sentiment of Rome in regard to the power of the "pure Word of God" is clearly read in the light of the bonfires kindled by Tyndall's translation in England. Latimer and Ridley and Cranmer were not so much dreaded by the arrogant priests as that little book of Tyndall. No! These men were only men; this book was the Word of God. The word of man might overcome the word of man; but the "Word of God is quick and powerful"—no human agency can conquer it. It must be kept out of sight: it would never do to trust Romanism to its influence, nor measure Romanism by its rules. It was so in the sixteenth century: it is so in the nineteenth.

Romanism is darkness, and disappears before the light. In all countries where she is dominant ignorance, illiteracy, prevails. She has her schools, but they are Romish schools: her science and her literature—what she has of each—is Romanized. She recognizes nothing, touches nothing that is not impregnated with her peculiar tenets. She is afraid: she dare not risk her children out of her lap. But of all agencies Rome dreads none as she dreads "the pure Word of God."

These are indices. The American Bible Society is the grandest agency now in existence through which to break the power of Rome. And just in this connection I want to say that Bro. McLaurin, the superintendent of the district of Mississippi and Louisiana, has before him the grandest possibilities of almost any man in America. Outside of the great cities of the country, and in proportion to the population of his district, no superintendent of the society has a larger population of Romanists among whom to work. Taking the coast and river side of Mississippi and Southern and Eastern Louisiana, I suppose that nearly or, perhaps, fully one third of the population of his district is under Romish influence. A great work this—too great for one man or a few men to perform! The superintendent needs the help of every Protestant in his district—your moral influence and your money. Put the "pure Word of God" into the hands of these children of Rome, and you will soon see the grand drama of "dry bones" enacted. The process of moral synthesis will begin, and a great "body" will stand up for God, and Romanism will begin to hide its threatening mien: for the True One will see to it that his Word will "not return unto" him "void," but will "accomplish that whereto" he "has sent it."

Let the thoughtful ponder these things, and give Bro. McLaurin and his work a lift. "If you would break the power of Romanism, pray for the Bible, pay for the Bible, send the Bible to Rome as we find it in our midst.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and invites diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of sedentary habits are subject to Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Blindness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can prevent these evils, and nothing surrounds so well to achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there is a sensation of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vigor, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect health's case that bespeaks the full enjoyment of life.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. Persons never broken down when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic, and General Debility ensue. To restore to normal healthy action the functions of the Liver and impart that tonicity which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

If some members of the church would be as zealous and work as earnestly to get sinners converted to God as they do to get their candidates into office, would we not have a revival all the time? Zeal for politics overshadows zeal for God even with most Christian people! The patience of God is most wonderful.

"No man can mend a wrong subtraction by doing his addition right." And yet a number of people are endeavoring to quiet conscience in that very way. "Robbing Peter to pay Paul," in order to square accounts with honesty, is but a modern version of the mythological story of Sisyphus rolling the stone up the mountain. And such efforts generally originate from the same place, for it was Pluto who set Sisyphus at that job!

The best answer we have yet seen to the proposition of the Episcopal House of Bishops for all denominations to unite on the basis of the reordination of ministers is in the November number of the New Princeton Review, when the editor sums up the whole matter in these words: "It is a mistake to seek the unity of the body in the bond of prelacy instead of the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

These are the statistics of the West Texas Conference: Local preachers, 109; members, 10,955; infants baptized, 560; adults baptized, 655; Sunday-schools, 115; teachers, 805; scholars, 5,640; collected for Conference claimants, $1,659 65; foreign missions, $1,714 75—domestic, $1,926 60; church extension, $304 50; number of churches, 90½; value of same, $129,240; number of parsonages, 37; value of same, $24,225; collected for education, $274 20; admitted on trial, 5; into full connection, 3; readmitted, 1; located, 4; supernumerary, 5; superannuated, 8.

Does your religion bear any relation to this, as described by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, of the English Wesleyans:

In a recent sermon, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, Rev. Mark Guy Pearse said: "There was a deal of religion in this world, but it was not Christ's religion unless it cared for men's bodies as well as for their souls. He believed the time would come when the church would rather look after the poor as its first duty than anything else, and men would be willing to forgo costly churches in order to care for the poor and afflicted. It might be their religion which cared for men's souls, but Jesus Christ's religion cared both for their bodies and souls."

The total immigration to the United States from all countries, except Canada and Mexico, during the nine months of the present calendar year was 411,000, against 291,596 in the same period of 1886. Of this number, about three-fourths, or 313,106, arrived at the port of New York, against 233,500 in 1886. The United Kingdom is responsible for a large portion of this year's immigration, as 144,148 immigrants came from that country, against 99,040 in 1886. Germany ranks second, with 88,709 immigrants, against 63,446 in 1886. Norway and Sweden, Italy, the Austrian Empire and Russia rank next in the order named. The immigration from Canada and Mexico evidently is not of large proportions, as the above figures are said to include 98 per cent. of the total immigration into this country.

The Men for Office.

The people of Louisiana are considerably stirred on the question of choosing office-holders. As we have quite a large constituency, we wish to say a few words on this very important subject.) The editor and his constituents believe in the teachings of a very old book called, The Bible. In this book we find the germ of everything good; whether the good be for the individual or the community; whether it be for the Church or the State; whether it be religious or social or political. Among all these we find the unmistakable germ of good government. The history of the nations is in proof of the fact that all the good governments which have existed have been developed from the Bible germ. The quality of government depends entirely upon the character of the officers who administer it in the execution of its laws. A government is good or bad, weak or strong, just in the ratio of the goodness or badness, the weakness or strength of its official administrators. Then the efficiency or inefficiency of a government to reach its own ends depends entirely upon the sort of men that are at its head. The subject of choosing rulers is, then, one of the most important that the people of the State can consider. It is so vital to the welfare of the country that it ought to be considered calmly and outside of the heat of partisan politics.

In the Bible we have the oldest account, that we know anything of, of the organization of civil government; and when we remember that the State was erected under the special supervision and superintendence of the Divine Being, we may draw the lawful inference that, in its essential features, that first government was a model for all others. In the setting up of that government we see that a special emphasis was laid upon the fact that a certain class of men must be chosen to administer it. The directions upon this point are so distinct and clear-cut and emphatic that we quote the passage for our readers: "Moreover, thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over the people, to be rulers of thousands and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties and rulers of tens. And let them judge the people at all seasons." (Exodus xviii, 21, 22.) That is what we call the germ of good government. It is a most remarkable fact that the qualifications pointed out as needful in the officers of a government, set up nearly 3,500 years ago, should be the very qualifications that thinking people recognize as necessary for the officers of government to-day!

The passage above quoted teaches a democracy, pure and simple—"Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men." The rulers are to be chosen from among the whole people. No classes, as such, have proprietary rights to the offices of government. No classes, as such, can be excluded from participation in rulership, provided they furnish men with the required qualifications. The general qualification is that rulers shall be "able men." We suppose that means men possessing mental power sufficient to enable them to learn readily the duties of any office to which they may be chosen—men of strong intellectual endowments, reinforced by cultivation and exercise. But this general qualification is not enough. There are many "able men" who would make very poor rulers. Hence there are three special qualifications required to make good officers. In addition to being "able men," they must be "such as fear God." God is the author of civil government. "The powers that be are ordained of God." He is the source of all authority; because he is the Supreme Ruler. All earthly rulership is, and must be, subordinate to him. Every ruler must recognize and acknowledge his entire dependence upon the Sovereign of the universe, and rule in his fear. On this point the teaching of our old Bible is as clear as a sunbeam. David's last words are these: "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." The blessedness of having such a ruler is portrayed in the highly poetic language of the East thus: "He shall be as the light of the morning when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain."

The next qualification is, They must be "men of truth." One of the objects of government is the execution of righteousness between man and man, the dispensation of justice to all the citizens. If the ruler is not one who knows the truth and loves it for its own sake, if he is not one who regards truth as of more importance than his own position, and is not willing to sacrifice himself rather than sacrifice truth, then he will not be able to withstand the pressure that evil men will bring to bear against him, and his administration will veer in the direction of unrighteousness. "To deal truly" is one of the factors which, according to the Prophet Ezekiel, enters into the character of a just ruler. The exhortation of Zechariah bears upon this point, when he cries out to the rulers of Israel: "Execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates!"

The next qualification is, "Hating covetousness." If we believe the newspapers, we are already convinced that much of our legislation and many official acts are tainted by bribery. The love of money is the bane of our civilization to-day. The popular injunction is: "Get money, and with all thy getting, get more money." The contagion has reached the legislative halls and municipal offices and executive chambers, and the dire influence is felt through all the ramifications of society. Public institutions suffer because the office-holders are "greedy of gain." Hordes upon hordes of evils visit every government whose officers are not men "hating covetousness." In our old Bible there are more warnings to rulers on this subject than on any other. Even receiving gifts is prohibited the ruler, because it "perverts judgment and blinds the eyes of the wise." Samuel's sons are denounced because they "turned aside after lucre and took bribes and perverted judgment." Venerable old Samuel stood before his people, whom he had ruled so long, and challenged anyone to say "of whose hands he had received any bribe to blind his eyes." David spoke of "sinners, bloody men, whose right hands are full of bribes." Isaiah rebuked the rulers of his time as being "rebellious princes and companions of thieves; everyone loving gifts and following after rewards." He also spoke of those who "justify the wicked for reward." Solomon has a remarkable sentence in this: "The king by judgment establisheth the land, but he that receiveth gifts overthroweth it." The Prophet Amos characterizes this sin as among the "mighty sins:" "For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins; they afflict the just, they take a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right." And many other passages teach the same terrible lesson, that a people who are afflicted with covetous rulers are in a sad case. Bribe-givers and bribe-takers will undermine and destroy the strongest government on earth!

These are the qualifications the Bible lays down for governmental officers—from the lowest to the highest, from the magistrate of the ward to the President of the republic: "Thou shalt place such men to be rulers of thousands and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties and rulers of tens." All the offices are to be filled with men of that kind—"able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness." Let every voter in Louisiana be guided by the desire to put such men in office, and then vote to put them in, and we will have good government.

North Mississippi Conference.

The eighteenth session of this body convened, November 24, in Winona, Miss. Bishop Keener presided. Winona is a flourishing town, on the Illinois Central railroad, of about 1,800 inhabitants. The business interests are chiefly the cotton trade and its adjuncts. About 15,000 bales are shipped annually. There are five churches in the place, and the people are generally prosperous and well-to-do; and their hospitality was tested by the influx of a great crowd during the session and proved itself equal, and more than equal, to all demands. The business of the Conference, under the practiced skill of Bishop Keener, advanced at a rapid pace from the opening to the close of the session, and yet due deliberation was given to every interest involved. The reports from all parts of the Conference indicated substantial growth and advancement on all the lines of church work. The finances of the church have wonderfully improved, the collections for all purposes being much larger than ever before.

Three were admitted on trial: Joseph T. Howell, Joseph W. Treadwell and William W. Moss. Four were elected and ordained elders: N. G. Augustus, C. H. Owen, K. M. Harrison and J. W. Killough. Nine were admitted into full connection: H. T. Gaines, A. B. Dearing, E. H. Rook, W. D. Bass, W. M. Young, G. H. Jacobs, J. W. Malone, J. R. D. King and F. A. Whitson. Four traveling preachers were elected deacons: A. B. Dearing, W. D. Bass, J. R. D. King, F. A. Whitson. Two were received from other churches: B. R. East, from the Congregational Methodist Church; and D. M. Miller, from the Methodist Free Church.

The missionary meeting, Saturday night, was a success in every way. Bishop Keener and T. J. Newell, of Grenada Female Institute, made the speeches, and the collection was over $750. The receipts from circuits and stations during the year amounted to $8,063 for foreign missions; for domestic missions, $1,958; for Bishops, $1,143; and for Conference claimants, $2,363.

There are in the Conference: Local preachers, 156; church members, 36,243; adults baptized, 2,344; infants baptized, 775; number Sunday-schools, 383; officers and teachers, 2,209; number scholars, 17,044; church buildings, 468½; value of churches, $408,963; number parsonages, 71; value parsonages, $76,083.

The New Orleans Advocate is growing in favor with the preachers and members of the North Mississippi Conference, and we are hopeful that when we meet again, next year, at Starkville, many hundred names will have been added to our subscription list.

We append the appointments:

Notes.

The London Methodist Times, in a strong article in favor of a general adoption of the Revised Version of the Scriptures, says, that "if it led to a general massacre of old sermons, it would be a great blessing to the congregations; but an immeasurably greater blessing to the preachers themselves. In our own church the temptation to preach too many old sermons is one of the most terrible evils inflicted by the three years' system. A Revised Bible accompanied by revised sermons would send a fresh breath of life through the whole land."

The London Methodist Times, criticising Dr. Parker's eulogy of Henry Ward Beecher, says:

It is worth noting also that during the last twenty years a singular change has passed over the public taste in relation to eloquence. The ornate itself has almost disappeared. Discourses which smell of the lamp, and evidence labored preparation are not appreciated at their former worth. The elaborate phrase no longer calls for wonder or applause. The public has craved something simpler, less labored, more direct, practical, and pungent than the old style. The most popular speakers are the men who hit hardest, who know how to say telling and racy things in the most effective manner. Young divines will do well to avoid most of the special peculiarities of the eulogy on Beecher.

The question is often asked: "Is there any harm in dancing?" Sometimes, too often, it is replied: "There is no harm in the mere act of dancing; the harm is in the associations." We prefer the answer of an old Baptist minister, and his answer is evidence against the practice derived from the observation of a lifetime. He said: "Just how much harm there may be in dancing, I can not say; but of this much I am sure: I have been a Baptist minister for over forty years, and I have never seen a dancing Baptist that was of any account as a church member." To our mind, that settles the question of harmfulness. A church member that is of no account as a church member is the most harmful thing that can afflict a church, and anything that harms the church will, in the end, receive "the just judgment of God."

Cardinal Manning has said: "Better were it for sun and moon to drop from heaven, for the earth to fail, and for all the many millions who are upon it to die of starvation in extremest agony, so far as temporal affliction goes, than that one soul should tell one willful untruth, though it harmed no one, or steal one poor farthing without excuse." From the amount of lying and stealing that is going on around us, we imagine that not many people believe like the Cardinal in this matter. The grade of lying and stealing runs all the way, from the man or woman who takes a child over three years into the street car without paying, and thus tells a lie that five cents may be stolen, to the one who lies into some position that he may steal thousands. Verily the Savior's words are true of this generation—"Ye are of your father, the devil, and the works of your father ye do."

Personals.

A brother writes as follows:

I have a little girl on my work—Lizzie Starling—whose missionary hen brought her $1 75. This was duly handed me for missions, and proved to be the largest contribution of any one person from that church this year.

What has become of the old Methodist custom of two or three or half-dozen or more Christians covenanting together to pray at a certain hour of a certain day of the week for a revived ministry and a revived church? Would it not be well to "revive" that old fashion?

Yale and Amherst Colleges, says the Independent, have put the Bible on the list of elective studies. How about our church schools?

"The Church of the Retired Christians," spoken of by a religious journal, might prove a great blessing if we could get all the religious "do-nothings," to join it.

Cornelius Vanderbilt has the reputation of being the most liberal of the New York millionaires.

Rev. J. A. Bowen passed through our city last week on his way to Conference. He has been on the gulf coast several weeks, holding revival meetings. The meetings at Biloxi, Moss Point and Handsboro were very successful. The people are stirred as they have not been for a long time, all along that coast. Many Romanists have given in their adhesion to the Methodist faith, and the outlook is favorable for a continuous development. Bro. Bowen's labors were greatly appreciated by the people and blest of God.

The League of Freedom and Justice.

This league has undoubtedly waked up an opposition it did not expect. The law-abiding people of this city and State are becoming fully aroused to make their best effort for the maintenance of the present Sunday Law. It has already proved a blessing to every class; and the people will hardly be willing to exchange its benefits for the "protection of property and liberty to the citizen" which the League of Freedom and Justice promises. What this league is, and what it proposes, is thus put forth by an exchange:

Liquor dealers and Bible-haters and other law-breaking classes have formed a "Personal Liberty League" and joined hands to destroy the Christian Sabbath. "Personal liberty," however, is a misnomer. It means license to buy and sell beer and whisky on Sunday. It means the destruction of a legal holiday. It means that Sunday is a day on which tired laborers get drunk, waste their earnings and dissipate their physical energies to enrich the saloonist and the brewer. Such a Sabbath will ruin this country. Our laboring classes have enough to contend with in the liquor traffic itself. They are worsted every day in that encounter. Give them an European Sabbath—a Sunday of lawlessness and carousal, and the two foes of the laboring man, free liquor and no Sunday, will become the upper and nether millstones, between which they will be ground to powder. Capital is not the laboring man's greatest foe. It is liquor.

Dr. Kelley Retracts.

At the meeting of the Board of Missions at Nashville, November 25, Dr. Kelley presented the following paper, which was accepted, and which is explicit as to his present position:

To the Members of the Board of Missions: Having been informed by brethren, whom I trust, that my supposed attitude toward theaters is in the way of my usefulness as Missionary Treasurer of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that my published card is not sufficiently explicit on this subject, I now define my position further. I am opposed to any attendance of theaters by members of our church, and uphold our ministers in the correction of this evil by public and private admonition and by a patient and kind, but firm administration of discipline. I regret and withdraw my articles in the American, in so far as they may be construed to defend the interruption of public worship on October 9, at McKendree Church. I consider myself to have said heretofore all contained in this paper, but as it is thought that this statement is clearer and more easily understood than the statement of the card, I gladly write and sign this paper.

Felicity Street Church.

BUILT, 1850. BURNED, 1887.
REBUILT, 1888.

Anyone who knows and loves her; anyone who has served at her altars, or found Christ precious within her sanctuaries; anyone who has ever attended or worked in her Sunday-school as scholar, teacher or officer; any stranger without her gates; any friend, whoever and wherever dispersed, having a mind to assist in the rebuilding of Felicity Street Church, has now an opportunity. All are invited to help. "Who gives quickly gives twice."

The church approaches rapidly to completion, and will soon call her children and well-wishers once more to offer, under the shadow of her walls, the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise. Contributions, however small, in aid will be promptly acknowledged by the treasurer and gratefully appreciated by the people. Send them to the preacher in charge, Rev. S. H. Werlein, care of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans.

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

GARDEN SECRETS. By Philip Bourke Marston. With biographical sketch by Louise Chandler Moulton. Publishers, Roberts Brothers, Boston. For sale here by Wharton & Bro. Price, $1.

THE MAKING OF THE GREAT WEST—1512-1883. By Samuel Drake Adams. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1 75. For sale here by Wharton & Bro.

The author has already given us a similar book, in "The Making of New England." This book is a valuable contribution to the historical literature of our country. The style is easy, the facts arranged orderly; and in a small volume we get the beginnings of the great empire of the West. We have seen nothing of the kind that pleases us so much as this book.

From the American Sunday-school Union, 1122 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, we have received the following:

PEARL'S LIGHT. By "Ruby." Price, sixty cents.

The story is pure, sweet, wholesome and full of sunny Christianity. The girls will like it, and so will the boys.

THE GOSPEL STORY; OR, THE LIFE OF CHRIST FOR THE LITTLE ONES. Price, sixty cents.

In this gospel story the words of the narrative of the four evangelists harmonized have been adopted. As it is intended for children, hard words have been avoided, and in thirty-three chapters (with seventeen full-page illustrations) we have a simple, full and orderly account, which places before "the little lambs of the flock a loving and life-like view of their great Shepherd," from his annunciation to his ascension. The illustrations are attractive and instructive.

BARBARA'S BROTHERS. By Evelyn Everett Green. Price, $1 50.

The story is interesting in plot and characters. It shows the power of true religion in shaping beautiful characters, and ennobles and dignifies Christian service done in loyalty to the Master. Sunday-school librarians will find this book in demand.

OUT OF THE SHADOW. By Mary Hubbard Howell. Price, $1 50.

The reader becomes fascinated with the mystery of the strange child introduced in the first chapter, and follows him through the labyrinth, looking for clues which again and again disappoint. The book is the story of a noble life which reaches its consummation through manifold perplexities. The reader's faith in God, in Christ, in the Bible, in humanity and in goodness will be increased by studying how John Millington came "out of the shadow."

PERIODICALS.

—The Journal of Education is published in this city, and edited by William O. Rogers, the accomplished secretary of Tulane University. The November number has a fine table of contents, and must prove interesting to all teachers.

—The "Woman" Magazine. This is the first number of a new monthly devoted to "woman." This first number gives promise of much good work to be looked for in the future. Published by The Woman Publishing Company, 122 Nassau street, New York. Price, twenty-five cents a number; $2 75 a year.

—The Musical Herald, for November, has its usual quantity of musical viands for the delectation of the appetites of the music lovers. Musical Herald Company, Franklin Square, Boston. Price, ten cents a number.

Literary Notes.

Gen. and Mrs. Fremont are gathering material for a Life of the general.

Miss Holly's (Josiah Allen's wife) volume of poems is to be published by Funk and Wagnalls.

A new edition of "Weights and Wings," by Charles F. Deems, D. D., is in the press of the publisher, Wilbur B. Ketcham, New York.

The second edition of "What shall we do with the Sunday-School as an Institution," is now ready. Price in cloth, 30 cents. Dr. George Lansing Taylor is the author. (Wilbur B. Ketcham, New York.)

"Christian Thought" (New York City), for December, will contain a very readable article by Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Christian Union, on "The Religion of Humanity." The Rev. Dr. Deems is the editor of this valuable bi-monthly.

Wilbur B. Ketcham (New York City) has nearly ready a new edition of "Furnishing for Workers," by L. W. Munhall, a manual of Scripture texts, arranged by subjects and for ready reference. It is bound in flexible Morocco, and will be just the book for pocket use for every clergyman and Christian worker.

Frank E. Moush & Co., publishers of the dainty ragged-edged booklets—the Song Series—report an immense sale. They seem to take all hearts; "Childhood Songs," for the children, "Love Songs" for the youths and maidens, "Mother Songs," and "Songs for the Night," for anybody, but particularly adapted for those along in years. They are very pretty, and only 25 cents each. If not on sale in your town, send direct to the publisher at Brattleboro, Vt., and they will be sent postpaid. They would like to quote special price for a dozen assorted, to introduce them.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.—The Methodist congregations in this city held a union thanksgiving service in Carondelet Street Church, November 24. All the pastors who were in town were present, and a respectable number from each church made up quite a large congregation. The sermon was preached by Bro. Werlein, pastor of Felicity Church, and was in every respect worthy of the man and of the occasion. It had been well prepared, and was delivered in the best style of the popular young preacher: and the congregation was edified, and all went home resolved to work more earnestly for the redemption of our land from the curse of sin.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant is sure business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

Do not fail to read the notice, "How to Make Money," to be found in this issue of the ADVOCATE. A goodly number of farmers in our southern country have taken stock in the new departure of truck farming, and find that fruit culture is a profitable branch. The notice of Col. Stuart, respecting the celebrated variety of pear trees which he is at present handling, should have the immediate attention of every farmer who reads it, as now is the time and reason for this work, and prices are such as to enable every farmer to set out a score of first-class trees.

School-director—Your pretensions of ability to take charge of the school are not satisfactory. Applicant—I still have my leading feature in reserve. "What is that?" "I am cross-eyed as you may have noticed. I can keep a whole school in order at once."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Faussel and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

Andrew A. Lipscomb, D. D., LL.D., Emeritus Professor, Vanderbilt University.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the ADVOCATE; but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 14, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Boddie, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and Art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, one dollar. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of ten dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and remodeling the building, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 264 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1824. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased, until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the most reliable remedy. Worm confections made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge is now come to stay in favor lastly. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden serpents and miseries. When they are restless and feverish, sometimes refuse food, and seldom rest well, grinding the teeth, picking the nose, starting suddenly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth. Then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms. Many a helpless child has been consigned to the grave when a dose of this Vermifuge would have restored health and vigor. Worms have really been the cause. It has been proved to a certainty that worms exist in the bodies of persons who, as infants, were treated for some purely imaginary disease, when the real cause was worms. Parents, especially mothers, who are more constantly with their children, will be the best observers of the first appearance of worms, and they can, if they will, by a timely use of this Vermifuge, save their children from much suffering, and perhaps death. It never fails. It has been used in every part of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to babes as safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged, and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used in every purchase. Be sure the name Fahnestock is on the wrapper. And before you administer to your child, examine every bottle to be sure it is genuine. Be sure and observe carefully to see that the initials are B. A. Fahnestock, and be sure and observe the BOYS' RIGHTS.

BY CARRIE MAY.

I wonder now it anyone
In this broad land has heard
In favor of down-trodden boys
One solitary word?
We hear enough of "woman's rights,"
And "rights of workingmen,"
Of "equal rights," and "nation's rights,"
But prav just tell us when
Boys' rights were ever spoken of?
Why, we've become so used
To being snubbed by every one,
And slighted and abused,
That when one is polite to us,
We open wide our eyes,
And stretch them in astonishment
To nearly twice their size!
Boys seldom dare to ask their friends
To venture in the house;
It don't come natural at all
To creep round like a mouse.
And if we should forget ourselves
And make a little noise,
Then ma or auntie sure would say,
"Oh, my! those dreadful boys!"
The girls bang on the piano
In peace, but if the boys
Attempt a tune with fife and drum,
It's "stop that horrid noise!"
"That horrid noise!"—just think of it,
When sister never fails
To make a noise three times as bad
With everlasting "scales."
Insulted thus, we lose no time
In beating a retreat;
So off we go to roam and rear
And scamper in the street.
No wonder that so many boys
Such wicked men become!
'Twere better far to let them have
Their plays and games at home,
Perhaps that text the teacher quotes
Sometimes—"Train up the child"—
Means only, train the little girls,
And let the boys run wild.
But patience, and the time shall come
When we will all be men,
And when it does, I rather think
Wrongs will be righted then.

QUARTERLY REPORT.

TO THE CHILDREN.

Our Mite-box Brigade of Home Builders has not quite so favorable a report this quarter; nevertheless it is good, and I congratulate you upon it. I am glad to tell you that with your mites you have raised enough in six months to aid very largely in building a home for one of our preachers among the Indians. When you drop a copper-cent in your box it looks very small: but a great many children are doing the same thing. One by one you drop them in, and at the end of three months, when it is all gathered in, there is a good sum of money with which a great deal can be done. So if you have but a few cents in your box do not think it not worth bringing in, for if each one had thought that, the children would have done nothing to build the nice house that is going to make one good man comfortable while he is trying to save souls. If each drop of rain staid away because it was so little, we would have no rain. Maybe the little drops did get discouraged and each stay away thinking the others could go, and that made the terrible drought that has caused so much suffering in the whole country. Your one-cent pieces are like little drops, and I hope none will be kept away because they are so small, but keep dropping, dropping into your boxes everywhere, until they rain a flood of blessings upon poor dying souls. When you build homes for our preachers you help them to preach the gospel to sinners and save souls. Remember this every time you put a mite in your box, and say, "That goes to help somebody get to heaven."

The whole amount contributed by the children this quarter is $103 34; last quarter it was $202 80—making in six months, $309 14. That is thirty thousand, nine hundred and fourteen one-cent pieces. God bless each child that put in one to make up that number.

THE ROLL OF HONOR.

North Alabama Conference—Sam Du Bois, of Blount Springs, $12; whole amount $24 60.

Louisville Conference—Helen Wood; of Hopkinsville, $5 92; whole amount, $16 22.

Holston Conference—George Hodge, Broad Street, Knoxville; $5 01; whole amount, $38 44.

Indian Mission Conference—Bertie Crabtree, of Muscogee, $1 00; whole amount $4 45.

North Texas Conference—Benja Hughes, of Cochran Chapel, $3 70; whole amount, $5 66.

Memphis Conference—Maggie and Lulie Green, of Memphis, each $2 00; whole amount, $4 00.

Kentucky Conference—George W. Threlkeld, of Visalia, $1 50; whole amount, $4 13.

Missouri Conference—Mabel Planers, of Centenary, St. Joseph, $0 82; whole amount, $2 81.

You will see a little boy in North Alabama leads the Brigade this quarter, and that there are three boys on the roll. I congratulate you on this, boys; though as a general rule, the girls are ahead.

Prue's Missionary Money.

"Oh, mamma, my potatoes are looking splendid, and papa thinks there will be at least six bushels, and if they are fifty cents a bushel, there will be three dollars. Only think, won't that be a good deal of money?" So saying, Phil Sanborn drew up to the dinner-table, delighted.

"Yes, my son, that will be a good deal indeed," said Mrs. Sanborn, as she smiled upon her ten-year-old boy.

The spring previous some of the ladies of the Woman's Board of Missions had been in that town to tell the grand work they were doing, and even the boys and girls were interested. Phil had been told that he could plant some potatoes, caring for them himself, and have their price for missions when these ladies came again. Prue, Phil's nine-year-old sister, heard, and her large blue eyes grew sad, for she had nothing to give.

"Eat your dinner, Prue," said mamma. "I thought my little girl was fond of apple-dumplings?"

"So I am, but I was thinking."

"Of what, pussy?" asked papa. "Any new disease attacked your dolly?"

"No, papa, but such wonderful things are to be done."

"What wonderful things? Is Barnum coming up here with his museum?"

"Why, no, papa, but about missions, and you, and mamma, and auntie, and even Phil, have something to give, and I haven't anything." And Prue ended with a sob.

"Who ever expected girls could earn anything, I'd like to know! See here, Prue, I'll give you ten cents of my potato money," said Phil.

"Thank you, I do not want it," returned Prue.

"I'll give you twenty-five cents," said papa.

"That would not be earning it myself like the rest of you do! No, I shall give nothing which is not my very own," said the little miss.

After the dishes were washed mamma sat down to her sewing, and auntie to her knitting, while Prue, with the kitten in her lap, was in a brown study.

"Oh, mamma, I've got an idea!" and Prue gave such a jump that the kitten went out of the window. "Auntie said I was very clever about making doll's clothes, and I might make a few suits, real nice ones, and put them in Mr. Roberts' store. He will let me, if it is for missions, and then I'll have some money all my own to give."

"So you shall, dearie," said auntie. "Get your silks and merino and your dolly, and we will commence. I will cut and fit and you shall sew every stitch."

In November the missionary meetings were held again. Phil gave three dollars and seventy-five cents, the dollars from potatoes, and the cents from chestnuts. Then happy little Prue brought her offering—four bright, new silver dollars—with her eyes shining like stars.

That night as they talked the meeting over by the fire at home, Phil said, "I have changed my mind about girls since Prue earned so much. I don't know that many boys could have done better."

And Prue whispered to mamma, "Wasn't it work for Jesus, too, mamma."

"Yes, darling, if you did it for the love of helping him," replied mamma, with a loving kiss for her little girl.

"It seemed, to-day, as though Jesus stood there and smiled at me, saying, 'Prue, I know that you love me, for you gave up those pretty clothes for me.'"—Exchange.

Household.

HOW TO BOIL WATER.—What is the reason that a cup of tea, made from the best brands, is so often insipid, and coffee—Mocha and Java mixed—after passing through the ordeal of preparation, presents itself as a nauseating compound? This, too, in spite of the emphatic assertion that the water was boiling, "actually boiling till it ran over." Charles Delmonico (an undisputed authority) thus explains the mystery: "The secret is in putting good, fresh water into a neat kettle, already quite warm, and setting the water to boiling quickly, and then taking right off to use in tea, coffee, or other drinks, before it is spoiled. To let it steam, simmer and evaporate, until the good water is all in the atmosphere, and the lime and iron dregs left in the kettle—bah! that is what makes a good many people sick, and is worse than no water at all."

THE FAMILY INCOME.—Every mistress of a household, especially every mother, ought to find out what the family income is and where it comes from, and thereby prevent all needless extravagance. Half the miserable or disgraceful bankruptcies never would happen if the wives had the sense and courage to stand firm and insist on knowing enough about the family income to spend it proportionately: to restrain, as every wife should, a too-lavish husband; or failing that, to stop herself out of all luxuries which she can not righteously afford. Above all, to bring up her children in a tender carefulness that refuses to mulct "the governor" out of one unnecessary half-penny, or to waste the money he works so hard for in their own thoughtless amusement.—Mrs. Craik.

WARMTH AND HAPPINESS.—Rose Terry Cooke gives vigorous advice as follows: "If you want to be happy, keep warm. Women are eaten up with neuralgia, doctors say. No wonder. They sit all the morning by a hot register, and then tie a live or six-inch strip of bonnet over their back hair, a bit of lace tichu over their bangs, put on kid boots, with silk or thread stockings underneath, and dawdle along the pavement with bitter winds smiting their temples, their delicate ears, their throats, and the bases of what should be their brain. But, no matter, their chests are well covered with fur cloaks. But cold feet, numb ears, reddened temples, and exposed neck will have their own story to tell."

Baked potatoes should be served the moment they are done; better with a hard core in them than wait till they become soggy. The average oven does not heat as quickly as water on the top of the stove will boil; so when baked potatoes are wanted in a hurry, they may be partially boiled, then put into the oven to finish.—Good Housekeeping.

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.

In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."

The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, for which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

SMITH—Died, October 14, 1887, in Greenville, Miss., SISTER S. MYRA SMITH. She was born in 1822, near Natchez, Miss. She was converted in her twentieth year, giving herself to Christ at the interesting age of beautiful young womanhood, from which time, till God called her home, her whole energies were given to his service. Her Christian character was of a most decided type—she had no compromise for the world or sin. The cause of Christ and the church were ever first with her. In seeking the advancement of his service, she never conferred with flesh and blood, but literally "denied herself and took up her cross daily." She had large influence in moulding and modeling the church of which she was a member, and in the years to come that influence will be felt and recognized in the church at Greenville. Hers was a high, strong type of faith; she "staggered not at the promise of God, and it was counted to her for righteousness." She tried God's promises and proved them. Hers was also an active faith. She showed her faith by her works. In the earlier history of the church in Greenville, men, as members, were scarce, and hence it was often necessary to have ladies for stewards; indeed, it was the rule rather than the exception. In this capacity she acted for nearly, if not quite, twenty-five years, effective and faithful. Her life was not void of trials; rather, many were her afflictions, but in all these she murmured not, nor charged God foolishly." None of her most intimate associates ever heard her complain. Through one epidemic of yellow fever she stowed herself to be literally a "sister of mercy"—nursing the sick, cheering the dying, and comforting the bereaved. She faltered not—going to all alike. She was to the afflicted town, in its dire suffering, as one sent from God. To this terrible scourge, her son, her only living child, fell, leaving her almost alone in the world. Yet in this her faith grew stronger, and she felt that "all things work together for good to them that love God."

Her last sickness was long and severe, but her end was peace. She died, honored and loved by all, and her memory will be held sacred. Her life and death may be briefly summed up: "She hath done what she could," and "is not, for God took her."

R. M. STANDEFER, Pastor.

SELLERS—The subject of this tribute, MRS. CARRIE M. SELLERS, was born April 12, 1859, and departed this life August 19, 1887. Sister Sellers joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1878, and, being of a sweet, amiable temperament and naturally inclined to piety from a child, she lived a consistent member of the church. But two years previous to her death she was deeply impressed that she had not yet found the pearl of great price; so she prayed earnestly to God to save her from all sin, and in answer to her prayer she told her now disconsolate husband, that a sweet peace permeated her agonizing soul, and from that hour till the mandate was given to come up higher, all doubt and gloom disappeared and her pathway to the sky was as clear as the noonday sun. With such a testimony it is no wonder that her end was peace. The evening before her immortal spirit took its everlasting flight to regions of supernal beauty, she asked a dear friend to pray with her. While her friend was praying she praised God aloud; continuing as long as her strength would permit, to shout the praises of "him who hath redeemed her with his blood." Shortly before the final struggle came she requested those standing around her bed to sing, while she was passing away, that beautiful chorus, "I want to die shouting," which they did. Thus surrounded by sorrowing loved ones, the glorified spirit of Sister Sellers passed from earth to heaven, and, with the white-robed myriads that bask in perennial joys around the throne of God, she is, doubtless, chanting, with celestial melody, praises to the eternal King.

FORD—THOMAS PETOLOMY, son of J. S. and the late S. E. Ford, was born April 15, 1858, and died at Downsville, Union parish, La., August 26, 1887. Deceased was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church at the Downsville Camp Meeting, in 1886, rendering a consistent member till death. His sainted mother had preceded him to the happy spirit land about five years; and, as death's cold embrace was rapidly closing his earthly existence and shutting out all material objects from his natural vision, his loving mother appeared to him, and, with emotions of delight, he said to his father, "I see ma!" and motioned to his sorrowing friends to clear the window that she might enter and accompany his spirit home.

He was a good and useful citizen—obliging and indulgent—strictly honest and upright in all his dealings with his fellow-man, ever exemplifying in all his business and social transactions and relations those high principles of justice and equity inculcated by the Golden Rule. He was an obedient son, an affectionate husband and a faithful friend. He leaves a sorrowing wife, father, six brothers and one sister to mourn their loss. He sleeps in the arms of Jesus, awaiting his crown at the last day.

A FRIEND.

ROBERTS—SELMA ROBERTS, daughter of Bro. S. D. Roberts, of Woodland Church, Amite circuit, was born May 4, 1881, and died September 16, 1887. Though so young, this dear little girl had been taught a great deal about heaven. She loved to talk of mother and the "pretties" up there. While bereft of his father, wife and a younger child, her father found comfort in his sweet little Selma. From the home from which her grandfather had gone to his heavenly mansion, the gloom of his death was largely dispelled by the wonderful intelligence and brightness of her pure child-life. In that home her grandmother, father, aunt and four uncles delighted in this sweet child. Perhaps she was too pure and tender for earth, and God took her to a purer, holier clime. She can not come to us. Let us all, in our sorrow, say, "We will go to her." Blessed hope! blessed Jesus! blessed heaven!

J. WILSON BROWN.

ADAMS—JAMES JESSE, only child of J. T. and A. T. Adams, was born January 20, 1886; died October 2, 1887, aged one year, eight months and eleven days. Jesse was a bright little boy, and the light of his home and parents. Grieve not, Christian parents, for God, who doeth all things well, thought it best to call your little treasure home. Little Jesse's faculties will now ripen and expand in heaven in the line of eternal progress, "wherefore comfort ye one another with these words."

AUNTY.

Countless as the Stars.

The number of people who are suffering from catarrh, consumption, or some form of bronchial affection almost exceeds belief. The steps by which a simple affection of the nasal passages or of the throat leads to consumption and death are known to every observing man and woman. Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., arrest all diseases of this character by a prompt application of their Compound Oxygen. Chronic cases yield to its persistent use, and the vigorous restoration which promptly sets in astonishes the most skeptical. They make no charge for consultation, and will frankly tell any patient whether they believe his or her case can be benefited. They send free to all applicants an interesting pamphlet on the subject.

Some one advised President Harrison to get a dog to watch his premises and take care of his fruit trees. "Better get a Sunday-school teacher to take care of the children," was the wise reply of the old soldier.

Yes, he loves you now, 'tis true,
Lass with eyes of violet blue,
Lips as sweet as honey-dew,
Roguy little bride!
Will he love you as to-day,
When your bloom has fled away,
When your golden locks are grey—
Will this love abide?

Yes, if it is the true kind it will survive all the inevitable wastes and changes of life. But, it is every woman's desire and duty to retain, as long as she can, the attractions that made her charming and beloved in youth. No one can keep her youthful bloom or equable temper if weighed down and suffering from female weakness and disorders. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy for these troubles. Sold by druggists.

The Panama Canal.

The Panama Canal enterprise, which has been the subject of so much inquiry and discussion of late, has had a peculiar history. Work was begun upon the canal in the early part of the year 1881. It was estimated by the administrative council of the canal company at that time that the canal would be open to navigation in seven or eight years, and that the work would cost only 600,000,000 francs (about $120,000,000). A little later in the same year M. de Lesseps estimated that the work would be finished in 1888. In August, 1881, the first of January, 1888, was fixed upon as the definitive date for the completion of the canal. The work, however, did not proceed at the rate which was at first expected, and the estimates as to the date of the completion of the canal had to be revised. In July, 1885, M. de Lesseps hoped for the finishing of the work by the end of 1888, and last year the date of completion was fixed still further off, being set for July 1, 1889. The latest estimate of M. de Lesseps fixes the date of the opening of the canal in February, 1890. The estimates regarding the cost of the work have proven no more trustworthy than those regarding the time of its completion. The canal is still far from being finished, yet the money thus far expended is considerably in excess of the sum at first fixed upon as covering the cost of the entire work.

The latest information which has been made public regarding the actual status of the enterprise is contained in a report of Senor Tanco Armero, an agent of the government of Colombia, the republic from which the canal company obtained its concession. According to the report the company had up to the end of August excavated only 33,925,230 meters out of a total of 161,000,000, or less than one-fourth of the whole. At the same time the company has expended more than 800,000,000 francs (over $160,000,000), or one-third more than the sum originally fixed upon as covering the total cost of the work. Senor Armero estimates that in order to complete the canal there will be required over 3,000,000,000 francs ($600,000,000) additional, without reckoning upon the sum the company must pay for interest upon the capital already loaned and general expenses. He believes, further, that the canal can not be opened at the date fixed by M. de Lesseps, or in 1892, the year when the concessions granted to the company by the Colombian government terminate, or, if the present system and rate of progress are continued, even in ten years from now. Senor Armero does not doubt that M. de Lesseps will succeed in carrying the undertaking to a happy end. At the same time the facts disclosed by him in his report go to confirm the criticism of the company and its method made by such severe critics as M. Leroy-Beaulieu.—Bradstreet's.

THE WEALTH OF SIBERIA.—The London Iron and Steel Trades Journal says that Siberia "is not the cold, desolate place it is believed to be by Britishers," but that it is "a northern Australia with larger rivers, more extensive forests, and mineral wealth not inferior to that of the island continent. In a very few years Siberia will be bridged from end to end with railways, and in this matter the Russian government is showing a large and wise policy. The magnificent water communications—for it is irrigated from end to end with some of the largest rivers in the world, navigable for thousands of miles through fertile and richly wooded lands destined to be the home of millions of colonists—and a canal is now being made between the Obi and the Yenisei, which will enable goods to be conveyed by water the whole way from Tiumen to beyond Lake Baikal. At Tiumen there is a railway which passes through the Ural Mountains to Ekaterineburg and Perm, through the heart of the richest mining district in Western Siberia."

Get to the root of things. The gold mines of Scripture are not in the top soil; you must open a shaft; the precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway; their secret places are far down. Get down into the vitality, the solidity, the veracity, the divinity of the Word of God, and seek to possess all the inward work of the blessed Spirit.—Spurgeon.

"Let Us Have Peace."

NO WAR AT SPECIFIABLE EXCEPT WHEN ERRONEOUS OPINION.

The great Chieftain, who lies buried at Riverside, no doubt felt the full force of the prayer:

"Let us have peace."

He had learned that "Civil war leaves nothing but tombs."

The greatest military heroes have not been those who shed blood for the love of it.

Wellington said: "Take my word for it, if you had seen but one day of war, you would pray to Almighty God that you might never see such a thing again."

The sentiment that war is a "relic of barbarism" and—as a method of settling international differences—should be shelved with other obsolete relics of darker ages is a growing one. The idea of arbitration is more befitting modern civilization.

But it is recognized that the sentiment, "Let us have peace," must be given a broader meaning if its full benefit is to be realized.

We see the catholicity which the trend of modern thought develops in the efforts for the union of the churches, the striking down of the barriers which have been a hindrance to the advancement of the true faith.

It is noticeable, too, in the leniency, growing yearly more marked, shown by the medical schools toward each other. Time was when a practitioner of one school willingly, if not gladly, noted the death of a patient of a physician of another school. The "brotherhood-of-man" ideas of the present day took no root in the medical profession of a quarter of a century ago.

Now physicians of the highest standing admit, and dare publish to the world, their belief in the efficacy of that professional bete noir, the proprietary medicine.

The late Dr. J. G. Holland, an educated physician, some years ago, wrote in Scribner's Magazine, of which he was editor: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered and used in actual medical practice."

Millions of people all over the globe confirm this statement.

The celebrated Dr. R. A. Gunn, of the Medical College of New York, in his published book, recommends the use of Warner's safe cure in cases of bright's disease, and other kidney disorders, and says he knows the remedy is used by leading physicians. It not only cures kidney disease, but the many other common-named diseases which would not prevail were the kidneys sound.

That great public teacher, Dr. Dio Lewis, had the courage to write to the proprietors of Warner's safe cure, after a full investigation of its merits, "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I should use your preparations." The serious nature of kidney disorders is that they are the real cause of nearly all the diseases from which we suffer. If, therefore, the kidneys are kept in health, we shall escape all such diseases.

The world is growing more tolerant, as intelligence increases; Grant but voiced the growing sentiment when he prayed, "Let us have peace," and Tennyson builded better than he knew when he wrote:

"Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand years of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace."

The beauty of youth is fleeting. Beautiful features are rare, and the most brilliant complexions fade. The beauty of intellect is rarer still; but the beauty of holiness is within the reach of all; all may acquire that if they choose; and this is a beauty that never fades, but daily increases, though the outer man may wither and decay. It was seen in the dying Stephen, when his face shone, "as if it had been the face of an angel."—Zion's Herald.

An Offensive Breath

Is most distressing, not only to the person afflicted, if he have any pride, but to those with whom he comes in contact. It is a delicate matter to speak of, but it has parted not only friends, but lovers. Bad breath and catarrh are inseparable. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases as thousands can testify.

The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is always doing considerate small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

ONE of the first symptoms of a severe bilious attack is sour stomach. If taken in time, Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets will check and, perhaps, prevent a serious illness.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Good rains have fallen in north, northeast and central Texas.

General Master Workman Powderly, in a private letter, persists in his resolve to retire from his office.

Judge Phillips, of Kansas City, it is said, is to succeed General Sparks in the General Land Office.

The strikers on the Houston and Texas Central railroad have been suppressed by an order from the United States Circuit Court, Judge Pardee presiding.

The dispatches from Washington indicate a prospect of harmony among the Democrats on the tariff question.

The first formal conference upon the fisheries question was held, November 22, in the diplomatic reception-room—all the negotiators being present.

Forest fires have done great damage to property, and impeding travel both by water and rail.

All the indications point to Mr. Carlisle as the Speaker of the Fiftieth Congress.

The citizens' ticket for the Public School Board was carried by a large majority in St. Louis.

Brig.-Gen. R. B. Marcy, U. S. A., retired, died November 23, aged seventy-six years.

Two boy bandits, aged seventeen, have been sentenced to the penitentiary for life from Seguin, Texas.

The sessions of the negotiators of the fisheries dispute are held with closed doors, and officials refuse to say anything about the progress of the negotiations.

The great steamer, "Charles P. Chotean," was burned at Sunflower Landing, Miss. Two lives were lost, and 3,500 bales of cotton.

The synod which has been in session at Meridian for the past four days closed its session with a mass meeting, held in the Presbyterian Church, on last Saturday night, in the interests of foreign missions. The session has been remarkably pleasant in every respect, and the distinguished divines express themselves as delighted with the city and its hospitalities. The next annual session will be held in Yazoo City.

A heavy windstorm visited Mineola, Texas, on the night of November 27, blowing down a hall during the progress of a dance held by colored people. Five persons were killed and about twenty injured.

Jacques Wishler, who engraved nearly all the plates from which the money and bonds of the Confederate States of America were printed, died, November 25, at his home in Camden, N. J., aged eighty-four.

FOREIGN.

In France affairs have reached a crisis. The refusal of every leading politician to form a ministry is regarded as making the resignation of President Grevy inevitable. He has been plainly told that the crisis in relation to the presidency is without a remedy.

Prof. Virchow, having examined the matter discharged from the Crown Prince's throat, found very few cancerous cells.

Ex-Empress Eugenie is critically ill at Amsterdam.

John Bright says that nothing can be done for Ireland until Gladstone's hills are gotten out of the way. Sir William Harcourt ridicules the dissident policy, and said that while their leaders showed no signs of altering their views, there had been a shaking in the minds of their followers.

The German papers, speaking of the conference between Bismarck and the Czar, say it was of a friendly and very comprehensive character. In Russia it is believed that it may contribute to the strengthening of the friendship between the two empires.

Lord Salisbury, at the conservative conference, in giving the government programme for the coming Parliament, said the regulation of the liquor traffic would have a prominent place. Referring to the Trafalgar Square troubles, he attributed them to Mr. Gladstone's words, his advice to the Irish having been applied in England.

President Grevy pleads for time; but the question is only one of time. He will be forced to resign. Already meetings have been held to discuss the question of his successor. The evidence against M. Wilson is to be kept secret. It is rumored that M. Rebot will form a new Cabinet, among whose members will be M. Goblet and Deves.

Frank Hugh O'Donnell has brought a libel suit against the London Times for £50,000 damages.

The German Reichstag was opened November 24. The speech from the throne represented the empire in a prosperous condition. The reading was interrupted by frequent applause. A telegram of sympathy was sent to the Crown Prince.

Lord Mayor Sullivan of Dublin has received seven summons for publishing the proceedings of the suppressed League. The trial will begin December 1.

The interview between Prince Bismarck and the Czar is reported as having been a dramatic one. The Czar assured the German Chancellor that he desired peace, and did not intend to attack Germany or take part in any coalition against her. Prince Bismarck declared that whosoever wished peace must not attack Germany's allies. The Czar added that his declaration regarding Germany applied fully to Austria.

M. Grevy, on November 27, formally informed M. Rouvier of his resolution to resign the presidency, and said that he would send a message to the Senate and Chamber of Deputies on Thursday next.

A report was current in London, on November 26, that Mr. Parnell was suffering from a cancerous tumor. The rumor is denied.

Marshal MacMahon is seriously ill.

In New York State the prohibition vote has increased in two years from 30,000 to 45,000.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

A Wonderful Food and Medicine.

Known and used by Physicians all over the world. Scott's Emulsion not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food that builds up the wasted body. "I have been using Scott's Emulsion for several years, and am pleased with its action. My patients say it is pleasant and palatable, and all grow stronger and gain flesh from the use of it. I use it in all cases of Wasting Diseases, and it is specially useful for children when nutrient medication is needed, as in Marasmus."—T. W. PRUDE, M. D., Knoxville, Ala.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of December will be "red-letter month" for our agents of the Louisiana Conference. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 16-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference.

This offer is for agents, as above stated, and during December only for Louisiana agents.

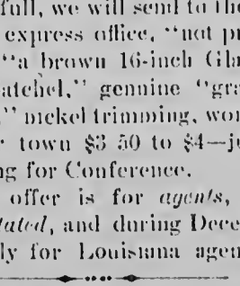
How to Make Money.

Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

W. R. STUART,
Ocean Springs.

Whatever we may have thought or done in this world, however various and multiform our lives may have been, yet in the tablets of the angel witnesses but one brief line of record will suffice to be transcribed upon our tombs—"He did that which was good"—or, "He did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord."—F. W. Farrar.

ROYAL



BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can not be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

Learning to Pray.

How very much of what the New Testament makes us know is given to us in the form of suggestion! How often do we need to break the shell of some incident or narrative in order to have the nourishing kernel within! It may be that there are those who imagine that it is quite unnecessary to learn how to pray. We are very sure there are those—we know positively of one—who after a long life of prayer find that even then there is something more to be learned as to this great matter—"how to pray." It is very true that "prayer is the simplest form of speech an infant's lips can try;" it is very true, and great cause for thankfulness, than any cry of the consciously needy soul is prayer. But we very much mistake if we imagine that when this is said all is said. This, in fact, is just the alphabet of prayer; it is that imperfect utterance of which a soul is capable in the infancy of its new spiritual life. It may be only as a kind of gesture directed heavenward in some moment of human extremity or peril. But the communion of a human soul with God must mean greatly more than this. There are men who spend whole years in learning, by study and by practice, how to address as they ought their fellow-beings, in those forms of public service which become for them the assigned sphere of active life. Is it so much a matter for study that one may know how to talk to his fellow-men, and is any crude form of unpremeditated utterance all that need be required in talking to God? Such thoughts as these must often be in the minds of reflecting Christians; and such persons may, even after years of ordinary Christian experience feel that the words of the apostle describe their own state exactly: "We know not what we should pray for as we ought." They may be at the end of their Christian life far more convinced than at its beginning what a need there is for that inward "intercession." That meditation in their behalf of the teaching Spirit, running the sluggish spiritual desire till there shall be "groanings which can not be uttered."—Standard.

PURE COD LIVER OIL
AND PHOSPHATES OF
LIME, SODA, IRON.

Cures Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, and all Scrofulous Humors.

To Consumptives.—Wilbor's Compound of Cod-Liver Oil and Lime, without possessing the very nauseating flavor of the article heretofore used, is endowed by the Phosphates of Lime with a healing property which renders the Oil readily enjoyable. Remarkable results follow its use. Its efficacy can be shown. Send for circular. Prepared by H. WILBOR, Chem. ist, Boston, and all druggists.

Have You Naso-Catarrh?

Use DR. JAMES' three preparations of EUCALYPTUS HERBS; they will prevent the Catarrh Germs of the Bronchial tubes or lungs from developing into CONSUMPTION, and keep ill-health away from you until it is entirely cured. Put yourself under the influence of these remedies, and assure yourself that the sun rises upon you a complete cure and a well man made of that loathsome disease.

N. B.—This remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. It will break up a fresh cold in two days. Four bottles will cure the worst chronic case.

Ask your druggist for DR. JAMES' CATARRH INDUCA, and if they fail you, send to us direct. Price $2 50 per bottle, or three bottles for $6 50. Pills, $2 50 per bottle, or three bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment, $1 25 each. Address CHAMPION & CO., 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BEST PREACHER.

BY R. W. J.

He preacheth best who liveth best—
Men heed not words, but actions;
By this smooth stone 'tis fair to test
The zeal of blust'ring factions.

A godly deed weighs more than creed:
And armor fit for trials
Is forged alone by hands that speed
In righteous self-denials.

To win mankind, the heart first find
By acts of right and reason,
For words alone will never bind
Like good deeds done in season.

Not as we say on Sabbath day,
But as we practice weekly,
Will people rate us, tho' we may
Preach long and wise, and meekly.

Wouldst thou preach well? Then live thou well—
Who'd lead the way to glory,
And best the gospel tidings tell,
Should fire the old, old story.

Miss Callie Hallaran.

IN MEMORIAM.

BY BISHOP J. C. KEENER.

MR. EDITOR: The Times-Democrat, of this morning, announces the death of Miss Callie Hallaran. Her health had been gradually failing for several months. It is nearly a year since she left Mexico, seeking a better climate, and came to Texas, to the family of her sister, now Mrs. Charlotte Jones. There, in the midst of those dearest on earth to her, the candle which had shone so brightly, slowly burned out.

My first acquaintance with her was formed in the City of Mexico. She was then engaged in giving music and English lessons in the best families of the city: and as the correspondent of the Times-Democrat, under the name of "Clara Bridgeman." She was also assisting her sister, Charlotte Hallaran, in our mission school. Here she presently became the principal, and we offered to give her the entire guidance of the school, and all that she might ask for, constituting a first-class Anglo-Mexican Mission School.

It is needless to say that she succeeded in training the girls committed to her to be useful and accomplished women, who are already valuable aids to our work in Mexico. Beyond this, she spent all that she could spare in clothing and educating several orphans whom she adopted. For breadth of mind, cultivation and genius, as a writer, I have not met her superior. Her articles would have graced the editorial columns of the London Times. She is certainly at the head of all female "correspondents" of our Southern States. She was a superior Spanish scholar, and for several years edited our child's paper in Mexico. With this she was, of all, the most unselfish, generous and sympathetic. She is an honor to our city, for here she was trained by a lady, of whose elevated and gifted qualities we could not say too much, who adopted "Callie" as a child, and made her, under God, the noble character that she was.

We have here an instance of an early death, doubtless hastened by overwork. From before breakfast until ten o'clock at night, this earnest spirit wrought without intermission. Nor could she be persuaded to moderate her labors. She seemed to keep in view the certain approach of that "night when no man can work," for she was conscientious and thoughtful in all her undertakings. I was greatly drawn to her, and she once said to me, "I could wish you were my father." Like many other great spirits, she has passed away from this world after a very brief life, but not before leaving upon it ineffaceable traces of love for the Savior, and of abiding sympathy for her race. Her memory is among the precious things which can not be lost.

From the justly appreciative notice of her death, in the Times-Democrat, I make the following extract:

Miss Hallaran went out to Mexico to teach, and was in every way splendidly equipped for her new duties. In consequence of her broadness of culture and many attractive traits, she won her way rapidly into the esteem and affections of the people with whom she was thrown in contact. Among her closest friends were many of the leading scholars, jurists and literateurs of our sister republic. In connection with her chosen mission to a strange land, Miss Hallaran was engaged, before her departure from New Orleans, as the special Mexican correspondent of the Times-Democrat, and her letters during the past five years, in our columns, bear witness to a remarkable keenness of insight, a peculiar facility for grappling with novel economic and social questions; and a wonderful capacity for life-like descriptions of the picturesque—in that most picturesque of countries—which have seldom, if ever, been surpassed by any correspondent of the American press. She had made a close study of Mexico, of its history, both civil and religious, as well as of its many unique traditions; and, had her life been spared, would have given to the world a most instructive and entertaining volume. It was by reason of long-continued and laborious literary work that her health gave way. The deceased was not only a gifted and brilliant woman, but a most lovable one; and there never lived, perhaps—and we speak advisedly—a more loving, more tender or more dutiful daughter. Her remains have been interred at Salado, Tex., the residence of her sister.

It is delightful to look forward to the meeting her again "in the land that is far off, where the King sits in his beauty."

DECEMBER 2, 1887.

Rev. C. F. Gillaspie.

IN MEMORIAM.

BY REV. H. S. RAYNER.

Rev. Charles Fox Gillaspie, late of the Mississippi Conference, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. J. McRaney, in Polk county, Texas, July 21, 1887, aged eighty-three years and thirteen days. He was born in Virginia, July 11, 1804.

The first half of his life was passed in recklessness and dissipation. He was acquainted with every department of vice known to "Young America." The drunkard's sayings and songs were familiar with him to the last. He could never get rid of them. He often lamented, with sighs and groans, the loss of the first forty years of his life. To his dying day he sang with great force and feeling:

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound!
That saved a wretch like me!
I once was lost, but now am found;
Was blind, but now I see."

He attended school but little, scarcely learning to read. At the age of forty, in Alabama, he was converted and received into the Methodist Protestant Church. Soon after his conversion he was licensed to preach. He at once applied himself to literary and theological studies, soon mastering the ordinary branches of the English language, in which he gave special attention to grammar and logic, keeping these before him through life.

His energy, vivacity and consecration rendered him efficient from the beginning. He had a fine voice, singing well, and delivering his sermons with great force.

In about 1850 he removed to Mississippi. He at once became a recognized leader among his brethren here. He had not the brain nor the oratory of Rev. P. H. Napier; but his energy, cheerfulness, agreeability and sociability, together with his splendid laconic preaching ability, rendered him the leading spirit among them.

He was married to Miss Margaret Elizabeth Denley, in Calhoun county, Miss., in 1851. His wife, after having become the mother of seven children, died in Attala county, in June, 1868. Only two of the children survive: Mrs. B. B. Napier, of Covington county, Miss., and Mrs. W. J. McRaney, of Polk county, Texas.

Bro. Gillaspie was in the Civil War, and was among the "true and the brave."

Previous to the war he was elected president of the Mississippi Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, and after the war filled that office, with but little intermission, to the time of the union of his Conference with the Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which union was effected at the session of the latter Conference, held at Crystal Springs in 1870, and in which Conference Bro. Gillaspie represented his brethren, he being president of his Conference at the time. His love for his brethren and his unselfishness were manifested in the fact that, in the Crystal Springs Conference, in which he represented them, he secured appointments for all of them, leaving himself out. The year following he lectured on masonry.

His first appointment after the union was Seashore district, which appointment he filled with acceptability and efficiency for the full term—four years. After this he filled the following appointments: Cayuga circuit, 1875 and 1876; Covington circuit, 1877; Whittington circuit, 1878; East Pascagoula circuit, 1879 and 1880; Whittington circuit, 1881 and 1882; Americus circuit, 1883; Augusta circuit, 1884. He was superannuated, 1885 and 1886.

Some of the foregoing were poor circuits of large territory—hard work for a man of his age, but he readily accepted them, and filled them with fidelity and zeal. It was astonishing to see how cheerfully he filled such poor appointments, while worthless young men were constantly complaining. The minutes show that his own salary often fell short, but that the claims of his presiding elder and the assessments ordered by the Annual Conference were always paid in full. These he often settled out of his own meager purse, telling his congregations that the last cent of them must be paid if he had to sell Mollie (his buggy horse) and buggy.

He was as far removed from egotism as any man, working hard and giving others credit for his work. He presented a striking contrast with a numerous class, who do comparatively nothing, and yet claim that they fill more "hard appointments," revive more "dead congregations," and build up more "first-class charges" than anybody else.

He was punctual and brief. He began his service at the appointed minute. His Scripture lessons were short, his sermons averaged about thirty-five minutes, and his prayers were seldom more than three minutes. When the time for his service came, if there were but a half-dozen persons in the house, he began as promptly and proceeded with as much energy as if his congregation had been waiting. His whole service was characterized by great energy. It was not unusual for him, in returning from his first appointments in a charge, to meet persons a mile away going to church.

He was a doctrinal preacher. He had thoroughly studied, well-arranged, clear-cut sermons on all the leading doctrines of Christianity. These he often delivered with telling effect. He was never more at home than when boldly presenting the distinctive doctrines of Methodism.

He was a man of strong faith. He never suffered himself to mistrust God for a moment. He had no confidence in himself: but he would often say, looking and pointing to heaven, "I know it is all right with my heavenly Father." He had no patience with gloomy experiences or with a roundabout way of telling them. He always spoke in an experience meeting—spoke pointedly and positively, and got through in a minute. He had a large Oxford Teacher's Bible, which he carried with him. He was seldom more than a few feet from his Bible, and he read it constantly. His daily practice was to read the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of St. John. These were his abiding comfort. For four years next preceding his death the writer was more intimately associated with him than any other individual, and in that time I never saw or heard a thing of him derogatory to the highest Christian character. Being constantly associated with hundreds who knew him, I never heard aught against the good name which he bore.

His good humor was constantly apparent. He was never found in an ill mood, or heard to speak unkindly of any person. Laughing was his chosen and natural method. It was said of Heraclitus, a Grecian philosopher, that he never looked upon a man without weeping. Contrary to this, Democritus, another Grecian philosopher, never looked upon a man without laughing. Bro. Gillaspie was the Democritus of the present age. He said that laughing had added fifteen years to his life.

Uncle Charley is gone. He left behind him no enemies, but thousands who love and cherish his memory; who weep over his grave and rejoice in his triumph. He had no fear of death. He often spoke on that subject, and freely expressed "a desire to depart and to be with Christ." He spoke of heaven as near at hand, and with the assurance of an inheritance already possessed. His mental faculties somewhat failed, his physical strength abated, his eyes grew dim; but while "the outward man perished, the inward man was renewed day by day." We have not heard the particulars of his death, nor do we care to hear them. We know that he died well—"in full assurance of faith"—and "that he rests from his labors and his works do follow him."

With him

"The pains of death are past,
Labor and sorrow cease;
And, life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace."

European Affairs.

BY JEAN PAUL.

Political matters in France have ever been kaleidoscopic. Last week President Grevy fell a victim to aggravated nepotism. His son-in-law, M. Wilson, was charged with official crookedness. The courts of justice were investigating the charge. But the Chambers feared that these courts were unduly biased, and ordered an investigation by a committee of their own number. This incensed the President and his Ministers, threatening to resign if that committee was appointed. The threat was of no avail; the committee was appointed; the President and his Ministers resigned. M. Sadi-Carnot has been elected his successor, and the election seems to give satisfaction to France and Germany.

The alliance recently entered into by Germany, Austria and Italy is not a menace to a peace-loving neighbor, since mutual support is not stipulated in case any one of these powers should be the aggressor. The alliance does not design bloodshed, but rather to prevent it. Revengeful France is now doomed to clinch her fist in secret. Unscrupulous Russia, in her morbid hunger for more territory, is forced to weigh the consequences of encroachments on Austria or Turkey. An alliance between France and Russia is impossible, notwithstanding the irresponsible utterances of dethroned and deposed officials. The Czar of Russia despises intensely the communistic tendencies of the French people, and can not be persuaded to enter into intimate relations with them. The Czar and his Prime Minister, De Giers, are enthusiastic admirers of William I. and his great Chancellor.

The near demise, from a cancerous disease, of the German Crown Prince is not likely to injure the interests of the empire. The sick man's son, Prince William, is twenty-eight years old, a valiant soldier, tried statesman, and, withal, an earnest Christian. At a recent meeting of prominent Christians, at Berlin, devising means for effective city mission work, the Prince spoke for half an hour, exhorting the august assembly to make greater efforts in regaining religious influence over the sweepings and scum of society. Neither Germany nor its neighbors need fear any harm from such a man.

At last the professional agitators in Ireland are forced to desist from their nefarious business. Recent legislation forced them into silence. Strange that American money should so long and so bountifully have supported professional disturbers of the peace. In our own country such agitators among the poor and laboring classes are held in low esteem. On our sugar plantations in Louisiana we have found them to be a great pest. If many tillers of the soil in Great Britain would drink less whisky and work more, their groundrent would not be deemed exorbitant.

East Tennessee Letter.

BY PROF. J. H. BRUNER, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: Our portion of the State showed her good sense in voting for the prohibitory amendment in our last election. It is with great pleasure we see the steady march of temperance in your territory—the region in which the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE mainly circulates. But we are saddened by news from another quarter. Rev. G. G. Smith says, in the Nashville Advocate:

"Atlanta had Mr. Cleveland, and Macon had Mr. Davis. My attachment for Mr. Davis adds to my sadness, when I see how the good-meaning old man has been used as a tool by the liquor men. A beer-making German sent a load of beer to Macon, called Jeff Davis beer, and stated that it was in honor of his anti-prohibition letter; and all the saloon keepers sent bottles and jugs to the old statesman as he departed, as a token of their grateful remembrance of his service."

The Candler-Aldcott-Kelley affair attracts attention also. There is indignation against the actress for the part she took in the Sunday services at McKendree Church; but there is even greater feeling against her apologist, who said she had uttered "the right words in the right place," and who seems to have had "a death's blade" for his brother-minister. So it is:

Brazen Emma rose in church,
And talked a rousing racket!
Doctor Kelley felt a lurch,
When he essayed to back it.

The Young Men's Christian Association in our college observed last week as a week of prayer. They enjoyed a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Six conversions were reported at one service. A revival in a college is far-reaching in its consequences. Eternity alone can tell results.

The visits of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE are hailed with delight. Its pages are always clean. Nothing impure is admitted there. And then it advocates all that pertains to our Christian system in its fullness and entirety. On no other paper in the connection has our church set such seals of approbation, saving to so many of its representative editors, "Well done; enter into a general superintendency." We have found your Advocate our best-paying means of advertising Hiwassee College.

Our Conference organ, the Holston Methodist, was recently burned out of house and home, and its financial affairs have ever since been of an unsatisfactory character. The stockholders are now arranging for a new departure, and the prospect is now fair for better times. But ours is not a reading people. Hardly two thousand subscribers to our Conference paper (which the statutes show fifty thousand members of our church ought to register) is the measure of our reading. Surely there is need of amendment along this line, and, of course, on other lines as well. Holston has many mountains, and in these are many poor people, many illiterate. We preach the greater need of a system of intelligence. We must plan and wait.

The denizens of our mountains are being aroused by the steam whistle of modern progress. New railways and new factories arrest attention in all directions. Happy the day, if the leavening influences of the gospel shall permeate all the communities of this rapidly developing portion of our great republic. In such a cause we know no better plan than to serve like the angels—all at it, at it all the time, at it with all our might.

Notice.

TO THE CONFERENCE COLLECTORS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Please send to Dr. [illegible] Wier, Sardis, Miss., what you are willing to give to aid in the education of our young preachers. He is president of the Conference Board of Education, and will give your money a practical use at once. You can designate the person, if you wish, to whose help your fund is to go. Two of our young preachers have located for a time, that they may go to school; another is waiting till he is better prepared for the itinerant work. Two others are ready to avail themselves of such aid. One hundred and twenty-five dollars will keep a young preacher at Centenary College a year. Each district in the Conference ought to have one or more of these young preachers in school preparing for the demands of the itinerant ministry. Who will send Dr. Wier ten, or five, or two dollars per month, for the next five months, to help in this good work? Two have already subscribed $25 in this way; and others will help. Prompt and liberal action will soon bear a much needed fruit: the givers will be twice blessed.

"AND I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP."

BY MINNIE L. KENNEY.

The day is over, and the tender gloaming
Is softly drawing down its misty veil;
The crimson fires of sunset long have vanished,
And in the west the glowing embers pale.

Behind the hills the last bright gleams are dying,
And one by one their glories fade away;
The hush of evening rests on weary nature,
And mist-like shadows shroud the dying day.

I hear the children in the next nursery,
Their voices echo through the dewy air.
As at their white robe reverently kneeling
With clasped hands, they say their evening prayer.

That sweet old prayer, by countless tongues repeated,
Lovingly taught us at our mother's knee,
And hallowed by the trusting faith of childhood,
Come echoing through the twilight dim to me.

"If I should die"—the childish voices falter,
Thinking of one already gone to rest;
Whose voice with theirs in evening prayer had mingled,
Now singing Jesus' praises with the blest.

I listen to them as they softly utter
Each sweet petition of that dear old prayer,
And wish myself back to the days of childhood,
Unsullied by sin, and undisturbed by care.

If I could choose of all the poems written,
Or noblest songs by poets ever sung,
I would that mine had been this sweet petition,
Nightly repeated by pure childhood's tongue.

Surely among the prayers to heaven ascending
And written by recording angels there,
The loving Savior hears this sweet petition
And listens to the little children's prayer.

Religious Instruction of Children and Family Prayer.

MR. EDITOR: If we, as parents and heads of our families, are not required, both by precept and example, in the Holy Scriptures, to instruct our children religiously and pray in our families, we need not trouble either ourselves or anyone else about such matters. Or if it is left optionary with us either to do these things or leave them undone, we may take our choice. But if these duties are plainly required of us in the Word of God, we may not neglect them without endangering our own salvation and the salvation of our children. Let us look honestly into this matter before it is forever too late. As to the religious instruction and training of our children, it is made as plain in the Bible as language can make it. There can be no doubt as to the obligation divinely imposed upon us. The Lord highly honored Abraham by saying, "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment."

In the law given by Moses, the Lord says, "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Here we are required persistently to give the fullest religious instruction to our children; not by proxy, but do it ourselves. The same duty is plainly required of us in the New Testament, especially where we are taught to "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." To succeed we must be good-humored, loving, patient and persevering. The salvation of our children requires us to be prompt and faithful.

As to the duty of family prayer, we have both precept and example in the Bible sufficient to convince any honest-hearted head of a family what is his duty in the premises. About the first we know of the Adamic family, after their expulsion from the Garden of Eden, they were holding family worship. Abel did it acceptably, and was blest: Cain offered a lame sacrifice, and was cursed. I have no doubt but that good man, Enoch, kept up family worship: and so did Noah when he was afloat in the ark, for he took a surplus of "clean beasts" into the ark and used them as sacrifices in his household worship, and as soon as he left the ark he built an altar and went into family worship regularly. How often do we read of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob erecting altars for family worship at every place they sojourned? This duty often comes incidentally before us or is implied in various passages in the Old Testament. In the New Testament there is no regular argument on the subject. The inspired writers seem almost to take it for granted that all Christian heads of families would intuitively admit their obligations to the souls committed to their care and control in these important matters. Yet they do incidentally give us some strong arguments in favor of family prayer. Paul would have men to "pray everywhere." Our families are somewhere, and if we do not pray in them it can not be said that we pray everywhere. I do not think, however, that we need many arguments to convince us that it is our solemn duty to pray with our families, provided we listen to the dictates of an enlightened conscience. If we fail to worship God in our families, and neglect the religious training of our children, we endanger our own salvation as well as theirs. What says the Word of God in reference to the omission of duty? "Him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Then if it is right to train our children for heaven, and to worship God in our families, and we do it not, we are guilty of a sin of omission. Again, it is written: "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

I have written enough for this time. I do rejoice that a great revival is now taking place in our church on the subject of family religion. Hundreds—I may say, thousands—of family altars have been erected in our church within a few years past. Bible family religion is the very foundation of good families, good churches, and a good and safe civil government. Push the battle, brethren, and we will soon be able to hold our prayer meeting everywhere, whether we have a preacher present or not. Get men to praying in their families, and they will soon help you in the weekly prayer meeting.

Obedience and Duty.

When we connect ourselves with any branch of the Christian Church we, in the presence of God and the people, obligate ourselves to obey its laws and support its institutions. This promise is just as binding as if we were to enter some mercantile house and purchase some article of wearing apparel. Should we refuse to pay for the article in question, the laws of our country would force us to a settlement. Not so in the church. No law is enforced, and the members are left to exercise their own conscience, and it often occurs that conscience is very easily quieted in regard to paying church claims.

On one occasion we heard a church member make the remark that he did not believe it his duty to pay anything to the church, from the fact that he was too poor. No one is too poor to put a penny into the Lord's treasury, and by doing so God may prosper him in this world's goods. The Bible teaches us that God loves a cheerful giver, and that it is more blessed to give than to receive. In paying our church claims, it is not an act of charity, but it is doing our duty in paying a sacred debt. We and all of our possession belong to God. Why then refuse to give him his own?

It is a conceded fact that in nearly all the churches about one-half of the members meet the church claims (if they are met at all), while the other half pay little, or nothing. It is a problem unsolved, how some of these non-paying members can sing, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," and yet fail to fulfill their solemn vow in supporting the institutions of the church. In union there is strength. If each member would do his duty—give according to his means—all the church claims would be paid in full, and then the pastor would enter the room of the Annual Conference with an elastic step and smiling countenance. Pride of character is just as essential in church matters as in worldly affairs. No minister would like to report in a large audience, claims unpaid, and no church with proper pride would like to be so reported.

On one occasion a poor minister came up to attend a District Conference, and when he made his report, it was only four dollars. The Bishop seemed to enjoy the report, and rather made a jest of it. That was years ago, but that minister has our sympathy to this day. The people whom he had been laboring with and for were to blame, and not the minister.

Some members attend the theater, circus and other places of amusement; but ask them to contribute something to the church, and their answer is invariably, "I am too poor," or, "I have so many other claims upon me." Perhaps we all have other claims, but are they any more binding or sacred than the debt we owe to the church? Let us pay our debts. If we mistake not, the Bible says, "Owe no man anything." Then let us pay up our pastors, that they may be well fed and clothed, and then they can pray better and preach better.

As a people, we are proud of our beautiful Sunny South, where the orange blossoms grow, and the forest songsters warble their sweetest notes; but are we not deficient in energy and ambition to make and accumulate more than a meager support? How many precious hours are irretrievably lost! The sleepy South when it is fully aroused from its state of lethargy, and each moment of time spent in some profitable pursuit, we will be a more prosperous people, and the church will advance with more rapid strides.

The Methodist Church is like a vast piece of machinery, and to keep it in perpetual motion and good order requires labor, talent and money. While the pennies are being thrown into the Lord's treasury, the great wheel revolves, and the gospel is spreading out over heathen lands. The cheering news is borne back of the great good that is being accomplished.

Let each member of the Methodist Church do his whole duty, redeem his solemn vow, and then we may sweetly sing, "I love thy kingdom, Lord."

Mission Work.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to state, briefly, for the encouragement of other missionary workers, what our Sunday-school missionary society is doing in the little town of Benton. We meet semi-monthly—dues, ten cents per month. These meetings are made interesting in various ways—by recitations, readings, etc., interspersed with beautiful and appropriate songs. Sometimes we have an address from the pastors—one or both of them—about some special field or work—say, China or Japan; and at another meeting some other subject is taken up. We have recently adopted the monthly programs as published in each issue of the Missionary Reporter. These we find interesting and helpful in furnishing much-needed information, and in quickening missionary zeal.

It is surprising what valuable aid these societies can render financially, and also in educating our children and people with reference to missions. Up to date, our society has raised about thirty-five dollars this year; and this in a village where, of course, the membership can not be very large.

Passing down the street, some weeks ago, I saw, what was to me, a beautiful sight. One of our little workers had erected a kind of fruit-stand or shelf at his father's gate, and upon it were some apples; and there the brave little fellow stood, patiently watching for a customer, in order to raise missionary money. This instance among many. I hope these societies will be organized in every Sunday-school in the land.

Our thank-offering for the week of self-denial has been forwarded. Your sister, MRS. J. S. PARKER.

A Bob-Tailed Quarterly Meeting.

I have never liked the holding of Church Conferences on the Sabbath day. It places a premium upon ease, business, etc., that give no place for practice of self-denial for Christ's sake. The Farmers' Alliances have no trouble about obtaining a full attendance on a week-day of the same people, men and women, who can not possibly attend Church Conference except on Sunday. This burden of Christ's service is increasing, and, alas! alas! it culminates into a "bob-tailed quarterly meeting" within the State of old Mississippi.

You ask, "What is a 'bob-tailed quarterly meeting?'" I will tell you.

This year, in a presiding elder's district, the time for quarterly meeting arrives. Not Saturday or Monday, but Sunday. Promptly at eleven A. M., Sunday, the elder arrives, preaches, administers the Lord's Supper, then opens Quarterly Conference, attends to the business, gets his pay in full—all assessments overpaid—then departs to hold another "bob-tailed quarterly meeting." No wonder a quaint old brother, dazed while there, after getting out in open space where he could holla, remarked, sotto voce, "That's what I call a 'bob-tailed quarterly meeting.'" Let the Bishop ventilate "bob-tailed quarterly meetings" at next round.

REFORMER.

From the Work.

ALGIERS, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The church at Algiers can be reported on rising ground, though having passed through some trying times in the last twelve months.

Rev. Charles E. McLean, our regularly appointed pastor in 1886 and 1887, has been sick over a year, with the exception of a few weeks before and after Conference. So protracted has been his illness that he was compelled to surrender the work. He now lies at death's door. To say that our people loved him will but faintly express our feelings.

Rev. A. B. Earle was appointed to the work by Bishop Duncan, and labored with us faithfully and earnestly until Sunday, November 20, when he left to join his home Conference in South Carolina. Bro. Earle did his work well at Algiers, and leaves bearing our love with him. Our farewell meeting was very affecting, and evidenced the people's regard for this dear young minister. I trust that this spirit will grow in the people, and that they will always show their appreciation for their pastors.

The Algiers Church should take rank with many of our city churches. The field is open, but the people need quickening. We have been blessed with faithful men in the past; many who are now doing efficient work in the itinerant ranks—Alexander, Reed, Werlein, Beard, Wright, Scurlock, and others who have crossed the flood. We have the honor of claiming our lamented Bishop Parker as one of our earliest pastors—this being his first work.

Our collections are up in full, with an excess on the Conference claimants' fund. We will fall short about one hundred dollars on preacher's salary. Some of our people think only itinerant preachers should be paid, and then only when in the harness. When the groceryman gets sick and his substitute serves me, I must pay for the goods all the same. I suppose the preacher has more money than the tradesman (?); hence the obligation is not binding. I think a church should pay every cent she bargains for at the beginning of the year. Preacher or no preacher, the surplus, if by accident there be any, can be applied to good use; if even to pay back some old short accounts with pastors in by-gone years.

Our Sunday-schools are doing well. We are making slow progress at Gouldsboro. Bro. Dunstan preaches at Gretna, and conducts the Sunday-school there as the Carondelet Street Church Mission.

We hope to have a church building at Gretna next year. The ground is ready for a church at Gouldsboro as soon as the people manifest the desire for Methodism in that growing suburb.

We are praying that the Lord will send us the right man in 1888. We would rather have him to choose the man than make the selection ourselves, even had we the privilege.

Yours truly,

FRANK A. DANIELS.

MOSS POINT, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord has visited and refreshed us here with the presence and power of his Spirit. We have been praying for and expecting some such blessing. Our people have been so kind to their pastor's family, and so liberal in their responses to the church's financial call, despite a great straitness in their business, that I could not doubt a covenant-keeping God would reward them spiritually.

On Friday evening, November 11, Bros. J. A. Bowen and J. H. Beville came to us fresh from a great victory at Biloxi. Within a few hours Bro. Beville was delighting us with his sweet and earnest singing of gospel hymns, while Bro. Bowen moved our understandings and wills by his free, off-hand and persuasive talk. Three services were held each day to constantly increasing audiences. Bro. Bowen put in many extra hours of diligent work visiting among the mill-hands, greeting and inviting them to church. Much of his preaching was about the Spirit's power, and was in demonstration thereof. The church was moved immediately, and soon sinners began to awake out of sleep. When these brethren had to leave for another engagement, Thursday, the nineteenth, our community was roused and interested as has not been the case before for very many years.

With the good help of Bro. J. D. Hays we continued the meeting several days longer, and with good result. Last Sunday we received fourteen into our church—most all of whom are grown men. A praying band among the men and boys and a prayer circle for the ladies are among the fruits which we trust will abide. May the Lord continue his own work!

Gratefully yours,

J. P. DRAKE.

BETHEL CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: While others are telling what the Lord is doing for them, I will give an account of old Bethel charge. I have held a protracted meeting at each of the seven churches on this work: the last of which I closed at Bay Springs Church, Tuesday evening last, which resulted in great and lasting good—fifteen added to the church, thirteen infants baptized and the entire membership greatly blessed. At the close of this meeting there were quite a number that were filled to overflowing, and shouted the praises of God aloud.

We have had very good meetings indeed at every church on the work. There have been eighty-five accessions to the church up to date, with more to follow. Collections are somewhat behind yet, but are coming up tolerably well. We have renewed seven of the ten subscribers that we found for your paper, and have got nine new ones. This work is poor financially, but rich spiritually. The people are generally kind, social and clever, always ready to welcome their pastor and minister to his temporal wants while he ministers to their spiritual wants. May God's blessings ever rest upon this people!

R. A. BRELAND, P. C.

VANCLEAVE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to give you an account of the New Prospect Camp Meeting. Everything was very favorable, and the meeting commenced, led by our presiding elder, T. S. West. He was assisted by Bros. Marble, Thomson, Cox and a number of local preachers and other brethren, who seemed to be filled with the love of God. I verily believe that the Spirit of God was with us; and saint as well as sinner felt its influence. The meeting was a success, and all the tent-holders felt that they were abundantly recompensed for their hospitality.

As the year is fast drawing to a close, I feel that my labors have been blessed, and that my lot has been cast among kind people. There is continually coming to the parsonage tokens from the different parts of the work, reminding us that the people have not forgotten the pastor and his family.

As to the result of the year's labor to date, ninety-four have been added to the church, and 100 have professed conversion; one church built. The parsonage has been repaired, and all the collections will be paid, I think, in full. The ADVOCATE has not been forgotten.

Your brother,

J. J. LOVETT.

ROBELINE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad to report progress since my last communication to the ADVOCATE. An interesting meeting at Pisgah with some accessions. Have just held a successful meeting at Provencal, where I selected and had deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, two very desirable lots of ground, upon which some brother may build a handsome church next year. I had my choice of lots, and all agree I made a good selection. Am trying to round up my year's work ready for Conference. Am truly thankful to God for any degree of success attending my efforts in his vineyard.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $10 for Lambath's call—a thank-offering from a brother Baptist, a reader of your paper—handed me at the close of our thanksgiving service yesterday. Another Baptist also handed me an offering for missions. I mention no Methodist offering for the good reason that none were made at that time.

Word-Studies.

Depravity. This is a word of frequent use in sermons, and in theological writings. It may not be amiss to know what it means. The root of the word is the Latin, pravus, which means "crooked," "out of the established order." Depravity, then, is "crookedness," "distortion from the regular course." Webster says that depravity is "a vitiated state of moral character." The word is applied only to the mind and heart. We say, correctly, "The depravity of the human heart." We say, with equal correctness, "The depravity of public morals." Depravity describes a thing as it really is, and is more or less open. Depravity requires reformation, which is a process of making "crooked things straight."

Corruption. This is another word of frequent use in the pulpit and works on theology. This, too, is from the Latin, and its primitive meaning is to "break." The main idea in the word is "a disunion, or decomposition of parts." The word marks the "spoiling of things." While depravity turns things out of their ordinary course, corruption destroys their essential qualities. Corruption is the natural process by which material substances are disorganized. When the word is used figuratively, it carries the same idea intensified in the application. When we say a man is corrupt, the idea is much stronger than when we say a man is depraved. As depravity is more or less open, corruption is more or less disguised, and, therefore, the more fatal. Corruption may be a slow process, but it infuses as a slow poison. As what is depraved requires reformation, what is corrupt requires purification. These two processes—reformation and purification—are the only remedies for a depraved and corrupt nature.

O.

The Sabbath.

The following report was presented to the North Mississippi Conference, at its late session, by Lieut-Gov. G. D. Shands, and adopted:

"The Sabbath is universal and adjustible to all conditions. Created near the beginning, its termination is at the other terminus of time. If after six days of work the great Architect of the universe rested one day and sanctified it, surely man needs no less. If the Jew needed it, none the less is it necessary for the Gentile. God imposed no hard or impossible conditions upon his chosen people. His legislation for them is the very essence of wise political economy, and has been the basic fact in the best humane regulation. Before Sinai, the Sabbath was observed and was obligatory. From creation to the decalogue, in bondage and in the wilderness, it was a law of the social condition. The table of stone but restated and emphasized that which had theretofore been operative, and we are unable to lay our finger upon where, in express words or by any fair implication, God diminishes the original obligation. It was, and is, one of God's statutes, not subject to amendment or repeal by any lesser authority. It is not ambiguous or abstruse, and, therefore, is not to be reasoned away in an unneeded construction of its meaning. No limitations are enacted in it, and no power of suspension is vested anywhere. It emanated from the divine mind complete, compact and comprehensive; and was a gift from God to man, suited and squared to his want; a gift to all men, everywhere, of priceless value and importance; and he who robs himself of its enjoyments and advantages commits a grievous waste and wrong; and he who robs his fellow-man of this gift none the less violates the spirit and letter of the divine enactment and perpetrates an open, demoralizing and destructive sin.

"Holding to these ideas, and believing them to be taught in God's Word, and finding therein nothing opposed thereto, this Conference does most earnestly enjoin upon all people everywhere, who wish for the extending of Christ's kingdom upon earth, and who desire to maintain good government upon the earth, and promote the happiness and improve the conduct of all the people, to so exercise, at all times, every gift and power and franchise enjoyed by them as men and citizens, and to promote, protect and magnify the Christian Sabbath."

Our Contributors.

Overdone Enterprises.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

There are a great number of undertakings which, though of great utility, have nevertheless come to confusion on account of being "overindened." Most of us would think it rather bad policy if, in order to ditch off a pond in the field, we should dig down all the hills about the place. Or if we wanted to dam up a river, and should go way up among the hills and begin to dam across all the branches and creeks, what would our friends think of our wisdom? Yet this is what we are seeing done almost every day.

People—at least, some people, after years of slumbering, wake up from their Rip Van Winkle sleep, and seeing the world is not what they think it should be, imagine that it is their imperative duty to set it right in all its "details and specifications," or, in the event of failure, politics, literature and religion are all gone. Apropos of this idea, labor, seeing itself subordinated to capital, seeks not only to break the chains of subordination to capital, but wants to subordinate capital to labor. Hence "communism."

Again, the proceeds of workmanship are seen to enrich the proprietor, without correspondingly enriching the workmen, and hence comes "strikes" and "anarchy." Not only the raising of wages by an independent and meritorious devotion to the trade followed, but a general leveling of conditions is sought for. These are indices pointing in the direction of our outgoing thoughts.

Many and great reforms are needed—some desirable and others essential; some on principles of statescraft and others on principles of moral suasion. Under the forms of government morals—not piety—will become formulated in a somewhat similar fashion, and habits will settle down ex legis. Without a "Sunday law," it will become the habit of the people to secularize the Sabbath. God and men and beasts require a Sabbath. This is essential. But from this it does not follow that there must be a law to make men attend church, say prayers, visit the sick, etc., and do other needed and pious things.

So we need a law to "regulate the sale and use" of liquors (Con. La., 1879, Art. 170); but it does not follow that we should prevent boys from smoking cigarettes, or men chewing tobacco or smoking cigars, although these things may be hurtful to the individual, because such things inflict no more evil on the public than eating too much apple pie or drinking too much milk. That is to say: These things, equally and alike, affect the individual, but do no hurt to a second party. Liquor will cause—has caused in tens of thousands of instances—murder and all minor crimes. It may be fought as an enemy to law and order, and a public evil. Smoking, chewing, "dipping" snuff, drinking tea, coffee, and the like, can not. However great evils some may declare these things to be, they can not be condemned as "public evils"—hurtful to the moral senses or violation of statute law. Neither morals nor intellect—reason—are debased by them. Liquor does all this. It is the sum of all evils, and, when drank to excess, he who drinks it is hurt less, physically and legally, than those whom he meets. It is a public evil of great weight, and he who bears it off will not need, nor be able to carry, any additional burden. We want no freshly awakened Rip Van Winkles in the opposers of the great public foe—liquor.

The mistake of New England must not be repeated in the South. The tariff, lotteries, gambling, tobacco, coffee, and all else of the kind, find opposers—some on public grounds and others on personal grounds. It is a settled principle in our government that lotteries, gambling, liquor drinking, opium, and the like, are hurtful to the public morals, and may be suppressed by law. Does not everyone see the folly of weighting these great public issues down with the tens of thousands of individual sins? Seeing there has been such an indiscriminate knitting together of the individual and public sins, it is not to be wondered at that men regard legislation on the liquor traffic as infringing individual rights. It has never been decided, under our forms of government, that that which hurts no one but the party acting is a subject of legislation, while it is a settled principle that anything which affects the public—parties other than the actor—is subject of prohibition by the law. It is on this principle that I may not put a slaughter-pen at your gate, or drain my pond on to your land, or drive depredating stock out of my field into yours. Yet I may build a dam and make a pond on my land—if it does not make anyone sick by creating malaria (see Blackstone), or put stock in my field, or build a slaughter-pen at my door—if it be not to close to yours. (Ibid.) In short, I am at liberty to do anything which harms no one, even though it may harm myself: but every State in the Union has decided that the liquor traffic is a public evil, and must not be turned loose upon the people.

We bring moral suasion against such evils as are purely individual, but we bring legal suasion against such evils as are public, or hurtful to the public. It is unwise to burden this question of public welfare with individual evils. "Let us lay aside every weight" and fight the liquor traffic.

RUSTON, Louisiana.

Ruined!

In this day of great moral ideas and stern, practical life nothing is more convincing than facts. The speculator may assert his plans, and the enthusiast may intrude his views: but the public mind says, Show us your works, and then we will accept your theories. I have taken in hand to write of two towns in the State of Mississippi, of which it was said by the advocates of the saloon that for prohibition to carry would ruin business.

The first place of which I shall give account is my own town of Crystal Springs. Prohibition has existed here for more that two years, during which time there has been a gradual increase in the business, there being at this time not a single vacant residence in the town. So great has been the demand for homes that several houses occupied last year by negroes have been refitted and painted, and are now occupied by white families come here to engage in mercantile and other business. Within the last three months a large hardware store has been opened in the town: another building, which has been vacant for more than two years, is now undergoing repairs, and will soon be occupied by merchants, and it is very authentically reported that a third store-building, which has been vacant several years, will soon be occupied by a large dry goods firm. In addition to this, the paint brush has been freely used by our people, and our houses look neat and inviting to the stranger. While our community has thus improved in its business, there has been a very significant improvement in the morals of our people. We have but one officer in the town, and his duties are so light and pay so small that the old mayor was re-elected on yesterday without the least opposition. So far as the trial of persons for crimes or misdemeanors, his office is a sinecure, his chief employment being a general supervision of the public buildings and streets. We have had many additions to our farming population, and our people are out of debt and contented. Such ruin as this is greatly to be coveted.

The other place of which I speak is Yazoo City—my home for four years previous to my coming to this place two years ago. Perhaps no town in the State fought more obstinately for the saloon: but under the local option law the county voted for prohibition, and now the town is, and has been for six months, legally dry. When I left the town in January, 1886, there were no less than nine or ten saloons doing a flourishing business. It was my pleasure to spend two days of last week in the town. I do not remember to have seen a closed door on the streets. On lots where frame buildings were destroyed by fire, have been erected substantial brick houses. A large citizen's warehouse, built of brick, and with a capacity for thousands of bales of cotton, has been opened, and was being added to while I was there. Where was one of, if not the most popular saloon in the town is now occupied by a large fancy and family produce store. I heard no complaints of lack of custom, and everybody seemed to be busy; and the increase in cotton receipts for the past year and for this season up to date does not indicate death or starvation. I counted no less than six large dwellings which have been erected and occupied since I left the place, and a citizen of the town told me that there was not a vacant dwelling in the place. At least calculation, I suppose that $50,000 has been expended in dwellings and other buildings. In the item of crimes and misdemeanors there has been only a repetition of the history of all other places where prohibition has been faithfully tried. The falling off in the mayor's report of fines collected is very significant, and the most popular magistrate, by far, in the town said to me that no one's business had suffered but the officers' and lawyers'. And all of this in the face of the fact that the jug business is carried on to a shameful extent. The whisky men are threatening another contest next year, and are, by use of the jug and otherwise, turning heaven and earth to demonstrate that "prohibition don't prohibit:" but the good citizens of the town and country say they will snow them under by a vote of three to one. Confusion's Yazoo is improving in every particular: prohibition works well: the good citizens are satisfied, and no one ruined.

The Mission of the Church.

The Christian Church is unquestionably designed to be a mission to the world; but how is she to do it? She is to preach the glad tidings to "the uttermost ends of the earth:" but how is she to preach them so as to effect her end? The answer of the New Testament to both these questions is immediate and direct. It is not merely by sending out missionaries, however numerous, or contributing funds, however large: but by carrying the conviction to the minds of all who are without her fold that she is an institution which has for its one great object the relieving the burdens and the healing the sorrows of the world through a manifestation of the love awakened in her heart by that love of God which she has herself experienced. Men must not only be told that such love is her proper and legitimate return for the love of God to her. They must see it in the glance of her eye, feel it in the touch of her hand, mark it in the beating of her heart. Then they will understand her when they will not understand the more elaborate teachings of her creeds. Then they will be won by her when they will not be convinced by argument. Then they will be softened by the power of love when they might only be more firmly wedded to their own systems by expostulations and entreaties that they shall abandon them for ours. Without this her missionaries may prove but a disordered army, the regiments of which fight against each other, and the most lavish expenditure of funds may be but a useless waste of money. How the church in her present condition, and with her present views, can expect to convert the world is wholly incomprehensible to anyone who will look at her commission in the light in which it was given her by the lips, and commenced on by the life, of Jesus. The church has yet to learn that the repetition in her own life of the cross-bearing life of Christ is the main weapon of her warfare, and that the practical dying the death of Christ for the world's good is the only argument to which the world will yield.—Dr. Milligan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes Cost Proof feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which entitle the sufferer for boldness or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this consultation as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

You have worked earnestly for the accomplishment of good, and yet you do not see much result. Remember two facts: Christ said, "Without me ye can do nothing;" Christ must work in you, before he can work by you.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Methodist proposes to solve the difficulties in Bishop Taylor's case by changing the Third Restrictive Rule so as to read:

The General Conference shall not change nor alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away with Episcopacy nor destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency, for our general work; but may assign a Bishop to any one or more of our foreign missions for four or more years, whose residence, for such time, shall be within such missions, respectively.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in an exposition of the second chapter of Luke's Gospel, has this: "Simeon's words were the swan-song of Judaism, but Anna's were the lark-song of Christianity. Most Christians are mere Jews, like Simeon, wishing to get to heaven as soon as they themselves are saved. But Anna caught the true spirit of Christianity, for, instead of desiring to depart, she hurried away to communicate the good news 'to all them that were looking for redemption in Jerusalem.'"

The preacher who "essays" the "subjective" and "objective," the "environment" and "evolution," and all such, is, to the majority of his hearers, "darkening counsel by words without knowledge." The general criticism on such preaching is contained in the expression of a plain deacon, when he said of the preacher's sermon: "The more he unfolded it, the more he covered it up." There is nothing so effective and powerful as "plainness of speech," and no words equal to the "words which the Holy Ghost teacheth."

The Virginia Conference did good work last year. There was a gain in membership of 2,593—the total being now 69,308. Money raised for all purposes, $379,535—an increase of $1,986 over last year. Money paid on preachers' salaries, $153,351, being an increase over last year of $7,785. Value of church property is $1,729,443—an increase of $83,536 over last year. Raised for foreign and domestic missions from all sources, $28,951. For superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers, this year, $8,006 86—increase, $349 17. Bishops' Fund, this year, $1,673 67—increase, $179 42. Educational Fund, this year, $2,528 62—increase, $147 39. Church extension, this year, $3,008 16—increase, $299 48. Children's Day, this year, $1,386 85—increase, $1,386 85. Total, this year, $16,604 16—increase, $2,407 31.

Correction.

The following omissions and corrections in the appointments of the North Mississippi Conference, published last week, have been pointed out by Bishop Keener:

Greenville District—Cherry Hill ct., J. W. Treadwell; Jonestown and Lula, J. W. Dorman.

Aberdeen District—Athens, to be supplied (by T. M. Weaver).

Corinth District—New Albany, G. H. Jacobs.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

This body met at Winona, November 23, Bishop Keener presiding.

Winona's hospitality is unbounded, and the Conference esprit de corps as nearly perfect as attainable. The personnel is admirable. Of the Cabinet, secretary and other prominent members, it is superfluous to write. Everybody knows them—and before this is in print every preacher will have had his appointment—so that it would be taffy thrown away. The brethren will thus know why they are not noticed. Visitors will understand that no mention of them is made because, as visitors, they see rather than are seen. We get at this by etymology. We say, however, that we like them, and always say to them, in Bible language, "Come and see." We expect them to tell what they have seen; and we will always enjoy reading of ourselves. But to our personals.

The Rev. J. A. Bowen, the energetic and successful evangelist, is prominent among his brethren for his erect bearing. His black, flowing beard and his piercing black eye are but indices of that direct and forceful presentation of gospel truth for which he has become famous.

The Rev. T. B. Malone, the genial, the versatile, the practical preacher, pastor and printer, is a member of this body. No one is a handier or readier accountant or secretary. He has served most efficiently in the Mission Board and in other capacities, and is widely known and read as correspondent of our periodical press. He wears a "regulation coat;" and it fits.

Dr. J. W. Price, of Columbus station, has a portly bearing, and is one of our most delightful and deserving preachers. He has won not only upon his brethren, but upon his charge. This year's report from him shows an advance all along the line. We will take one or two more such Kentuckians.

Drs. W. T. J. Sullivan and T. C. Wier are not presiding elders at this writing. What they may be before the publication hereof is not known; but if they should develop, they will know that this scribe will not commend them to the cool shades of oblivion without great regrets, for they are really estimable men. The same may be added of the Rev. J. D. Cameron and of the Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, pere. T. Y., fils, is our most worthy statistical secretary.

The Rev. W. B. Murrah, at present professor in Whitworth Female College, is the worthy son of the late lamented Dr. William Murrah. The mantle of the father is not too large for the son. As a teacher, he stands at the head of the profession; but in this day when first-class preachers and pastors are in such demand, it seems to be a real calamity to the church that such as he should be confined to the class-room. Your scribe does not hold education in disesteem, but men do not all have equal facility in the pulpit and in the school-room, and our first-class pulpit men ought to stay there.

The Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., is another of the same kind. Versatile, affable, firm, with first-class organizing power, he has impressed himself upon the people as a thoughtful, original and eloquent preacher, and has shown, by the great success attained as president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, that he is no less a school-man. A visit to that institution opened the eyes of this writer more widely than they had been—not on the point of the oughtness of the existence of the school, but on the fact that it does exist; has demonstrated its fitness to be. There are fifty, less one, boarding pupils, while the entire register foots up nearly two hundred. The faculty is first-class; the buildings ample and valuable, and the morale of the institution is as good as your correspondent has anywhere seen. Let parents and guardians get acquainted with President Newell, and they will soon know whereof I affirm.

These notes would be incomplete if mention were not made of at least a few more members of this body. Of the Rev. J. M. Wyatt, you will, no doubt, speak. R. M. Standifer, who has just closed a successful pastorate, extending over four years, at Greenville, has, by limitation, to seek a new field of labor. Happy will that flock be to whom he shall go!

Among the laymen who are members of this body, conspicuous for his personal appearance, but more especially for his influence in the State, is Lieut.-Gov. G. D. Shands. His report upon the observance of the Sabbath is as strong, as lucid and as broad a paper on that subject as has ever been presented to any ecclesiastical or political body. Some day we may be able to write him as governor of our commonwealth; but should this never be, it will be no sign that his real influence has abated, or that his usefulness is minified.

Prof. T. B. Winston, a largely successful teacher, is a delegate. At Blue Mountain he has built up a fine school for boys and young men, and has for a long series of years sent out from his halls many who are now filling places of profit and prominence throughout the State. He is notable not only by this fact, but his very presence shows him to be a man of mark.

But this article has grown to too great a length. Brethren whose names are not here mentioned must consider the situation, and next time we shall try to give them a notice. *. *.

That Thousand Dollars, and How It Was Gotten.

If anyone thinks the missionary spirit is dead or dying in the hearts of Southern Methodists, let him consider the readiness with which a few hundred readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE contributed more than one thousand dollars to send a missionary to Japan, in response to Dr. Lambuth's call. This result is so remarkable as to justify some inquiry into its causes. This ADVOCATE has shown that a goodly sum of money can be gotten in a short time for foreign missions, and that, too, when the church, generally, is lamenting its inability to raise money for missions. If the whole Southern church should pay per member as the contributors to this thousand dollars did, we should have over two millions for missions. How was this money gotten? Let it be noted that Dr. Lambuth's call was not for himself and his devoted wife, who have spent more than thirty years serving God and the church in the foreign mission field. It was a call simply to send out a new missionary. Sending a new missionary to a foreign field is now no new thing, even for us. It is done by other churches and our own every year. What then moved the people to respond to Dr. Lambuth's call through the ADVOCATE?

The ADVOCATE finds no little difficulty in collecting its own dues, yet it calls for a thousand dollars for missions, and in a few months gets more than it called for—no one knowing what preacher would be sent with the money. Dr. Carter had to ask the people to stop giving, as Moses did of old. There must be a cause for this; but who shall discover and declare it?

One chief element of the success of this call seems to be in the fact that it came directly to the people from one laboring in the missionary field. Dr. Lambuth's letter came from Japan; was read by the people, and was cheerfully responded to. Our great Missionary Board seems, in spite of all we can do to prevent it, to be something like a disjunctive conjunction: It fails to bring the giver and the receiver of missionary money into direct connection. If the Mission Rooms at Nashville could be made to fill the place of a central telephone office, so that a helper of missions could say to the Secretary, "Please put me in connection with our missionary at Souchow, in China, or at Hiogo, Japan, or at Rio, South America," would not a new and widespread interest be awakened in missions, and would not money flow into the treasury? Our missionary directory seems intended to do this very thing. Who will tell us why it does not do it?

This ADVOCATE has demonstrated that money for missions can be gotten readily on a call from a foreign field through a church paper. We may draw one of two conclusions from this fact: Either Dr. Carter possesses some extraordinary skill as a caller, or there must have been something peculiarly inspiring in the nature of the call itself. Now, Dr. Carter, I think, claims no art peculiar, no legerdemain, in money-getting even for missions. Indeed, he was grieving over the meagre results of self-denial week (not within the territory of this ADVOCATE, for that raised more than any other of its extent in the church), while he was receiving an easy and constant flow of this money for Japan. It came so gradually that it did not even divert the editor's eye from the irresponsiveness of the church to the great call of the General Board. Can anyone fully explain the peculiar effectiveness of this call? If it can be done, it ought to be done; for just such a call ought to be repeated a thousand times throughout the church. The missionaries abroad yearn for direct communication with the church at home.

What Our Papers Say.

We had occasion not long since to call the attention of our readers to the "League of Freedom and Justice," organized by some Germans of this city for the express purpose of working for the abrogation of the Sunday Law. This league has its ramifications through the other large cities, and its purpose is the same—to do away with the Sabbath. It is a pleasure to know that there are many Germans here, and in other cities, who do not fall in with the plan of this league, which is pledged to abrogate the peace and quiet of our Sunday. They see and appreciate the blessings which flow from the Sabbath day, and are in hearty sympathy with all legitimate efforts made to conserve those blessings and to hand them down to their children. They realize that a quiet Sunday—one free from beer-drinking and rowdyism—is an inestimable boon. They, too, are moving in concert with the lovers of order and peace to perpetuate this great blessing. The following from the Springfield Republican is in proof:

Not all the Germans are enemies of the American Sunday. A mass meeting was held in Cooper Institute, at New York, Tuesday evening, November 1, where over 3,000 German-Americans of a wholly different sort applauded arguments in favor of a rigorous enforcement of the Sunday laws. Lutheran, Reformed, Moravian, Methodist and Presbyterian ministers were on the platform; some of them treated the matter from only the religious standpoint, but others spoke more wisely as simply American citizens. Rev. Dr. Johannes Oerter dissected the Personal Liberty League very sharply, and paralleled their notion of personal liberty with that of the anarchist murders and the Mormons, as practically the theory that a man has a right to do what he pleases. "On the contrary," said Dr. Oerter, "personal liberty is the divine right to act without interference within the limits of the law." He showed also that the liquor sellers and drinkers who want to do away with Sunday restrictions really ask for special privileges to the prejudice of all other citizens. It is good to see an occasional meeting of this sort. Things are coming to the pass in this republic that the existence of many things which have constituted the very heart of the American social order are violently attacked by foreign elements, and the fight must be made for their preservation.

The Arkansas Methodist has this about paying debts:

Our church was once very strict in making our members pay their debts, but unfortunately we are so no more, and our people are being evil-spoken of and our religion injured. We hear of a great many preachers moving around and leaving unpaid debts. Brethren, these things ought not so to be. If you have been unfortunate and can not pay, then stop till you can. We do not think any man should continue in the work of the ministry without pay. We have no confidence in the loud professions of any man who will not pay his debts.

Perhaps if official Boards would be more careful in paying the preachers what they promise, we would not hear of "a great many preachers moving around and leaving unpaid debts." Generally, the preacher builds upon the promise of his stewards; and if they don't pay their debt to him, how can he meet his engagements? We venture to say that the majority of those "preachers moving around and leaving unpaid debts" have reported deficiencies in their salaries large enough to more than pay all they owe anywhere. Make the Boards pay the preachers what they promise, and then "a great many preachers moving around" will not leave "unpaid debts."

We have often been skeptical about what some people call the providences of God. We believe in God's providence heartily; but when people make the Lord the author of everything that occurs, then we dissent. How anyone can read the Book of Job, and believe the record, and then hold the Lord responsible for everything, we can not see. The Richmond Advocate, in an article on "Satanic Powers," closes with a paragraph in accord with our thinking on this subject:

The power of Satan over the moral world is generally acknowledged among Christians. We are less apt to remember his agency in the physical sphere. But are we not warranted in attributing to his malignity many of the calamities of mankind and many of the afflictive trials of the righteous? The petty troubles and minute annoyances of life often appear to perplex the believer when regarded as direct appointments of Providence. The permission of the sovereign omnipotence of God is undeniable, but the perplexity is somewhat relieved by supposing the intervention of an inferior power impelled by hate to every refinement of cruelty. It is our cherished conviction that the pests and stings that sometimes render life almost intolerable were the inventions of an archangel, fallen and inflamed with an inextinguishable passion for the misery of other beings. The curse inflicted upon the earth for human sinfulness may well include the sway of a gigantic intelligence as bitter in its malice as it is mighty in its resources.

In a thoughtful and considerate article on the anarchists, who so lately paid the penalty of their great crime, the Watchman closes with words of warning, which should find a lodgment in all our hearts and cause every true lover of our country and her institutions to act with promptness to spread the light and love of our holy religion.

We are too much inclined, perhaps, to congratulate ourselves that this form of anarchistic thought is exotic, introduced by foreigners, not the product of American institutions, and repulsive to the American people. Let us not deceive ourselves. Under certain moral conditions Americans are as liable to infection with the poison as any other people. There is no prophylactic against it but Christian light and Christian faith, and the pervasive working of Christian love. While we stand guard over the precious interests of society with the irresistible might of law and justice, let us remember that our institutions rest upon the intelligence and morality of the people, and that for popular intelligence and virtue there is no security but in that sense of religious responsibility which exercises its restraints silently and surely in the hearts of the people.

Notes.

We advise all our young preachers to read again, and more carefully than ever before, Bunyan's saying: "Satan tempteth novices in the faith to study and labor in nice distinctions and the affecting of uncouth expressions, that vary from the form of sound words, thereby to get applause and a name." Paul exhorted Timothy: "Hold fast the form of sound words."

The following sounds very much like something we wrote some time ago; but it is the beginning of an article in the Advance and simply shows that, perhaps, we were on the right track in the matter spoken of:

It is the boast of the college that it aims to provide for a liberal education. From whatever point of view it be regarded, the Bible is confessedly the supreme book of the world. Is it not strange, is it not an almost heathenish fact, that while the colleges crowd their courses of study with the literature of Greece and Rome they should ignore, almost wholly, as a subject of scholarly study, the Bible?

Dr. Kelley has retracted and confessed and forsaken his evil ways and sayings, and now let the word of forgiveness be spoken. "Whoso confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall have mercy." That is the divine rule, and it should also govern us. "If ye forgive not your brethren their trespasses, neither will your Father in heaven forgive your trespasses." That must be an awful utterance to some people. "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye that are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." Having "restored" Dr. Kelley, now let us look after those deluded church members, who, contrary to Christ and their own vows, support the institutions of the devil instead of the institutions of the church; those one-thousand-dollars-in-one-week-for-the-theater Christians!

When our Lord sent to John the evidences of his Messiahship, he mentioned as one of the proofs that he "preached the gospel to the poor." Are we following the example of our Lord in this matter? Are we really preaching the gospel to the really poor? Is not the real fact disclosed in these words of Dr. A. Alexander?

Go into the churches of any Protestant denomination, and you will probably find a large, respectable audience of well-dressed people quietly occupying their own pews, and listening with more or less attention to the instructions of the pastor; but where are the miserable poor? In society they form a large portion of the people, but here we see, perhaps, a few old women the beneficiaries of the church.

Ought not these "respectable audiences of well-dressed people" show the genuineness of their religion by following their Lord in seeking out the "miserable poor" and "preach the gospel unto them?" How can they answer in the day of judgment if they do not?

There is no doubting the fact that the larger part of our missionary contributions comes from the poor, and the gifts of the poor are dear to God. The man or woman or child, who saves from the little pittance that comes in as the result of hard work, in order to be able to give to the cause of the Lord, has the promise of a peculiarly precious blessing. And many thousands of God's poor are doing that very thing to-day. The "poor widow" mentioned in Luke's Gospel was the prototype of many in every generation. We have just read of one in Manchester, England. Here is the incident:

At the missionary meeting in that chapel, on Monday, Mr. H. B. Harrison exhibited to the congregation a small bag full of coins which had been placed in his hands on the preceding evening. The bag contained a hundred and four farthings, and was the offering of a poor widow to the missionary cause. During two years this widow has conscientiously laid by week by week out of her small pittance one farthing—which sum, indeed, was a considerable proportion of her small income; and of her penury she gave it freely for the spread of the work of God abroad.

Reader, make a note of this instance of self-denial for Christ's sake, and "go thou and do likewise!"

Personals.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur and Sunday-school agent of the North Mississippi Conference, expects to visit the Mississippi Conference at its session, in Jackson, Miss., December 14, in the interests of the Publishing House periodicals.

We are indebted to E. L. Woodside, secretary of the Central Louisiana Fair Association, for a complimentary ticket to the annual fair, to be held in Baton Rouge, La., December 7, 8 and 9.

The prohibitionists of Atlanta have suffered defeat in the late election. Various reasons have been assigned. No cause ever won a general victory without at some points having suffered reverses. Even the Federal army had its Bull Run.

Dr. Abbey gave us a call last week. The Doctor is in his eighty-third year, and yet his health is good and his step is firm. He says he can preach three times a day and not be fatigued.

E. B. Ramsey was transferred at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference to the Memphis Conference, and T. W. Dye to the Florida Conference.

Miss Annie Linfield, the secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, is now located in Crystal Springs, Miss. That society has done a grand work during the past year, and we confidently expect it will grow grander in the future. Secretaries of auxiliaries are requested to send to her their quarterly reports promptly. We printed last week the programme for the week of prayer and self-denial, to begin December 12, and hope all the societies will carry it out.

The Court of Appeals has reversed the decision in the case of Jacob Sharp, and ordered a new trial.

Johann Most has been convicted by a jury of using incendiary language. A motion for a new trial has been made. It is to be hoped that this anarchist will not escape the just penalty of his deeds.

Seven out of ten of the applicants for admission on trial at the late North Mississippi Conference were rejected on the ground of defective education! That is simply a "dig in the side" to wake up the seventy thousand Methodists in Mississippi to the absolute necessity of doing something in the matter of ministerial education!

The Texas Advocate reports that M. H. Wells has been transferred to the Alabama Conference. He was at one time a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. W. V. Tudor has been stationed in Granby Street Church, Norfolk, Va.

Dr. Young J. Allen, our missionary in China, has arrived in this country, and was in Nashville a few days ago.

At the North Mississippi Conference we met a steward who had been in the office continuously since 1836, with the exception of three months when he was on the move from Virginia to Mississippi. In all that time he has only missed attendance on four quarterly meetings. He has attended every District Conference of his district, since those Conferences were organized. He has been twice a lay delegate to the General Conference. The steward's name is O. J. Moore, of Winona, Miss.

The first number of the Journal of Commerce of the Chamber of Commerce has been laid upon our desk. As its name suggests, it is a monthly periodical started in the interests of commerce. It is edited by D. L. Mitchell, and the first number gives promise of good things in the future. Price $1 50 per year. Office 59 Carondelet street.

Our young friend, Sam Standifer, of Ruston, La., who was graduated from Centenary College at its last commencement, has completed the commercial course at Eleeman College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. We wish him abundant success in his life-work.

Prof. Schurman, in his "Ethical Import of Darwinism," gives this definition of evolution: "Evolutionism is that conception of the universe which regards it as the result, not of an act, but of a process; which holds that it is not now what it was in the beginning, but has become what it is through a series of slow and gradual changes, whereby growth, development or progress has been effected, and all purely by the action of causes immanent in the universe. This evolutionism is as old as human thought, and had explained before Darwin the process of development in the inorganic world. Further, it had asserted development as a law of life and originator of species, but causes adequate to such a result it had not discovered. It was this lack that Darwinism supplied with natural selection."

Action of the Board of Missions.

A called meeting of the Board of Missions was held at the Mission Rooms, Nashville, November 25, 1887. The following members were present: Col. E. W. Cole, president, in the chair; Bishops McTyeire, Galloway, Granbery, and Hargrove; Revs. R. B. Crawford, of the Alabama Conference; W. D. Kirkland, of the South Carolina Conference; John S. Martin, of the Baltimore Conference; W. G. E. Cunnyngham, of the Holston Conference; R. K. Brown, of the Tennessee Conference; W. C. Johnson, of the Memphis Conference; Chas. Taylor, of the Kentucky Conference; P. A. Peterson, of the Virginia Conference; A. R. Winfield, of the Little Rock Conference; V. V. Harlan, of the Arkansas Conference; M. M. Pugh, of the Missouri Conference; O. P. Fitzgerald, of the Pacific Conference; A. G. Haygood, of the North Georgia Conference; and B. W. Macrae, William Morrow, T. D. Fite, Thomas S. Weaver, J. D. Hamilton, laymen, and Rev. I. G. John, secretary, and Rev. D. C. Kelley, treasurer.

The forenoon was taken up in considering certain questions—chiefly financial—in connection with the Central Mexican Mission. This business was resumed and partially concluded in the afternoon.

The matter of Dr. D. C. Kelley was then taken up under a preamble and resolutions offered by Rev. Dr. P. A. Peterson, of Virginia, and Rev. W. D. Kirkland, of South Carolina, reciting the facts in the case, and expressing the disapprobation of the Board at recent utterances of one of its chief officers. Pending the consideration of the same, the treasurer offered the following paper, whereupon the preamble and resolutions were withdrawn by the movers, and the paper of Dr. Kelley was accepted:

To the Board: Having been informed by brethren whom I trust that my supposed attitude toward theaters is in the way of my usefulness as Missionary Treasurer of the Methodist Epi-copal Church, South, and that my published card is not sufficiently explicit on this subject, I now define my position farther:

I am opposed to any attendance on theaters by members of our church, and uphold our ministers in the correction of this evil by public and private admonition and by a patient and kind, but firm administration of discipline.

I regret and withdraw my articles in the American, in so far as they may be construed to defend the interruption of the public worship on October 9, at McKendree Church.

I consider myself to have said heretofore all contained in this paper, but as it is thought that this statement is clearer and more easily understood than the statement of the card, I gladly write and sign this paper.

W. C. KELLEY.

A resolution was passed recommending the observance of a week of self-denial and prayer during the year 1888, the presiding elders to fix the time for their respective districts.

The Board then adjourned.

I. H. JOHN, Secretary.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of December will be "red-letter month" for our agents of the Louisiana Conference. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 18-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference.

This offer is for agents, as above stated, and during December only for Louisiana agents.

Periodicals.

—The Homiletic Monthly, for November, contains much valuable literature for ministers, and is a very cheap publication. E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, New York. Price, thirty cents a number.

—The Magazine of Art, for December, is a magnificent specimen of an art journal. The pictures are charming, and the reading matter easy. Cassell & Co., 739 Broadway, New York. Price, $3 50 a year; thirty-five cents a number.

—The Chautauquan, for December, is full to overflowing with good things. This is one of the brightest, cheerfulest, most thoughtful and most edifying periodicals of the day. It contains nothing but clean and good and improving reading matter. T. L. Flood, D. D., Meadville, Pa. Price, $1 50 per annum.

—Scribner's Magazine, for December, is a superb number. Robert Louis Stevenson appears in a poem, entitled, Ticonderoga. Bret Harte has A Drift from Redwood Camp. Louise Imogen Guiney contributes Tarpeia. Elizabeth Akers writes of the Water Witch. Edwin P. Whipple contributes, In Dickens' Land. T. R. Sullivan writes, The Tincture of Success. This monthly is one of the best, and it is the cheapest. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $3 a year; twenty-five cents a number.

—Cassell's Family Magazine, for December, comes to us with 150 pages of select reading. The Gatherer, an illustrated record of invention and discovery, is a very valuable part of this monthly. Cassell & Co., New York. Price, $1 50 per annum; fifteen cents a number.

—St. Nicholas, for this month, is simply beautiful beyond compare. Our young people have a luscious feast of dainties and substantials in this Christmas number. Frank Stockton, J. T. Trowbridge, Washington Gladden, and others, contribute to this number. Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—Popular Science, for December, has its usual complement of scientific articles, presenting science in its various phases. We specially commend, A Great Lesson, by the Duke of Argyll. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price, $5.

—The Eclectic gives us a loaded table of the very best food for the intellect. This number closes the forty-sixth volume of the new series. We commenced this monthly to you for the next year. E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York. Price, $5.

—The Forum, for December, has some notable names attached to its articles—John A. Kasson, Murat Halstead, James Parton, Frances E. Willard, Park Benjamin, and others. This periodical is well worth the attention of all thinking people. If you will read it next year, you will be much wiser thereby. Forum Publishing Company, 97 Fifth Avenue, New York. Price, $5.

—The Century, for December, opens with The Sea of Galilee, by E. L. Wilson; and then we have After the War, by J. G. Perkins; An Large, by George W. Cable; Parisian Newspapers, by Brander Matthews; Lincoln's Inauguration, by Nicolay and Hay; Memoranda of the Civil War; Topics of the Time; Open Letters, etc. Century Company, Union Square, New York. Price, $4.

—Christmas Wide Awake is made up of thirty-five poems, stories, sketches, papers of all sorts, long and short, and pictures—fifty-seven. Both writers and artists are such as stand for timely help along the highway of life with good cheer in the bargain. If such an amount of such work of pen and pencil was made into Christmas books, they would cost as many dollars as cents in Wide Awake.

Think of it, $20-worth of the stuff that Christmas books are made of for twenty cents! Besides there is a part not reckoned, but which is full of interest—32 pages of pictures of Christmas things to be got for a little work. There is many a boy and girl who will find in those 32 pages not only Christmas delight, but hints toward wider fortune.

By all means have the Christmas Wide Awake. If your bookseller hasn't got it, send to the publishers, D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

—The American Magazine is in all its features a superb Christmas number. Christ-Ideals in American Art, by W. H. Ingersoll, is worth the price of the magazine. Other articles of interest and value make up a magnificent monthly.

—Babyhood, for December, commends itself to all parents. It is rich in suggestive information, and every family ought to have it. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman street, New York. Price, $1 50.

The American edition of The Illustrated London News keeps well apace with the leading events of the world, superbly illustrating all passing events of note—no country being too remote for its comprehensive enterprise. Each number is a magazine in itself, and of the highest order, its reading matter having attained a high standard throughout the English-reading world. The subscription consists of fifty-two numbers during the year for the modest sum of four dollars, including all supplements issued during the year. The Christmas number this year will exceed in beauty and finish anything heretofore published, being a double number, with fifteen full-page illustrations, besides four beautiful colored pictures from attractive paintings—the whole being a marvel in the illustrated periodical line. This edition will be on sale after December 1 by all newsdealers, or the Illustrated News Company, Potter Building, New York.

In Russia, the Czar has failed to gain control of the anti-Teutonic party, the majority of the imperial council not being convinced of the friendly intentions of the German government. The Russian press does not obey the order to cease attacking Germany.

BUSINESS PROSPERITY.—In conversation with one of our most intelligent and successful business men, a short time ago, he informed us that the business prospects of our city and surrounding country had not been so promising for a long time. The grain crops had been abundant, the cotton and sugar crops were better than for years, and the prices for all very good. The Picayune, of last Saturday, gives the figures which show that the business of this city, beginning with October 7 and ending December 2, has exceeded that of the same period of last year by $21,547,000 as shown by the bank clearances. The receipts of cotton are nearly 200,000 bales ahead of last year, and the receipts of sugar are about double. Prices of all staple articles, except coffee, have steadily advanced. Such being the case, our people have much cause for gratitude, and, in their abundance, should recognize the claims of God, and give more largely than ever of their means for the extension of the kingdom of Christ among men.

Mr. J. T. Trowbridge

Has been called the Thackeray of writers for boys. He will not only contribute a serial story to the Youth's Companion for 1888, but also a true narrative of his own boyhood and his early struggles for literary distinction. The latter will be supplemented by a similar paper written by Miss Alcott, in which she will give the autobiography of her girlhood. Some of her "Little Women" will appear here without any of the disguises of fiction.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears, it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR.,
Publisher.

P. WERLEIN.—Take notice of the new advertisement of Mr. Philip Werlein, in this issue of the ADVOCATE, and see the extra inducements offered for music and musical instruments, of which there is an immense stock to select from. The wares of the best manufactures in the world can be found on sale at this mammoth establishment, at prices unheard of and terms which bring within the reach of everyone, making an endeavor, the possibility to secure a first-class instrument. Testimonials from the first people in the South ready for exhibit, showing forth the liberality and fair dealing of the great piano house of P. Werlein, 125 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

It is no credit to say of a man that he is regular as a clock. To some it might imply that he moved through life on tick.

Do not fail to read the notice, "How to Make Money," to be found in this issue of the ADVOCATE. A goodly number of farmers in our Southern country have taken stock in the new departure of truck farming, and find that fruit culture is a profitable branch. The notice of Col. Stuart, respecting the celebrated variety of pear trees which he is at present handling, should have the immediate attention of every farmer who reads it, as now is the time and season for this work, and prices are such as to enable every farmer to set out a score of first-class trees.

"I am going to take the neck strain," said the criminal as he stood on the gallows waiting to be hung.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to gain in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and dinners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.
Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.
Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

SOMETHING WHICH MAY BE LOST.

Climbing up on the railing, one day,
Which guarded the pansies—a slip and a fall,
And down 'mid the blossoms she lay!
No very bad bruises were found on her knees,
And very few tears in her eyes,
"The child lost her balance," her grandma declared:
May listened in wondering surprise.
They missed her, and down in the pansies she knelt,
Now peering first this way and that:
"'Tis gone—some one stealed it," she calmly announced,
Looking up from the depths of her hat.
"And what did you drop?" asked her mamma, surprised
(And kissed the cheeks all aglow).
They laughed at her answer, and kissed her again:
"My balance—I lost it, you know!"
—Our Little Ones.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to publish my other letter, I will write again. I still go to school to Mr. Collins. I also go to Sunday-school. My aunt, Mrs. Mortay, is my teacher. Mr. Editor, I will tell you about our protracted meetings. Bro. Foust came and helped Bro. Johns, and we had a glorious meeting. Bro. Foust and Bro. Johns preached such good sermons. There were nine that joined the church. I was one of them. I am nine years old. Do you think, Mr. Editor, I am too young to be a member of the church? I have two brothers and seven sisters; all are members of the church except three. I will close for this time. Little cousins, can any of you tell me where in the Bible this passage is found: "Almost thou persuadeth me to be a Christian?" With much love to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your little friend,
MARVIN P. HODGES.
COTTON VALLEY, Louisiana.

(The editor does not think that you are too young to be a member of the church.)

MR. EDITOR: Grandma requires me to read, to morrow, for a composition, a letter, and she also wishes me to write a letter to you; so this must do for both. It is a task for me to write. I can not think of anything to say like sister can. Sister was worried when she saw her letter in the ADVOCATE with two mistakes. We had looked the spelling-book through for a word having all the vowels in regular order; but could not find one. Sister looked in a small pronouncing dictionary and found "abstemious," "abstemiously," etc. Our papa died April 20, instead of the twenty-sixth. Aunt Loretta, your puzzle is too hard for a little boy like me. We never thought of praying for the editor until you mentioned it. Grandma and mamma teach us to pray for everybody, especially ministers and their families. I would write more, but am tired of writing, and there is cotton to pick. Yours respectfully,

GARDNER D. CURRIE.
EAST CARROLL, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As this is Thanksgiving Day, and we have a holiday, I thought I would write to the ADVOCATE. Mr. McCombs preached a Thanksgiving sermon to-day in the Baptist Church. His text was Psalms cxvi, 12. I am going to school. Misses Maud Whitehead and Mamie Bush are our teachers. Bro. Williams, of Utica, was to see us the fifth Sunday in October. We enjoyed his visit very much. I will ask a question: What miracle did Jesus perform with one word?

Your friend,
MINNIE ROBERTS.
LEARNED, Mississippi.

CHILLS and fever are the result of a malarious climate, but they can be cured by Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. They are pleasant to take, mild in their action and a certain cure.

MR. EDITOR: Will you be so kind as to publish a short letter for us. We are four little girls going to school to Mr. Collins. We all like him. He is so kind to us. We also go to Sunday-school. Our preachers' names are Bro. Blocker and Bro. Johns. We like them both. We call Bro. Johns our little preacher, but we tell you, Mr. Editor, he can preach big sermons if he is a little man. We have no pets but our little brothers and sisters. They are very sweet to us. Well, Mr. Editor, for fear we will bother you, we will close by asking a question: Who anointed Saul king? We remain,

Your little friends,
JULIA A. HODGES,
LELIA L. HODGES,
MARY S. HODGES,
CLARA D. HODGES.
COTTON VALLEY, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As this is my first letter to a newspaper, I hope I will see it in print. My aunt has been taking your valuable paper a long time, and how I enjoy reading the little cousins' letters! We have Sabbath-school every Sunday. Capt. Bob Smith is our superintendent, and Rev. Mr. Cooper our pastor. We all love them very much. I will answer Ellis R. Allen's and Ellender J. Graves' questions: "Figtree" is found in St. Luke xiii, 6: "Trust in the Lord and do good," is found in Psalms xxxvii, 3. If you will permit me, I will also answer Edward Hood's: The longest verse in the Bible is found in Esther viii, 9. Can any of my little cousins tell me in what Psalm is found: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee?"

Your little friend,
EDITH M. CHICHESTER.
EDWARDS DEPOT, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your valuable paper, allow me to have a few words with the young people. We have Sunday-school twice a month. Our superintendent is Mr. B. W. Newman. We like him very much. Our pastor is Rev. G. A. Mandeville. We like him so much. He has but one more time to preach for us, unless the Bishop is so kind as to send him back to us another year. Will any of the young folks tell me where is the shortest verse in the Bible found? I will answer Birdie Harelson's question: The longest verse in the Bible may be found in Esther viii, 9. For fear my letter will reach that horrible waste-basket, I will close. With many good wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain, Yours ever,

JOHN M. LINDSEY.
RED RIVER PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to your paper in so long, I thought I would write again. We had a protracted meeting at Pine Grove Church. There were thirteen accessions to the church. I will answer some of the little cousins' questions: Henry Lewis, Adam was nine hundred and thirty years old when he died. It is found in Genesis v, 5. Marshal Holland: "candlestick" is found in Matthew v, 15. Rhoda Bush, the nineteenth chapter of II Kings and thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah are alike. I will close by asking a question: How many books, chapters, verses, words and letters are there in the Old and New Testament? With many good wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain, as ever,

CATIE C. JONES.
PINE GROVE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a boy only ten years old. I live in a little town. My grandpa takes the ADVOCATE, and I am anxious to tell you how much your valuable paper is appreciated in our home. I am fond of reading, and enjoy the children's letters very much. All our family are Methodists. I read in the fifth reader, and I spell every day. I attend school. Our teacher has a badge which is given for silence. I got it last Friday, and am very proud of it.

Your friend,
SAM F. M'CLELLAN.

A CHILD'S INFLUENCE.—Little Mary, one evening when all were silent, looked anxiously in the face of her backsliding father, who had ceased to pray in his family, and said to him with quivering lips, "Pa, is God dead?"

"No, my child—why do you ask that?"

"Why, pa, you never talk to him now as you used to do."

These words haunted the father until he was mercifully reclaimed.

Household.

As the guest of others, we have often suffered over the "point of etiquette" mentioned below, and, therefore, we print this little scrap for the benefit of our housekeepers, and beg them to bear it in mind especially when they have the privilege of entertaining "over night" a tired preacher.—ED.

A POINT OF ETIQUETTE.—It is always a debatable point of etiquette whether hostess or guest make the first movement to go to bed, and thus break up the evening gathering. The guest may be overcome with fatigue from a day's journey, the host may be fidgeting under the strain of entertaining, and longing for the guest to show some signs by which he can gracefully and hospitably suggest "that it is growing late," yet neither quite like to appear, as they think, impolite. In fact, many visitors have suffered agonies in trying to be agreeable, while the host and hostess were doing their best to suppress their yawns and to "make conversation," until chance offered a solution of the difficulty. There is, however, but one rule to be followed in this relationship of host and hostess, and the hour of retirement. The host or hostess must always take the initiative and say an appropriate word as to the lateness of the hour and the desirability of going to bed.—Boston Beacon.

MARRIAGE IN HOLLAND.—Marriage-making in Holland seems to be carried on in a systematic manner. According to the Pall Mall Gazette, of the twelve months in the year, December is reckoned in certain villages in Holland to be by far the most important. The four Sundays of this month are known respectively as Review Sunday, Decision Sunday, Purchase Sunday and Possession Sunday, names which sufficiently explain the purposes to which each is put by the young people. On the first Thursday in December all the villagers turn out in their best attire to be present at the village fair and watch the respective couples perform the country dance which is the invariable opening of such events. On Review Sunday the unmarried girls and young men after the morning service walk up and down staring at one another to their heart's content. Having made up their minds whom to select on the following Sunday, the youths, with the politest bows imaginable, salute the fair ones, and judge from the way in which their courtesy is responded to whether success or defeat is to be their lot. The third Sunday is devoted to the less romantic task of obtaining the consent of the parents and arranging in business-like fashion the details of the marriage settlement. All the following week the parson is busy at marrying, but not until Possession Sunday comes round are the happy betrothed permitted more than an affectionate gaze, or a most tender squeeze of the hand.

How do parents provoke their children? By unreasonable commands, by perpetual restriction, by capricious jerks at the bridle, alternating with as capricious dropping the reins altogether: by not governing their own tempers, by shrill or stern tones where quiet, soft ones would do, by frequent checks and rebukes, and sparing praise. And what is sure to follow such mistreatment by father or mother? Bursts of temper, for which the child is punished and the parent is guilty, and then spiritless listlessness and apathy. "I can not please him, whatever I do," leads to a rankling sense of injustice, and then to recklessness—"It is useless to try any more." And when a man or child loses heart, there will be no more obedience. Many a parent, especially many a father, drives his child into evil by keeping him at a distance. He should make his boy a companion and playmate, teach him to think of his father as his confidant, try to keep his child nearer to himself than to anybody else, and then his authority will be absolute, his opinion an oracle, and his lightest wish a law.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

If you have catarrh, you are in danger, as the disease is liable to become chronic and affect your general health, or develop into consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures catarrh by purifying and enriching the blood, and building up the System. Give it a trial.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with

Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

TARVER—WILLIAM ALLEN TARVER, son of Rev. Elijah Tarver, was born in Pike county, Miss., March 16, 1838, and was "born again," when about fifteen years of age, at a camp meeting near Liberty, Amite county, Miss. He was married December 17, 1867, to Julia A. Muse, daughter of Rev. and Hon. James H. Muse, of Louisiana. To them were born a number of sons and daughters, four preceding him to the grave, and six with their mother surviving to mourn his death. He died in Amite county, Sunday morning, October 30, 1887. As a son, he was dutiful; as a husband, faithful; as a father, kind and affectionate; as a friend, sincere; as a Mason, true; as a man, honest; and as a Christian, consistent, devoted to his church and ready to meet any demands upon him. He prayed in private, at the family altar, and in the prayer meetings. He was a visiting class-leader. He read his Bible and the ADVOCATE. Aided by his Christian wife, he was bringing up his children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." A sweet-spirited Christian daughter had gone before him to the better world, and every one of the surviving children, over five years old, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The large concourse at the funeral attested the hold he had upon the affections of his old neighbors. We laid his body away, with Christian and masonic ceremonies, in hope of a glorious resurrection. T. L. MELLEN.

JONES—JOHN WALTON, son of Jesse T. and Kannie Jones, died near Summit, Pike county, Miss., aged one year, ten months and nineteen days. Walton was a sweet, precious boy and very promising. The parents were much devoted to him. He was not only the joy and pride of devoted parents, but of hosts of friends and relatives. The Savior said, "For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Our loved ones can not come to us, but we may go to them. May Walton wait at the beautiful gate and greet his parents! "Another jewel for my crown is wanted," said the King. The angels spread their snowy wings, and thus begin to sing, "Hosanna! hosanna! a jewel for our King."

PERSINGER—Resolutions passed by the Campte Sunday-school on the death of MRS. ALICE PERSINGER.

The committee appointed to draft resolutions in memory of our sister, pupil and class-mate, Mrs. Alice Persinger, submit the following:

Whereas, An all-wise Providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved pupil and class-mate; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we feel the great loss that we have sustained in this sad event, and that her death has caused a vacancy in our school and church circle that can not be filled by another. That we will ever remember her as a sweet companion and friend, and that we will never hear her gentle voice again in our class, nor mingle our songs of praise together.

Resolved, That we will cherish her memory, strive to emulate her virtues, and at the same time bow to the will of him who "doeth all things well."

Resolved, That the Sunday-school at this place has lost one of its most worthy members. That the whole school unite in heart-felt sympathy with the family of our deceased friend and class-mate, and especially the husband and mother, and pray God to comfort and sustain them in this, their hour of need.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be tendered the family, and one be entered in minutes of the Sunday-school, and a copy be furnished the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication. S. P. RAINES, for Com.

FARMER—ALTA ANNA BELLE, daughter of B. F. and M. E. Farmer, was born March 9, 1881, and died near Downsville, August 21, 1887, aged three years, five months and fourteen days. This sweet flower budded on earth three summers; but ere the chilling winds of another winter, God removed her to bloom in paradise. She was one of the sweetest and brightest ever sent to gladden the hearts of a loving father and mother. That sweet kiss and fond embrace are felt no more; her place at the fireside and table are vacant; her little playthings are laid away; and that sweet voice, oh! how it is missed. But weep not, dear father and mother, God is good, and we must believe "that he doeth all things well." Our little Alta went straight to Jesus, and is now walking the streets of that beautiful city above. HER AUNT.

FRIDGE—EMMA ZENAIDA FRIDGE was born January 27, 1885; died July 21, 1887. Although she continued on earth but a short time, she had become so identified with the lives of parents, brothers, sisters and friends, that it was a severe trial to give her up. But let her parents remember that she is another tie to bind them to the glory-land. PASTOR.

Ills of Children.

Mrs. M. J. French, of Ludington, Mich., writes of the successful treatment of her child for "diphtheria" with "Compound Oxygen." Mothers everywhere are finding it an aid to them in many ways, and are enthusiastic in their praise of this simple and pleasant remedy.

A mother, writing from Italy Hill, N. Y., says:

"I believe I never told you that I gave it to my two children, who had always been very slender, and have never had to call in a doctor for them since. They are both healthy now."

A gentleman of Brooklyn, New York, writes of the restoration of a son of ten years from gastric fever, after having been given up by his physician.

A young gentleman of Roxbury, New York, who had from infancy been a great sufferer from asthma, writes that by its use he has been entirely cured, and wishes he could tell every asthma sufferer of the value of Compound Oxygen.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," is the title of a volume of two hundred pages, published by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., which will be mailed free to any address on application.

The ancients painted Opportunity with a hairy forehead, but bald behind, to signify that while a man hath opportunity before him, he may lay hold on it; but if he suffer it to slip away, he can not pull it back again.—Brooks.

To Lucy's Harness.

Most women naturally look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life, but they should constantly bear in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form, are the best passports to a happy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weaknesses, "dragging-down" sensations, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex, have an unfailing specific in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Humanity is more than mere civilization. Humanity does not consist in politeness and graceful forms alone, but in the just treatment of all as in like conditions we would wish to be treated.

Suit Yourself,

but there is no other remedy for sick headache, dizziness, constipation, biliousness, or to restore a regular, healthy action to the liver, stomach and bowels, equal to those reliable little "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" prepared by Dr. Pierce. Of druggists.

Everything but God leaves an aching void. Nothing but God satisfies.

EXTREME nervousness, attended with fear, and superstition is cured at once by using Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.

COLORS OF SWEDISH EYES.—Prof. Wittrock read a paper before the Swedish Anthropological Society on the investigations into the hereditability of the color of the eyes, which he had undertaken at the instance of Prof. Alphonse de Candolle. These results differed from those which Prof. de Candolle had published for Switzerland, North Germany, and Belgium. Brown eyes were more common among women than among men. From the fact that 56 per cent. of the children of parents who were bi-colored (or one of whom had brown and the other blue eyes) had brown eyes, it appeared that eyes of that color were on the increase. The majority of wives had brown eyes. The average number of children of con-colored parents was 4.49, and that of bi-colored parents 4.03—contrary to Prof. de Candolle's observations, which gave the larger number to bi-colored parents. It also appeared that 52.6 per cent. of the children inherited the eyes of the father, and 47.4 per cent. those of the mother; of the sons, 51.8 per cent. inherited the father's, and 48.2 per cent. those of the mother, while the figures with regard to the daughters were respectively 53.5 and 46.5 per cent. These figures show that in Sweden the eyes are not predominantly inherited from the mother alone, and that the offspring of equally constituted parents should not be weaker than they. Children under ten years of age were excluded from the examinations, and blue-gray and gray eyes were classified as blue.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE HUMAN FAMILY.—The human family living to-day on earth consists of about 1,450,000,000 individuals; not less, probably more. These are distributed over the earth's surface so that now there is no considerable part where man is not found. In Asia, where he was first planted, there are now approximately about 800,000,000, densely crowded; on an average of 120 to the square mile. In Europe are 350,000,000, averaging 100 to the square mile—not so crowded, but everywhere dense, and at all points overpopulated. In Africa there are 200,000,000. In America, North and South, there are 110,000,000, relatively thinly scattered and recent. In the Islands, large and small, probably 10,000,000. The extremes of the white and black are as five to three; the remaining 700,000,000, intermediate brown and tawny. Of the race, 500,000,000 are well clothed—that is, wear garments of some kind to cover their nakedness; 700,000,000 are semi-clothed, covering inferior parts of the body; 250,000,000 are practically naked. Of the race, 500,000,000 live in houses partly furnished with the appointments of civilization; 800,000,000 live in huts or caves with no furnishing; 260,000,000 have nothing that can be called a home, are barbarous and savage. The range is from the topmost round—the Anglo-Saxon civilization, which is the highest known—down to the naked savagery. The portion of the race lying below the line of human condition is at the very least three-fifths of the whole—900,000,000.—Philadelphia Record.

We do not know in what regions of space meteors originate, nor what courses they follow before they come within the sphere of the earth's attraction. They have been supposed to be ejections from volcanoes in the moon. If this were the case, they would have to be supposed to have been ejected by the eruption with velocity enough to pass the neutral point, or the point where a body is equally attracted by the moon and the earth. That velocity should be at least 2,270 metres a second, or about five times that of a cannon ball; if it were less, the mass would fall back to the moon. Another more probable supposition is that they come from a group of minute asteroids which revolve in the space between Mars and Jupiter, whose orbits cross those of the large planets, ours included, and are occasionally met by the earth in its course. There is nothing else, since the beautiful researches of Schiaparelli have connected the periodical swarms of shooting-stars with comets, to assure us that they do not come from still more distant parts of the sky, or even from without the solar system.—Daubree.

"Doctoring Old Time."

A STRIKING PICTURE. A REVIVAL OF OLD-TIME SIMPLICITIES.

In one of Harper's issues is given a very fine illustration of Roberts' celebrated painting, known as "Doctoring Old Time." It represents a typical old-timer, with his bellows, blowing the dust from an ancient clock, with its cords and weights carefully secured. One of these clocks in this generation is appreciated only as a rare relic.

The suggestive name, "Doctoring Old Time," brings to our mind another version of the title, used for another purpose—"Old Time Doctoring."

We learn, through a reliable source, that one of the enterprising proprietary medicine firms of the country, has been for years investigating the formulas and medical preparations used in the beginning of this century, and even before, with a view of ascertaining why people in our great-grandfathers' time enjoyed a health and physical vigor so seldom found in the present generation. They now think they have secured the secret or secrets. They find that the prevailing opinion that then existed, that "Nature has a remedy for every existing disorder," was true, and acting under this belief, our grandparents used the common herbs and plants. Continual trespass upon the forest domain, has made these herbs less abundant, and has driven them further from civilization, until they have been discarded as remedial agents because of the difficulty of obtaining them.

H. H. Warner, proprietor of Warner's safe cure, and founder of the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., has been pressing investigations in this direction, into the annals of old family histories, until he has secured some very valuable formulas, from which his firm is now preparing medicines, to be sold by all druggists.

They will, we learn, be known under the general title of "Warner's Log Cabin Remedies." Among these medicines will be a "Sarsaparilla" for the blood and liver, "Log Cabin Hops and Buchu Remedy," for the stomach, etc., "Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy," a remedy called "Scalpine," for the hair, "Log Cabin Extract," for internal and external use, and an old valuable discovery for Catarrh, called "Log Cabin Rose Cream." Among the list is also a "Log Cabin Plaster," and a "Log Cabin Liver Pill."

From the number of remedies, it will be seen that they no not propose to cure all diseases with one preparation. It is believed by many that with these remedies a new era is to dawn upon suffering humanity, and that the close of the nineteenth century will see these roots and herbs, as compounded under the title of Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, as popular as they were at its beginning. Although they come in the form of proprietary medicines, yet they will be none the less welcome, for suffering humanity has become tired of modern doctoring, and the public has great confidence in any remedies put up by the firm of which H. H. Warner is the head. The people have become suspicious of the effects of doctoring with poisonous drugs. Few realize the injurious efferts following the prescriptions of many modern physicians. These effects of poisonous drugs, already prominent, will become more pronounced in coming generations. Therefore, we can cordially wish the old-fashioned new remedies the best of success.

The natural life still flourishes in us if we have an outward eye closely watching and judging others, instead of looking inwardly upon our own failings. True humility and sanctity ask, "Who maketh thee to differ?"

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,
181 Pearl St., New York.

Happy is he who has learned to do the plain duty of the moment quickly and cheerfully, wherever and whatever it may be.

SICK headache, is the bane of many lives. This annoying complaint may be cured and prevented by the occasional use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. They are pleasant to take, no larger than a pin head, and are the ladies' favorite for biliousness, bad taste in the mouth, jaundice, for leucorrhea and painful menstruation.

EDUCATIONAL.
Mansfield Female College.
1887-8.
THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.
The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Biddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and their, with their families, will add much to the social advantage of the girls.
Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.
Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.
Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.
A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.
Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.
The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.
Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.
Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.
F. M. GRACE, PRESIDENT.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Port Royal, the finest port on the southern coast has been purchased by an English syndicate, who will establish banks and put on a line of steamers between Augusta, Ga., and Liverpool.

The bridge over the Mississippi river at Dubuque, Iowa, has been opened with imposing ceremonies. It is one of the finest on the river, and is fifty feet above high water mark.

At the last meeting of the Vicksburg Improvement Committee, $26,000 was subscribed for the purpose of building a cotton mill in that place.

An attempt has been made to get the seven Crow warriors away from Fort Snelling, and so prevent their being taken to Florida, before they are tried in Minnesota.

The New York commissioner of public works has ordered that all work in the streets, including excavations, shall be stopped. The stoppage throws 6,000 men out of employment.

Jacob Sharp has been granted a new trial.

Gov. Ross, of Texas, has called in experts to examine the capitol building and make needed changes in the dome.

The revenue officers and some illicit distillers have had a fight on Sand Mountain, Ala., which resulted in mortally wounding one of the distillers.

The present cotton crop is set down now at 6,180,000 bales.

The experts, who examined the dome of the capital of Texas, found it three-fourths of an inch out of plumb. The structure is 300 feet high.

Two illicit distilleries in the neighborhood of Corinth, Miss., have been broken up and their owners are in jail.

A. S. Colyar, of Nashville, has been recommended to the President, to succeed late Minister Manning, in the Mexican Mission.

The Fiftieth Congress assembled on Monday, and both Houses organized for the despatch of business. Senator Ingalls is president of the Senate, and Congressman Carlisle, Speaker of the House. Everything was done decently and in order.

The Supreme Court has decided the Kansas prohibition statutes to be constitutional. In the same court the motion to punish Mayor Guillotte, of this city, for contempt was denied.

The papers announce the death of Gen. William H. Emory, one of the most distinguished soldiers of the late war.

FOREIGN.

Queen Victoria expects to visit San Remo in January.

The German budget passed its first reading in the Reichstag, and was referred to a committee.

The meeting held at Count Waldensee's residence to discuss the social question, has caused a sensation among cathedral dignitaries. Drs. Koenel and Frommel were among those present.

President Grevy, in his message to Parliament, will give as a reason for resigning the refusal of all leading statesmen to form a cabinet.

The General Council has adopted a resolution in favor of Congress revising the Constitution and abolishing the Senate and presidency.

A number of members of the Chamber of Deputies have called on President Grevy, at the Palace Elysee, and requested him not to resign.

President Grevy has at last resigned. Freycinet is the choice of the Republican groups as his successor. Serious rioting occurred in Paris, many persons being wounded by the police.

Lord Mayor Sullivan has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment for printing in his paper reports of suppressed branches of the National League.

The Congress of Senators and Deputies to elect a successor to President Grevy, after two ballots, elected M. Sadi-Carnot. He received 616 votes out of 821. The Parisians are well pleased with the selection. The election is also satisfactory to the Germans, as the new President is considered to prefer a neutral, pacific policy and will try to govern through a ministry with the same tendencies.

Rev. Daniel McGillgan, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of Ireland, is dead.

In Austria, the issue of the French crisis is regarded as satisfactory.

An earthquake in Calabria has rendered 4,000 persons homeless, and many others are missing.

A sensational report of an Irish plot to murder Lord Hartington, comes from Ireland.

The English, Russian and German newspapers congratulate France on the election of Sadi-Carnot as President of the Republic. It is the show of a firm front against monarchist intrigues and anarchist outbreaks, and a guarantee of peace within and without France.

M. Gavard, of Geneva, has been elected President, and M. Schoch, of Schaffhausen, Vice-president, of Switzerland. Both are radicals.

At a conference, in London, to consider the condition of the working classes, at which Lord Herschell presided, resolutions were adopted calling upon the government to undertake local relief works and to take measures to assist emigration and to prevent immigration.

The Holidays

And the colder winter weather are now rapidly approaching. The joyful season is eagerly anticipated by young folks in thousands of homes; but in nearly all there are one or more older ones to whom the cold waves and the storms mean renewed suffering from rheumatic back or limbs. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a positive specific for rheumatism; we doubt if there is or can be such a remedy. But the remarkable success Hood's Sarsaparilla has had in curing this affection is sufficient reason for those who are suffering to try this peculiar medicine.

Felicity Street Church.

BUILT, 1850. BURNED, 1887. REBUILT, 1888.

Anyone who knows and loves her; anyone who has served at her altars, or found Christ precious within her sanctuaries; anyone who has ever attended or worked in her Sunday-school as scholar, teacher or officer; any stranger without her gates; any friend, whoever and wherever dispersed, having a mind to assist in the rebuilding of Felicity Street Church, has now an opportunity. All are invited to help. "Who gives quickly gives twice."

The church approaches rapidly to completion, and will soon call her children and well-wishers once more to offer, under the shadow of her walls, the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise. Contributions, however small, in aid will be promptly acknowledged by the treasurer and gratefully appreciated by the people. Send them to the preacher in charge, Rev. S. H. Werlein, care of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans.

A Wonderful Food and Medicine.

Known and used by Physicians all over the world. Scott's Emulsion not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food that builds up the wasted body. "I have been using Scott's Emulsion for several years, and am pleased with its action. My patients say it is pleasant and palatable, and all grow stronger and gain flesh from the use of it. I use it in all cases of Wasting Diseases, and it is specially useful for children when nutrient medication is needed, as in Marasmus."—T. W. PIERCE, M. D., Knoxville, Ala.

It takes but a small object when sufficiently near the eye to shut a universe from view. It takes but a little thing, when sufficiently near the heart, to blind it into a darkness which shuts out God and everything in the present and proposed administrations of his grace.—Wesleyan Methodist.

DECEMBER.

I.

Deep-shining, like the oyster-pearl, twelve fathoms down,
Each fleeting month a fathom, ebbing like a tide,
Christ's birthday gleams, engarmented in frost and gold,
Even as the pearl is woven in the rainbow's vivid hues.
Month of holy birth, all hail! Messiah's natal day!
Burst forth, O Christmas bells, in joyous jubilee;
Echo, O sounding bells, tones that shall stay and sway:
"Redeemed! redeemed from death thro' Christ! sin-free!"

II.

Deal prudently, my God,
Endow with gracious strength,
Create anew my shining heart,
Engage my life at length.
My trust in thee is fixed;
By Jesus freed from sin;
Endless my joys when, Savior, thou
Read grace and glory in!

Our English Letter.

English Methodism mourns the death of its most distinguished and influential layman—Sir William McArthur, K. C. M. G. He died in a carriage of the London Underground railroad, on the morning of November 16. The deceased gentleman was the son of an Irish Wesleyan minister. He was Lord Mayor of London during the year of the Ecumenical Conference, and gave a banquet at the Mansion House, at which Bishop McTyeire, Dr. McFerrin, Dr. C. K. Marshall, and other distinguished ministers of the Methodist Church, South, were present. One of the latest acts of Sir William's life was to give $50,000 to the Methodist College at Belfast.

The West End Mission, recently inaugurated by Hugh Price Hughes, M. A., and Mark Guy Pearse, is already a glorious success. Thousands flock to hear the word of life as proclaimed by these earnest evangelists.

Mr. Spurgeon's recent action in withdrawing from the Baptist Union has excited considerable comment on both sides of the Atlantic. The Methodist papers in the United States seem to uphold him in his course, while in England the feeling is one of almost universal regret. The Baptist Union represents 2,000 churches and 200,000 members. An insignificant minority has departed from the evangelical faith; but this no more justifies Mr. Spurgeon in his course than would the apostacy of Judas, or the vehement denial of Peter, have justified the other apostles in leaving the college.

Mr. Spurgeon is "an old fogy." While he is honored and beloved by his brethren, and while his "praise is in all the churches," he is behind the times. He fails to appreciate the importance of the great moral and political movements now transpiring in the British Isles. A year or two ago, when Mrs. Butler, Mr. Stead, Mr. Hughes, and other reformers started the Social Purity crusade, Mr. Spurgeon had his doubts about the propriety of the movement, and refused to co-operate. When the Salvation Army began its victorious march, he could not tolerate the innovation, and bitterly denounced the enterprise. When justice to Ireland became the absorbing question of British politics, Mr. Spurgeon's sympathies went with the oppressor rather than with the oppressed, and now the old-time Puritanism drives him from the midst of his brethren.

Among the recent publications of the Wesleyan Conference Office are two works of more than ordinary interest: the second volume of the Life of Jabez Bunting, D. D., and the Life of William Morley Punshon, LL.D. These may be noticed in my next. O.

Local Option Legislation in Louisiana.

BY REV. J. N. PACE.

Pres. Inst. Prohibition Convention of Louisiana.

If a reason for occupying this space with this subject be asked for, it may be found in the fact that the writer is constantly in receipt of letters of inquiry as to the law of Louisiana relating to prohibition, and the interpretation of it. The rapidity with which interest along this line is growing, together with the fact that portions of the State heretofore regarded as "sold under" whisky is wanting a more perfect understanding of the Local Option Law of the State, is reason to hope that the day is not far distant when the temples of Bacchus will be torn down, and the idols—jugs—be "cast down and ground to powder."

Parishes which have recently voted "dry" for the second time (or for a greater number of times) have done so by increased majorities, while those which have once, or oftener, voted "wet," have done so with constantly reducing majorities.

These facts go to establish confidence, and this increasing confidence is rapidly drawing the better class of men of all creeds, and parties, and colors into line, and pushing on the grand work of local prohibition.

Previously to 1855 the people seemed not to realize the fact that, by a general license law, they had sold their liberties and were left at the mercy of those who wished to engage in the liquor traffic, thereby demoralizing men and debauching boys.

At that time (1855) the Legislature saw the point, and (whether from these motives or others) determined that the masses should have some rights as well as the few who might desire to engage in that hurtful sort of business.

The law, as passed by that Legislature, and under the sanction of the Constitution then in force, authorized the police juries of the several parishes, together with the mayor and council of the several towns, and the mayor and Board of Aldermen of the city of New Orleans, to pass laws regulating the sale, or the prohibition of the sale of ardent liquors, and to grant or withhold licenses from drinking-houses. In order to ascertain the "sense of the people," the act authorized these several authorities to order elections whenever they deemed it necessary, "provided said elections should not be held more than once a year."

This act, it will be seen, gave to the town authorities concurrent jurisdiction with the parochial authorities, and frequently resulted in conflict, e. g.: A ward of a parish having say—300 voters in it, and an incorporated town with twenty-five voters, would vote "against license" almost unanimously; then "the mayor and councilmen" of the town would come up with thirteen of the twenty-five voters in the town, and, by holding an election for the "incorporated town," vote in what 300 voters had voted out of the ward.

To overcome this conflict, growing out of the fact that the town authorities had jurisdiction of the question as to granting or withholding licenses for drinking-houses within the incorporation, the Legislature, in 1881, amended and re-enacted the act of 1855, taking the jurisdiction of the question of license out of the hands of town authorities, and vesting it wholly in the hands of the police jury, so that an election, when held for a parish at large, is as binding on the incorporated town in the parish "as if said election had been held by the authority of said town."

It was soon seen, however, that the act of 1881, although of vast utility to the cause of local prohibition, was still inadequate, owing to the fact that druggists were allowed to sell liquor on prescriptions without a license, and a few physicians could be found who will give "prescriptions" as "a matter of accommodation."

This difficulty was removed by the Legislature of 1886 in two ways, viz.: (1) By inserting into the license bill a proviso that liquor should not be sold in any quantity—at retail—without first obtaining a fifty-dollar license; and (2) by so amending the penal statute as to provide a penalty against all doctors who might attempt to evade the law by means of a prescription, and making the question as to the validity of the prescription triable by jury.

The Constitution of Louisiana—1879—is very liberal touching the question of the liquor traffic. Art. 170 declares the traffic to be subject of police regulation, and says: "The Legislature may pass laws regulating its sale and use."

This is all the legislation we have on the question of the liquor traffic, and the success of local-prohibition under this frail system of laws has simply been phenomenal. These laws need to be systematized and extended.

Beside those now on the books we need an amendment to the law relating to "public carriers," in order to prevent an indiscriminate transportation of liquor into prohibition communities.

We need also an amendment to the act of 1884, recognizing the rights of the masses, and requiring a vote before license can be issued. If it is right to consult the people as to giving up an evil, it is certainly right to consult them as to whether they will have it. Why should one man be allowed to enter a community of several hundred people, engage in a business obnoxious to them, and force them to the trouble and expense of voting the man and his business out? Let him ask permission, and if they want, let them vote him in.

However, as the law now stands, we may sum it up thus:

1. Each and every municipal organization has authority to vote out the liquor traffic, or vote it in, if taken in the ascending line.

2. But taken in the descending line, the larger municipality has authority over the smaller. Hence, a town of a ward, or a ward of a parish may vote the traffic out; and if a town votes "dry," the ward can not turn round and vote it "wet:" but if the town votes "wet," the ward can vote it "dry." The same principle applies to the parish. If a parish votes "dry," everything in it—towns and wards—is dry; but a town or a ward may vote "dry," while all the other portions of the parish may vote "wet." The purpose of the law seems to be to give the smallest municipality an opportunity to rid itself of the curse of the liquor traffic.

3. The vote can not be taken in any municipality oftener than once a year. But I see nothing in the law to prevent the police jury from refusing license without the trouble of an election. The authority to "regulate the sale, or the prohibition of the sale" of liquor, is absolute. The holding or ordering an election is optional. "Whenever they deem it necessary," is the way the law puts it.

4. There is nothing in the law requiring an election every year. When once voted out, it is out for all time, if the police jury has nerve enough to resist the clamor and threats of the whisky men, or until they get an order for an election and vote it in.

Belle Chasse.

BY W. L. F. H.

Belle Chasse is a sugar plantation on the right bank of the river, about twenty miles below New Orleans. I was fortunate in making my first visit to a sugar plantation during the grinding season. The month of November below New Orleans is often as pleasant as May is three hundred miles above the city. Then the roses are in full bloom, the oranges hang in golden clusters on the bright green trees, the sugar cane is matured, and one may see one of the chief industries of the United States pressing to its consummation, as the clarified sugar is packed in barrels and rolled out to the boat which carries it to market.

The name "Belle Chasse" is French, and means "beautiful chase." In the long ago fleet-footed deer or winged fowls, whose feathers bore their flesh away, may have eluded their eager pursuers on these broad extended acres. Now, a still more delusive object of pursuit, the fortune that is to be made by sugar planting, makes this, and almost every other plantation in Southern Louisiana, a veritable Belle Chasse. The price of sugar is too low to make it profitable to raise it with free labor. Still these planters must make sugar. They have prepared for it at great expense, and must make sugar or nothing.

Belle Chasse is well located, and thoroughly drained and equipped for growing and making sugar. It has over four miles of river front, and contains about 2,500 acres, one-half of which is open and in an admirable state of cultivation. The elegant residence of the owner is two and a half stories high, has eighteen rooms, a wide hall, and a broad verandah all around outside, above and below, and is in a good state of preservation. The place was formerly the property of the ancestors of Judah P. Benjamin, and is now owned by Mr. M. J. Zants, of New Orleans.

To see a hundred hands, with broad knives fourteen inches long, with hooked ends, drawing the cane to them, severing the tops at the last ripened joint, stripping the fodder, and then cutting the cane at the ground and throwing it into rows for the hauling carts, is an interesting sight. Good cane ripens from five to ten feet of length, yields from four to eight thousand pounds of cane to the acre, and from one to two hundred pounds of sugar for each ton of cane.

A sugar house furnished with all the modern appliances for making sugar is a sight worth seeing. The machinery is elaborate and costly. The cane brought from the field in carts is thrown upon an endless belt of slats, by which it is carried to the rollers, crushed, and passed on a similar belt to the opposite side of the building, whence it must be carted away, or is taken for fuel for the engine. The pressure on the cane is very great, hydraulic power being used in connection with an adjustable apparatus, which makes the pressure the same, whether one cane or one hundred be passing through the rollers. The juice is conveyed by troughs and pumps from tank to tank, heated and purified, and finally granulated into sugar by processes too numerous to be described here. Several substances have been used, sand among them, for purifying the juice. Bone black is about the best. At Belle Chasse there are fourteen large cylinders filled with charred bones ground to coarse powder, through which all the juice is passed twice. It comes out clear and clean. One part of the boiling process deserves mention. The steam arising from one boiler is made to pass through copper tubes into the next, and, boiling its contents, to pass through tubes into the next, so that one boiler being heated boils the contents of two others. The last boiling of the juice is in a large vacuum pan, which boils at a low temperature, the pressure of its own steam being taken off by an exhausting pump. When the syrup is ready for sugar making, it is so thick it would not flow if it were cool. Indeed, if allowed to cool quietly, it would turn to almost a solid mass of sugar. When the syrup is ready for granulation, or rather for separation from the sugar, it is poured by machinery into the centrifugals. These are large tubs with finely perforated metallic walls, which are made to revolve with great rapidity, the molasses passing out through the small holes, while the sugar remains lying in a thick wall against the sides of each tub. It is now ready to be cooled and barreled.

The profit of sugar raising in Louisiana is said to be a thing of the past. This country uses about 1,000,000 tons, only about one-tenth of which is produced at home. Beet and other sugars from foreign governments, that give premiums to the producers, have brought the price below the cost of raising it here. Last year good sugar brought its producer less than five cents per pound, and yields him less than an average of six cents this year. No wonder many plantations are planted in rice, or allowed to lie idle. The bane of this great industry is, as in the case of many others, the number of profits taken out of the sugar between the producer and the consumer. The marketing of almost all sugar raised in Louisiana is on this wise: The planter delivers his sugar to a broker in New Orleans. The broker sells it to a dealer; the dealer sells it to a wholesale merchant; the wholesale merchant sells to a retail merchant; the retailer sells to a country or distant city merchant, who sells to a consumer. Here are at least five distinct profits to be made out of the sugar between the maker and the eater. Such a process would, it seems, ruin almost any business. Why should not merchants in Vicksburg or Jackson, Miss., bring their sugars directly from the plantations in Louisiana? Louisiana planters need look for no protective tariff. The tariff they need protection from is near home. Let them throw it off, and they may prosper raising sugar.

Bible, Tract and Book Depository, of Vicksburg, Miss.

BY REV. E. G. COOK.

It may be interesting to the preachers of the Mississippi Conference to know the history of an institution of the above designation.

It originated in the head of Dr. R. Abbey, and was established by him. He suggested the plan of procuring contributors, of one hundred dollars each, to endow a business house in Vicksburg, to deal in religious books, tracts, school books and stationery. Very few had any hopes of success. To the surprise, however, of all he obtained two hundred and thirty subscribers ($23,000), and collected from one hundred and sixty-five $16,000.

A charter drawn according to law is recorded in Warren county deed book, A. A., page 125. This charter was submitted to the Mississippi Conference at Brandon. A committee was appointed to consider and report upon the subject, Dr. B. M. Drake, L. Campbell, and others. They reported that the provision in the charter making the Mississippi Conference the beneficiary of all profits after paying expenses and ten dollars' worth of tracts to each stockholder, should not be accepted by the Conference, as it might involve legal liability; otherwise they approved the attempt about to be made.

Directors were elected who selected a president. Dr. Abbey invested the sixteen thousand dollars in books—religious, literary, and for schools and general stationery. W. H. Nelson, an accomplished bookkeeper and true Methodist, had charge until 1859, when he resigned. W. Crutchen, the president, requested me to superintend until a clerk could be found. A. Weygatt was employed, who had been engaged in the book trade. For a time Rev. R. B. Downer was salesman.

Before a suitable clerk could be employed, the war troubles came. Neither the president nor any director would act or advise. The Depository remained in my hands. I did the best I could, at times neglecting my own interest in the midst of the disturbances in Vicksburg. Sales could be made at high prices for Confederate money, which was good in Vicksburg, but would not pay for new books and stationery. To close up would be construed as a reflection upon the money and cause. It would involve arrest upon charge of treason.

I appeared at Conference in Canton with four thousand dollars, an inventory of fifteen thousand dollars' worth of stock, besides debts due, owing but little. The Conference would not allow a hearing, as it really had no interest in, nor control over, the Depository.

Returning to Vicksburg, upon the advice of the president, I loaned a part of the money to a Methodist preacher upon good collaterals, and invested a part in Confederate bonds and certificates. Decided to box up the books and remove all to Brandon. My boxes were seized for Confederate military service. All I could do was to store the books, safe and office furniture, and they were safely kept and were in good condition when the United States Army took possession, July 4, 1863. Their general turned them over to the Christian Commission, to be used in the hospitals and by the convalescent patients. The Federal soldiers who left on furlough each took a book, to be kept in his family as a souvenir of his having been in the siege and at the capture of that city.

After the war some of the preachers asked me upon what terms they could compromise their indebtedness. My answer was, I had no right to receive the money. The preacher could keep it, and report when some one authorized to receipt should be appointed. Thus it remains.

Being in Washington City in 1874, I made an effort to procure an allowance by Congress for ten thousand dollars, to be in full of the whole property which passed into the hands of the United States Army. Dr. Abbey was in that city at the same time attending to the Publishing House claim. He gave me advice. The Hon. George C. McKee, member of Congress from Mississippi, gave attention to this claim. It was made to depend somewhat upon a similar claim by William and Mary College, of Virginia. This was allowed, but with a proviso that hereafter there should be no discrimination as to color of those applying to become students. The trustees would not accept the allowance with this limitation. The majority in Congress became angry, and the Depository claim remains in statu quo. So of the other claims.

My intention was to invest the ten thousand dollars so as to commence again the religious business house intended by Dr. Abbey and the original contributors.

LINES TO A PICTURE OF WHITTIER IN OLD AGE.

(John G. Whittier's Eightieth Birthday, Dec. 17.

BY WILLIAM H. TERRELL.

Crowned with thy reverenced hair,
Peaceful as though in prayer,
Saint-like in calm;
Mild as the light of morn,
Dreadful as victor's scorn,
Poet and hero born,
Thy life a psalm.

Touch of thy magic strong
Wakes all the world to song,
City and sea;
Voice of the battle's cry,
Breath of the captive's sigh,
Songs of the summer's sky,
Shouts of the free;

Long may the evening's ray
Gild thy ascending way;
Linger, O night!
Live till thy fame grows old,
Live till our love grows cold,
Then shall thy years unfold
Endless in light.

A Model Steward.

The Discipline makes it the duty of stewards to estimate and collect the salary and traveling expenses of the preachers. If faithful, and no providential hinderance, they generally succeed in raising at least in the neighborhood of the amount, and sometimes more than the assessment; the latter is considered a good report, and goes far to show the acceptability of the preacher. The Board of Finance makes the estimate for Conference claimants, approved by the Conference, then apportioned to the several districts, then by the presiding elder to the stations, circuits, etc., on his district; so the pastors in charge became stewards for the Conference claimants. In the Louisiana Conference the assessment for 1887 is $4,000. This is for fifteen widows, eight superannuated preachers, and a score or more of uneducated children. In our last District Conference one preacher said he would pay every dollar assessed, but no more; if any over, he should turn it over to his Board of Stewards. If the future is to be judged by the past, some will fall away behind; some flimsy excuse will settle the deficit, and the claimants will be the sufferers. The preacher's annual report is his history for that year, and will be read when he is gone. Now, if all the preachers were such stewards as we heard preach this week, and pressed the sacred claim as he did, we venture to say there would be no deficit on the Conference collection. This same preacher will double, if not treble, his foreign mission collection this year. He stressed and pressed the claim as a debt of gratitude, and our religious duty to meet it, etc.; a duty which all can and should join in. This is our idea of a model steward. HOPE.

A Tribute of Respect.

Three times have I unfolded the ADVOCATE, and searched, with longing eyes, its columns to see if any friend had paid a tribute of respect to our departed loved one—Mrs. Dru. M. Parker, of Madison county, Miss.—who has been a shining light in her church and social circle for many years, truly adding a luster to every duty of life. Disappointment has crowned my efforts, but I, who have known "the true wealth of sisterly love," will pay an humble tribute to one whose lofty virtues rendered her a worthy daughter of our sainted father, Rev. D. M. Wiggins. It was not my happy privilege to be with her in her last illness, but had she left no dying testimony, her life has been sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical; even her colored friends, in their expressions of grief, testified that one so pure in life was safely housed in glory. Some instances of her life made a lasting impression upon me. On one occasion, when we were having one of our happy family reunions, she called her children together, read a chapter from the Bible, then offered one of the most beautiful prayers I have ever heard, of thanksgiving for the reunion of loving hearts, and a plea that it might be continued beyond the grave with our precious ones who had gone before. It is true, I was older, but it was a lesson to me; it far surpassed anything I could have done. It was a holy Sabbath morning, and it seemed unusually hallowed for that prayer. Death truly sought a shining mark. Oh, what is a more sacred legacy than a consecrated Christian life! It sheds a brightness upon the darkest hours of our pilgrimage here.

She was loyal to her church; she never shrank from performing any service which it demanded in an earnest, faithful manner. She loved her Bible and the ADVOCATE; and I feel that its columns, that she has so often read with such intense interest, should bear witness to her great worth and piety.

In her family, we may truthfully say, "She hath done what she could." A devoted wife, her patient instruction and wise counsel have been a treasure to her children. A loving, dutiful daughter; but, oh! what can I say as a sister! Words fail to express the deep, tender affection; and it is sad to think that the one who gave such is forever hid in the grave. I can only thank God for such a sister's love, and express the hope that we may meet on the shining shore.

Last August we were on a visit to our childhood's home and enjoyed her sweet companionship, although she was suffering from a temporary illness. She bore it with the same sweet spirit, which was her usual manner. Sickness and misfortune in her family did not cause her lofty faith to stagger; "even through the deep water of affliction" it shone with the light of noonday splendor. When the poor tortured body was giving way, her pastor asked her how she felt. She faintly said: "I am trusting, as ever, in the Lord." May we all follow her example, and meet her at the beautiful gate, where she will be waiting and watching! M. W. SYKES.

The C. L. S. C. in the South.

The C. L. S. C. Class of '91 is the largest yet enrolled, and the outlook more flattering than ever before for the extending of this great educational movement. The growth in the South is almost phenomenal. All over the country persons are reading, and interesting and profitable Circles have been formed. Dr. J. H. Vincent recently delivered a lecture on the "Chautauqua Idea" before a large and cultivated audience, at Atlanta, Ga., in which he traced the origin, growth, and showed the objects of the C. L. S. C., speaking most enthusiastically of the work in the South, and the good results that are being felt.

This is the age of books and much reading. The people will read, and the aim of the C. L. S. C. is to get them to read good books, and, by careful and systematic thought-training, to develop vigorous thought-power.

More than 14,000 circulars have been mailed to teachers in the South, and I will gladly give information to any who desire to know further of the many and varied departments of this grand work. J. H. WARREN.

SCOTLAND CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We are closing up the second year on the Scotland circuit, Mississippi Conference. This circuit covers a part of four counties—Lincoln, Franklin, Jefferson and Copiah—and spreads its membership over an area of twenty miles square, of hills and valleys, forests and fields, traversed by dangerous streams and bottomless quicksands when flushed. Its requires energy, courage and an abundant supply of grace and a good horse to travel this large area, populated by 450 Methodists, and see them and talk and pray with them. We have done this, and tried to be faithful to all.

The first year was a successful one: 100 were gathered into the church, between 70 and 80 conversions, 34 adults and 57 children baptized, and a general revival.

This year, 1887, we have had good revivals at all five of the churches, and many have been converted; and we record 40 accessions, 10 adults and 18 children baptized—making for the two years 140 accessions to the church, 44 adults and 75 children baptized. I presume not less than one hundred converted.

The material on this work from which, in the outside world, to gather members is very limited—most all in some church. At the beginning of last year we began to preach at a schoolhouse to accommodate a few old and infirm, and women with families who could not attend preaching elsewhere. In the fall we built a brush-arbor, and held a protracted meeting. Had a sweeping revival. And this year on that ground we have a beautiful church, and membership of eighty members.

Our last quarterly meeting was held at Bethel, our strongest church, and we protracted nine days. Our presiding elder, Bro. James M. Weems, remained until Wednesday, and did good service in preaching and other labors. Bro. A. B. Nicholson was with us through the meeting, and gave us better preaching than this writer ever heard from him before. He is not worn out, and ought to be on the effective roll. Bro. R. Havens was with us through the meeting, and did us good. Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Brookhaven, was with us two days at New Hope meeting, and gave us four excellent sermons, full of thought and power, well illustrated and well delivered.

Now, Doctor, this preacher has been sitting in this sick-chair more than two weeks, unable, except a few times, and a few moments at a time, to leave his room, from a severe cold, ending in bronchitis; and he is much afraid this will greatly interfere with his Conference collections. I am decidedly better, and hope to be out in a few days.

Yours truly,

WM. H. HINES.

DECEMBER 2, 1887.

HARRISONBURG AND SICILY ISLAND CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: A protracted meeting, under the auspices of the Rev. W. P. Kimball, reached its highest point here last Thursday—Thanksgiving Day. The business houses were closed, the school adjourned, and all men, ceasing from labor, put on a holiday attire, and repaired to the church, which, by ten A. M., was filled to its utmost capacity. The sermon was delivered by the young and talented H. D. Kimball, pastor of Morgan Street Church, your city, who came hither on a visit, and to assist his father (our preacher) in this meeting. He read first the President's proclamation, and for his lesson Psalm cxxxvi, together with Romans xii, selecting for his text Psalm cvi, 1: "Praise ye the Lord. O give thanks unto the Lord: for his mercy endureth for ever." His rendition was terse, convincing, and powerful.

We feel that we have a different and wiser conception of a thanksgiving now than we ever had before, and shall henceforth welcome a recurrence of the hallowed day, and will be pleased to give thanks from the fullness of our heart, overflowing with devotional love for our blessed Master.

With unabated devotion and increasing zeal this meeting continued twelve days. Many professed pardon, not a few backsliders were reclaimed, whilst the whole membership was quickened, and joyfully returned to their first love. Twenty-five (mostly pupils of the H. M. and F. L. School, over which Bro. W. P. Kimball exercises pastoral oversight) joined the church. At each service the altar was thronged with penitents, groaning in anguish for mercy and pardon, and, oh! what a number covenanted to lead in future a better and more acceptable life, by his grace, in the sight of God.

Just before the last benediction to this blessed meeting was pronounced, a collection was ordered, to secure funds with which to defray the expenses of Bro. Kimball from and to his charge, and for other laudable purposes, when the stewards within a few moments reported and counted out $58. For the propagation of our Lord's gospel this church will pay this current year about $350.

We have a Sabbath-school, and prayer meeting each Wednesday night.

Let us add, in conclusion, and in addition to all we have said, that the good people of Harrisonburg presented Bro. W. P. Kimball, as a thank-offering, on Thanksgiving Day, with an excellent suit of clothes, in token of their regard for the great interest he is continually and assiduously manifesting for, and in behalf of, their spiritual well-being.

RECORDING STEWARD.

MANY CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: As many of the brethren from various parts of the country have been writing in regard to the results of their labors during the year, I thought it would not be amiss to say something more about the Many circuit. This work has eleven appointments, some of which are very weak in point of numbers. But I think that the greater part of the people are willing to do all they can to promote and build up the kingdom of Christ. Many of them have labored faithfully and earnestly for a revival of religion; and the good Lord has wonderfully blessed the people in almost every locality throughout the entire circuit. I have gone through with all of my protracted meetings, which resulted in one hundred and fifty accessions to the church. Infants baptized this year, fifty; and the good work still goes on. This charge has improved in many respects since the beginning of the year. Some family altars have been erected, prayer meetings organized; and many of the noble young men who have joined the church this year are now officiating in public. We have had some glorious revivals this year. The good Lord has blessed preacher and people with an outpouring of his Holy Spirit, for which we are truly grateful. Our work is still behind financially; but I am doing what I can to bring up all the collections, and hope to be able to report some of the assessments in full, if not all. But few of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATES are taken, but we hope to swell the number some by Conference.

The first Sunday in December, it being the fourth day of said month, which was our last appointment at Bayou Scie for this year, we had a most excellent meeting. The Holy Ghost descended and filled this humble scribe's heart to overflowing: and at the close of the service almost the entire congregation came forward and gave their hand as a token that the Spirit of God was bearing witness with their spirit that they were the children of God. The summer is past and the winter is here, and we are still in a revival at some places.

I have spent three very pleasant years here, and would not think that the Bishop was too hard on me if he thinks it best to send me back another year. This has been the most prosperous year of my life since I have entered the ministry. Dear brethren and fathers in Israel, pray for me that I may make a useful man in the church of God.

H. J. BOLTZ, P. C.

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We commenced our meeting in Handsboro, Wednesday before the third Sunday in November. Bros. Bowen and Beville, being at Moss Point, did not reach there until Thursday evening. The congregations were good from the first service. The meeting was a great success: resulted in twenty-three accessions—number of conversions not known. We organized a Ladies' Aid Society of seventeen in number.

On the fourth Sunday I organized a Methodist Sunday-school of fifty-four scholars. Officers and teachers entered into it with a zest. They also raised the money for the literature. We have had 115 accessions on this work this year.

Bros. Bowen and Beville were abundant in labors, in word and songs. Their visit among us will be long remembered with much love.

Yours in Christ,

G. F. THOMPSON.

PAULDING CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I am winding up for Conference. We had a pleasant year. Over one hundred conversions, and thirty accessions to the church. I have eight Sunday-schools, five Woman's Missionary Societies, one Wesleyan Society, and twenty-two new subscribers to the ADVOCATE this year.

J. C. BROGAN.

CARTHAGE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: For the information of many friends and acquaintances among the readers of the ADVOCATE, allow me to say that for four months past I have had typhoid fever in my family, and that we have still two cases that require my constant care and attention. A married daughter, Mrs. Mars, died with this terrible disease, July 28, and soon after my wife was prostrated with it, and after her three other members of my family have succumbed to its power. Through the mercy of God none of my present family have died with it as yet, but we can not feel assured of the recovery of the ones that are now sick.

I have utterly failed in my contemplated protracted meetings, not being able to leave home—a part of the time I was the only one competent to nurse the sick. My collections are so far behind that it discourages me to think of it. My own claims are not half paid, and almost nothing on the other collections. I will send up (for I don't calculate I can go) to Conference the poorest report I have ever made.

Church Music.

The Baptist Weekly is very tolerant "Concerning Religious Music," holding that the timbrel or tambourine of Miriam may have its place and justification:

The symphony of the brass band in the Moravian Church steeple, on the death of one of the brotherhood, has in it more religious pathos by far than the thunderous fugue of the grand organ when the organist marches the people out of church at the close of a solemn service.

We see that the Wesleyans have made a new departure in West London by opening a great hall, and having religious services for the rich and poor alike: and one of the attractions is a great brass band, to help draw and hold the crowd. The opening meeting the other night was a grand success. We wish there might be such a great hall with all the music, brass and vocal, that might be necessary to draw a crowd, only so that we can get them under the sound of the gospel; and having opened their ears with joyous music, pour into those ears the more glorious melodies of salvation. The same may be said of hymns and tunes. It must be remembered that what will awaken religious emotion and aid in the work of the gospel with one class of people, will utterly fail with another. What is the use of criticising contemptuously the "Gospel Hymns"? If they do not suit your taste in poetry or melody, don't use them; but we must not forget that hundreds of thousands of people have been set to singing by these Gospel Hymns, who never sung praises before, and that some of the rudest and crudest have been the most popular and the most useful with a multitude of people whose tastes are not critical. The lesson of the whole matter is that we should be slow in dogmatizing about religious music.

MUSIC AS A MORAL FORCE.

The good work of enlisting music more and more completely on the side of religious and moral influences goes bravely on. A daily contemporary has drawn attention, within the last few days, to remarkable developments of the policy adopted, in a manner so conspicuous, by the late Dean of Gloucester, and imitated elsewhere. First, we have the noteworthy Sunday afternoon services at the Church of St. Nicholis, Cole Abbey, Queen Victoria Street. These, it should be pointed out, are now in their third winter season, and, therefore, take precedence of enterprises which have attracted wider notice, despite their more recent origin. But, apart from any such consideration, the rector of the little city parish deserves hearty congratulation upon the steadfast manner in which, braving the criticism of the "unco' guid," he has gone on providing his people with excellent performances of sacred music, and attracting crowds to his church who would otherwise, perhaps, have gone to no church at all. In the next place we find the Wesleyans making ample musical provision in aid of their remarkable missionary effort at the West End. Regarding the prospective success of that mission, we have no desire to express an opinion; but one thing is certain—the upshot will be none the less satisfactory because music takes a prominent part. It is a simple fact that we are only beginning to find out the value of music as an agency that "maketh for righteousness." In the divine art we have one of the most powerful weapons for the regeneration of the mass; and, whenever it is taken in hand, there is no more agreeable duty than that of proclaiming the fact as an example for imitation.—London Musical Times.

TO THE ORGANIST.—We beg you to discontinue your long, "impertinent" interludes. The second adjective is not original; it is Joseph Parker's, we believe; but we think the two ought to go together, for an interlude is not apt to be impertinent unless it is long. Please, also, curtail that fifteen minutes' voluntary. It is, no doubt, the most artistic kind of music that you give us; but we all came to church to do something else than listen to artistic instrumental music. Please, too, be kind enough to spare us the latest operatic air. Some of us, to be sure, have conscientious scruples about the opera, and perhaps you thought you were doing us a kindness by bringing the latest thing to church; but let us assure you that, despite our scruples, we prefer to hear these airs even in the opera house rather than in the church. And, once more, when we come out of church, with the sweet and quiet influence of the service of God's house upon our souls, do not so deafen our ears and so exasperate our spirits that we shall forget even the text before we leave the church door. Play something quiet and simple and devotional, and you will have our lasting gratitude.—Golden Rule.

SELF-SACRIFICE.—Pure religion and undefiled is "ministering," not the other thing, "being ministered unto." It is handing over the morning paper to another for first perusal. It is vacating a pleasant seat by the fire for one who comes in chilled. It is giving up the most restful arm-chair or sofa-corner for one who is weary. It is "moving up" in the pew to let the newcomer sit down by the entrance. It is rising from your place to darken the blind when the sun's rays stream in too brightly upon some face in the circle. It is giving up your own comfort and convenience every time for the comfort and convenience of another. This is at once true courtesy and real Christianity. If we mean to copy the spirit of the Master, we must be ready in every relation of life and at every hour of the day to give up being waited upon, and to practice the self-sacrificing, beneficent and "ministering" graciousness of spirit and conduct.—Rev. A. L. Stone.

Critic's Corner.

Origin of Popular Phrases.

Bosh. The derivation of this word, which is applied to anything nonsensical or trashy, is variously accounted for. It is traced by some to the Dutch, bosch, corrupted from Bois-le-Duc, the name of a town in Holland. It is probably a Turkish word, however, meaning empty, vain, worthless, bogus, in short, and was imported into England some twenty-five years ago by British soldiers who had served in the Russian War and had picked it up from the Turkish soldiery with whom they had been thrown in contact.

Hanker. Probably a corruption of "hunger." It is always used in connection with the word "after," as "we hanker after something." The text in Matthew v, 6, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness," shows the affinity, even if it does not establish the identity of the two words—"hunger" and "hanker."

The half is better than the whole. The author of this proverb was Hesiod, an ancient poet whose learning was not drawn from books. It was given in the nature of an admonition to his brother, to prefer a friendly accommodation to a litigious lawsuit and has fixed a paradoxical saying often applied.

The die is cast. When Cæsar, after anxious deliberation, decided on the passage of the Rubicon, rousing himself with a start of courage he committed himself to fortune with the above proverbial expression on his lips, used by gamesters in desperate play. Having passed the Rubicon, he exclaimed: "The die is cast."—Selected.

What Prohibitionists Want Is Prohibition.

BY ATTICUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D.

It is now understood clearly that there is no evil thing among us that the drink habit does not aggravate, and no good thing that it does not antagonize. More than everything else the saloon fosters and sustains the drink habit. It is now mere commonplace to say, "The saloon is a standing menace to our civilization." Every law passed for the regulation of the liquor traffic has its reason in the character of the business. The history of legislation in relation to the liquor business is the history of the effort made by society, through government, to protect itself against the business. The laws enacted in relation to the liquor traffic have never sought to encourage and build up the business, but to discourage and limit it. In their nature they have been proscriptive; in their design, restrictive. They have been prohibitory just as far as the consensus of public sentiment would sustain them. The existence of these anti-liquor laws is the proof of the recognized inadequacy of "moral suasion."

The history of the liquor business as conducted under laws, regulative in their design and restrictive in their tendency, is absolute proof of the insufficiency of these laws. Such laws have never protected society against the enormous evils of the liquor business. For this, among other reasons, the business is itself a sort of anarchy. It does not respect law; it cares only for money; it breaks every law of God or man, that interferes with its evil gains. It is "evil, only evil, and that continually." Regulative laws can not change its character; it is incapable of regeneration; "this leopard can not change its spots." No law can make good what in its essence is evil. One can not make the rattlesnake harmless by making a pet of him. To his last minute he will strike if he can, and kill if he strikes. The one right thing to do with a rattlesnake is, to kill him. This country has had long and bitter experience with its costly and terrible pet. It is time to have done with experiments; it is time to make an end of this "old serpent."

The liquor men say, "Prohibition doesn't prohibit." This means two things: First, they intend to break the law as much and as often as they can. Second, that the people, after enacting prohibitory laws, have failed to enforce them. This is not an argument against prohibition. It is an argument against a business that hates and defies law. More, it is an argument for redoubled zeal in the effort to teach all the people what the business is, till they will enforce the laws they enact for their protection against their greatest enemy. If the statement of the liquor people proves anything, it proves too much. It is an argument against all law, for no law of God or man is so absolutely enforced to prevent utterly what it forbids. This argument would upset the Decalogue.

But prohibitionists must be candid. Prohibitory laws have not been enforced as efficiently as they might have been and, therefore, ought to have been. Their case is not singular in this. It is always easier to pass a law than to enforce it. But the difficulty diminishes; the enactment of a good law and the least honest attempt to enforce it are educative.

In the Southern States prohibition has made most progress under "local option" laws, for the simple reason that where the public conscience is vigorous enough to enact a prohibitory law, the public will is strong enough to enforce it. But, as a matter of fact, the public will is not so strong as the public conscience. Many men will, because they think they ought, vote for a prohibitory law who will take no active part in its enforcement, because they do not recognize personal responsibility as to the enforcement of law.

What is to be done? The public will must be energized. There is but one way—energizing the public conscience. How is the public conscience to be energized? By enlightening the public mind. People feel things to be wrong that they see to be wrong. By every means temperance people, prohibition people, must teach all men, all women, all children, what the evils of the drink habit are; must show how the liquor traffic creates, fosters, strengthens, perpetuates the drink habit. By pulpit, by press, by platform, by pamphlet, by essay, by volume, by common-school teaching, by Sunday-school teaching—above all, by fireside teaching, let the light enter all minds and all consciences in all homes. This teaching, like other gospel teaching about virtue and vice, about holiness and sin, about hell and heaven, must go on all the time. Denouncing the business can not substitute teaching the people the evil of the drink habit and the relations of the business to the habit. Denouncing the men engaged in the business does not teach the people. Curses are not arguments, even when prohibitionists do the cursing.

There are millions of prohibitionists, and not a few of them have the itch of leadership. Bees hum in some of their bonnets. These are unhappy if all men do not sing their tune in their time and at their pitch. Some prohibitionists are cranks—they are incapable of harmonious motion. Some are fanatics and, therefore, intolerant. Prohibition has few enemies more potent than those who are intolerant of prohibitionists who can not keep step to their music and rally to all their war-cries. A prohibitionist out of temper with his brethren is a windfall of good luck to the liquor men.

But granting that it is not "in nature" that so many should agree in all points, it ought to be "in grace" that they agree in some points as to means and methods. Some, advocating "local option," denounce "constitutional amendments;" some, advocating "constitutional amendment," ridicule "local option." This is absurd child's play. What suits in one State may be out of place in another. Let prohibitionists in the different States consider what, for the present distress and state of the case, is best for them. Let them consider what sort of law they can best secure and best enforce, and then let them put their conclusions into law and its enforcement. If Georgia finds local option best, let Georgia work out out her salvation under local option. Georgia need not condemn States that prefer to make trial by constitutional amendment; they should not condemn Georgia for not following their method when she works the plan she knows to be best for her.

Prohibition is a big enough question in itself. It does not need reinforcement by "lugging in" other issues. Its true friends should not allow it to be handicapped by "jockeys" riding in other interests. The labor question, the tobacco question, the woman suffrage question—let these questions be discussed and settled on their merits. There is just one plank trustworthy for building the prohibition platform—Prohibition. Whether the labor question, the woman suffrage question, the tobacco question, be larger or less, they are not the prohibition question. Prohibitionists may unite on prohibition; they will split into splinters on the other questions. It is unfair to prohibitionists for the friends of other issues to demand alliance with prohibitionists. Prohibition in alliance with other issues will be like Israel in alliance with Egypt—"broken reeds and pierced hands."

Although what I am now going to write should expose me to the charge of inconsistency in relation to some things that have gone before in this article, I say it nevertheless and plead "not guilty." As I look at it, and as most Southern prohibitionists look at it, the cause has no occasion to commit its fortunes to a third party, existent, or probable. It is a question for the whole people. Saturate the people with right thoughts and sentiments and no party will stand in the way of their will. This government is too big a thing to be run in the interests of even as big a thing as prohibition. The Prohibition Party—as a party—must widen their platform to make it wide enough for this government. When that is done, prohibition is merged in the bigger thing—running the government, and it is lost. The aim of prohibitionists is not running the government, but prohibition of the liquor traffic. No government can be run on one issue. The end prohibitionists seek fails if they take in hand all the issues that belong to running the government of the whole country. As long as there are Republicans and Democrats—as long as there are parties, if differenced only as "outs" and "ins," there will be prohibitionists in each who will agree about nothing else. What prohibitionists want is prohibition—not this or that, but prohibition. Nor do they want offices.—Advance.

Evidences of a Universal Deluge.

There was a universal deluge after all—according to the following, which we clip from the London World: At one time, not very long ago, almost every geologist of note, at least in this country, would have scouted the idea. It was supposed that Sir Charles Lyell had given the quietus to that theory, based upon no better authority, so it was alleged, than a few ancient traditions. The day for any rational belief in the occurrence of a cataclysm such as we read of in Genesis, in the Chaldean tablets, and in other legendary lore, was thought to be passed forever. The changes, stupendous though they be, which geology shows us have occurred since this earth was a molten globe, were brought about, it was argued, by slow processes, through countless ages, as slow as those we see in operation to-day. Yet Mr. H. H. Howorth, M. P., a distinguished geologist, has come forward to do battle for the Universal Deluge in a way which even the most orthodox Uniformitarian must admit to be scientific enough to demand the serious consideration of his fellow-workers in the geological field. What are the facts upon which Mr. Howorth founds his great induction? They are not new, though no one has hitherto collected them into a connected argument in the way he has done in his book just issued, entitled "The Mammoth and the Flood," a book which, however it may be regarded in other respects, is very delightful reading and brimful of the most curious and interesting facts. The discovery of numerous frozen mammoth mummies in Siberia and Alaska, and of still more numerous skeletons of these animals both in Europe and Asia; the occurrence together, in caves in every part of the globe, of miscellaneous assemblages of the most opposite kinds of animals, under circumstances that make it certain that they were overwhelmed by water, and all perished at the same time; and the acknowledged gap that occurred after the disappearance of palæolithic man, showing that men and animals all perished in one grand catastrophe, from which only few escaped: these are the chief facts appealed to by Mr. Howorth for his conclusion. He does not, in the present volume, enter into the geological proofs he says he can produce, but is content to hint, as to the probable cause of this Universal Deluge, that it may have arisen from alterations in the earth's crust, such as would be caused by the upheaval of the Cordilleras in South America.

A Sabbath-keeping man is of a better kind than a Sabbath-breaking man, other things being equal. A Sabbath-keeping community has immense advantages over a Sabbath-breaking community, whether their surroundings are equal or unequal. The criminal classes do not belong to those who honor the Lord's day, nor are our jails and work-houses filled with men and women who remember the Sabbath to keep it holy. Morality, intelligence, thrift and all the elements of lasting prosperity and good government are found where one day out of seven is taken for needed rest, and for thoughts of God and eternity. The spirit, soul and body are benefited by it, and the very animals are blessed under its benign influence.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but its consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is no exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

Melancthon says three things make a theologian—oratio, meditatio, tentatio.

Bro. Minister, can you sincerely say, with Paul, "I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake"?

Have you ever noticed how careful the great apostle is to state the explicit purpose for which he was clothed with ministerial authority? This authority was one of the grounds of his glorying. He felt that he had been greatly honored by its investure, but he says plainly that it was to be used only for a certain purpose. Speaking of it to the Corinthians, he says: "The Lord gave it for building up and not for casting down," for "edification and not for destruction." That fact augments the responsibility for its use.

The statistics of the Memphis Conference:

Number of local preachers, 236—decrease, 4; number of members, 43,463—net increase, 1,514; infants baptized, 1,033—decrease, 429; adults baptized, 2,858—decrease, 1,009; number of Sunday-schools, 435—decrease, 2; number of teachers, 2,988—net increase, 146; number of scholars, 25,221—net increase, 598; estimates for superannuates, etc., $3,000; collected on that account, $3,488 30; raised for foreign missions, $8,918 89; raised for domestic missions, $1,430 69; raised for church extension, $1,871 53; number of churches, 443—value, $569,934; number of parsonages, 50—value, $54,160; educational statistics—2 female colleges, 2 colleges for boys and girls, and 5 district high schools.

A picture of love forcing its way out of the depths of a soul filled with agony! "For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears, not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you." Paul's great and unselfish heart throbs in pitying love in every word of that sentence, and the sobs of his anguished soul prove his anxiety for the spiritual welfare of his converts. That one scene in Paul's life opens to our view the deepest depths of his soul! A minister weeping in secret over the sins and follies of church members is an awful sight!

In Paul's exhortation to the Corinthians, to abound in the grace of liberality, there is a point made which is too often overlooked. He says he does not base the exhortation upon a divine command, for that had been given long ago, but "as proving through the earnestness of others the sincerity also of your love." The grace of liberality, exercised in daily life, is the real proof of love to God and man. Jesus said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." The idea of loving Christ and men without being liberal with our means for the furtherance of the cause of Christ and men is an idea that has no foundation on truth in the Scripture. In regard to giving to support him as a minister, Paul expressly said to the Philippians that it was not a "gift," but fruit that would abound to their account." If we are not liberal with our money, we may gravely question the "sincerity of our love" to Christ and men!

The Sons of Consolation.

Luke gives us a translation of Barnabas' name: "And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas (which is, being interpreted, the son of consolation)." There must have been something in the character and actions of Barnabas answering to this name that induced the apostles to give it to him. The first time he is introduced we see it plainly. There was deep down in his soul a genuine love for men in their troubles and sorrows; a sympathy for their woes which manifested itself in an act of charity never to be forgotten. This characteristic of Barnabas shone out conspicuously toward Saul of Tarsus when "he assayed to join himself to the disciples at Jerusalem, and they were all afraid of him and believed not that he was a disciple." He came to Saul's relief in this, one of the most distressful periods of his life. Seeing that Saul was avoided and shunned, and looked upon with suspicion by the whole church, his sympathetic nature responded to the necessities of the case by introducing Saul to the apostles and declaring his conversion to the faith which he had so shortly before been endeavoring to destroy. This trait of character, developed to large proportions by the grace of God, was not overlooked by the Holy Ghost when he said to the church at Antioch, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them."

Undoubtedly this is not only a chief point of excellence to be desired by every minister, but its exercise is one of the surest guarantees to a successful ministry. To be able to give consolation in the sorrows that visit human hearts; to be a bearer of comfort to stricken homes, is the sure pass-word that opens hearts and homes which are barred and bolted against every other influence. But we can not assume this power at will. Our own souls must pass through the fire, in order that we may be brought into a "fellowship of suffering" with others, before we can be true "sons of consolation" to others. An old writer says: "A theologus non tentatus lacks an important qualification for his work"—that is, "a minister without an experience of personal trials in religion" can not be very serviceable in bearing comfort to the tried. There is no bond of sympathy between them, and the attempt to send a current of consolation from a soul untried to one under trials of deep affliction generally results in an awkward failure. But the Lord so arranges his providence and brings forward its events at such times and in such ways as to let that measure of affliction and trial come upon his chosen messengers which will qualify them to be the "sons of consolation" to all the afflicted in reach of them.

It was this peculiar providence of God in regard to his ministers which Paul was contemplating when he raised that magnificent hymn of thanksgiving which we read in the first chapter of II Corinthians: "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." He deliberately says that his own troubles and afflictions were the sources of comfort and salvation to others, and then turns round and says his comforts in the grace of God were those sources, too. His words are: "If we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation; if we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation." Ten times in these five verses he rings out the words, "comfort" and "consolation."

But special attention is attracted to the positive statement of the apostle: that ministerial afflictions are intended to reach beyond the minister himself, even to the afflicted members of his congregation. God sends the tribulation in order that he may send comfort, and by this process qualify his servant to "comfort them which are in any trouble." This is the reason Paul "gloried in tribulation." He knew that the consolation was coming, and by its coming he would be qualified to send it on further to some suffering soul beyond himself. He regarded all such afflictions as the "sufferings of Christ;" and as they abounded in him, so his consolations to others abounded by Christ. This is the simple, yet deeply philosophical reason for a ministry which the providence of God keeps on the same plane of suffering with suffering humanity. An angelic ministry would be a most woful failure. This "fellowship of suffering" is the clew by which to traverse the mysteries and find the reason of the incarnation of the Son of God. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things?" said Jesus. Paul declared, in Thessalonica: "Christ must needs have suffered." "It behoved him to be made like unto his brethren." "He learned obedience by the things which he suffered." "For it became him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." It was this great principle, underlying the whole redemption scheme, which called out of Paul's soul that wonderful passage in Philippians, where his restless zeal is represented as counting everything as nothing, in order that he might enter into the fullest fellowship of the sufferings of Christ, even "being made conformable to his death." Bro. Minister, "despise not thou the chastening of the Lord," but "comfort those that are in any trouble," and thus fulfill a glorious part of your ministry.

Christmas Festivities.

We commend to our pastors and Sunday-school superintendents a thoughtful consideration of the following note from the New York Christian Advocate. We feel sure that something ought to be done to banish Santa Claus from the altars of the church:

As Christmas approaches we submit to the serious consideration of the managers of Sabbath-school entertainments whether the introduction of a Santa Claus would not better be dispensed with. There has been so much silly and pernicious prattle about this mythical personage in some of our celebrations that the name of Jesus is but seldom heard. It ministers only to irreverence to have performances of that kind in the sanctuary, and perhaps over the very spot where the holy communion is administered, where the burial rites are observed, and where sinners are invited to Christ. Surely, refined amusement is possible. Leave the Santa Claus to the unconventional rough-and-tumble of home festivities. We are to a considerable extent under the influence of association. Buffoonery and the holy communion in a place consecrated to the worship of Almighty God does violence to both spirituality and sensibility. Not that we object to some mirth on such occasions even in the house of God. It is against the vulgarizing and contempt breeding extreme that we protest.

It has been stated that the Virginia Conference paid during the year 1887, for all objects, $5 48 per member. In looking over the record for 1886, we note that, for that year, the Louisiana Conference paid for all objects $5 66 per member, and, of course, we will do better this year, so as to keep ahead of "Ole Virginia."

A System of Schools.

Seeing that many leading minds of the church are looking toward the inauguration of some uniform system of scholastic instruction among us, and that our whole people are suffering greatly for lack of more general facilities for Christian education, I offer the following as the substance of what might be placed in our Discipline as a part of the chapter on education:

The educational system of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall consist of four grades of schools, named and organized as follows:

1. There shall be at least one primary school, and not more than one, for every congregation in each pastoral charge. Five trustees shall be elected for each school by the Quarterly Conference upon the nomination of the preacher in charge. The teacher of each school shall be elected by its trustees upon the nomination of the preacher in charge.

2. There shall be at least one high school in each presiding elder's district. Nine trustees shall be elected for each high school by the District Conference. The principal of each high school shall be elected by its trustees upon the nomination of the presiding elder.

3. There shall be at least one college in every episcopal district. Fifteen trustees shall be elected for every college by the Conference of the episcopal district. Each Conference shall be represented on the Board of Trustees in proportion to the number of traveling preachers it contains. The trustees shall be nominated by the Board of Education in each Annual Conference. The president of each college shall be elected by its trustees upon the nomination of the Bishop in charge of the district. There shall not be more than one college for every forty thousand members of our church.

4. There shall be at least one university, and not more than one, for every five hundred thousand members in our church. Twenty-one trustees shall be elected for each university by the General Conference. The chancellor of each university shall be elected by its trustees upon the nomination of the College of Bishops.

The trustees of these several schools shall have authority to make rules for the government of each.

Tuition may be charged for in each of these schools; but in order to enable the church to dispense charity in education and to compete with free public schools and colleges, an educational fund shall be raised, through all the pastors of the church, which shall be distributed as follows: Five per cent. shall be paid to the university; ten per cent. shall be paid to the Conference college; twenty per cent., to the district high school, and sixty-five per cent., to the primary school of the charge. The trustees of each school shall apply the educational fund.

No student shall pass from one of these schools to another of any grade without a certificate from the head of the school last attended, attesting his fitness in scholarship and worthiness in character to be received into such school.

Primary schools may grant certificates of proficiency in English and mathematics; high schools, of proficiency in arts and sciences; colleges, the degrees of A. B., A. M. and D. D. to their students or to persons living within the Conferences they represent; universities may confer such degrees as their charters may authorize.

The Bible shall be appropriately taught in all these schools of every grade.

Nothing is requisite to the carrying out of such a system as this but the loyalty of our members. If it were considered disloyalty to the church for Methodists to patronize other than our own schools, this or some similar system would make and maintain itself among us. The church is an educator, but not thoroughly. Her system is lacking at the foundation. She has no primary schools. She can not longer afford to leave her children to the tuition of the State, which professes no religion and can not teach any. The church must make her scheme of education more comprehensive, or fail in one of the chief sources of her power in the world. W. L. C. H.

Shreveport Church.

The Methodists have been occupying their new church at Shreveport for over two months. It is said to be very comfortable and elegantly finished inside. It will be ready, we learn, for dedication at our coming Conference. The total cost of lots and building will be something less than $30,000. The lots, eligibly situated, at the head of Texas street, cost $2,700, and of the total amount expended, the ladies of the congregation have raised $4,300, and paid it out as follows:

For organ, $2,700; furnace, $600; lights and fixtures, etc., $200; carpet, pulpit and chairs, $830—total $4,300.

We suppose the church will be dedicated entirely free of debt, and our denomination will not have a more beautiful and complete structure in the bounds of the ADVOCATE's circulation. We anticipate a delightful session of the Conference in this new church, and we hope that many souls may be converted during our stay in Shreveport.

The League of Freedom and Justice.

Whatever proposes to strike down a law that has been tested, and proved itself to be good, the execution of which has brought blessings to the individual and the family and the State, deserves to be itself stricken down. This league of so-called freedom and justice is an organized iniquity seeking to abrogate a law of God and a law of the State for the sole purpose of having free liquor on Sunday. Its promoters would have Sunday transformed into saloon day. Let nobody be deceived by its pretences or alarmed at its blusters. Read this from Pulpit Treasury:

THE SALOON DAY.

This is to what the "Personal Liberty" men desire to pervert the Christian Sabbath. To permit the sale of intoxicating drink on any portion of the day would be opening the door for the influx of a tide of iniquity which would soon swell into a deluge that would not only overwhelm every sacred thing, but destroy the very name of Sabbath. This precious day, which is only one day younger than man himself, and which was made to meet his physical, mental and moral necessities, is thus assailed by these so-called friends of humanity who would obliterate its very name from the vocabulary of man, although it has been one of his best blessings through all the ages. The "Personal Liberty" men would make of the day one of his greatest curses, by opening up on that day the flood gates of every kind of vice and crime. This perversion of the Sabbath must be stoutly resisted by every legitimate means, and especially by the pulpit giving warning of this foe that is arraying itself in our midst, mustering its forces, and issuing its declarations of war. Never must God's holy day be permitted to be used as the saloon day.

CONGRESS.—The Fiftieth Congress assembled on December 5, and speedily organized. Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, is the President of the Senate, and John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, Speaker of the House of Representatives. The President's Message was confined mostly to the discussion of the finance problem of the nation. It has been a surprise both to his party and to the Republicans. Some Democrats land it to the skies, while others think he has made a great mistake. The Republicans—at least, some of them—think he has opened the door for the re-entrance of their party to power. In the meantime, both Houses are ready to do the legislation of the nation. Already some important measures have been brought forward. Undoubtedly, the present Congress will have some very difficult problems to solve, which will tell for good or evil upon the future prosperity of our country.

Notes.

This story is told of a little boy, who sat up late at night, enjoying the company of several preachers who were spending the night under his father's roof: When there was a pause in the conversation, he stretched himself, yawned heavily, and said: "I wish I was abed, and asleep, and it was morn'n', and I was up and dressed and had my breakfast." That boy would'nt wait long for a railroad train!

There is no doubt about the newspaper being a great power in this land of ours. Greater numbers of people are reading them to-day than ever before, and the numbers are rapidly increasing every week. Did the reader of this ever ask himself the question: "For what purpose do I read the newspaper?" John Newton said, "I read the newspaper that I may see how my heavenly Father governs the world!" That is certainly a very high reason, and a very satisfactory one! Do you read it for that purpose?

The General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, after making an appropriation of $1,202,821 for mission work during the coming year, closes an address to the church with these words: "We exhort you to remember that the advance of Christ's cause can not depend for its human motive power upon the large gifts of the few, but must depend upon the self-sacrificing fidelity of the many. Let us face the future with an intelligent courage and faith proved by our works." That is the whole secret of success. The "self-sacrificing fidelity of the many" and "an intelligent courage" are the only things needful to make any church successful in its mission work.

The land is full of commercial travelers—drummers. These persons have goods for sale, and they seek personal conference with others to induce them to buy. They do not rely so much on a newspaper advertisement as they once did. They succeed better on the personal contact plan. Christians, working for the salvation of souls, can learn a lesson from these commercial agents. "The power of the pulpit is largely lost in general allies." The pastor can not multiply himself a thousand times, but his congregation can do it for him, by personal conference with non-church goers on the themes of his sermons. A live church—one in earnest—will preach the pastor's sermon many times during the week, and thus reach hundreds of consciences that are entirely out of his reach. One object of preaching to Christians is that they may re-preach the sermon to others in a personal conference with them.

The Independent speaks of Dr. Charles S. Robinson as "that rara avis that has more than a hundred sermons prepared in advance, which he has never preached." Dr. Robinson seems to have been a very successful pastor, and he has done much literary work of value, and published quite a number of excellent hymn and tune books; but the wisdom of keeping on hand one hundred unpreached sermons is very questionable. One of the best preachers in our church—a preacher who commands the thoughtful attention of every thinking man and woman—said to us not long ago that he had been forty years making one sermon. If a man wants to preach just to pass away the time, he may preach an unstudied sermon. If he wants to preach as Christ has called him to preach, he had better study deeply and broadly. "One hundred sermons in advance," is a poor qualification, we think!

We have often wondered who the first editor was, and what he edited, and if he had perplexities and vexations, and how was he paid, and in what, and many other things about him. We have at last found him out. Dr. George Lansing Taylor, in his poem, "The Progress of Learning," delivered at the Centennial of Columbia College, New York, last April, has this allusion to the first editor:

"An editor for God! the first in story!
He crowns the editorial chair with glory.
Inspired to publish Jehovah's weekly plan of
He lays (as corner-stone, sheet-tide canon,
His Bible college, i-ble publication.
Convey the city, crown the Convocation,
And fix the beacon-duke for Pilgrim's course.

Does the reader recognize Ezra in this?

Another word about obituaries: We ask our friends, please do not send us "resolutions of respect," etc., passed by Sunday-schools or other bodies to be published as obituaries. The best way is to appoint somebody to write a short, appropriate obituary. That will be published. As a general rule, resolutions do not mean anything, and they take up more space than we can afford to give to unmeaning things. Please, friends, bear this in mind.

Personals.

Robert Bonner will shortly retire from the control of the New York Ledger. He is sixty-nine years old and has been in the newspaper business forty-eight years.

Dr. Haygood's article, on the third page, taken from the Chicago Advance, is the most judicious statement of the subject we have seen, and we hope all our readers will give it a careful perusal.

A superannuate writes: "You don't know how much good the weekly visits of the ADVOCATE do me. I feel like I am in conversation with the brethren." Those "weekly visits" are as regular as the clock, and always carry sunshine and cheer.

The church is sadly bereaved by the sudden death of Dr. L. S. Burkhead, of the North Carolina Conference. He died during the session of the Conference at Fayetteville. It is supposed, of heart disease. He was a prominent man among his brethren, and the church at large has lost a valuable minister of God.

Rev. John P. McFerrin, of Chattanooga, passed through our city, a few days ago, en route to Texas. We did not have the pleasure of seeing him, but hear that he gave our people at Carondelet Street Church an edifying sermon, Sunday morning.

With sadness we record the death of Mrs. Lucy Thomson, wife of George Thomson, of the firm of J. Thomson and Bros., this city. An elegant, refined and modest Christian woman, after months of extreme suffering, went to the home of the saints with the high praises of God on her lips.

The highest compliment this ADVOCATE has received is from Pres. Brunner, of Hiwassee College. He says: "We have found your ADVOCATE our best paying means of advertising Hiwassee College." The same thing has been told us by another college president. Brethren, push up the subscriptions!

One of the successful workers for the ADVOCATE writes us as follows: "Why, sir, it would do you good to see me up in the pulpit with the ADVOCATE in hand, turning its leaves and explaining what is in each column on each page. These people are beginning to find out that the more they read the ADVOCATE, the more willing they are to pay the assessments made by the church." This corroborates what we have been saying all along: if you want to raise all your collections, get the ADVOCATE into all your families.

Notice.

The former secretary of the Louisiana Conference requests us to say to the preachers in his Conference to prepare their statistical reports on the blanks furnished by the Publishing House, in order that our reports may be in harmony with the reports of other Conferences in the connection! The General Conference action in this matter seems to be obligatory; therefore, let the brethren procure their blanks at once from the Publishing House.

We would also call attention to this action of the General Conference:

The Board of Finance of each Conference at its session during the year 1887, and every fourth year thereafter, shall estimate the traveling expenses of its delegates to and from the General Conference, and add also the sum of thirty dollars per delegate for expense of entertainment during the session, and furnish the same to the Agent of the Publishing House.

Notice.

The announcement of time in the ADVOCATE, of December 8, of holding district stewards' meeting for Winona district is wrong. The district stewards' will meet at Durant, on Friday, December 30, 1887, at eleven o'clock A. M., and not December 11.

Books.

WHITE COCKADES. By Edward Irenæus Stevenson. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers. Price, $1. It may be ordered from Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, this city.

This is a story of that stirring time in English history, when Charles Stuart, defeated at Culloden Moor, was hiding where he could until he reached the sea and embarked for France. It is a thrilling tale of danger and hairbreadth escapes, and the interest is sustained throughout. This book will please our boy readers.

SERMONS FOR CHILDREN. By Dean Stanley. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, $1 50. For sale here by Wharton & Bro.

Here are fourteen sermons, except the last, all delivered in Westminster Abbey to the children. They cover a wide range, and in Dean Stanley's best vein the simple gospel is given to childhood. The simplicity of the language, the clearness of the style and the singular adaptation of the profound truths of the gospel to the capacity of children is another proof of the fact that great learning never appears to better advantage than when explaining Bible truth.

THE STORY OF THE PSALMS. By Henry Van Dyke, D. D. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, $1 50. For sale at 5 Carondelet street, New Orleans, by Wharton & Bro.

In this book seventeen Psalms come under review. The probable history of each is given; when, and under what circumstances and by whom composed. This brings the reader into sympathy with the psalmist, and gives the Psalm an increased power. In reading the history of the Psalm new thoughts are continually suggested, and this awakens new interest, and the Psalm comes to be as fresh as if composed for our own times and circumstances. The book will doubtless prove an inspiration to devotion and an aid to growth in Christian life to all who carefully read its pages.

THE ETHICAL IMPORT OF DARWINISM. By Jacob Gould Schurman, Sage Professor of Philosophy in Cornell University. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. Price, $1 50. For sale here by Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street.

The criticism of the Standard, Chicago, on this book we adopt most heartily. It says:

"Prof. Schurman is a considerate author. At great cost to himself he economizes time and labor for his readers. Making no estimate now of the ethical or philosophical value of the work, it would be hard to find a more just and clear analysis of Darwinism, pure and simple, than is given us in fifty pages of this little book.

"Prof. Schurman makes it clear that much less is explained by Darwinism than its advocates have been in the habit of supposing. 'An effect is simply its cause translated, and nothing can be developed into actuality which was not enveloped potentially in the germ.' 'Power adequate to the result there must have been.' 'This jeggery with causality as though in time everything could be got out of almost nothing, is the besetting sin of Darwinists.' Are morals, then, in any way affected by the doctrine of natural selection? Not in the slightest. The consciousness of right and wrong is underived, and like intelligence in general, witnesses to a supra-sensible principle in man, a principle which the wheels of mechanism, grinding through eternity, could never of themselves produce. Beyond peradventure this is wholesome teaching for the times. Prof. Schurman has done a much-needed work. He handles a free-lance, puncturing error easily, yet dealing reverently with truth."

This book belongs to the "Famous Women" Series, of which fifteen volumes have already been published. The story of a woman who lived in her time—1766-1817—and who was intimate with so many of the great people of Europe, and who was as great, perhaps, as any of them, is here told, with an interest that never flags, and with a hold upon the reader which never tires from the first page to the last.

CHRISTIAN EVOLUTIONISM AND ITS INFLUENCE ON RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By Prof. Daniel S. Martin. Wilbur B. Keeblaun, publisher, 71 Bible House, New York. Price, twenty cents.

This book is calculated to find an extensive circle of readers from the known ability of its author and the masterly treatment of his theme. The paper gives marked evidence of careful thought; and denotes familiarity with the advanced thought of the age. It can not be read without genuine profit.

STANDARD ECLECTIC BIBLE-LESSON COMMENTARY FOR 1888. Prepared by S. M. Jefferson, A. N. Gilbert and J. W. Monser, with Geographical Notes by Prof. J. W. McGarvey; also Missionary and Temperance General Exercises. Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The plan of these notes seems to be simple and judicious. The book is interspersed with maps, which go a long way toward giving the reader a correct idea of the location of the scene of each lesson. With all these "aids and helps," the Sunday-school teacher ought to do solid work in impressing the truths of religion upon the young mind.

From Cupples & Hurd, Boston, through Wharton & Bro., of this city, we have received:

ZORD: A LOVE TALE OF MODERN EGYPT. By Elizabeth Balch. D. T. S.) Price, $1 25.

BLEDISLOE; OR, AUNT PEN'S AMERICAN NIECES. An International Story. By Ada M. Trotter. Price, $1 50.

From the National School of Elocution and Oratory, 1121 Arch street, Philadelphia:

THE ELOCUTIONIST'S ANNUAL, No. 15. Boards, fifty cents; paper, thirty cents.

CHOICE DIALECT. Boards, fifty cents; paper, thirty cents.

HOLIDAY ENTERTAINMENTS. Boards, fifty cents; paper, thirty cents.

CHILD'S OWN SPEAKER. Boards, fifty cents; paper, thirty cents.

FAITH AND ACTION. From the writings of Frederic Denison Maurice. Introduction by Phillips Brooks. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price, $1. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal street.

The volume before us, which is made up of excerpts and extracts from the sermons, writings and correspondence of Mr. Maurice, has unusual and permanent value. It is a treasure-house of things useful for every-day life; ideas which go straight home and make the reader think. There is the true, honest talk of a true, honest man, with a purpose in it. The introduction to the book is by Rev. Phillips Brooks. There is much that is alike in the two men; the same honesty, sturdy independence and belief in practical rather than purely theoretical religion. Mr. Brooks speaks of Maurice as "one of the greatest souls in the whole history of English religion." The volume is carefully indexed.

THE MODERN VIKINGS. Stories of Life and Sport in the Norseland. By Hjalmar H. Boyesen. With many full-page illustrations. One volume, 12 mo. $2. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. For sale by Wharton & Bro., this city.

The cold, invigorating air of the North blows through these pages, but warm, red blood runs in the veins of the brave lads who are the heroes of the tales. The vigor and the spirit of the narratives are happily matched by similar qualities in the numerous full-page illustrations in the book.

STALL'S LUTHERAN YEAR-BOOK FOR 1888. Published by the author, and for sale by all Lutheran book stores in the United States and Canada. 192 pages. Price, twenty-five cents.

Stall's Lutheran Year-Book for 1888 is in every respect a book of superior excellence. The book is a real credit to the Lutheran Church, and every person who would know what a mighty moral agency that denomination is in the United States should possess a copy of this annual.

AFTER SCHOOL DAYS. A story for girls. By Christina Goodwin. Boston: D. Lothrop Company. Price, $1. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal street.

A book like this comes like a breath of fresh, pure air in a hot day. There is strong moral fibre in it, and there are scattered through its pages apt suggestions as to the vital things of life which can not but set readers to thinking. And they are introduced so deftly and unconsciously that they have no effect of being forced. The key to the book may be found in these half-dozen lines from one of the chapters: "If life has taught me anything it is this—to value the present, to enjoy to the utmost its pleasures, to estimate at the highest its opportunities to praise the Lord for its blessings without looking forward with anxiety or backward with regret."

TWELVE TIMES ONE. By Miss M. A. Lathbury, artist-author of "Seven Little Maids," "Ring-a-round-a-Rosy," etc., consisting of facsimile water-colored drawings, exquisitely printed in twelve colors, with descriptive verses to each illustration. Boards in lithographic covers of original design in colors and gold. $1 75. Worthington Company.

This new book by Miss Lathbury, although on a larger scale, is a charming companion to the author's ever-popular "Seven Little Maids." Every care has been taken to make the mechanical part of this work as perfect as the lithographic art can make it, and the exquisite work of Miss Lathbury has been faithfully copied to the most minute details. It is the most dainty and delightful volume ever issued.

LIFE OF WASHINGTON. By Virginia F. Townsend. Illustrated. One volume, 12 mo.; cloth, $1 25. Worthington Company.

Among the numerous "Lives of Washington" this volume by Miss Virginia Townsend will occupy a unique place. It is not intended for the serious student of history, although it is as accurate as it can be, but it is written principally for the young. It presents a woman's way of looking at our greatest man, and we are glad to say that the author has entered some by-paths where she has gained some views which throw a new light upon the figure which stands in solitary majesty in the heart and imagination of the American people. The narrative is fascinating, and altogether it is one of the best biographies written.

From George Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, this city, we have received:

PARADISE. A Novel. By Lloyd S. Bryce. Price, twenty-five cents. Funk & Wagnalls, Astor Place, New York.

MEDIÆVAL HISTORY. By George Thomas Stokes, D. D., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Dublin. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. George Wharton & Bro., New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This is a universal history, beginning with the death of Theodosius the Great, A. D. 395, and terminating with the downfall of Constantinople, A. D. 1453. This is one of the most interesting periods of history. It witnessed the birth and development of the papacy, the origin and conquests of Mahometanism, the rise and decay of feudalism, the invention of gunpowder, the printing press, the mariner's compass and the beginning of those adventures in navigation which soon afterwards culminated in the discovery of the New World. The author has brought together the salient facts of this interesting period and grouped them in such a manner as to give a clear view of their relation to each other and the great movement of time. There are numerous tables showing the sovereigns and the time of their reigns, and a copious index for reference.

THE PROGRESS OF LEARNING. A Poem. By George Lansing Taylor, S. T. D. John B. Alden, publisher, New York.

This is a poem delivered by Dr. Taylor at the celebration of the Centennial of Columbia College, New York, April 13, 1887. It is in the double or feminine rhyme, and is an interesting specimen of the versatility of the author's genius. It reads well. The little book is gotten up in the best style by the publisher.

To purify and quicken the circulation of the blood, and to reform irregularities of the system, use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Cautions often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and epilepsy are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and sullers. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing a choice one bit), tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of Fahnestock is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. Fahnestock, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can most safely be depended with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. S. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

STAR DREAMS.

The stars that fleck the midnight sky,
I call the flowers of God;
In heavenly fields thick sown they lie
As daisies on the sod.
They garland ever holy place;
They crown the pillars of his house,
And, twined in wreath and chaplet, grace
Serene angelic brows.

I call them, too, my milk-white sheep,
In any pastures fed,
Who wander o'er the hills of sleep
By night, the shepherd led;
They range the happy meadows wide,
And by the streamlets bless;
At morn he drives them down the slope,
And folds them in the west.

They are my ships, my stately ships,
That sail the tideless blue,
Till westward blown at morn they crowd
The gates of sunset through;
Nor ever snowy sail is furled,
Nor anchor cast by sea or shore;
From sunrise port to sunrise bay
They sail for evermore.

I call them, too, my bright-haired boys,
An eager, joyous throng,
Who ever dreamland, hill and dale
Go wandering all night long,
With scrip and staff and sandaled feet,
Fair pilgrims of the sky,
In dreams I bless them one by one,
As they go wandering by.

So all night long across the sky
My white ships sail, my flocks are led,
My dream-born children pass me by
With eager, joyous tread.
The flowers that in his garden shine
I wear on brow and breast;
And, lulled by melodies divine,
I sink to dreamless rest.

Have our little cousins given up the problem of adding 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 0, so as to make 100? Don't give it up so quickly. It can be done, and when you work it out you will wonder at its simplicity. Try it again.—ED.

MR. EDITOR: We are three little sisters, aged nine, seven and five. Our papa and mamma are members of the Methodist Church. We have only one little brother, George, who is two years old. Mr. Editor, we want to tell you and the little cousins how we raised our missionary money: To the oldest of us, Ella, mamma gave a turkey egg, which hatched a turkey, which grew up well, and was sold for fifty cents. To the other two of us mamma gave all the eggs that were laid on Sunday for two months, which, when sold, brought ninety-five cents; but mamma gave us the other five cents which made up one dollar. Thus we have paid fifty cents apiece. Dr. John has been asking fifty cents apiece from church members. We are not members of the church, but will be soon. Don't you think we did well, Mr. Editor? Sending much love to the cousins, and wishing you success, we are,

Your little friends,

ELLA COLE,
FLOSSIE COLE,
MARTHA COLE.

COTTON VALLEY, Louisiana.

(You did well indeed.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: I was so much interested in the addresses delivered by Bishop Keener and Rev. T. J. Newell, at the North Mississippi Conference, held in Winona, Miss., on the missionary cause, that I resolved to make a crazy quilt; and have it sold at the next Annual Conference (which will be held at Starkville, Miss.) and ask through your paper for contributions of silk, satin, velvet and plush, little ends of ribbons and embroidery silk from all the friends of the missionary cause. I am a little girl thirteen years old, but can and will make the quilt, if I can collect the material. I would be very glad if all the papers that feel an interest in this cause would copy this letter.

MADIE R. MOSS.

WINONA, Mississippi.

(The editor hopes that you may succeed with the quilt.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. My mamma takes your valuable paper, and I am always delighted when it comes, for I like so much to read the little cousins' letters. We have three Sunday-schools in our little town. I attend two of them—one in the morning, and one in the evening. I am very fond of my teachers, and always try to please them with good lessons. Now, I hope you will not ignore my first effort, but let it be numbered with those of next week's ADVOCATE. Will some of the little cousins tell me why the kingdom of Heaven is like a mustard seed? Wishing you all that is good, I remain, Your loving friend,

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl five years old. I am going to school to Bro. Price. Sister is gone to college at Meridian, and I am so lonesome that I thought I would ask papa to write you a letter; and ask the little cousins who was with Joseph when he was sold into Egypt? RUBY C. LOVETT.

A GENTLE BOY.—"Be gentle with little Gracie, Charlie," said his mother, as she tucked up the little girl in her carriage, all ready for a ride. "Be a gentle boy."

"Oh, mother! boys are never gentle," answered Charlie. "I don't want to be calleda gentle boy."

"Yet a few years from this time if you should not be called a gentleman, you would feel very bad," answered the mother. "And you can not be a gentleman unless you are a gentle boy first; kind and considerate to all around you, gentle to the weak, and courteous to those whom you meet every day. You are forming your character now, my boy, and it will be too late for you to change when you are grown up. You will want to be considered a gentleman then, so try to be a gentle boy now. There is nothing unmanly in being gentle and courteous. Now, think about this while you are giving Gracie her ride, and don't think it is not manly to be gentle to your little sister."

I hope that all the little boys that read this paper will remember that gentlemen are made of gentle boys.—Selected.

THE DULL BOY.—Dull boys, stupid blockheads, and dunces often turn out successful men. Bright, quick boys are supposed to be certain to make good men, but they often do not. Good scholars are favorites with teachers, while the plodding, slow student frequently gets no encouragement or sympathy. While he is doing his best, he is frequently accosted with the remark: "Why don't you get your lessons as well as Tom?" "You're either lazy or stupid." It is a terrible uphill road for poor, plodding John to travel. He often thinks he will be obliged to give it up, but the will within him will not let him; he only stops his ear when he is scolded, covers up the sharp wounds unfavorable comparisons make in his heart, and keeps at it all the while, growing on all sides. He astonishes no one by his bright sayings and brilliant ways. But by-and-by he turns out a first-class man. It is of vital importance that those who have the care of the young should early discover the difference between absolute deficiency and slowness of perception.

GOD'S LOVE.—Standing on the top of the Cheviot Hills, a little son's hand enclosed in his, a father taught the measure of the measureless love of God. Pointing northward over Scotland, then southward over England, then eastward over the German ocean, then westward over the limitless hill and dale, and then, sweeping his hand and eye around the whole circling horizon, he said: "Johnny, my boy, God's love is as big as all that!"

"Why, father," the boy cheerily replied, with sparkling eyes, "then we must be in the very middle of it."

Household.

Quotations from Marion Harland.

In leaving or entering a room, men, of whatever age or position, should stand aside and let the women of the party pass out first, unless there is a procession of couples walking arm-in-arm.

When in parlor or drawing-room a woman—standing—hands a cup, a book, a flower, or any article, to a man who is seated, he should rise to receive it. This rule is without exception.

"It is only the really poor and the rich who can afford to marry and go to housekeeping now-a-days," is a saying that is no longer flippant, but so pertinent that wise humanitarians look grave with the hearing thereof.

To sign one's name as "Mrs." Anybody at the bottom of a letter of friendship or business is a favorite trick of second-hand "gentility." If you must enclose your address, write it on another part of the sheet. Append to the body of the epistle the name given by your godfathers and godmothers in baptism.

You may not keep up Latin after you leave school, and German may, from the same date, become to you as truly a dead language. But you will write and speak your mother-tongue the better for having learned the one; the breadth and grasp of your mind will be improved by the study of the other.

The next best thing to a perfect constitution is the knowledge of the weak point in your physique, and the wisdom that leads you never to leave that unguarded.

The sick-chamber is a sacred isle past which the waves of domestic life glide silently. Still the tender house-mother confesses to herself that there is a difference in the feeling with which she nurses the invalid whose illness is not of his own making, and the boy who has overeaten himself, the daughter who thought it too much trouble to change her wet shoes, or the husband who "did not notice" that he was reading his newspaper in a draught that blew on the back of his neck. Neglect of one's health is needless cruelty to others, if not to himself.

WHEN TO WED.—Girls, don't be in haste to wed. Build up healthy bodies by good food, plenty of exercise and sleep. Learn all the useful household arts before you attempt to make a home. Cultivate your minds with the best books, that you may be able to teach your children much that school training alone will never give you. Choose your amusements wisely, for youth must have pleasure, but need not waste itself in harmful frivolity. Above all, select your friends with care. Avoid girls who live only for fashion, flirtation and enjoyment, and use the privilege all women may claim, to decline the acquaintance of young men whose lives will not bear inspection by the innocent eyes of women. Let no delusion of wealth, rank, comeliness or love tempt you to trust your happiness to such a one. Watch and wait till the true lover comes, even if it be all your life, for single blessedness is far better than double misery and wrong. Spinsters are a very useful, happy, independent race; never more so than now when all professions are open to them, and honor, fame and fortune are bravely won by many gifted members of the sisterhood. Set your standard high, and live up to it, sure that the reward will come here or hereafter, and in the form best suited to your real needs.—Louisa M. Alcott.

Readiness for death is that of character rather than of occupation. It is right-living which prepares for safe and even joyous dying.

A Large Estate.

A broad land is this in which we live, dotted so thickly with thrifty cities, towns and villages! Amid them all, with ever increasing popularity and helpfulness, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, giving hope and cheer where there is disease and despair. Wherever there is humanity there is suffering; wherever there is suffering there is the best field for this greatest American Remedy. Consumption (which is hog-scrofula), yields to it, if employed in the early stages of the disease; Chronic Nasal Catarrh yields to it; Kidney and Liver diseases yield to it! If you want the best known remedy for all diseases of the blood, ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and take no other.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

MYERS—DR. GIDSON MYERS was born February 1, 1818, and departed this life August 28, 1887, aged sixty-nine years, six months and twenty-eight days. He was a native of the state of Missouri, and there studied his profession as a physician, which profession he retained until the day of his death. After having traveled over many different States, he finally settled in Cabrashen parish, La., where he remained for some years, and was always very attentive to his profession. He moved from there to Rapides parish, La., and located on Spring Creek, where he remained only four or five years; and from there came to Sabine parish, where he remained until he was called from time to eternity.

He first joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Sugar Town, between the year 1870 and the year 1880. He withdrew from the church soon after having joined, and was for several years not a member of the church; but he again united with the church in 1881, and lived a consistent Christian as long as he lived. My first acquaintance with Dr. Myers was at Spring Creek Camp Meeting in 1881. I never had the pleasure of meeting him any more until he moved to Sabine parish in 1885, where he again united with the church by letter for the last time on earth. The people of Bayou Sue Church were well pleased to have him cast his lot among them. He was a well-informed man; his conversation showed that he had read many books and had been a close observer through life. He was a wise man. Indeed, he was better versed in the Scriptures than any man that I have ever conversed with outside of the ministry. It was a great pleasure to be in his company. He loved to talk about the Bible and religion, and was very interesting and instructive. He always manifested a spirit of philanthropy and benevolence toward all with whom he had the privilege of meeting. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father. He will be greatly missed by the church to which he belonged and the people whom he had so often visited and administered to when help was so greatly needed. I have seen him endeavor to comfort and console the bereaved as though he might have been an humble minister of the gospel. May the God of all goodness help us to meet him in that beautiful land with all the blood-bought throng that has gone on before! H. J. BOLTZ.

ENOCHS—SISTER VIOLA V. Enochs, daughter of Archie and N. T. Holcombe, died November 17, 1887. She was born December 2, 1859, and was married to K. S. Enochs, November 30, 1886. She joined the Methodist Church about twelve years of age, and made a very exemplary member, willing to undertake any work, when called upon, for the good of the church. She was a very affectionate and dutiful daughter. Her married life was short, but happy, and in her death her husband has lost a helpmeet indeed. She sleeps; but the Savior will wake her afterwhile. Dear one, farewell, but not forever.

HEDRICK—MRS. SINAI A. F. HEDRICK (nee Tannehill) was born in Claiborne county, Miss., September 23, 1819, and passed her entire probation of sixty-eight years in the vicinity of her birthplace. I believe the most lovely sight I have ever beheld is that of a comely, intelligent, refined, Christian lady, adorned with a meek and quiet spirit, walking in the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameless and fruitful in good works. Such was the life-long character of our dear departed Sister Hedrick. She embraced religion early in life and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which she proved to be a very consistent, happy and useful member to the close of life. In early womanhood she was married to Mr. J. H. Hedrick, with whom she lived in conjugal love and peace forty-seven years. She excelled as a good wife and a loving and faithful mother. Indeed, she was the center of attraction to her whole household. She never gave her pastors or her church any trouble or uneasiness. She was always in her place in the house of God when able to be there. It is true, she had her trials in common with all who live godly in Christ Jesus, but she bore them with the most exemplary patience and fortitude. By a fall from her buggy she was badly crippled, so that her last year on earth was one of much pain and suffering; but she was often very happy and filled with thankfulness to her heavenly Father for all his mercy and love to her. She repeatedly assured her family that she was ready to go at the Master's call. She fell asleep in Jesus, September 23, 1887, it being her sixty-eighth birthday. I knew her well, and in her fifty years' pilgrimage was often her pastor. I wish to say to my esteemed Bro. Hedrick, Your wife is in heaven; and to her children, Your mother is in Paradise, and will never be found anywhere else. If you wish to enjoy her sweet companionship again, you must all live as she did, and then you will meet her in glory. That you may, is the prayer of one who loves you much. J. G. JONES.

BONNETTE—The following resolutions were passed by the Vampte Sunday-school on the death of Rev. J. H. Bonnette:

Resolved, That words fail to express our sorrow at the death of Bro. J. H. Bonnette, who was called from labor to rest in the bosom of our Father, on the morning of September 29, 1887; but we rejoice to know that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That, while we can not fathom the depth of the mysterious providence, and while we mourn his departure, we bow submissively to the will of God, believing that "he doeth all things well," although he has lain the hand of affliction heavily upon us. He has but taken his own.

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Bonnette, this Sunday-school has lost its founder, a loved and faithful member; and, though our little band is weakened by the death of one of our best workers, we will unite our best efforts to carry on his works, ever praying that all obstacles be removed to the accomplishment of the end that he so much desired.

Resolved, That we thank God for having had Bro. Bonnette as our pastor and superintendent; that we have known and loved him, and that, by the grace of God, we will strive to emulate his example. Long will his earnest calls to duty resound in our ears as they fell from his lips.

Resolved, That we accept his message of love and friendship sent us from a triumphant death-bed, and lay them to our hearts with resolutions for a higher Christian life.

Resolved, That we tender our affectionate condolence to the aged mother and our heartfelt sympathies to the bereft wife and child, praying that our loving Savior will encircle them in his arms of love and mercy and give them grace to say, "Thy will, and not mine, be done."

S. P. SAINTS, for Vamp.

HENRY—WILLIAM B. HENRY died in Cleburne, Texas, after an illness of forty days, of typhoid fever, on September 29, 1887. He was born in West Carroll parish, La., September 11, 1869. Bro. Willie, in the summer of 1881, with a large class, under the ministry of Rev. R. S. Isbell, united with the Methodist Church, and to the end of his life lived a noble Christian, "as becometh the gospel of Christ." He died away from home, having gone with his grandmother to spend awhile with her in Texas. He leaves a devoted mother and step-father, several brothers and sisters to mourn his death, besides all who knew him. How rude is death! He comes, and none can say, "What doest thou?" In this instance, he has taken the first-born, and that, too, when he was just entering manhood with bright prospects. To this writer the subject of this notice was well-known. I knew him as a school-mate, always cheerful, studious and a general favorite. A little later on, he was my pupil, and then I learned to love him with an ardent affection that can not be expressed in language. To his heart-broken mother, we extend our sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement.

Curious Experiment with Oxygen.

The necessity for breathing fresh air is recognized as a fact known to the human race from the earliest times; but it has always been much of a puzzle why cats, birds and other animals invariably bury their respiratory machinery in fur or feathers when they go in sheep. Dr. Richardson, in making some experiments on the respiration of animals, has found that in currents of pure oxygen different animals are affected in diverse manners. Some, such as the cat, dog, guinea-pig and pigeon, were excited and rendered feverish by it; others (rabbit and frog) showed no such effect; in no instance was narcotism produced so long as oxygen was freshly supplied in steady current. In some later experiments, however, in order to economize the oxygen, the gas, after passing through the chambers in which the animals were placed, was collected, purified from products of respiration, and then supplied to the animals again. Entirely different results were now obtained: the frogs remained still unaffected, but the warm-blooded animals all became drowsy. With time the sleep became deeper, the breathing slower, and during the third passage of the oxygen through the chambers the pigeons ceased to breathe. On removing the animals from the chamber the pigeon was found to be dead, the cat slept for a few minutes longer and then died, the dog and rabbit recovered. The explanation of the discordance in the results of the earlier experimenters follows from these results, the depressant and narcotic action having been observed in those cases where the conditions of experiment led to the reinhalation of the oxygen. The cause of the phenomenon, however, is by no means clear. The oxygen did not seem to have suffered any other change in property; it still supported combustion and the respiration of cold-blooded animals; and when subjected to a brush discharge from a metalic point connected with the positive conductor of a frictional electrical machine, it lost its narcotizzing power and resumed its character of an excitant on warm-blooded animals. The subject is worth a good deal of further investigation.—English Mechanic.

Scientific Cant.

All the operations of nature are the result of God's agency. What is called science refers these operations to laws. Laws do everything. We are sick of this cant. What are these laws? Science can not answer. I call not that philosophy which can not give me an intelligible and adequate cause for events. I see the rivers flow and the ocean roll and the stars of heaven wheel along the dome of night; I mark the revolutions of the sun, see the clouds laden with oceans coursing through the upper fields of air, and the showers descending on the earth, and the lands bursting into new forms of life; I feel that there must be some mighty power at work in the universe. Who or what is it? I am told, "Law!" I do not understand the answer; I am not satisfied. The Bible tells me, "God," and I bow. My philosophy and my deepest instincts acquiesce in the response.—Dr. Thomas.

Catarrh is caused by scrofulous taint in the blood, and is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood and gives the whole system health and strength. Try this "peculiar medicine." It is prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Did you ever write a letter, and, just as you were finishing it, let your pen fall on it, or a drop of ink blot the fair page? It was the work of a moment, but the evil could not be effectually effaced. Did you never cut yourself unexpectedly and quickly? It took days or weeks to heal the wound, and even then a scar remained. It is related of Lord Brougham, a celebrated English nobleman, that one day he occupied a conspicuous place in a group to have his daguerreotype taken. But at an unfortunate moment he moved. The picture was taken, but his face was blurred. Do you ask what application we would make of these facts? Just this: It takes a lifetime to build a character—it only takes one moment to destroy it. "Watch and pray," therefore, "that ye enter not into temptation." "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

KEEP AHEAD.—One of the grand secrets of success in life is to keep ahead in all ways possible. If you once fall behind, it may be very difficult to make up the headway which you have lost. One who begins with putting aside some part of his earnings, however small, and keeps it up for a number of years, is likely to become rich before he dies. One who inherits property, and goes on, year by year, spending a little more than his income, will be poor, if he lives long enough. Living beyond their means has brought multitudes of persons to ruin in our generation. It is the cause of nine-tenths of all the defalcations which have disgraced the age. Bankers and business men do not often help themselves to other people's money until their own fund begins to fall off and their expenditures exceed their receipts. A man who is in debt walks in the midst of perils. It can not but impair a man's self-respect to know that he is living at the expense of others.

A New Ministerial Experience.

One year ago, last December, the pastor of a church in Philadelphia was forced to surrender his pulpit and, acting on his physician's advice, with his young wife, sought the warmer climate of Florida. Both were consumptive, and when it became evident that the young minister must relinquish a future that promised so much, he was broken in spirit. Together these two afflicted persons traveled toward the milder latitudes. It seemed a journey to death. Nothing more pathetic has been seen since Charles and Mary Lamb set out hand-in-hand, and with tearful eyes, toward the madhouse to which they had self-condemned themselves. The parting from their friends and parishioners at the railroad station was affecting in the highest degree. Several long weary months followed in which the hoped-for improvement was awaited. It came not. Both man and wife gradually grew weaker. The little cottage they had taken at Jacksonville finally began to lack the necessary comforts. A small negro servant had to be discharged because she could no longer be paid. Then the despairing young wife took her bed and rapidly grew worse. One good lady assumed that death was inevitable, and hoped only to make the end as painless as possible. In her mission of kindness she encountered a bale old gentleman who, after having given her a ten-dollar note, added: "I will do more. I will send that unfortunate woman my Compound Oxygen. I always take it with me to cure sudden colds or throat affections, but I know what it can do even in desperate cases." In a few minutes he was ready and accompanied the noble-hearted lady to the house of suffering. Hot water was readily procurable, and in a brief time the consumptive was inhaling the Compound Oxygen, evolved from one of Drs. Starkey & Palen's Home Treatment. At the end of a week notable improvement in the woman's condition set in. The end of another week's treatment found her seated in a chair on the porch, and she was soon able to walk about. Meanwhile full advice had been received from Dr. Starkey as to the Compound Oxygen; two Home Treatments had arrived, and the minister began to give some attention to his own case. Friends gathered around them, amid the Land of Oranges, and now they are both in a degree of health that enables the pastor to resume his pulpit, and his good wife the care of her own home.

A valuable and interesting pamphlet on the methods of manufacture and of treatment by Compound Oxygen, is sent free to all who desire it by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Men are asking, "What is religion?" and are attempting to answer the question by going to sources of information outside of, and utterly apart from, the Bible. They go to "the ten great religions of the world," as they denominate them, for a reply; they ask Buddha, Sakamuni and Confucius; they go to physical science and to belles-lettres to discover the nature and purposes of God, and the origin and destiny of man; they seek the living among the dead; they would find religion in the atmosphere or in the ground. This is not the way to get an answer to the sad, anxious, baffled inquiries of the human heart. Men must return to the Book. If they would understand the opinions of Socrates, they must read and study the Platonic Dialogues. They know that the study of biology and geology will never introduce them into the Academy. In like manner, if they would understand the opinions of God, they must read and study his written Word.—Dr. Shedd.

Consumption Surely Cured.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.
1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 14, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Hamblie, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 286 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The President's message is said to have been a real surprise to the body of Democrats in Congress. His declaration of opposition to any reduction of the taxes on tobacco and whisky or other alcoholic spirits is a great disappointment to many.

The President has sent the following nominations to the Senate: Lucius Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi, to be associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, to be Secretary of the Interior; Don M. Dickenson, of Michigan, to be Postmaster General; Charles S. Fairchild, of New York, to be Secretary of the Treasury; George L. Rives, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of State; Isaac H. Maynard, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Sigourney Butler, of Massachusetts, to be Second Controller of the Treasury; James W. Hyatt, of Connecticut, to be Treasurer of the United States.

The city election in Atlanta resulted in the election of a straight-out anti-prohibition ticket by a majority of 1,000.

C. H. J. Taylor, Minister to Liberia, has resigned.

Senator Farwell, of Illinois, has prepared a bill to perpetuate the national banking system, which will soon be introduced in the Senate.

The Republican National Committee have selected Chicago as the place for the meeting of the Republican Convention, June 19, 1888.

Hon. John S. Barbour has been nominated by the Democratic caucus for United States Senator for Virginia, in place of Riddleberger, whose term expires 1889.

Virginia has requested her representatives in Congress to use their efforts to secure a repeal of the entire internal revenue system of taxation; and a similar sentiment prevails in North Carolina.

The Chicago Tribune takes issue with Mr. Blaine on the tariff question. It says the position of Mr. Blaine is the weakest ground he has yet occupied.

Arensdorf, on trial at Sioux City, Iowa, for the murder of Rev. Geo. C. Haddock, has been found not guilty by the jury.

It is said that Mr. Blaine has captured the Republican National Committee, the evidence being the selection of Chicago as the place for the Nominating Convention.

The new railroad between Pruilhomme, on the Texas Pacific, and Natchitoches has been completed, and trains are running.

Gustavus J. Orr, superintendent of public instruction for the State of Georgia, died in Atlanta, last Sunday.

The bridge over the Alabama river, on the Louisville and Nashville road, fell in last Sunday. One man was drowned.

FOREIGN.

Russian military movements on the frontier of Austria create grave apprehensions in regard to the peace of Europe. The effect upon the Bourse at Vienna was that rentes fell heavily and gold arose.

Lord Mayor Sullivan has been removed to Tullamore Jail to prevent him holding daily levees as he did in Dublin Jail.

The new doctor, Sommerbrod, after examining the throat of the Crown Prince, said the prospects of the Prince's recovery were hopeful.

Austrian frontier guards will be organized and increased to meet the threatening aspect of Russia.

Germany, Austria and Italy have agreed to raise their ministers at Madrid to the rank of ambassadors. This is a step towards recognizing Spain as a great power. England is expected to do the same with her minister to Spain.

The Russian troops whose time of service expired in autumn have been retained in the service, and 250,000 recruits have been enrolled in the army corps which forms the military line along the Austrian frontier. It is said that the movement of Russian troops on the Galician frontier is due to orders issued over a year ago, and have no special menace.

The Crown Prince, in a letter to a former tutor, takes a hopeful view of his case. He says he has confidence in his physician, has never lost strength, and general appearance is that of perfect health.

M. Goblet, having failed to form a Cabinet, President Carnot has made another appeal to M. Falleres to undertake the task.

In the lobby of the French Chamber of Deputies, M. Jules Ferry was fired at three times by a man named Auberthi, and was slightly wounded. It was the beginning of a general melee and many hot quarrels between moderates and radicals.

President Carnot has received the congratulations of the diplomatic body.

The war cloud is looming up. Orders have been issued to place the Fifth, Seventh, Eighth and Eleventh Russian Army Corps on a war footing. Austria has adopted the waiting policy to find out the real intentions of Russia.

Mr. Hooper, M. P., has been arrested at Cork for publishing reports of meetings of the suppressed branches of the National League.

The new German Military Service Bill introduced in the Reichstag will add largely to the numbers of the army.

Rev. Mr. Berry, of Wolverhampton, England, has declined the call to Plymouth Church as the successor of Henry Ward Beecher.

M. Fallieres has failed to form the French Cabinet, and the President has called upon Senator Tirard to do so, and a Cabinet has been formed of Moderate Republicans.

Bismarck and Emperor William are reported unwell.

THE blood must be pure, or the body would be in perfect condition. Dr. A. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier, makes pure blood, and imparts the rich blood of health and vigor to the whole body.

The Sunday Law.

Dr. McKim, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, in this city, preached, December 4, on "The Sunday Rest and the Sunday Law." We quote the last paragraphs of the sermon, and call the reader's special attention to them:

As to our Sunday Law, I affirm that, in spite of its inadequate enforcement, in spite of its evasion in great numbers of instances, it has proved a very great blessing to this community. Even its opponents admit that drunkenness and disorder have greatly diminished since it came into operation. Our criminal courts, both in the city and in the country, tell the same story. And, what is of very great importance, it has lifted the yoke of toil from thousands of our fellow-citizens, who formerly had no day they could call their own.

But for all that, it is now proposed to repeal this law, or to so modify it as to strip it of more than half its power to bless. It interferes, forsooth, with "personal liberty"—which, being interpreted, means that it interferes with the liberty of a certain class of men to make money on that day, in plying a traffic which is highly dangerous to the morals and good order of the community! Oh, Liberty! What outrages upon the public weal have not been perpetrated in thy name! I warn you, my friends, not to be caught by this specious appeal to "liberty," and I urge you to use your influence, as citizens, against a movement which is really directed against the right of the laboring man to rest on the Sunday, and which, if successful, will inflict grave injustice upon thousands of the toilers in our midst, and strike a blow at the peace and quiet of our city. Take note of the fact that it is not the laboring men who are inspiring and directing this movement against the Sunday Law and raising the cry of "personal liberty," but others who are pecuniarily interested in securing the "liberty" to grow rich by plying their questionable traffic seven days in the week.

A Candid Acknowledgment.

(Extract from a letter of Dr. D. W. Atkinson, Siloam Springs, Ark.)

"I know that many physicians are very much prejudiced against all proprietary medicines, and I think, sometimes foolishly so. I am, however, willing to acknowledge merit wherever it is deserved. I have prescribed Simmons Liver Regulator, and have given it a pretty thorough trial myself, and think it deserves all the praise it receives. I have watched its use for the last five years, and do not know of a more popular medicine. My patients praise it very highly, and it gives good results wherever it is used.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of December will be "red-letter month" for our agents of the Louisiana Conference. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 16-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference.

Mansfield Female College—1888.

One hundred dollars, paid in advance, will entitle new pupils to board, tuition and music for the term beginning Monday, January 2, 1888, and ending Wednesday, June 13. Seventy-five dollars will pay board and tuition in the literary department, without music. Let those who have been attending home schools during the fall term avail themselves of this offer.

F. M. GRACE, Pres.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

The Garden.

For the management of vegetable gardens and practical instructions concerning the culture of flowers—for hints and information respecting all kinds of seeds, planting and cultivating all vegetables and flowers, D. M. Ferry & Co.'s Seed Annual for 1888 will be found as complete as any work of a similar character ever issued. The variety and extraordinary range of the information given renders their Annual worthy the special attention of everyone interested in having luscious vegetables of beautiful flowers. D. M. Ferry & Co. make the growing and sale of onion seed a leading speciality, and give so much information on onion culture as to make their Annual of permanent value to all onion growers and gardeners. The Annual can be had for the asking. Address D. M. FERRY & Co., Detroit, Mich.

Felicity Street Church.

BUILT, 1850. BURNED, 1887.
REBUILT, 1888.

Anyone who knows and loves her; anyone who has served at her altars, or found Christ precious within her sanctuaries; anyone who has ever attended or worked in her Sunday-school as scholar, teacher or officer; any stranger without her gates; any friend, whoever and wherever dispersed, having a mind to assist in the rebuilding of Felicity Street Church, has now an opportunity. All are invited to help. "Who gives quickly gives twice."

The church approaches rapidly to completion, and will soon call her children and well-wishers once more to offer, under the shadow of her walls, the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise. Contributions, however small, in aid will be promptly acknowledged by the treasurer and gratefully appreciated by the people. Send them to the preacher in charge, Rev. S. H. Werlein, care of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans.

A Wonderful Food and Medicine,

Known and used by Physicians all over the world. Scott's Emulsion not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food that builds up the wasted body. "I have been using Scott's Emulsion for several years, and am pleased with its action. My patients say it is pleasant and palatable, and all grow stronger and gain flesh from the use of it. I use it in all cases of Wasting Diseases, and it is specially useful for children when nutrient medication is needed, as in Marasmus."—T. W. PIERCE, M. D., Knoxville, Ala.

A friendly settlement of the Virginia debt is deemed probable. W. L. Royall, of Richmond, having been appointed by English bond-holders to represent them in a conference for the purpose of a compromise settlement.

A Universal Interest

Will be felt in the article which MR. GLADSTONE has written expressly for the Youth's Companion. The subject of the great statesman is the "Future of the English-Speaking Races," and the paper is said to be remarkably bold and suggestive.

John Most, the anarchist, who was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and who was granted a stay of proceedings, has been released on $5,000 bond.

THE CHRISTMAS BELLS.

BY LONGFELLOW.

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

And thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Till ringing, singing on its way,
The world revolved from night to day,
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Then from each black, accursed throat
The cannon thundered from the boat,
And with the sound
It was as if an earthquake rent
The hearth-stone of a continent,
And made forlorn
The households born
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

And in despair I bent my head:
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
For hate is strong
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep:
"God is not dead; nor doth He sleep!
The wrong shall fail,
The right prevail,
With peace on earth, good-will to men!"

Our Last Issue.

The Fullness of the Time.

BY REV. O. P. EVANS, D. D.,

Pastor at Bayou Municipal Church, New Orleans.

The tardiness of the Messiah's advent has been urged by infidelity as an objection to his claims, and devout minds have been perplexed that, with his ability to remedy the world's ills and remove its sins, he did not sooner inaugurate his work. Was it indifference? or was it an oversight? Lest we should imagine either, Paul tells us that "when the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law." The purpose indicated in the promise to the first transgressors had been steadily pursued. Into God's plans had entered the vicissitudes of every nation and every age. Every achievement, every calamity and prosperous event, the battles and harvests, the philosophies, poems and inventions, the accessions and decays of royal houses, and the changes of political boundaries, laid before him like the colors upon the painter's pallet, to be wrought into the design upon the canvas, Jesus was to come, come as a King: but not until the mountains were razed and the valleys exalted, the rough places smoothed, and the crooked made straight. An event that was to gather into one all things in heaven and earth, and was to effect all worlds forever, could not have been precipitated any more than it could have been forgotten. The solemn and stupendous venture of divine grace was not to be repeated, and, inasmuch as it was perfectly unconstrained, it was inevitable that divine wisdom would select and prepare the time of its unfolding. If Jesus had opened his mission to the trembling pair outside of Eden's gate, this pretentious age would have objected to his credentials as being unauthenticated by an adequate scholarship, and pronounced his character a myth worthy of the unhistoric age. If he had come in the time of David or Solomon, men would have said that the prodigious machinery and magnificent sacrifice was beyond the necessity of the case, and before human nature had an opportunity to demonstrate its recuperative power. If he had come to his people in the time of their bondage to Babylon or Rome, it would be charged that he was only one of Israel's judges, who substituted the traditional military genius with the exceptional gifts of a philosopher. A little reflection will satisfy any open mind that the Savior came into the world at the most suitable time in the world's history. There was a very exact calculation and adjustment of his nativity to the salvation of the world.

With reference, in the first place, to the Jewish nation. For various reasons the Jews were selected as the depositary of the divine idea of redemption, and the royal line of David as the progenitors of our Lord. It was all important that this people should be able in some degree at least to apprehend the significance of his mission. If no one among them could fathom the mystery of his character, it was indispensable that his teaching should not be unintelligible for the lack of spiritual training. It was to this end that a people whom even David pronounced brutish, and whose pastors Jeremiah pronounced so, were put under the discipline of the Mosaic institution. The ceremonial law, with its distinctions and refinements, with its interdictions and sacrifices, and ablutions and grim penalties, was ordained to cultivate the idea of holiness, which seemed, even when the Savior came, to be a thing, with many, the most obscure and intangible. The Pharisees, who were the most cultivated and unexceptionable in morals, were proud and envious, and full of hatred and malice. They were but partisans of the temple and of the Holy City, and, while punctilious in a round of ceremonies, they were strangers to justice, mercy and truth. Though the Jews were greatly superior to their idolatrous neighbors in all their outward morality, two thousand years of training, under the moral and ceremonial law, were necessary to make the idea of holiness accessible. Only now and then had there been a real apprehension of what was meant by purity of heart, until the events attending the Roman conquest broke up the fallow ground and enabled John the Baptist to get a fair hearing for the gospel of repentance.

Fundamental to this conception was the utter overthrow of their political hopes. Jerusalem must be trodden down of the Gentiles. And never were they in such a remorseless grip, never hope of relief so desperate. Herod was as brilliant in battle as he was selfish, crafty and cruel on his throne. He who would not hesitate to sacrifice his idolized Mariamne and two manly sons, nor scruple to slaughter all the children "from two years old and under," would not falter in blotting out all traces of revolt. Loaded down with exorbitant imposts to indulge his passion for palaces, temples and great cities, goaded by the importation of foreigners and the prevalence of the Greek language and customs, terror-stricken at the profusion of heathens in the outer courts of the temple, while their gifts adorned its walls and their sacrifices bled upon its altars, appalled by the murder of all their prominent rabbis, there was nothing to moderate their despair but the hope of the Messiah, whose advent, according to prophecy, must be very near. Searching the Scriptures for the time and manner of his coming, they became familiar with the qualities of his person and the credentials of his office, as they never would have done if prompted only by literary or religious curiosity. God gave them "the valley of Achor, for a door of hope," and the whole nation quivered with the expectancy of Shiloh. The evening shadows were hailed with feverish anxiety to behold Balaam's "star." When the forerunner said, "The kingdom of Heaven is at hand," he assured the hope uppermost in every mind. Surely the time was full.

As the Savior was to be born of Jewish parents in a Jewish village, use his first ministers were selected from his people, and they opened their message in every city to their own people. It was of the first importance, then, that these Jews should be "scattered abroad." They had the knowledge of Jehovah and the doctrines of the kingdom, the immortality of the soul, and the last judgment. They had the Scriptures, which declared his coming, and synagogues accessible to all Jews, where these Scriptures were read, and where any Jew who desired might speak to an organized congregation on religious subjects. The Assyrian, Babylonian and Roman deportations had directly or indirectly scattered the Jews among all the principal cities of Europe, Asia and Africa. Paul found them in Philippi and in Corinth. The Jews' quarter in Alexandria contained 200,000 people. On the day of Pentecost representatives from every continent and many islands were in Jerusalem. Wheresoever the apostles went they were sure of an attentive and numerous auditory. While the Greeks might mock and dismiss the Christian missionary with a shrug of nonchalance, every Jew listened with most intense interest to whatever pertained to the Messianic hope, around which revolved the most sacred of political ambitions, and dearer now than ever in the distress of their exile. Until now the fullness of time had not come.

It was equally the auspicious time with reference to the Gentiles.

1. It was necessary that a language should be provided in which the gospel should be held in solution, and that this language should be the tongue of a cultivated and thoughtful people. The gospel conveying the final and most complete revelation of Deity, a system of ethics of perpetual obligation, and the philosophy of a divine life which was proffered to all men, must necessarily be expressed in terms of fixed value, and intelligible to every grade of culture. The scholars and thinkers would analyze its statements and requirements with the most subtle skill. The poor and illiterate, with the keenest interest, would ponder the color and tones of every thought for light on their privileges, and solace for their sorrows. And so God prepared a language of amplest measures and most elastic texture: a language then spoken by a commercial people, but one in which statesmen had thought, and poets sung, and philosophers written, and orators spoken, and the world's great tragedies been acted before its most refined and cultivated audiences. Such was the Greek, which Sir William Jones, who is said to have learned twenty-eight languages, pronounced "the most perfect ever spoken by men." For its capacity to express abstract ideas, by its numerous compounds and rich inflections, carrying each shade of sentiment and emotion, it is eminently fitted as the menstruum of divine truth.

The Greeks, though occupying originally a small territory, were a commercial people, and were constantly sending out colonies. Athens alone sent out forty. The conquests of Alexander were remarkable chiefly for the prevalence he gave to the Greek language and literature by means of the numerous colonies he planted. The Greek had become the language of literature, commerce and government throughout the world. It was the language even of Herod's court in Cæsarea, though an Idumean prince, in a Roman government, on a Jewish throne. The Jews, especially in Africa, were conversant with it: for nearly 300 years had used the Septuagint version of their Scriptures. Cicero said that the Grecian writings are read among almost all nations, while the Latin are confined to their own boundaries—quite small." Hence, with two or three exceptions, the books of the New Testament were originally written in the Greek. With such a language to hand, and whose vicissitudes had passed in the political extinction of its peoples, the fullness of time had come.

2. It was necessary that the world should be at peace. This would allow leisure and inclination to consider what might otherwise be crowded out of sight by the strained necessities of the hour. The early nations were small, and their territories the scenes of incessant broils. Commerce and travel were both limited and difficult. Rome was able to merge the world into one empire, and hold it under one system of laws. All minor rivalries were suppressed by the grasp of one comprehensive iron hand. For the first time in centuries the whole world had peace, and the temple of Janus was closed. The most distant provinces were bound to the Capitoline Hill by roads that offered easy travel at all seasons, and the terror of the Roman legions restraining lawless hands and individuals from pillage, social confidence was begotten among the nations, and travel and commerce were invited everywhere. A Roman citizen was always safe. This condition of things enabled the early evangelists to go "everywhere preaching the Word."

3. It was necessary that men should have a sense of their guilt and their helplessness to escape from it. The sin which men would not or could not perceive and abhor as a fact of their inner life, they were permitted to see in its awful results upon the outer life "bringing forth death." The death whose harbinger was physical pain: death in the dissolution of domestic bonds: death in the demolition of the commonwealth: death in the relaxing of commercial confidence, and death in the political swirl, by which liberty and individuality and spontaneity, with all that was gentle and beautiful, went down in a general despotism. There was almost universal poverty, universal crime and universal unrest. The Spirit of God was no idle spectator of the general misery, but was busy, and, even through heathen oracles, was convincing the world of "sin, of righteousness, and judgment to come." The universality of propitiatory sacrifices was an admission of guilt: but sacrifices brought neither peace nor purity. Philosophy had proved to be a miserable failure, for its teachers were no better than others. Plato was accused of avarice, incontinence and lying. Cato, extolled as a model of virtue, was a drunkard and suicide. Cicero, as choice a specimen of heathen virtue as could be found, pleaded for toleration, while Socrates is charged with that crime and its cure. Art, whether it kindled in stone or on the canvas, could not beguile men: the muses could not inspire them, neither art nor letters could cure men's woes from sin. The social fabric and the individual life, alike, lay in ashes. Men were staggering and groaning under the burden of [illegible] the message of John the Baptist, under proper auspices, would have met with the same result in Corinth or Rome, and Jerusalem. The world's hope had perished but for one slender thread, that, dropping out of the Jewish Scriptures, had wound itself among all the nations—a Deliverer would come.

Our New Church.

The above sketch represents the new Felicity Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at New Orleans. As is well known, the old structure, which had become familiar to the entire congregation as one of the early solid edifices of our Methodism, was, by an unhappy accident, destroyed by fire in the early part of this year. The ashes had hardly grown cold when the pastor, Rev. S. H. Werlein, started with subscription book to secure the funds for its reconstruction. With rapidity the canvass was pushed, and with most gratifying results. Almost the entire community, with a sympathy most generous, evinced a disposition to give practical assistance.

As an evidence of the spirit of unity which prevails among the Protestant Churches of this city, it is worthy of note that the ladies representing the different denominations, with hearty unanimity, determined to aid the sister church which had met with so great misfortune. There was given at Washington Artillery Hall a most select entertainment, under the auspices of the Presbyterian, Baptist, Christian, Episcopal, Unitarian, Jewish and Methodist Churches, the proceeds of which were added to the amount already secured by subscription.

The Building Committee were proffered the services of the leading architects of the city, who most generously proposed plans for the new church without charge. The selection fell on Messrs. Williams and Patton, who at once furnished the elevation which adorns this page. J. J. Kelley & Bro. were accepted as contractors for the entire work of construction, their bid being $21,000. Old material and foundations, valued at about $4,500, were furnished the contractor, which makes the actual cost of the edifice, exclusive of heating furnace, gas fixtures, organ, pulpit furniture and carpets, about $26,500. It is expected that the church will be ready for occupancy by or before April 1, 1888. Not quite sufficient money has been secured to cover the amount of the contract, and the church is [illegible] being urged with the hope that at the completion of the structure there will not be a cent of indebtedness.

On the corner-stone, in brass letters, is written: "Built, 1850. Burned, 1887. Rebuilt, 1888." During this interval of thirty-eight years the church has been served by the following clergymen: Rev. Dr. Holland N. McTyeire, now Bishop, under whose pastorate the first edifice was constructed. He was followed by Rev. Linus Parker, from 1853 to 1855; Rev. J. B. Walker, from 1856 to 1857; Rev. J. C. Keener, from 1858 to 1859; Rev. Linus Parker, from 1860 to 1863. During the years of 1864 and 1865 the church was in the hands of the Northern Methodist Church. In 1866 Rev. Linus Parker was again appointed to Felicity Street Church, and remained until 1870. He was followed by Rev. John Matthews, who remained from 1871 to 1874: Rev. J. B. Walker, from 1875 to 1878; Rev. John Hannon, from 1879 to 1880; Rev. C. W. Carter, from 1881 to 1884; Rev. S. H. Werlein, from 1885 to this present time.

The building is in the early English Gothic style of architecture, and measures about ninety feet front from the rear. The church proper is forty-six feet in width, with a front including towers of sixty feet. A general idea of the exterior of the building may be gained from the engraving. But a few words may serve to give a more definite idea. The height of the main church tower will be perfect from the base to the pavement. The earth tower will be ninety-six feet high. The lower or basement portion is cemented in imitation of ashlar stone up to a height of thirteen feet, where there is a belt course. From there up the finish is in the natural color of the brick building brick. The principal entrance is on Felicity street, through a tiled Gothic portico leading direct into the vestibule, where a wide, easy flight of stairs leads to the vestibule of the main auditorium. From the Chestnut street side there is another entrance up a flight of stone steps to the principal tower, from whence another flight leads to the upper vestibule. There is also a private flight of stairs from the [illegible] leading directly to the minister's retiring-room behind the pulpit. There are five entrances to the basement or Sunday-school room, one from the lower front vestibule, from either side and from the rear. This room is forty-six feet wide by sixty-three feet [illegible] high ceiling, with [illegible] The library is [illegible] the pastor's [illegible] The [illegible] will be [illegible] The [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] heating system, [illegible] to have a pure supply of fresh, warm air circulating throughout the building, and thus make the ventilation thorough.

different States, and, excepting that of Methodism in Georgia, by Rev. George G. Smith, I have not found one to compare with this either in the interest of the subject matter or in the manner of treating it. Bishop Hargrove remarked that what interested him most in Bishop McFerrin's History of Methodism was the chapter on the introduction of Methodism into Louisiana. But what was merely a sketch in that work is here drawn out and written in detail. The very names, dates, places and facts are all delivered to us from one who was the associate of the original actors in these thrilling scenes, though then a young man.

It is said in Proverbs that the names of the righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance. And who that reads in this fair volume the names of Tobias and Randall Gibson, the Grillings, Newet Vick, Tommy Owen, James Axley and Richmond Nolley, as well as Larner Blackman, Samuel Sellers, Elisha Bowman, and many others, will not realize the truth of this proverb? The style of the book is gossipy and diffuse, but the English is idiomatic and pure, and the narrative clear and fluent, the parts well proportioned, and nothing wanting to a complete history of early Methodism, which means heroic piety in the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Centenary College.

Sometimes people talk too much and injure the cause which they have espoused and hoped to benefit; sometimes men driving a bargain say more than is prudent, and miss the trade; but it seldom happens that men say too little about anything. A few times, however, we have seen causes which demanded earnest, honest toil and pluck in advocating and placing them before the minds of the public, and in such instances we have seen men shrink from action on their own part and whisper confidentially to some other brother, "Don't sacrifice yourself."

Now, we think the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi have a cause which they ought to espouse in real earnest right away, and that is the upbuilding of Centenary College. It is not necessary to make speeches and pass good resolutions at meetings, when the cause of education is mentioned; but it is necessary to go to influential men, and men of wealth, and tell them that the interests of Methodism demand that Centenary College shall live, and that those whom God has prospered should honor him with their substance.

It seems to us that there are enough large-hearted Methodists in these two States to raise an endowment of one hundred thousand dollars for the sake of the youth of the country and the church, and their duty should be pressed upon them by our brethren. Rich Methodists would be better men and enjoy religion more if they would give in this noble cause. With such an endowment invested in bonds at a reasonable rate, and tuition put to one-third of what it is at present, we would have at least two hundred students, and Centenary College would again flourish and be a power for good in the land; so what rich man will now step forward and immortalize himself, and get honor and glory to God? Centenary College is not situated immediately on any railroad, or in a large town, where young men generally learn to drink and gamble and grow idle; but it is six miles from Ethel, on the Mississippi Valley road, from which place there is not the least difficulty in getting transport by hack to Jackson, La., for the small sum of seventy-five cents. The idea entertained by some that Centenary is inaccessible is entirely erroneous.

Our students this session, though few in number, are closely drawn to the faculty, are in perfect harmony among themselves, apply themselves with diligence to their studies and are of excellent moral character. Not of late years has the attention of the two States seemed to be drawn so closely to the interests of Centenary as during this session, and we feel sure that the time has come when something must and will be done to endow and place this institution on a firm financial basis.

Brethren of the church, if you intend to have a college here, endow it. We feel great confidence in the wise deliberations of the trustees, and believe they will give us a pushing, energetic, enterprising president.

To Young Preachers Seeking Aid to an Education.

Mr. Editor: Thanks for the emphatic commendation you gave last week to the call made of the good people in the North Mississippi Conference, to aid in sending young preachers to school as a preparation for the itinerant ministry. Let me say a word to the young preachers who need such aid, and are willing to avail themselves of it. They should write to Dr. T. C. Wier, Sardis, Miss., at once, and inform him of their purpose to preach, and get the presiding elder or the preacher in charge to certify to him the worthiness and need of the applicant, and also state the extent of aid. Some young men will find adequate aid among family or private friends; others are able to pay part of the expense of going to school, needing only a supplement more or less. Others, again, have little or no means, and these are most likely to be in need of education as well as the help to obtain it. Let the young men of each class make known their purposes and circumstances, and set to work in good earnest to prepare for the great work before them. If a young man does this in a modest, humble, energetic way, committing himself meantime to the Lord's guidance, he will find somebody to help him. If, on the other hand, those who want to see our ministry possessed of the best practical advantages, and will seek to aid in such an achievement, they will soon find a fit and needy young man who is ready to be helped into the blessed work of preaching this glorious gospel.

The presiding elders can and, no doubt, will help forward this important movement as recommended by our Conference at its recent session. More than likely, a proper young man can be found without trouble in each district of the Conference, who can, at once, be made the beneficiary of that district. Let prompt action be taken, and the good results will quickly be seen.

December 9, 1887.

The Last Service of the Year.

We went out to the pretty little, unpretentious church of Mt. Hermon yesterday to hear the pastor for the last time during the Conference year. The deep-green banners of the giant oaks all seemed to have been furled, and the various little pathways by which the feet of the worshipers went up to the house of God were full of autumn leaves, which were still descending like a generous offering from on high, and were borne hither and thither by November's surly blast which had, as in Burns' day, laid fields and forest bare. Although the day was unfavorable and a drizzling shower was descending, there was a large crowd out to meet and greet the preacher at his last appointment. The discourse was upon the words, "Quench not the Spirit," and was an able one. It carried the speaker into deep and intricate matters. He engaged in showing both the unity and the separateness of the Godhead, and how, while the three were one in power and essence, that each performed separate and independent functions in the work of salvation; that without the death of the Son man could not have been saved, and that without the silent continuous operations of the Spirit his death would not have insured salvation; that man was not cleansed by the blood of Jesus, but by the merits of that blood. He descanted largely upon the power and influence of the new birth, and exhibited the folly of the belief that holds that the flesh can sin without the soul being responsible; that the body is but inert matter, and is entirely dominated by the soul that lives within it, and urged the importance of living up close to duty—close to the Savior's side. At the conclusion, a young man was received as a member, who voluntarily came over from the Baptist Church. The pastor received him by vote, but did not put him under the usual vow, remarking that as he had already confessed Christ and professed regeneration, that it would be an improper reflection upon the church from whence he came to subject him to a new vow.

It was with feelings of regret that the membership bade farewell to their young and active pastor who was there with his people for the last time. At such a time the administration of the Lord's Supper would have been most commendable; but, as the preacher is only in his Sophomore year, it is probable he is not yet authorized to administer this solemn rite.

There have been about 120 accessions upon the Franklinton work this year, and the field has been well handled.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Sibley will find warm friends in whatever new field the Conference may send him.

Who Will Help to Educate Our Young Preachers?

The North Mississippi Conference is waking up to the necessity of making earnest effort to aid in the education of young men preparing for the ministry. At our late session a resolution was adopted looking to the formation of a ministerial educational aid society in each district.

We would urge upon our presiding elders the importance of prompt action in this matter, of organizing at once such societies in their respective districts. Appoint your secretaries and treasurers; get your preachers to talking and working, and solicit aid from the liberal-minded. There are, I suppose, as many as ten young men within our Conference territory who desire to enter the active ministry, and who are yet delayed by lack of needful educational qualifications. These young preachers would greatly appreciate timely aid. I think I know one presiding elder who will be ready to undertake the education of one of these young men, relying upon the liberality of the church within the bounds of his district. Can not each of our eight presiding elders do as much? Say you will, brethren, and have faith in God and the church to help you.

In the Advocate, of the eighth instant, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan makes an earnest appeal to our people for their contributions in behalf of ministerial education. Have we not liberal Methodists in Greenville, Columbus, Aberdeen, Tupelo, Winona, Sardis, and elsewhere, who will give $100, $50, $25, $10, or less, for the education of young preachers in North Mississippi? Think of this, Christian men and women, stewards of the Lord, and when you pray, "Send forth laborers," help to answer your prayer by giving your money to send them. If those who have already subscribed will forward their money, we can put it to immediate use. I had, this very morning, a communication from a young man, asking counsel and needing material aid in the matter of education for the ministry.

Palmer Camp Ground.

We, the tenters of Palmer Camp Ground, met, according to previous appointment, for the dispatch of whatever business as may come regularly before us. Members present: Bros. E. Miles, G. W. Walker, Rufus Williams, Samuel Walker; G. W. Walker being entitled to two votes, as he holds two tents, and R. Williams was asked by Bro. O'Neal to act as proxy for him. Therefore, having a quorum, we proceed to business. On motion, Bro. S. Walker was elected secretary.

1. The public tent question was raised and left to a vote, and unanimously voted down.

2. Time for holding the next annual meeting was set to commence Saturday night before the first Sunday in October, 1888, and hold until Friday morning following, or longer if the interest of the meeting demands it. The people will be supported exclusively by the tenters as heretofore.

3. The grounds are open for anyone who may want to build private family tents (permanent or cloth tents).

4. It will not be expected for any person, except tenters, to run hacks to and from the railroad to the camp ground.

5. All public collections, if any, will be taken for the support of the grounds.

6. We appoint the second Monday in January for the tenters, and (as many others as may wish to meet with us) to meet at the camp ground for the purpose of inclosing the tabernacle, so as to prevent stock from being under it, also the hallways of our tent, and some other work will be done. Lumber will be on the ground for the work.

No further business being on hand, after singing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," and prayer, we adjourned until next meeting.

ELBERT MILES,
President.

SAMUEL WALKER,
Secretary.

Temperance in West Carroll Parish.

Mr. Editor: We, the temperance people of West Carroll parish, are made to rejoice. Our police jury, at its session this month (December), ordered the sheriff not to issue licenses for the sale of liquors for the year 1888, from the fact that in the past three elections the vote of our people has been in favor of prohibition. We have a wide-awake committee, who are determined to use all fair means to keep the devil out of our parish.

Col. H. R. Lott, the chairman of the temperance cause in this parish, deserves great credit for originality in the plan adopted and energy put forth by him in keeping it out. We have in the Colonel a prohibitionist with a backbone in him, and brains to back his courage. I wish we could get him on the rostrum in some of our parishes that are laboring hard to be freed from the curse. In Bros. Jackson and Reneau the Colonel has efficient help.

May God bless them and direct their labors in future!

C. T. MUNHOLLAND.

Oak Grove, La., 1887.

Monteagle, Tenn.

Mr. Editor: I am writing to the family of Advocates in behalf of what I think I may justly call a connectional enterprise; and that not only from a Methodist standpoint, but from that of all the churches. We need at Monteagle a larger and better church than we mountain people are able to build. We will do all we can; will pay about six or seven hundred dollars. We have an acre lot worth $350; title clear, and, according to the disciplinary form, centrally and suitably located. We expect some help from the Church Extension Society; but we want a Christmas gift of a postage stamp from all of your readers, or anything above that which anyone can spare us. Should anyone wish to donate any church furniture—from the carpet to the chandelier—it will be gratefully received.

Direct to the Building Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Monteagle, Tenn. Respectfully, etc.,

R. A. M. ONLY, Chair'n.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference.

Arrangements have been made with the following railroads for rates of travel to the session of Conference, which convenes in this place (Shreveport) on the fourth proximo:

Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific, full fare going, one-fifth returning, on presentation of certificate of Conference secretary. Shreveport and Houston, four cents per mile round trip. Texas and Pacific have been applied to, but have not been heard from. Will make announcement in Advocate as soon as arrangements are made with this road.

Bro. Sawyer is the only presiding elder who has complied with my request by sending me a list of the lay delegates. Please attend to this matter at once. It is important that I have the names of all who expect to be present at Conference.

J. H. SCRUGGS.

From the Work.

BASTROP, LA.

Mr. Editor: The year's work winds up very satisfactorily under the circumstances. I have just closed a revival service of three weeks' duration; and the gross number of accessions for the year is thirty.

The converted Jew, Harry May, was with me, and put in two solid weeks of good work. He is fine help in a meeting. He preaches a clear-cut, straight-edged gospel, and never fails to wake up the devil of hatred, anger and adverse criticisms generally. He fires a rifled-gun, and does not scatter. He is direct, plain, pungent and fearfully personal. Preachers and people, generally, who do not want to get hit had better keep away; and some do. He calls a spade a spade, and spells it in English, too. He does not worm about the corners, but strikes the rough edges of iniquity square from the shoulders; and, of course, the sparks fly. There is no mistaking his meaning, nor that he means you. The personal pronouns are in large demand, and well used. He does not know how to "Stroke down the text to ears polite,

And smugly keep damnation out of sight."

Not he; and would not, I believe, if he knew how. He is too faithful and conscientious in his high calling to be guilty of any such cowardice and time-serving as that. In this, as in other respects, his preaching is eminently evangelical, and suits the writer in a marked degree. This is no time for "cotton-string" men in the pulpit. Iniquity is bold and presumptuous, and must be rebuked. May the great Head of the church, in giving us wisdom, give us also courage to meet the demands of the age! Heroism is much needed now as at any time in our history. I heartily indorse Bro. May as an efficient man in revival meetings. Other commendable points may not now be mentioned for want of space; but brethren who may secure his services will find him to be a good, safe man. His address is, Nacogdoches, Texas.

I am glad to mention also, Mr. Editor, that we have built and nearly completed, this year, the finest parsonage in the Conference. It is not a third-rate house constructed on the out-of-date style and located where it requires a special guide to find it, but it is a brand-new house, modern style, built of well-seasoned lumber, by a first-class mechanic, situated on the main street in our town, in a good neighborhood, a block and a half from the church, and is nice enough for anybody to live in. Thanks to our generous people who have held up the pastor's hands in this enterprise—with a splendid brick church and the best parsonage in the State, with plenty of room for garden and other purposes, and a new, comfortable servant's house.

The material interests of the Bastrop charge are on a solid foundation; and now for a greater baptism of the Holy Spirit than we have had. May the good Lord graciously send it! Amen!

JAS. J. BILLINGSLEY.

I confess that the majesty of the Scriptures astonishes me, that the sanctity of the gospel speaks to my heart. View the books of the philosophers with all their pomp, what a littleness have they, when compared with this! Is it possible that a book, at once so sublime and simple, should be the work of men?—Rousseau.

Critic's Corner.

Word-Studies.

Advent. This is a word much used in the church. Its first and literal meaning is, "a coming," "an approach," "a visitation." These definitions all imply the previous existence of the one coming. The word is used in some churches to signify that season of the year which includes the four Sundays before Christmas, and is celebrated with unusual devoutness.

Epiphany. This word has not been translated into our language. It has simply been transplanted. It means "an appearance of one," "to show one's self." It also recognizes the previous existence of the person appearing. In some churches it is a "festival celebrated on the twelfth day after Christmas in commemoration, as some say, of the appearance of our Savior to the Magi; and others say to commemorate the appearance of the star to the Magi, and symbolizes the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles." The word is used sometimes of any of the appearances of the Lord; notably, of his transfiguration and of his appearances to the disciples between his resurrection and his ascension, and to John on the Island of Patmos.

Incarnation. This is the act of taking on a human body—the act of clothing with flesh. Here again is the recognition of the idea of previous existence. Paul states this great fact in the life of Christ in these striking words: "God sent forth his Son, made of a woman." Pre-existence is always included in the words which speak of Christ's mission to the earth, and go no little way in the establishment of the fact of his divinity. After John had made the positive statement: "The Word was God," he says: "The Word became flesh." So when at this season of the year we celebrate the "advent" of Christ, we celebrate the coming of him who shared the glory of the Father "before the world was," who is the "heir of all things," who is "the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of his person. Therefore, let us rejoice in this manifestation of his grace.

Bro. Jones' Book.

Some fifteen years ago, while living in another State, the writer learned that Bro. John G. Jones had written and was desirous to publish an original and authentic history of Methodism in Mississippi, and I wrote to encourage him in this work, which seemed to me to be important to future times. I heard no more of the book till at the Seashore Camp Meeting, in 1886, I had the pleasure of meeting the author and of spending several days and nights in his company at the hospitable home of our good Bro. Foster, the president of the camp ground. During this intercourse I became still more impressed with the value of his work, and was glad to learn that arrangements had been made for the publication of the first volume of the four that have been written. And here I would say that it seemed strange to me that the great Publishing House of our church should hesitate to purchase and take the risk of publishing such a work as this. It had to be done at last at the expense of individuals. If the authorized publishers of the church can not risk a little money on a work of such importance, they certainly run the risk of losing a great deal of history that belongs to the church. For the men that have this knowledge do not always possess the means necessary to publish their own works. Adam Clarke offered his magnificent commentary to the Wesleyan Book House, and they were afraid to touch it. Outside parties had more appreciation. But the first volume is out, and the book is now before us. I wish to say that I have read several histories of Methodism in the different States, and, excepting that of Methodism in Georgia, by Rev. George G. Smith, I have not found one to compare with this either in the interest of the subject matter or in the manner of treating it. Bishop Hargrove remarked that what interested him most in Bishop McFerrin's History of Methodism was the chapter on the introduction of Methodism into Louisiana. But what was merely a sketch in that work is here drawn out and written in detail. The very names, dates, places and facts are all delivered to us from one who was the associate of the original actors in these thrilling scenes, though then a young man.

F. M. GRACE.

The Kingship of Jesus.

BY HENRY VAN DYKE, D. D.

When we speak of the crown and kingdom of Christ, it is difficult to avoid falling into the language of metaphor, which sounds like exaggeration. For it is evident that the Man whom we exalt and before whom we bow the knee has never worn a literal diadem, save one of thorns; has never been formally proclaimed as the monarch of any province, and has not even established his spiritual dominion in such a form that we can trace its boundaries and measure its power. And yet it is true that he has a kingdom vaster and more glorious than any visible empire of the world; he has an influence larger and more potent than sceptered monarch or sworded conqueror has ever exercised. His kingdom is within. His influence is the power of his teaching to control men's thoughts, the power of his example to control men's lives, the power of his character to mould men's hearts into conformity to himself. A silent influence, an unseen kingdom, so far as the means which he uses to advance it, and the laws by which he controls it, are concerned, but eloquent and visible in its results.

Do we behold the laws of nations becoming more just and firm and equitable, recognizing that their authority rests not upon the arbitrary wills of sovereigns, but upon the deep foundation of eternal right, reaching out to cover not only the relations between man and man, but also those wider relations which exist between races and peoples, and at least approximating the lofty ideal of "The parliament of man, the federation of the world"?

It is the wisdom of King Jesus; teaching us to believe that God is our Father and all men are brothers.

Do we see the shapes of ancient wrong and oppression trembling and vanishing or hiding themselves in dark corners, disguising themselves in borrowed garments, defending themselves with the craft and energy of despair? Do we see woman lifted from the dust and set in the place of household honor; and poverty transformed from a badge of disgrace into an appeal for help; and the instruments of torture, the stake, the fagot, the rack, the knout, broken into fragments or preserved in museums as curious relics of a barbarous past? Do we see those who still love tyranny and practice cruelty forced to conceal their purposes, and to defend their principles with desperate expedients, while they retreat with sullen steps before the incoming flood of light? Do we see charity assuming a royal garb, and compassion exciting a princely generosity, hospitals and asylums rising like palaces, kings and queens bending beside the couches of the sick? It is the humanity of King Jesus, breaking the fetters from the heart of the world, sparing the poor and needy and saving the souls of the needy.

Do we hear the voices of hope and cheer rising on every side and answering from land to land, proclaiming the promise of a better day in the future than any that has dawned in the past, prophesying through all discouragements and regrets that the course of mankind is not downward, but upward, acknowledging that when all men are like Christ earth will be like heaven? It is the divinity of King Jesus, manifested in human flesh, real, living and eternal, the hope, the joy, the glory of mankind.

If we have yielded our hearts to him as monarch, we know the sweetness of his secret reign. If we have fixed our hearts on him as God, we know the certainty of his open triumph. The day is coming when all shadows shall depart and light be everywhere; when all rebellion shall cease and peace be everywhere; when all sorrow shall vanish and joy be everywhere; when all discord shall be silent, and angels leaning from the battlements of heaven shall hear but one word encircling earth with music:

"All nations shall call him BLESSED."

—From "The Story of the Psalms."

Study, Pulpit and Pew.

BY "EINAS."

"Will you kindly excuse me? Eight o'clock, Saturday—you know! We ministers—Sunday work, you know!" And the Rev. Hiram Smilerton left his host, secretly wishing that it was not Saturday night; but, genial, with good conversational powers and intelligence, his presence was an acquisition to a social gathering, and his good nature impelled him to accept the invitation against his better judgment. Quickly he threw his thoughts into the subject for to-morrow's sermon, and ere he reached his home and entered the study, its course was mapped out even to the brilliant peroration.

"Other people are getting ready for Sabbath rest and I for Sabbath work," he thought, as he drew a chair to the table and opened a book which lay upon it: "but it's a fine thing to be a minister! a blessed calling, thank God! And there is much to encourage one: two new families have taken pews, Sabbath-school unusually large, organ paid for, sexton's house almost completed. Yes, there is much to be thankful for!" Not as much spirituality as should be, perhaps;" and he began to read. But the last thought carried by the Holy Spirit would not readily give place to the thoughts of the commentator, and he moved uneasily. "There is as much as in most churches! Mr. Towell does not seem satisfied; thinks that all the congregation should be converted, and that those who do make a profession are not half in earnest. He's very good, but we must not look at the gloomy side. The very thing—we'll have a mission!"

Encouraged by these cheering thoughts, he plunged into his subject once more, and an hour passed in careful preparation.

But the Recording Angel who had been hovering over the study wrote, "Hiram Smilerton, weighed in the balance and found wanting."

From the pulpit the Rev. Hiram Smilerton glanced over the well-filled church, and as his eye rested on a few earnest faces the thought that their prayers would go up to God while he preached filled his heart with thankfulness as he knelt with bowed head before the sermon. "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Dividing the text into three parts, he described in glowing words the "ransomed travelers" and the "everlasting joy" which crowns them on their journey to "Zion"—"the beautiful city of song," and closed with an earnest appeal to his audience to cast away all doubt and gloom, for the promise is sure—they "shall return."

"What a cheering discourse!" said Mrs. Tweedle to Mr. Slowton, as he opened her umbrella at the church door: "no quarter for long-faced Christians there."

"Yes, it was cheering," he replied, "but how is one to go through this world with joy and gladness?"

"What did you think of the sermon?" asked Mr. Green of his friend, Mr. Bloomer. "It was splendid," said Mr. Bloomer, who all the time had been thinking of the success of his last business speculation.

"Now," said Mrs. Towell to her husband, "don't I always tell you that you ought to rejoice more: it's not our fault if most of the people prefer ease or amusement to a week-evening service. We're all right, and let us be happy." But Mr. Towell thought of the "man clothed with linen, with a writer's ink-horn by his side."

"What good did you get out of the service this morning?" asked Ruth of her brother, as they sat down to an early dinner. "Only the thirty-fifth chapter of Isaiah," he replied: "and I think that we all need to understand the eighth verse before we can touch the tenth."

And the Recording Angel who had been hovering over the church wrote, "Hiram Smilerton, woe to him, for he is at ease in Zion."

Courage in the Pulpit.

One of the most imperial and indispensable qualities for a Christian pulpit is courage. The preacher should be quick to see the right, should be in ardent sympathy with it, and should dare to proclaim it. We do not hesitate to declare that it is far less deplorable for a preacher to be suspected of lack of what is commonly understood as "ability," than to be suspected of lack of courage. But courage is one form of ability. He who has "the courage of his convictions" is, so far at least, a man of real and effective ability.

Just what do we mean by courage? Some time ago we heard Dr. Lorimer, of Chicago, tell us about his preaching a sermon against card playing in the homes of Christians. The next Sunday he noticed that a leading member of his congregation was absent from his accustomed place. But his wife was present. "Where's the Colonel to-day?" inquired Dr. Lorimer, after the services. "Oh," said the lady, "he didn't like what you said last Sunday, and thinks that if you have got so notional that you can't allow a man to play cards, he doesn't want to hear you preach any more." "Well," said Dr. Lorimer, "I guess you may tell him that if he has got so notional that he can't allow a preacher to speak his convictions, he will have to stay away; but tell him I'm sorry for him: he will lose a good many things that he ought to hear!"

But, says someone, Dr. Lorimer is a very able man, and can do such things, when a young man, for instance, can not. But a good part of the Chicago preacher's ability lies in this very courage. People like him for it; where one fool (we use the term in the Scriptural sense) will stare up and mutter because "it" scores, will applaud, and take, with more or less gratitude, the slips which their sins and follies invite. There is nothing in the pulpit to-day, or in any day, that the people can more admire and "run after" than courage, combined with good, hard sense. Gen. Clinton B. Fiske tells of a young preacher who had just been sent to a new charge, and was warned that a wine merchant, who occupied a chief seat in the synagogue, contributed fifty dollars to the stipend, so he was to deal gently with the drink question. "No, sir," was the reply: "let's begin fair. Take fifty dollars off my salary: I want to get a shot at that pew." He got his shot at the pew, and it is said that he got his fifty dollars, too. Assuming that good sense characterized his conduct and speech, as it evidently did, he presented an example of the courage that is desirable in the pulpit.

That blunt exhorter and straight-out hitter of hard blows, Sam Jones, speaks the truth in the following: "The greatest blessing God ever bestowed on a church is a good preacher, that is afraid of neither man nor devil. The greatest blessing God ever bestowed upon a preacher is a membership that will stand up to his side when the blasts of the mouths of a thousand cannon are belching in their faces." From Sam Jones to John G. Whittier may be a long stride in some respects—for instance, as to form of utterance: but we take it, and quote the following from the Quaker poet:

"God's true priest is silent never,
Free, the needed truth to speak,
Right the wrong, and raise the weak."

Did the Physician Fail?

If he did we do not quarrel with him. He did his best, and labored as faithfully as he knew how. Did he use the right remedies? He no doubt observed the prescribed formulas in the "Materia Medica," but they did not avail. There are thousands and thousands of cases of protracted nerve-suffering which the physicians have never been able to relieve. There are cases of fleeting prostration which the doctors try for years to cure. Every month the patients become worse and more enfeebled, and go down lower and lower. Something must be done. Neighbor or friend happens to mention Compound Oxygen. "Did you ever hear of it?" "Yes; but can it do anything for me?" "Well, do what others have done. Just try it. There are lots of very healthy people to-day living, who were not years ago prostrated with long and low nervous diseases, but were restored to health and vigor by Compound Oxygen." There is no charge for consultation. If you want Drs. Starkey and Palen's opinion as to your case, write them your symptoms, and the opinion will be freely sent. Anyhow, write for their treatise on Compound Oxygen, to 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., and it will be sent free.

Despotism may govern without faith, but liberty can not. De Tocqueville.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Sufferers after eating, distress, pain, headache, heartburn, sour stomach, lassitude or drowsiness, dizziness, dread of society, loss of appetite, constipation, etc., are called by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the complexion, and overcomes the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. BAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets dyspepsia, biliousness, headaches, dizziness, loss of memory, blood impurities, nervousness, fevers, low spirits, dread of society, piles, and other symptoms, which indicate but a few of the many diseases that result from this condition. Regular habits of body alone can be restored by these pills, and health is sure to follow their use. Their mildness and positive action on the digestive organs and the liver are remarkable. They act directly upon these important parts, restoring their lost tone and vigor, and in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, the patient experiences a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vitality, the blood is enriched, the muscles grow firm with healthful tissue, and the whole body is full of life and vigor, because the health is perfect.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. Tutt's Pills never be done when the liver does not respond. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and fever, dyspepsia, sick headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Biliousness, General Debility, etc., prevail. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that manly vigor which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a purgative, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

PROPHECIES.

"And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."

"The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken. And I will put my words into his mouth."

"And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills: and all nations shall flow into it. And many people shall say, Come and let us go into the mountain of the Lord."

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even forever."

"Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him: he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law."

FULFILLMENT.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior which is Christ the Lord. And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger."

"And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother and fell down and worshiped him."

"And Simeon took him up in his arms and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel."

"And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth. God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

THE CLASP.

"I, Jesus, have sent mine angel to testify these things in the churches. If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city and from the things which are written in this book."

His Star.

The gospel narrative teems with natural and moral wonders. There is nothing more wonderful in the record than the "star" which guided the Magi from the East to Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. What this star was, whether a planet or a meteor or what, we can not tell. All we know is, that it was God's instrument to guide some illustrious strangers to the feet of the new-born Savior. Old Jerusalem was sleeping quietly in its thread-bare garment of a worn-out religion, when one day some mysterious men in Eastern garb knocked at its gates, and inquired: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? We have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." The question and solemn statement probed the heart of the city and set it in an uproar. "All Jerusalem was troubled." But the star does not do all the guiding. Its first office was to direct the Magi to Jerusalem with their inquiry. Jerusalem was the depository of the divine oracles. To these they must go for an answer. Supernatural appearances can not substitute the divine Word. They may start men on the quest for Christ, but somewhere on the way men must come in contact with the Word before they can reach him. In all time and everywhere God will honor his Word. The Scriptures alone can tell where Christ is to be found. And so the Magi received answer: "In Bethlehem, for thus it is written by the prophet." Having their question answered, they start now for Bethlehem. They know now whither they are going. The place is named. "And, lo! the star went before them, and came and stood over where the young child was." Having received specific instructions from the Word, they were overwhelmed with joy at the second appearance of the star to guide them to the end of their journey. How wonderful is all this! This star—so strange, so unique, so fascinating—has flashed its light into the hearts of all classes of people, and called forth some as sublime eloquence as ever man's lips uttered—some as enchanting poetry as was ever struck from a poet's lyre. We give one choice bit from the lamented Dr. J. G. Holland:

"There's a song in the air.
There's a star in the sky,
There's a mother's deep prayer,
And a baby's low cry—
And the star rains its fire, while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King.

"There's a gleam of joy
O'er the wonderful birth,
For the Virgin's sweet boy
Is the Lord of the earth!
Aye, the star rains its fire, while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King.

"In the light of that star
Lie the ages impearled;
And that song from afar
Has swept o'er the world—
Every heart is aflame, while the beautiful sing,
In the homes of the nations, that Jesus is King.

"We rejoice in the light,
And we echo the song
That comes down through the night
From the heavenly throng—
Aye, we shout to the lovely evangel they bring,
And we greet in his cradle our Savior and King."

A Born King.

It is a very curious circumstance that the first title ever given by men to the infant Jesus was that of "King," and that it was given by men who were Gentiles. It is a very curious coincidence that the last title given by men to the dying Jesus was that of "King," and that it was written out by the Gentile governor. It is still more curious that the full title is the same in both cases. The Magi asked: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" Pilate wrote on the cross, above his head: "This is Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews!" The Gentile world recognized this claim of Jesus from the very first to the very last of his life: the Jews repudiated it always and everywhere. Even at the very last they said: "We have no king but Cæsar." The child Jesus differed from every other child born into the world: in that he was "born King." His was not a prospective kingship. He came into the world a King. He did not have to wait till years of maturity to wield his scepter, but while he lay in the manger, in the swaddling clothes, he attracted the homage of the wise and the unlearned—the Magi and the humble shepherds. His was royal blood, of the purest kind; and the little hands which lay muffled up in the swaddling clothes were royal hands, and the eyes that were closed in the peaceful slumbers of that manger held in their wondrous depths the kingly fire that had gleamed from under the brows of earth's most splendid monarchs. His reign began in that manger-cradle. Men bowed in acknowledgment of his claim even in that strange place, "among the beasts of the stall," and went away to tell the wondrous story, and to live and die for him as their only King. From that day to this he has reigned in human hearts somewhere. From that day to this the limits of his kingdom have been broadening, and to-day this "born King" has enthroned himself in millions of souls as the King of Peace. When Pilate asked him, "Art thou a King?" his answer was: "To this end was I born." Being born into the world amid the beasts of the stall, and yet born a King, and dying with a crown of thorns about his brow, yet dying a King: being heralded by an innumerable company of angels as Christ the Lord, and worshiped by the Magi and the shepherds as a King born: going out in his gospel of peace and power, and winning victories everywhere, the evidences of his kingship over nature and men and the heavenly intelligences are substantiated beyond a doubt, and we bow in adoration, and join with the rapt poet of Methodism in the glad song:

"Hark! the herald angels sing,
'Glory to the new-born King:
Peace on earth, and mercy mild;
God and sinners reconciled!'
Joyful all ye nations rise,
Join the triumphs of the skies:
With th' angelic host proclaim,
'Christ is born in Bethlehem.'

"Christ, by highest heaven adored,
Christ, the Everlasting Lord:
Late in time behold him come,
Offspring of a Virgin's womb.
Veiled in flesh the Godhead see,
Hail th' incarnate Deity!
Pleased as man with men t' appear,
Jesus our Immanuel here.

"Hail, the heaven-born Prince of Peace,
Hail, the Sun of Righteousness!
Light and life to all he brings,
Risen with healing in his wings:
Mild he lays his glory by,
Born that man no more may die:
Born to raise the sons of earth:
Born to give them second birth.

"Come, Desire of nations, come!
Fix in us thy humble home:
Rise, the woman's conq'ring Seed,
Bruise in us the serpent's head:
Adam's likeness now efface,
Stamp thine image in its place:
Second Adam from above,
Reinstate us in thy love."

Volapük.

Through the courtesy of Prof. Deiler, of Tulane University, we are able to give our readers a specimen of the Volapük language—a language invented by Rev. Johann Martin Schleyer, of Germany. It is said to be very simple. Its grammar has but few rules, and no exceptions. It avoids the difficulties of pronunciation, and in every way fulfills all the requirements of an "universal language." The word "Volapük" means "language of the world." The accent is always on the last syllable. The Professor has translated the "Lord's Prayer" from the German into the Volapük for us; and here it is:

O, Fat obas, el in sils. Paisamükomöz nem ola. Kömomöz lekinam ola. Jenomöz vil ola, äslik in sül i sin tul. Bodi delik obsa givolös obse tudel. E fögivolös obse debis obas äs id obs aifögivobs debeles obas. E no niudncolös obis in tenüdi, sod aidalivolös obsi de bad. Jenosöd.

Prof. Deiler says the missionaries in foreign lands are very much interested in this language. What if it should be the very thing they need?

Christmas Greetings.

To our readers, young and old, male and female, preachers and laymen, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, the publisher and editor and printers send Christmas salutations in the name of our blessed Lord at this happy Christmas time! "Grace to you and peace from God, our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ!" For fifty-two weeks we have met face to face and held pleasant and profitable intercourse. We have had much joy together in the Lord: we have suffered together in the flesh. We have tried to "bear one another's burdens;" we have shared richly in each other's grace. We have petted one another, and we have pouted at each other. We have worked together to help on the "glorious gospel," and rejoiced together in the triumphs of the cross. We have been "helpers" of each other's joys, and sympathizers in one another's sorrows. These things have strengthened the bond of union, and drawn us into a sweeter fellowship of love. By that fellowship our homes have been brightened, and our trials lightened, and our lives made more hopeful; and the long future gleams with light.

The Advocate office—publisher, editor, printers—all send to every reader of this paper the divine benediction:

"The Lord bless thee out of Zion,
Even he that made heaven and earth."

Mississippi Conference.

The seventy-fourth session of the Mississippi Annual Conference convened in Jackson, Miss., December 14, Bishop J. C. Keener presiding, and C. G. Andrews, with his efficient aids—John A. B. Jones and T. W. Adams—acting as secretaries. There was a large attendance of ministers and laymen at the first calling of the roll. The business, under the guiding of Bishop Keener's practiced hand, moved off with promptness from the very beginning. There is nothing like knowing how a thing ought to be done, and then having it done after that how. To do the work of a Conference with promptness and, at the same time, in a thorough manner is an art that has to be learned by practice, not only by the members, but by the presiding officer. The presiding Bishop and the Mississippi brethren have learned this happy art: so when the editor arrived on Saturday morning, he found the work of the session had "made the turn" towards the end.

This session was favored with several distinguished visitors. Bishop Duncan looked in on them to see how the preachers looked after a year's work under his direction, and to rejoice with them over the successes which they had won for the Master. Bishop Galloway, having finished his tour in the West, came in time to spend a few days with his old yoke-fellows in the gospel; and his brethren were gratified with a touch of his presiding ability as well as a sample of his platform work as a Bishop. Dr. Morton's portly form showed itself early, and the church extension cause was ably represented by his addresses and intercourse with the brethren.

The meeting on Friday night, in the interest of church extension, will doubtless bring forth fruit during the coming year. The missionary meeting, Saturday night, was a good time. Dr. Barbee, our Book Agent, made a strong missionary speech on the obligations to benevolence. It was more of a sermon than a speech. His strong thoughts, clothed in strong language, was at times fearful. The responsibility for the use of our money was piled upon us to such an extent that we felt stifled by it; and when he closed, we asked ourselves the question: "Can anybody be saved who does not give all?" He was followed by Dr. Winfield, of Arkansas. We have just sense enough not to attempt to describe him or his speech.

Sunday was indeed a high day. The various pulpits of the city were filled by the Methodist pastors. The love-feast at the Methodist Church, conducted by Bro. Mellen, was a season of "refreshing from the presence of the Lord:" the brethren and sisters "sat together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus," and received new power for the difficulties and duties of the future. Bishop Keener's sermon was a grand exposition of the work of the Spirit of God, and its influence will, doubtless, be seen in the preaching of many during the coming year. Bishop Galloway preached in West Jackson, and, true to the instincts of a Methodist preacher, took a good collection and received five members in the church. The day ended with a most solemn and profitable memorial service, followed by the communion. In contemplating the character and work of departed brethren, we drew near the confines of the spiritual world, and there was a rejoicing even in sorrow. The brethren who have died during the year are: Joseph Nicholson, John Lusk, Charles F. Gillaspie, James N. Williams, William G. Millsaps, James L. Forsythe.

This Conference has on hand several extra things which are thought to be good. It has laid plans for the building up of an orphans' home, and a committee has been appointed to investigate the practicability of the scheme. It has also a Ministerial Aid Association, whose aim is to afford means to give a liberal education to young men who are called to preach and are looking to the itinerancy as their field. This association has done good work in this direction already, and it now has several young men at Centenary College studying under its auspices.

The work of the year has been progressive along all the lines. The missionary and church extension work has been quickened into a new life. There have been a number of gracious revivals, and many additions to the church, as appear by the statistics below.

The following were admitted on trial: R. W. Tucker, F. M. Keene, J. M. Cowan, W. P. Jones, P. M. Jones, B. H. Rawls, W. P. Meador, J. G. Cammack, J. D. Crymes.

The following were elected and ordained deacons: J. G. Sibley, A. C. Flowers, J. H. Woodward, R. Selby, J. A. Newsom, M. L. Long, T. R. Reagan.

These were elected and ordained elders, viz: H. L. Scarborough, A. D. Miller, R. F. Witt, M. H. Moore, B. F. Lewis, A. F. Watkins, T. L. Mellen, W. G. Backus, S. J. Cottop, V. D. Skipper, J. W. Brown.

Admitted into full connection: J. G. Sibley, V. V. Boone, A. C. Flowers, J. H. Woodward, R. Selby, J. A. Newsom, M. L. Burton, N. B. Harmon, J. M. Ware, W. W. Morse, R. S. Gale, H. Bradford.

The superannuates are: J. M. Gann, A. B. Nicholson, J. A. Godfrey, E. R. Strickland, D. W. Dillehay, G. T. Vickers, T. Y. Armstrong, A. B. Stewart, L. Pearce, D. Merchant, Thomas Price, E. A. Flowers and John G. Jones.

The supernumeraries are: R. Abbey and J. A. Vance.

The following are the statistics:

Local preachers, 170; members, 34,205; infants baptized, 1,476—adults, 1,244; Sunday-schools, 389; teachers, 1,949; scholars, 14,610; collected for superannuates, $3,085 46; for foreign missions, $5,731; for Self-denial Fund, $2,000; for domestic missions, $1,508; for church extension, $1,600; number of churches, 384½—value, $353,075; number of parsonages, 71—value, $64,670; money expended on churches and parsonages, $24,920.

Personals.

A brother, who has been doing good work in circulating the ADVOCATE among his people, giving an account of his last quarterly meeting, says: "No collection, as everything was in readiness to pay up the preacher in charge and the presiding elder beforehand; other collections about fail for that church. It is said they never did that way before." What wonders our paper does work where it is circulated and read! Put it in every family, brethren, and next year will be the grandest year we have ever seen.

If you "skip over" our Christmas sermon, on the first page, you will miss some choice reading. The subject is one of intense interest, and is treated in a lucid manner by Dr. Evans, and you will be both edified and pleased by a careful perusal of it.

We don't know any better prohibition campaign documents than two addresses by H. W. Grady, of the Atlanta Constitution, during the last fight in Atlanta. They are simply superb. Published in pamphlet by W. J. Campbell, Atlanta, Ga.

Having been assigned to appointments which render it impracticable for them to do editorial work, Bros. Bobbitt and Robey, of the Methodist Advance, offer their paper for lease or sale. We are sorry to lose these brethren from the editorial corps of the church, because they have done a good work in sending forth a bright and helpful paper. May they do as well in the other field!

We are under special obligations to our young friends, Geo. Wharton and Bro., booksellers, 5 Carondelet street, for a batch of beautiful Christmas and New Year cards. To be appreciated they must be seen and studied. Their beauty is one of the marvels of art.

Mississippi Conference Personals.

Bishops, three—Keener, Duncan, Galloway. The German and Scotch blood shows. Presiding elders, seven—Ellis, Hunnicutt, Weems, Jones, Norsworthy, West, Little, Welsh, Scotch and Irish again predominant. It is a study worthy of the most painstaking and observant to analyse the ethnics of ethics in Methodist itinerancy. But we only suggest. The Bishops and Cabinet can take care of the ethnics; the ethnics will string out into chapters of themselves as long as the two books of Chronicles.

R. J. Jones, the portly, self-poised, clean-shaved, debonair, studious, patient, eloquent, is the incumbent of Vicksburg pulpit. This is his first year. His pastoral charge will not be changed.

T. L. Mellen, the not-clean-shaved compares in other points with the afore-mentioned. He is Mr. Greatheart of John Bunyan. His missionary and educational collections more than doubled the amount assessed to his charge. He is just through the four years' course and is already an author known to the church.

H. R. Singleton, small as Zaccheus, but with a knack at getting out of the sycamore tree quicker, reports his charge as paying two thousand dollars above assessments. All his many friends will be glad to hear of his greatly improved physical condition. His intellectual avoirdupois is greater than his corporeal.

W. C. Black, the scholarly, eloquent, untiring advocate of prohibition, holds still more firmly his place among the sons of thunder. Time slips lightly over his benign face and leaves no mill-dust yet upon his hair, but admonishes him to lengthen his belt.

A. F. Watkins, the tall, the dignified, the matter-of-fact, the precise, holds well in hand the things committed to him. Brookhaven asks nothing better than to retain him.

R. S. Woodward, of Yazoo City, shows apparently the snows of winter, but only apparently. There is no man more vigorous and none more appreciated by his brethren.

R. B. Downer moves up as well as down among his people. Though lame, he is as active in his work as any man in the Conference, and is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

T. B. Holloman is among the thirty, but hath not attained unto the first three. If he ever gets there, it will be difficult to decide whether his German or his Scotch-ing did it.

Of the Lewises there are three—but not as of the former three. For their name is too Frankish. But they betray in their manners that gentleness and polish which belong to the great strain of blood which has made the world's history more enduring as well as more entertaining. More than this, the son and the son's son are in evidence that preachers' boys are not the worst boys in the world. There is also a gentle reminder of the "Mountains of Hepsidam" and the "harp of a thousand strings" softened in tone by distance and enriched in cadence by time till the laughing rills of humor have mingled their voice with the breath of dirges and made a memory musical with the promise and the pledge, "In Isaac (laughter) shall thy seed be called."

We must leave this class of younger and growing men for some of those who still bind us with links almost worn in two to the blessed, though toiling past. Richard Abbey past his four-score, yet, with a firm and elastic step, moves along his way among his brethren. Who has not read his strong, original and suggestive books, "Dimonality," "Ecce Ecclesia," "Christian Cradlehood," and other works? Our advice is, Go and read and ponder.

J. G. Jones—still older and quite as famous as the historian of "Methodism in the Southwest," across whose sky his own sixty years of glorious toil stretches like the galaxy—is still among his sons and grandsons and great-grandsons in the gospel. Rich and mellow, as the blending light and snow of a Christmas sunset, fall the mantles of the skies upon his head; and clear as an inspiration the utterances of his hope and faith. "Even down to old age" the Christian lives in the hope of eternal life rather than in the richest memories of a dead past.

E. B. Strickland, the peer and long-time yoke-fellow of the glorious band, makes up the number three on the score of age.

A second three—H. J. Harris, J. A. Godfrey and T. Y. Armstrong—have past their three score and ten, and, "faint, yet pursuing," "follow after if, that they may lay hold that of which they have been laid hold on."

Other heads are whitening in the sixties and the fifties, while yet the strong heart beats within a breast expanding by the inhalations of the fresh air of a Tabor or an Olivet, and ready to soar when called up the steeps of a Moriah. These are men who have passed that point of life where the hill-tops are rimmed with the morning rainbows. Ambition is dead, because, if for no other reason, their generation has fallen into a minority in point of numbers. They preach no grand sermons which herald the fame of the future. It is mid-afternoon of life. Hot now the sun shines; now a great cloud throws its black bosom between the toiler and the day king. But he works on. The rolling of the wheels of the tempest car are heard in the distance; to them it is "the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof" coming for Elijah, but Elisha is to stay behind and ere long from a death-bed direct Israel's king to shoot eastward. And that young monarch is at the window; has shot twice only as yet to the East—China and Japan. But if there are now no worldly ambitions for these men, are they less valiant? No, no. For they wrestle not against flesh and blood.

Now we look around upon the youngest from whose cheek the peach-down is not yet gone. Here are Linfield and Drake, whose names bring mingling tears of sweet memory and glowing hope to the eyes of older men, for their fathers were brethren beloved, who died with the harness on; and these sons are following in their footsteps. Here is Herbert Woodward, the worthy son of his honored sire. Close by are George Galloway, John Chambers, Charlie Campbell, James Healy and J. V. Penn—Centenarians, but not by reason of age. Over there sits N. B. Harmon, son of Dr. J. W. Harmon, whose fatherhood so long has flashed in the foremost and thickest fight for temperance. Here are J. A. Newsom, M. L. Borton, and many others. The ranks are filling faster than they are thinning. As yet the wail of sterility, so doleful from other churches, is not echoed by our Methodist mother. Twins and triplets are nothing to her. She names them Bad, for, behold! a troop cometh—and still they come; and we say, "Come on! glorious church, from whose sanctified matrix issues, even as when Immanuel first came to the world, that divine offspring whose line has gone forth through all the world, and whose circuit shall ultimately coincide with the horizon which rims it, whose every hill-top is a pole!" Blessed mother! over whose face, now older than Sarah's when Isaac was born, never comes a wrinkle, except those which break up into the dimples of a smile sweeter than maternity to Niobe ere she felt Diana's jealousy! The sons born to her, and who have drawn their first and purest sweet milk from her breast, may sometimes go forth from her wide tabernacles to more pretentious temples. But they go as a God-send to be foster-sons of mothers who long for the prolific habit of her who has given to the world more evangelists in one century than any other church could ever enroll upon her calendar.

Of the laymen, W. L. Nugent, T. A. Holloman, Peter James are so well known that little needs to be said. What princes are they when it comes to counsel! But their strong, safe counsel is eclipsed by their liberality. Other men talk like most boys play marbles they "lay up and 'vents you;" but these "plump the middle man from law."

H. C. Newsom, conspicuous as a legislator and as the father of a preacher, as also brother of the inimitable J. H. Newsom, of North Mississippi, always comes to Conference when elected. He is often elected, too; but not like some who wait till the year when the delegates to General Conference are elected. Prof. C. H. Wiley, president pro tem of Centenary College, is here representing most quietly and effectively that great and worthy institution.

But I am admonished that the editor wants only a column of copy. So, too, the printer. Brethren who have been forgotten, "don't think," and you shall get yours next time.

BOOKS.

READING THE BIBLE WITH RELISH. By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts. Price, fifteen cents.

POCKET QUARTERLY FOR TEACHERS. By Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts. Price, ten cents. Published by Pocket Quarterly, 71 Eighth street, New York City.

A BOOK OF FORMS FOR USE IN ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. By Rev. John B. Allen, of South Texas Conference. It can be had of "Pub. and Or. at Blossom Prairie, Texas for twenty cents each single copy; two copies, $2 50.

This book has been commended by many pastors, presiding elders and by several of our Bishops, and, therefore, needs no commendation from us.

KEYS TO THE WORDS OF HOLY SCRIPTURE. By A. T. [illegible], D. D. Published by A. D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. Price, seventy-five cents.

This will be a helpful book to all readers of the Bible. It gives the "key-word" and a synopsis of each book in the Bible. The author's name is a guarantee of its freshness.

MILLENNIAL DAWN. Publisher, Zion's Watch Tower, Pittsburg, Pa. Price, in cloth, $1.

This is the first of a series that proposes to discuss and illustrate and make plain God's plan of the ages. One sentence is enough for us: "Those who do not receive a full knowledge and enjoyment of God's favor in the present time will assuredly have it in the world to come." The second probation is an illusion of the devil and not in God's plan of the ages.

THE LOOK-ABOUT CLUB, AND THE CURIOUS LIVE THINGS THEY FOUND. By Mary E. Bamford. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. For sale by Exrich, 130 Canal street, New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This is the companion volume of "My Land and Water Friends," by the same author, and noticed in our columns some time ago. The author has the fact to teach natural history in a very pleasing and profitable way. This volume deals mostly in insects; and the wonderful things about them are told in words adapted to the capacity of young minds. There is quite a fund of information to be gathered from the book.

THE FLAG ON THE MILL. By Miss Speight. A novel of incident and story. Funk & Wagnalls, publishers, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. Price, $1 50.

This novel deserves a very high position. It possesses all the elements of a first-class story. The conception, the plot, the characters, the action, the lessons, and the final complete impression—all show the hand of a practiced and accomplished writer and novelist. It presents strong incentives to a noble life, and can not fail to meet with a warm welcome.

ON THE WING. A Text-Book for Each Day in the Month. E. & J. B. Young & Co., Cooper Union, Fourth avenue, New York.

THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS. Poem. By Mrs. Hemans. E. & J. B. Young & Co., Cooper Union, Fourth avenue, New York.

THE FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS. A Text-Book for Children. E. & J. B. Young & Co., Cooper Union, Fourth Avenue, New York.

These are as dainty and pretty little books as we have ever seen.

PERIODICALS.

The Fullness of the Time.

1. It was necessary that his coming should be heralded, and that expectancy of him should exist among all nations. It took time to propagate the idea, and for it to settle down into the convictions of men. Once there, men would become familiar with the statements of his mission, and be inclined to accept him on the unfolding of his credentials. That such expectation existed we have ample proof. "The fact," says Bishop Horsley, "is so notorious to all who have any knowledge of antiquity, that, if anyone would deny it, I would decline all dispute with such an adversary as too ignorant to receive conviction, or too disingenuous to acknowledge what he must secretly admit." Virgil, in his celebrated Pollio, attributes to the child of his friend prophesies of the Cumean sybil, which are almost identical with those of Isaiah. Tacitus says that in Vespasian's time there was a prophecy that "one who should come forth out of Judah should reign over the world." Whether the wide dispersion of this hope came through the carrying away of the Jews is immaterial. A belief in this prophecy brought the "wise men from the East to Jerusalem." The unconscious prophecies of pagan superstitions served to break the audacity of the events connected with the incarnation. Buddha, of the Hindoos, and Zoroaster, of the Persians, were said to be born of virgins. Krishna, of India, was said to be an incarnation of Deity. So it was said that Osiris, after assuming human nature, was killed, buried, and rose again, when he killed the great serpent, and returned to the invisible world to judge the Egyptians. With even the sacrifice of human beings to appease the wrath of the gods, the world had become familiar. So that with the declaration of a mighty Savior, the outline of his work and character had been more than intimated in the mythologies and superstitions of the pagan world.

The time was fully come now, and the herald was sent forth, the people summoned, the authenticating dove descended, and the voice from the upper glory declared: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Mansfield Female College—1888.

One hundred dollars, paid in advance, will entitle new pupils to board, tuition and music for the term beginning Monday, January 2, 1888, and ending Wednesday, June 13. Seventy-five dollars will pay board and tuition in the literary department, without music. Let those who have been attending home schools during the fall term avail themselves of this offer.

L. M. GRACE, Pres.

This advent time is a good season to read carefully and ponder prayerfully the 15th, 72nd and 145th Psalms. In the light of the New Testament and the history of the church these Psalms are continually growing in beauty. How they could have been written before the New Testament, and before the present record of church history, is inexplicable, except on the theory of divine inspiration. Therefore, study them with devout and reverent attention during this Christmas week.

W. H. Pierson has taken special pains in his selection of fine scarfs and neckwear; just the article for Christmas presents. The assortment will be found complete and tasteful. The genial and accommodating Mr. Howes will take pleasure in attending all comers for Christmas goods, and distributing sunshine for the little ones.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is the most universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sure foreign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and worms are the most frequently the result of these hidden suppressed causes. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again rubbing the nose, the lips closing testimony to them, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of Worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest childhood; therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge. Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its unfailing success. In fact, it never fails. If the directions given to children as a safe purgative, not expecting the cause of the disease, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the case, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

ADVENT.

Softly he cometh.
This King.
No sound on the mountains afar;
No herald save one silent star;
Nor highway with triumph ringing!

Lowly he cometh.
This King.
No robes of bright purple and gold;
No pageantry royal and bold;
No banner its glory to fling!

Meekly he cometh.
This King.
To fill in our earthen shade of woe;
To wear our humanity, so
That souls in their sorrow may sing!

Quickly he cometh.
This King.
Lord, even so—hasting we wait
Outside of the pearl-builded gate,
Outside of the glory so great—
Till flow our glad welcome shall bring!
Thou—Brother, and Savior,
And King!

We give our little cousins two stories below, which we think will do for Christmas stories. We hope the boys and girls will learn the lessons they inculcate and put them in daily practice during the coming year. The editor wishes you all a happy Christmas time!—Ed.

A Daughter Worth Having.

Two gentlemen, friends who had been parted for years, met in a crowded city street. The one who lived in the city was on his way to meet a pressing business engagement. After a few expressions of delight, he said:

"Well, I'm off. I'm sorry, but it can't be helped. I will look for you to-morrow at dinner. Remember, two o'clock, sharp. I want you to see my wife and child."

"Only one child?" asked the other.

"Only one," came the answer tenderly: "a daughter. But she's a darling."

And then they parted: the stranger in the city getting into a street-car bound for the park.

After a block or two, a group of five girls entered the car: they all evidently belonged to families of wealth; they conversed well. Each carried a very elaborately decorated lunch-basket: each was well dressed. They, too, were going to the park for a picnic. They seemed happy and amiable until the car again stopped, this time letting in a pale-faced girl of about eleven and a sick boy of four. These children were shabbily dressed, and on their faces were looks of distress. They, too, were on their way to the park. The gentleman thought so; so did the group of girls, for he heard one of them say, with a look of disdain:

"I suppose those ragamuffins are on an excursion, too?"

"I shouldn't want to leave home if I had to look like that. Would you?" This to another girl.

"No, indeed! But there is no accounting for tastes. I think there ought to be a special line of cars for the lower classes."

All this was spoken in a low tone, but the gentleman heard it. Had the child, too? He glanced at the pale face and saw tears. He was angry.

Just then, the exclamation, "Why there is Nettie! Wonder where she is going?" caused him to look out upon the corner, where a sweet-faced young girl stood beckoning to the car-driver. When she entered the car she was warmly greeted by the five, and they made room for her beside them. They were profuse in exclamations and questions.

"Where are you going?" asked one.

"Oh, what lovely flowers! Who are they for?" said another.

"I'm on my way to Belle Clark's. She is sick, you know, and the flowers are for her."

She answered both questions at once, and then, glancing toward the door of the car, saw the pale girl looking wistfully at her. She smiled at the child, a tender look beaming from her beautiful eyes, and then, forgetting that she wore a handsome velvet skirt and costly jacket, and that her shapely hands were covered with well-fitted gloves, she left her seat and crossed over to the little one. She laid one hand on the boy's thin cheeks as she asked of his sister:

"This little boy is sick, is he not? And he is your brother, I am sure."

It seemed hard for the girl to answer, but finally she said:

"Yes, miss, he is sick. Freddie never has been well. Yes, miss, he is my brother. We're goin' to the park to see if 'twont make Freddie better."

"I am glad you are going," the young girl replied in a low voice meant for no one's ears except those of the child. "I think it will do him good; it's lovely there, with the spring flowers all in bloom. But where is your lunch? You ought to have a lunch after so long a ride."

Over the little girl's face came a flush.

"Yes, miss, we ought to, for Freddie's sake; but, you see, we didn't have any lunch to bring. Tim—he's our brother—he saved these pennies so as Freddie could ride to the park and back. I guess, mebbe, Freddie'll forget about being hungry when he gets to the park."

There were tears in the lovely girl's eyes as she listened; and very soon she asked the girl where they lived, and wrote the address down in a tablet which she took from a bag on her arm.

After riding a few blocks she left the car, but she had not left the little ones comfortless. Half the bouquet of violets and hyacinths were clasped in the sister's hand, while the sick boy, with radiant face, held in his hand a package, from which he helped himself now and then, saying to his sister, in a jubilant whisper:

"She said we could eat 'em all—every one—when we get to the park. What made her so sweet and good to us?"

And the little girl whispered back:

"It's cause she's beautiful as well as her clothes." The gentleman heard her whisper.

When the park was reached the five girls hurried out. Then the gentleman lifted the little boy in his arms and carried him out of the car, across the road, and into the green park, the sister, with a heart full of gratitude, following. He paid for a nice ride for them in the goat carriage; he treated them to oyster soup at the park restaurant.

At two o'clock sharp, the next day, the two gentlemen, as agreed, met again.

"This is my wife," the host said proudly, introducing a comely lady, "and this," as a young lady of fifteen entered the parlor, "is my daughter."

"Ah!" said the guest, as he extended his hand in cordial greeting, "this is the dear girl whom I saw yesterday in the street car. I don't wonder you called her a darling. She is a darling and no mistake, God bless her." And then he told his friend what he had seen and heard in the horse car.—Selected.

How Phil and the Boys Worked up Giving.

"Yes, I always give for missions and everything else," said Phil. "I give something every Sunday, don't you?"

"Why, no; I give five or ten cents when I have a good deal of money and don't want it all for anything," said Tom.

"I give whatever papa or mamma gives me for it," said James. "Sometimes it's more, and sometimes it's less."

"O! I always give my own money," said Phil. "I don't think it's any giving at all unless you do that."

"Yours is the best way, I'm sure," said Tom soberly. "They say it's the regular giving that counts. And then, of course, what you give is just so much out of what you would like to spend on yourself."

"Yes," said Phil, feeling very self-denying and virtuous.

"I'm going to try your way," said Tom, "and I'm going to keep an account and see what it will amount to."

The three boys were on their way home from Sunday-school, where they had heard from a missionary some very interesting accounts of the great work which is going on in Africa. He had treated his subject with all the power which comes of a heart glowing with zeal in the grand work to which he had devoted his life and love for the poor creatures whose eyes had learned to look to him in earnest seeking for the knowledge of the way of life.

And as heart always awakens heart, he had succeeded in deeply stirring the sympathies of his young hearers as he told of the lives wretched and degraded in this world, and hopeless as regards any other; of down-trodden women and neglected children who are crying out to those in our favored land, "Come over and help us."

So that many of them went away with the solemn feeling that they should, in some sense, be held answerable if they did not strive to hold out a helping hand to those in such sore need. For the present it was plain that the missionary interest was to be centered in the Dark Continent, and little societies were forming among Sunday-school children, they believing that it would be pleasanter to put their gifts together than to offer them separately.

Several boys came to Phil's house on the next afternoon to talk it over, and Phil brought his account book to put down their names as the first members of their society, with a preamble in which occurred many high-sounding words setting forth their resolves and intentions.

"What's this, Phil?" asked his uncle, picking up the book on the same evening after tea.

"O! that's my account book, uncle. I brought it down to take names and draw up resolutions for our missionary society."

"May I read it, or is it a secret organization?"

"Certainly you can. I am simply, you know, trying to work up the idea of liberal giving among the boys."

"A most excellent idea," said his uncle, concealing his amusement at Phil's pompous tone. "Let me see—bananas, twenty-five cents; soda water, ten cents; peanuts, twenty-five cents; bat, thirty-five cents; base-ball cap, seventy-five cents; Sunday-school, six cents—"

"O! stop, Uncle George; that isn't it. That's when I was visiting Cousin Tom's and I promised mamma I'd put down every cent I spent."

But Uncle George seemed not to hear, and went on. "Peanuts, fifteen cents; bananas, twenty-five cents; getting shoes mended, forty cents; soda water, ten cents; missionaries, five cents; getting bat mended, fifteen cents; lemonade for the boys, fifty cents; bananas, twenty-five cents; collection in church, two cents."

"Please give me the book, uncle."

"I'm glad you don't forget your charitable duties, Phil," said his uncle, giving up the book with rather a mischievous smile.

Phil took it in some confusion. He had heretofore thought but little more of his spending than to remember his mother's wish that he should keep an account of the money with which she kept him so liberally supplied. Now, in looking over his hasty entries, he was astonished.

"Well, well!" he exclaimed, as he added up one page, "two dollars and ninety cents for eating and play, and seventeen cents for giving. And I bragging to the boys what a good thing it is to give regularly!"

He was a conscientious boy, and his heart smote him as he ran over the long list and thought with his newly awakened feelings of the bread of life which that much money might have carried to starving souls. If his mother had aimed to teach him a lesson through his account book she had not failed. He knew well that he could not excuse himself for the selfishness of the past.

He got up at last and stood before the glass. "Now, my young man," he said, shaking his head threateningly at the boyish face he saw there, "you know very well that a quarter for peanuts doesn't look any larger to you than a pin's head, and that a quarter for giving looks as big as a cart wheel. But that's got to stop, sir! This book isn't going to hold any more accounts of dollars for trash and cents for Sunday-school."—N. Y. Observer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:

New York, August 1, 1887.
122 E. 27th St.

Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude, and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result on almost every fresh exposure. For seven years I was under treatment for the oldest pulmonary ailments without avail. Last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of the old, or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all such exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any return of any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in my voyages and travels. Under my observation, it has given relief to hundreds of persons; while in cases of pulmonary inflammation, croup and diphtheria so often fatal, it has been preserved through me. I recommend its use in light and frequent doses. Properly administered in accordance with your directions,

A Priceless Blessing

in any house. I speak earnestly when I feel earnestly. I have, in cases of apparently confirmed consumption and cough, with loss of voice, fairly among clergymen and public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines, of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE, containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

GARNER.—The committee appointed to pass resolutions expressive of our feelings in regard to the decease of our sister, Mrs. KATE GARNER, respectfully submit the following:

Resolved, That we are deeply sensible of our great loss in the death of our sister, Kate Garner, who was one of the most prompt, active and efficient members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Grenada.

Resolved, That in this dispensation of our heavenly Father's wise providence we submissively and trustingly bow to his holy will, though we can not now discern why he has taken the devoted, helpful wife from the husband who so appreciated the ministry of her faithful heart and hand, and from the little children the loving mother who was so needed and so faithful to care for and guide them in the paths of truth and righteousness.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this, their great sorrow, and assure them of our prayers, that our loving Father will overrule this sad event for the good of each one.

Resolved, That we recognize the divine admonition to ourselves not to be weary in well doing, but by diligence in the Lord's business to be also ready when he shall call for us.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Woman's Missionary Advocate for publication, and a copy be sent the family of the deceased.

MRS. GEO. W. JONES, for Com.

BATEMAN.—MRS. JULIA ETTA BATEMAN was born September 15, 1865, and died September 22, 1887, just twenty-two years of age. She had just been married to a life-long playmate; beautiful, amiable, and with the prospect of a long life of usefulness before her, she is called upon by the all-wise, but mysterious providence of God to render her account. All that we can say is, "that the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away," and that "his ways are past finding out;" all that we can do, is to bow in submission to his will, "who doeth all things well for those that love him." Mrs. Bateman joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. James Healey, about three years since. She had a tender conscience and was truly sorry when, sometimes, she was hurried by worldly associates into the commission of even what might be termed a small sin. The last few months of her life gave marked evidence of her having settled down to the sober realities of a Christian, married life. Her mother (the best judge in matters so delicate) says, that she gave evidences of true conversion by a "meek and quiet spirit," which "is above all price." May the Holy Spirit comfort her parents and convert her husband!

DR. A. T. SHALLENBERGER, Rochester, Pa.

Dear Sir—The two boxes of Pills you sent me did everything you said they would. My son was the victim of Malaria, deep-set, by living in Florida two years, and the Antidote has done more than five-hundred dollars' worth of other medicines could have done for him. I have had one of my neighbors try the medicine, and it cured him immediately. I now recommend it to every one suffering from Malaria. Respectfully yours,

W. W. MONROE.

COLLIER.—"ISSA COLLIER is dead!" Though we were daily expecting it, yet how sad those words made us feel! A friend indeed was gone; a neighbor whom none could know but to love had passed away; a Christian whose light did shine so that his good works were seen and led to the glory of God, is to be so sadly missed among us. His devotion to his widowed mother was so beautiful, his faithful love to his children so constant, and his affection for his wife was not excelled. Their loss will seem irretrievable, and, but for the consolations of the religion of the Bible and the hope of the resurrection, their grief would be inconsolable. But they weep not as those who have no hope, for Bro. Collier was a Christian in every sense of the word. His parents, M. T. and A. E. Collier, were Christians before him. He was born November 9, 1851, and raised in this county and always showed the picture of good health until the exposures incident to the late overflows brought on that fearful disease, consumption. He spent a year in and around San Antonio, Texas, hoping to regain his lost vigor, but in vain. He returned in July, took to his bed about the middle of October, and died at Sharkey, Miss., November 1, 1887. His end was peaceful. He expressed in his last moments perfect submission to the will of God. There was no startled expression at the approach of death, but all was peace and quiet. He bade all around his bed good-bye, and just before he breathed his last was heard to say, "It is almost over, and all is right."

As his pastor, we have had the pleasure of consulting much with Bro. Collier as to the ways and means of church work. There has been much to do, and very few to help; still we do not recollect ever to have heard him even intimate that too much was expected of him. He seemed rather to be studying to find a way by which he might do more. We will never forget our first visit to him and Bro. James, his father-in-law; the look of gladness with which he met us; and when asked if their church—seven members—could do its part, i. e., pay the half of $1,200 for the preacher besides the other claims, be answered, "Yes, for that is the way to have preaching, and we must have it;" and, sure enough, the little band not only came up nobly, but built a beautiful $1,400 church, and had it ready for our protracted meeting in September. Bid for the fact that while God takes his workmen he carries on his work, our church at Strathmore would feel their loss irrevocable. A. L. O'NEAL.

OSBORN.—SAMUEL A. OSBORN was born in Columbus county, Miss., August 13, 1822; died in Jefferson county, Miss., September 9, 1887. He was the son of John and Matilda Osborn. Having spent his life in this section of Mississippi, he was well known and respected by his fellow-citizens. In 1871 he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and then or after professed to find God in forgiveness of his sins. His life, so far as this writer knew it, seemed to be devoted and happy in the service of God and the church. His pastor always found him highly appreciative of religious conversation and family religion. He was soundly Methodistic in his understanding of Bible doctrines, and the practical results which follow real faith in those doctrines. For several years his health was poor, and he expected to die soon. In speaking of this, he uniformly said he was ready, and often expressed a desire to depart. He died in the bosom of his family—wife and children, relatives and friends, and we trust has found admittance into that city whose gates are pearl and whose walls are jasper. WM. B. HINES.

HOLDER.—JESSE WEAR HOLDER was born April 23, 1829, in Jackson county, Miss., and in the year 1847 he moved to Jasper county, Miss., where he joined the "Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He did not make any profession of that saving faith in Christ until about five years after he joined the church. He was married to Miss M. A. Risher, September 21, 1846, with whom he lived until he departed this life, which took place August 29, 1887. His faith was strong in the Lord while in affliction, and he died in the faith of the gospel, looking forward to the time when all things shall be brought together in Christ Jesus. He leaves a wife and nine children to mourn his departure. May the family of the departed brother follow his example as he followed Christ's, and at last be united in that sweet by-and-by!

J. H. EVANS, P. C.

Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body. Give it a trial.

There is a great deal of spurious modesty in the world which is simply cowardice. When a man shrinks from accepting a well-merited honor, that is modesty, when he shirks the performance of a recognized duty, that is cowardice, though he may call it a modest distrust of his own powers. True modesty shrinks from the reward of work well done; false modesty shrinks from the work itself. This affords an excellent test of true and false modesty in ourselves and others. Is it the honor that we shrink from? or is it the responsibility? —Sunday-School Times.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Scientific.

Christianity and Scientific Men.

I have been asked to give "a word of testimony from scientific men." I do not know that the scientific men have been slow in their testimony for Christ altogether. To begin when Christ was in Bethlehem. The first who came to him were poor peasants; but the next were the scientific men of the age, traveling from afar, who had seen the star in the east. Not the priests of Jerusalem, not the leading politicians, but astronomers—wise men who came bringing gold, frankincense and myrrh. That was only the commencement of a long line of scientific men who have brought their homage to Christ in one way or another. I will not go through the whole line; it would be too long and complicated. There was not a great number that we should call scientific men in the early ages of the church; but those that were, generally influenced the current of Christianity to a considerable extent, though not always advantageously. Coming to later ages, we find such men as Copernicus, Tycho Brahe and Kepler, who were men of a Christian spirit, and ready to ascribe to God all their faculties and to give praise to him. Turning to our own country we find such men (I will not speak of those of the first rank) as Lord Bacon. I do not say that he was a godly man in every way, but we know not only that he was a believer in the Bible, but that he wrote as a Christian, and that his writings remain not only the highest philosophy, but a good deal of religious advice. Well, we go on and find Newton. No higher name could we mention—a name great in many departments of science, the greatest, perhaps; and, at the same time, a devout Christian who was not ashamed to write religious works. I might proceed to such men as Robert Boyle, "the father of chemistry," or "Cuvier," one of the greatest anatomists. Then, again, there is Michael Faraday, a man who was a humble Christian, and who, in various quiet ways, endeavored to do acts of Christian kindness. And I may mention Herschell, Sir David Brewster and the late Clark Maxwell—all men known as Christians by their words and by their writings.

If you ask whose name stands the highest in physical science among living men, some will probably answer, Professor Stokes, of Cambridge, and others, Sir William Thomson, of Glasgow—both believers in Christianity. Some of you may have read Professor Stokes' paper at the recent Church Congress.

If we turn to the biological side of science, and ask which is the highest name, we shall probably be reminded of the veteran Richard Owen, whose contributions to the study of natural theology are well known. Some time ago, at the anniversary of the Royal Society, the four savans to whom medals were distributed were Professor Flower, Captain Abney, Professor Cayley and Lord Rayleigh, no slight proof that among those who are taking a high place in science are to be found good disciples of Christ.

Let us look abroad to the French Academy: M. Dumas, the perpetual secretary, and M. Wurtz, the late president, are both personally known to me as Christian men, though belonging to different churches. These I have mentioned are leading men. It is difficult for me to remember a single man of the first rank in science who is opposed to Christianity, unless that charge can be truthfully brought against my friend, Professor Huxley. I could find several in the second or third rank; but alongside of these could be found many who are believers. That has been the case in time past, and it is so at the present time. D. J. H. Gladstone, F. R. S.

A Young Girl's Grief

at seeing her charms of face and form departing, and her health supplanted by disagreeable complaints, at this critical period of life, was turned to joy and gratitude after a brief self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It purifies and enriches the blood, gives a healthy activity to the kidneys, stomach, bowels, and other organs, and builds up robust health speedily followed. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Whither, Are We Tending?

The following extract from the pastoral letter, issued by the House of Bishops at the late Protestant Episcopal Convention in Chicago, touches upon a topic of great moment:

The time has come when the church of God must change her attitude, must take higher, stronger, more definite ground in her care for the education of the young life intrusted to her, as well as of the young in the broader field of the nation. She has a message to deliver, a duty to discharge, in this matter. Too long already have both been held in abeyance. At the close of this first century of her own and of the country's history, so full of solemn warnings as well as of great achievements, let her voice go forth declaring that whatever others may do, she can not, without protest and resistance, allow the salt of Christ's gospel to be cast out, little by little, from the education of the children of this land; that she can not without utter disloyalty to her divine commission, acquiesce in what has grown to be the policy of the day on this subject, which, because of its inability to agree upon the fundamentals of religion to be taught in the public schools, has lapsed into the perilous heresy of modern secularism, that these schools can best do their proper work when giving no religious teaching whatever. We are the friends of these schools, sustained by such liberal expenditure, and because we are so, we desire all the more to see them placed on the only basis which will be at once enduring and beneficent. It is not to be admitted that we are confronted with tendencies in the training of the children of the church and of the nation which indicate changes in the feelings and opinion of this generation as dangerous as they are profound—changes which strike at the church's hold upon the loyalty and love of the children now being nurtured in her bosom, and threaten to inflict an incurable wound upon the moral interests of the nation. We are drifting into an apostacy from the eternal law of righteousness, the supreme factor in the making of public and private character, which can only end in the eclipse of the noblest hopes and franchises of a humanity redeemed by the precious blood of the Son of God.

Better than a Hero.

"What a reward that Major Smith is," said Jones to Robinson. "why, the very sight of gunpowder would make him ill. How did he ever manage to become an officer in the army?" "Don't say anything against Smith," answered Robinson, "he once saved my life." "Saved your life! Nonsense, impossible! What do you mean?" "I mean that I was in the first stages of consumption: I was losing strength and vitality every day with the terrible disease, when Smith advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I had tried all kinds of medicines without success, and my physician had given me no hope; yet here I am, as well as ever a man was, and I owe my life to Smith, and to the wonderful remedy he recommended."

How to Die in Faith.—Would you be so happy as to die in faith, take these advices:

1. Be careful to get faith beforehand; for death is a time to use faith, not to get it. They were foolish virgins who had their oil to buy when the bridegroom was close at hand.

2. Study to live every day in the exercise of faith, and be still improving and making use of Christ in all his offices, and for all those ends and uses for which God hath given him to believers.

3. Frequently clear up your evidences of heaven, and beware of letting sin blot them to you.

4. Record and lay up the experiences of God's kind dealings with you, and be often reflecting upon them, that you may have them ready at hand in the hour of death.

5. Meditate much on those promises which have been sweet and comfortable to you in the time of trial, and beg that the Lord may bring them to your remembrance when you come to die.

Neuralgia and sick headache may be improved and even cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or "Favorite Prescription," a powerful tonic and nervine.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

A Wonderful Food and Medicine,

Known and used by Physicians all over the world. Scott's Emulsion not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food that builds up the wasted body. "I have been using Scott's Emulsion for several years, and am pleased with its action. My patients say it is pleasant and palatable, and all grow stronger and gain flesh from the use of it. I use it in all cases of Wasting Diseases, and it is specially useful for children when nutrient medication is needed, as in Marasmus."—T. W. PIERCE, M. D., Knoxville, Ala.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers: but the month of December will be "red-letter month" for our agents of the Louisiana Conference. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 16-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference.

This offer is for agents, as above stated, and during December only for Louisiana agents.

Turning Night into Day.

Why is the sun like people of fashion? It turns night into day—the time people catch cold, which, if not attended to in time, will induce consumption. Take in time Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

Felicity Street Church.

BUILT, 1850. BURNED, 1887.
REBUILT, 1888.

Anyone who knows and loves her; anyone who has served at her altars, or found Christ precious within her sanctuaries; anyone who has ever attended or worked in her Sunday-school as scholar, teacher or officer; any stranger without her gates; any friend, whoever and wherever dispersed, having a mind to assist in the rebuilding of Felicity Street Church, has now an opportunity. All are invited to help. "Who gives quickly gives twice."

The church approaches rapidly to completion, and will soon call her children and well-wishers once more to offer, under the shadow of her walls, the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise. Contributions, however small, in aid will be promptly acknowledged by the treasurer and gratefully appreciated by the people. Send them to the preacher in charge, Rev. S. H. Werlein, care of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans.

Don't hawk, and blow, and spit, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

A plan for the reduction of the expenses of collecting the customs revenue will be put into effect January 1. The reduction will amount to $115,835 a year.

DECEMBER TO JUNE.

BY T. A. S. A.

O dance, I'm cold—so cold!
The key in Nature's fold
Across my breast is tightly pressed,
And in my face
The wind is spitting sleet and snow,
Leaving a trace
Of care that was not there, I know,
A year ago.

But come, sweet June, and sit
Beside the fire, and quit
The dismal scene That gloams between
The lowering skies,
Where sun and shadow's changeful sheen
Delightful plays
Its pranks upon the sky of green
Of what has been.

Come sit beside the grate
And inspiration wait
From Inward glow And outward snow
And dismal note
Of Winter howling at the door
Until his throat
Bursts, and he consigned to the poor
Is heard once more

Lift up thy dainty head,
For rose and lily dead
Shed not a tear—There's summer here
Within One's heart.
The clusters hang upon the vine,
And angels start
And chant, while stars and hoar-frost shine,
A peace divine.

Come closer yet, I pray—
Upon my bosom lay
The fronds and flowers of those sweet hours
Which smiled Upon
Like scarf of gold across the skies;
And in the dew,
The starry shimmer of thy eyes,
Set love's rapture.

Sing over now the lay
We sang to parting day—
On which the soul With angels stole
Into the skies;
And in the blessed land of dreams
Heard melodies
Whose air the amorous wooing seems
Of tuneful streams.

Draw closer yet, my dame!
Make up the fire! How soon
Again I shiver As if the river
Of death were near!
O June, in vain I seek to woo!
The dying year
Calls out, "Make ready for the new!"
Sweet June, adieu!

DECEMBER 23, 1887.

The Closing Year.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

How many have adhered to the covenant vows made at the opening of the year that will now soon be numbered with the years beyond the flood? How many feel stronger in the faith—more confirmed in the hope—of the gospel because of the knowledge gained through study, experience and practice? Is love more intense and more comprehensive? Have we sailed by landmarks, hugging the shore, or have the celestial pointers drawn us along the way where there are no paths, but where reflections of the sparkling lights have beautified the billows, discovering to us the depths beneath which answer to those above?

The old landmarks! That is an expression we often hear from persons who affect fidelity to what they would claim as principles established of old, but which, in fact, are merely worn-out forms of ever-new old truth, which has its rejuvenescence in coming into new measures—manifesting itself as if a new discovery or a new creation. The illustration of this given by Christ, when he spoke of old and new bottles, has become hackneyed, but it is as apt as any that can be conceived. In all ranges of human study and adventure there have been, along the track of the march of years and centuries, radical changes, varying phenomenal expressions of the one force and the one life whereof ensue the combinations, differentiations, permutations and classifications in nature, in government, in forms of civilization and in methods of industry. The love of what is new, yea, the absolute demand therefor, which arises from the very constitution of our being, is liable to perversion. A prurience at once frivolous and impertinent and mischievous, is the counterfeit of the impulse from inspiration of truth which exemplifies its creative energy by surprises continually through unfoldings from out the inexhaustible springs of matter and mind. It is a benevolent provision in the economy of this human development, in time, that death releases or exempts from the rider shocks of change such as have been formed in their tastes and habits by usage and custom that wax old, and are displaced by others. The mystic fingers of the unseen hand of the death angel change the countenance and pass the pilgrim off into rest ere the wider, stiffer swirls of the tide of time change directions and remold the forms of life. New men meet the issues that older men shrink back from and protest against in honest adherence to "the old landmarks." Yet are there exceptions. It is given to some to know no decadence of life. "The keepers of the house may tremble, and those that look out of the windows may be darked," yet are there representatives among the septuagenarians and octogenarians that have brought along in their souls the warblings of the spring-time, and in their countenance the gleam of morning radiance which mingles sweetly with the lights of boyhood and girlhood in illumination of our homes and sanctuaries. These have voyaged rather by the sky-marks than the "old landmarks." Through heaven-inspired, God-given instinct or intuition, they apprehended that it is "the worlds and not the winds that touch the tidal springs"—have dared the deep, gathering into their being the dignity and grandeur of the sea, and bringing from the other shore the dewy freshness of their morning baptisms. It was early in the history of our race that "the necessity of being guided on the seas obliged man to choose in the heavens fixed able signs by which he could direct his course, and this is the historical origin of the constellations." In respect of the moral, it was quite as imperative that there should be celestial guide-marks; and commandments, proverbs, maxims, precepts, like astronomic archipelagoes, have sufficed to point the ways of spiritual life. Yea, and promises, like central suns, have held, by intense attraction, their regnant rule amid these clusters of utterance in the realms of wisdom-revealing oracles.

North Georgia Letter.

BY REV. J. F. SCRUGGS.

Indian names are often heard in North Georgia. Many mountains, streams and towns are designated by them. In sound they strangely contrast with our native tongue. But the red man who once inhabited these mountains, hills and vales, and who once chased the deer through the primeval forests, and whose proclivities for war led him, in savage barbarity, to stain his tomahawk in the blood of the pale faces who were constantly encroaching upon his hunting-grounds and liberty, has left no monument of his citizenship except these names. More than fifty years ago he signed the treaty between the United States and himself, and amid the weepings of his people started west for his new home. I have been near the spot, if not at the exact place, where the treaty was signed which transferred these broken regions to the rule of a greater people than themselves. On Fort Mountain, in the Coheeta range, is an old fort which stands connected with the Indian's history, though the oldest inhabitant among them can give no information concerning its antiquity.

The signs of war are yet visible through this part of the State. About three miles from Dalton, where the Confederates camped and cleared away the timber, a beautiful forest of young growth has sprung up. On one occasion I walked out into it, and, finding a few feet of a chestnut log, with the marks of Confederate axes on it, I sat down to rest and to meditate. Here upon that log I sat without any fear of being disturbed with the approach of a stealthy foe. At that time the sound of war was in all the land, and along the lines the country was alive with the gray and the blue. Men were hurrying to and fro under the urgent orders of their commanders; scouts were scouring the whole country, and, as a necessity, business of all kinds was suspended; but how different now! Peace reigns in all our borders. The earthworks here and there seen, those thrown up by brave Confederates, still remind us of what they endured for the lost cause.

In these mountainous regions churches of different denominations are often erected in the same neighborhood, thereby hindering the growth of each other. Whilst they are generally on friendly terms, and the controversies of former years have been laid aside, yet, as there is only so much element on which they can work, when divided among Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians, very few fall to the share of each. An undue emulation is not unfrequently gotten up in their zeal to gain the majority. Proselyting is often resorted to in order to succeed; and, in view of these, the cause of God is hindered. During this Conference year the Dalton circuit has lost eight or ten members from its rolls, who have gone to other denominations. Whilst other branches of the church have not dealt squarely and fairly by us, I can say that our people have not attempted to proselyte the members of other communions into our fold. Whilst we meet with many hindrances from these sources, we meet with many among ourselves. Our own houses are often built too near each other, and, in consequence of it, great injury follows.

"There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion," says Milton. Songs such as are found in our hymn book, no doubt, are meant. All through this country the hymn book has a limited place in the public service. Prayer and Praise has been substituted for it. In revival meetings it is nearly, if not quite, ignored. And the singing will not compare, in most instances, with the good old hymns of other years. When I came on Dalton circuit I ignored Prayer and Praise in the commencement of my ministry. I do not think we have any authority to set aside our hymn book in public worship any more than we have to ignore the Discipline in the government of the church. The songs are generally too sensational, and do not, with their theology, tend to implant the truth of the Scriptures in those who sing as deeply as the hymns of Mr. Wesley and Mr. Watts. What we need is a hymn book which combines the good of the old with the good of the more recent publications. This will meet the demand of all classes. Our revived hymn book will meet that demand; so, after this, there need be no complaint upon the part of anyone.

The year is just closing with better financial results than usual. The yield of corn, wheat and cotton has been larger than for two or three years past. Many who were in debt have been able, in a large degree, to extricate themselves from liabilities which were pressing heavily upon them. There is a greater degree of encouragement to the planter and merchant, and they will enter upon the duties of the coming year with renewed energies and cheering hopes. It is God who gives the remunerative harvest, and it is he who preserves our being, and grants a reasonable degree of health and strength. The year has been crowned with manifold blessings, for which we should feel the deepest gratitude, and bestow upon him our richest affections.

In Memoriam.

REV. J. N. WILLIAMS.

BY REV. C. McDONALD.

Rev. James Nelson Williams was born in Charlottesville, Va., August 10, 1814. His father died before his birth, and his mother soon afterwards; so that he was thrown upon the world as a real orphan. He was cared for by an uncle of his, who had him learn the printing business. He came to Mississippi first in 1839; then to Texas for a short time, where he engaged in some of her wars under Gen. Sam Houston. He returned to Mississippi in 1840. For the last forty years he has lived in Scott county, where, for a great many years, he served in some of the civil offices of the county before he became a preacher. He was converted, when a mere boy, under the bush where he was wont to pray in secret. It was clear and satisfactory. He told it to his friends, and they believed it. But after this he was wavering for many years. Sometimes he was in the church, and sometimes out. Strong drink was his besetting sin, and it came near being his ruin.

In 1857 he joined the Methodist Protestant Church, and from that time to the close of his life he was firm and consistent. He demonstrated in his life, for the last thirty years, that a man can overcome even a besetting sin. His sobriety was undoubted by his many friends. He was licensed to exhort in 1861, to preach in 1865; was ordained deacon in 1867, and elder in 1869. He came into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1870, by the union of the Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Protestant Church, with this Conference, at Crystal Springs. Since that time he has been on the supernumerary or superannuated list; yet doing more or less good in a somewhat limited sphere. He did mission work near his home, and for two or three years he was colporteur for the Southwestern Bible Society. In this Bible work he canvassed the counties of Scott, Smith, and Rankin. This was an important part of his service for the church.

He was married to Miss Mary A. Wackter, in Leake county, Miss., in 1840. They reared four sons and two daughters, all of whom are grown and trying to follow the godly admonitions and example of their father.

Bro. Williams was of small stature and frail constitution, but with a smiling, friendly face, and a warm, generous heart. He was well calculated to win the affection of those with whom he associated. As a preacher, he was spiritual, and often stirring the deepest emotions in his hearers. He suffered for many years with chronic bronchitis, which gradually increased until it brought him to his death. He was conscious of the approaching end, spoke of it in familiar terms, and made arrangements for it. He died in peace, September 6, 1887, at his home, surrounded by his family group. On the day following, after a funeral discourse by the writer, from Daniel xii, 3, we interred his mortal remains in the graveyard on Brassell Hill, in the southern part of Scott county, Miss., to await the resurrection of the just at the last day.

PRLASKI, Mississippi.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: We are anxiously waiting the arrival of the missionary brother the two Mississippi Conferences and the Louisiana Conference have promised to send. Please send the money to the Board, and let the brother be sent to us as soon as possible, for the Hiroshima circuit. We want more men; men who will come to make this a life-work; men thoroughly consecrated to God. We are having calls from several places, and we are so full of work where we are, we can not go to them. Day before yesterday a man came from Nwajima, begging us to go and preach to them, and explain to them The Word of God. He says there are fifteen of them meeting to read the Bible every night. They have rented a house, where they meet, and are anxious to have some one come and teach them.

On yesterday, the Sabbath, he was present at our four services, and at the close of one of the services he told about their earnest desire to understand the Word of God, and asked us to pray for the fifteen who were earnestly reading the Bible. Is not this a Macedonian cry from Japan? Who will come to the help of these multitudes stretching out their hands to Christian people for aid?

A great revival is going on in Tokio and Yokohama, and hundreds are pressing into the kingdom of God. We, too, are praying for a like blessing. Great numbers are coming to us asking that we explain to them the Word of God. Our hearts go out in thankfulness to God that so many are his blessings. Pray for us, and may God grant a shower of blessings! Ever your brother in Christ,

"The Lord Hath Need of Him."

From the subjoined letter the reader can judge how urgent is the call for helpers in Japan. An appeal was made a short time since in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for money with which to send out and support for one year a man in that mission. The editor, Dr. Carter, informs us that the money is in hand, and we are waiting for the man, equipped for the work, to say, "Here am I; send me." Miss Gaines, in Hiroshima, is waiting with anxious heart for another lady missionary to join her in that field, "white unto the harvest." Read Dr. Lambuth's letter. It may be "the Lord hath need of" you.

REV. I. G. JOHN, D. D.—My Dear Doctor: I have not written for some weeks, as my time has been so occupied. We have more than we can do, and more doors are being opened to us every day, which we can not fill with the few men we have. A telegram was sent to you to-day for four men: two married. Can we and have them at once? We need them, and could occupy places very advantageous to us and our work if we had them. There are no less than eleven places open and wanting teachers at once. Three or four of these we could occupy at once, which could be made the centers of Christian work. I am for the present in Kobe, while Dr. W. R. Lambuth is in Hiroshima. I have just opened a Bible class in the city of Hiogo, which is connected with Kobe. There are fifty or sixty thousand people in the native city, and but one small church. I had about ten in the class, and five of these desire to become Christians. They promised to get a house if I would come and preach to them once on Sabbath, and meet them twice in Bible class during the week. I trust this will be the beginning of a great work there, which has been hitherto considered a difficult place to introduce any Christian work. At our prayer meeting to-day three young men gave in their names as probationers. The good work still goes on, and we feel greatly encouraged. The Lord is opening the doors more rapidly than we can fill them. Pray for us, and let all the church hold us up in earnest prayer to God.

J. W. LAMBUTH.

P. S.—I have a note from Bro. Mosely, also one from Bro. Waters. They are both greatly encouraged in their work. J. W. L.

Important.

MR. EDITOR: A member of the Woman's Missionary Society has been accepted for mission work at Laredo, Texas. Doubtless the readers of the ADVOCATE would like to contribute their mites toward defraying the expenses of her outfit and journey. Give them an opportunity during this season of gladness.

Fraternally,

(All whose hearts incline them to contribute to this laudable purpose can send their contributions to the ADVOCATE, and they will be properly attended to.—ED.)

Notice.

Those persons who subscribed missionary money at the anniversary of our missionary meeting, at Winona, to be paid by January 1, 1888, will send the money to me, at Brooksville, Miss., by postoffice money order, or in registered letter.

The Christian at Work says:

The most carefully compiled and best general statistical work is Daniel's "Lehrbuch der Geographie." Of this the sixty-fourth edition has recently appeared, which contains some interesting statements and figures. According to these the number of inhabitants on the globe is about 1,435,000,000. There are 3,064 distinct languages and dialects known. There are about 1,100 different religions. There does not exist a single people which is without a religion of some kind. Even the lowest on the social scale have some religious idea, however crude. Christianity has 432,000,000 adherents. The Roman Catholic Church numbers 208,000,000; the Greek or Oriental Orthodox Church 83,000,000; the Protestant Church, 123,000,000. Besides these there are about 100 sects or smaller divisions claiming to be Christians, with 8,000,000 adherents. Of the non-Christians, 8,000,000 are Jews, 120,000,000 are Mohammedans. These adherents of Islam are divided into three sects, the Sunites, Shiites, and Wappabites, while there are about 70 smaller Muhammedan sects. All other human beings are non-monotheistic or heathen, and embrace 875,000,000 souls. Among the heathen religions Brahminism is the most widely spread, and embraces about 158,000,000 adherents, and its younger off-shoot, Buddhism, embraces 503,000,000. Other heathen religions have 135,000,000 adherents. There are thus yet over one thousand millions of souls who are not Christian! What a lesson for missionary zeal and work!

The Spirit convinces us of the fact of sin, that we have done so and so; of the fault of sin, that we have done ill in doing so; of the folly of sin, that we have acted against right reason and our true interest; of the filth of sin, that by it we are become odious to God; of the fountain of sin, the corrupt nature; and, lastly, of the fruit of sin, that the end thereof is death.—Matthew Henry.

THE RIVER TIME.

BY BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR.

Oh! a wonderful stream is the River Time,
As it runs through the realm of tears,
With a faith in the good and a hope sublime
And a trust that never fears;
As it bends in the sun and the shade of the years
As it bleeds in the heart of years!

How the waters are dimpled to greet the snow,
And the sunbeams like birds linger on,
And the years in the sheaf how they come and go
On the river's breast with its ebb and flow,
As it glides in the shade and sheen!

There's a magical isle up the river Time,
Where the softest of airs are playing,
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the flowers we lost in Cocytus bowers are straying.

And the name of the Isle is the "Long Ago,"
And we buy our treasures there;
There are flowers of beauty and bosoms of snow,
There are heaps of dust—oh! we loved them so—
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of songs that nobody sings,
There are parts of an infant's prayer,
There's a lute unswept and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments our loved used to wear.

There are hands that are waved when the fair ships shine
By the mirage is lifted in air,
And we sometimes hear through the turbulent roar,
Sweet voices we heard in the days gone before,
When the wind down the river was fair.

Oh! remembered for aye be that blessed Isle,
All the day of our life until night;
And when evening glows with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing in slumbers awhile,
May the greenest spot of soul be in sight.

An Imperative Demand.

BY REV. A. J. BILLINGSLEY.

One of the urgent demands for the people of the State of Louisiana to-day is a live, wide-awake, aggressive temperance organ, that will fairly represent this great issue before the people; arouse and consolidate its friends into an unbroken phalanx in the presence of a common enemy. There are some phases of the question that can not be presented and discussed to a very great and exhaustive extent in any or all of the religious papers now published in the State; and if this were possible, the people would only be reached in part, as very few, if any, read all these religious papers; hence the need of a special temperance organ for the entire people. I am led to this reflection by one out of many considerations. It is this:

The unparalleled political divisions and antagonisms of several distinct parties now in the State present a rather mix-up state of affairs, and is undoubtedly, to a greater or less extent, one of whisky, no whisky, some whisky, or all whisky; at any rate, the whisky power is a prominent factor in the settlement of the present political disturbances in our State, and, in some parishes, controls, rides over and tramples down the will and the best interests of the intelligent taxpayers and solid men of the land. The proof of this statement would fill up the ADVOCATE entire from top to bottom, from front to back; and so none is adduced, presuming also that none is demanded by any reader of the ADVOCATE now residing in the State.

The organization of the German League, in New Orleans, is to me an alarming indication, and the absolute demonstration of a living, determined foe at our very doorsteps; and when I see political parties in their nominating conventions putting on their tickets saloon-keepers, men who support, befriend and are actively engaged in the whisky traffic, then I am still more alarmed. A prominent saloon-keeper of this town has announced himself, through the local press, as a candidate for the Legislature. The same is true of the parish of Caddo; and the parish of Ouachita, last Saturday (December 10), actually nominated a saloon-keeper, of long years' standing, for the Legislature; and, of course, in the absence of an opposing ticket, he will represent the parish in the next Legislature. A prominent physician of that parish told me, the other day, and he is politician enough to know whereof he affirms, that this thing was being done wherever at all practicable in other parts of the State. And the same statement was made by a visiting Baptist minister of Southern Louisiana.

Now, what do these parties and politicians mean? Do they expect to put grog-shop keepers on their tickets for parochial, district or State offices, and then call upon the Christian voters in the various denominations of this State to vote for such men? Do they expect the hundreds of Christian ministers in Louisiana, and the thousands of stewards, elders, deacons and official members, and the good men generally of these churches scattered throughout the State, to transform bar-keepers into political monarchs and bar-rooms into Legislative halls by their suffrages at the ballot-box? Do they suppose that these sworn soldiers of the cross are going to desert their cause and their colors, and by their own hands bear aloft this devil in solution—whisky—and seat him in the high places of the State, and give him legal sway over the intelligent, moral manhood of our State? Fill up our General Assembly with saloon-keepers, and where will your Sunday Law go to? Elect a whisky-vender to the gubernatorial chair, and who will your tax-assessors and police jurymen be composed of? Put into political power grog-shop owners and the keepers of gambling hells, and what will be their attitude toward that unprecedented scandal and blur now sitting like a hideous nightmare on the snowy breast of the Pelican State—the Louisiana State Lottery? Will bar-keepers enhance the social, political and moral well-being of the people of Louisiana? Or are we so bankrupt in men that we can't get others sufficiently qualified to represent us in the public offices of trust?

I think it is about time for us to wake up. The encroachments of this whisky devil are rapid and unmistaken. We can not afford to give him support either in or out of political parties; and if political bosses think that they can wheel the Christian voters of this State into line and make them vote for Judge Brewer at the ballot-box, through the magic charm contained in the name of any mere party, they are sadly mistaken. Democrat or no Democrat, I never will vote for a saloon-keeper. Friend or no friend, I never will support a whisky-seller for political preferences. But, says some Christian Democrat or Republican, what must I do? Do? Why, scratch your ticket or burn it up, rather than commit such an offense against God and man as to vote for liquor men for any office. If all Christian voters in our State should do this, it would be such a rebuke to the parties committing the offense, that they would never have the face to put whisky men on their tickets again; but if we vote for such men once, they will come before us again for our suffrages. I, speaking, I know, for many, ask the Methodists of Louisiana, wherever saloon-keepers are put on the ticket by nominating conventions in any of the parishes, What are you going to do about this matter? Are you going to vote for such men? Can you afford to do it? Will you not stultify every feeling and principle of Christian integrity by so doing? Would you be willing to carry a whisky ticket with you to the bar of God? Would you be able to "say your prayers" for twelve months after such a moral crime?

Mr. Editor, would it be out of place, after all the parishes have held their conventions, to have reported in this paper the number of saloon-keepers before the people of the entire State for some office of trust? If not, as there is no special temperance organ in the State, let them be duly reported, and let us see squarely the drift of things in our midst.

RASTROP, Louisiana.

Conference Minutes.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps many of your readers, glancing at the above caption, will pass this by, regarding it as a dry subject; nevertheless, I am disposed to write something on it.

And, first, where Annual Conference minutes are properly gotten up, I know of no source equal to them from which information may be obtained respecting all the work of our church. They contain, in the most condensed form, a vast amount of information, just such as our people need. They, therefore, ought to be placed in the hands of every Methodist family, year by year.

But, next, how is this to be done? I have been watching pretty closely of late, and I find my own Conference is not alone in its troubles over the publication of the minutes. I hear a very familiar complaint from several of the Conferences; perhaps all of them have the same difficulties. Ever since the organization of the North Mississippi Conference, without, I think, the exception of a single year, it has been a perplexing question with us—How shall we publish our minutes, and where? And who shall pay for them? We have had first one plan and then another, not one of which has proved satisfactory. And in all cases the number of copies printed has been altogether too small. One thousand copies to thirty-six thousand members is simply ridiculous.

Is there no remedy? How would this plan do? Let every pastor be required during the last quarter of the Conference year to canvass his work for subscribers for the minutes, at ten cents per copy, taking the name of each subscriber with his postoffice address. This list and the money so collected let him take to the Annual Conference, handing the money to the secretary of the Conference, or whoever shall edit the minutes; and, in case he is appointed to another work, the list of subscribers to his successor. By this plan, if all the preachers in the Conference would take hold of it, I am sure we could raise an amount sufficient to print several thousand copies, and place them in the hands of all our people. It ought to be done in such a systematic way that the secretary would know just how many copies to send to each pastor, and each pastor know exactly who is entitled to a copy.

As we at present manage it, we get six or eight copies for each pastoral charge, and these the pastor gives to such as read the Advocates, and thus very little is accomplished. Perhaps there are thousands of our people who do not even know that we have such a thing as Conference minutes. But if the matter was explained to them, they would readily pay the nominal amount of ten cents for a copy. The advantage of this plan is seen again in that every man who paid his money would get a copy, which can not be said of any other.

It has occurred to me also that all the Annual Conferences might have some concert of action in the matter by purchasing a press, and employing printers and proof-readers for that express purpose; but I am not sufficiently informed as to the cost of such things to know whether it would be practicable or not. The suggestion is given for what it is worth, and it may not be worth anything at all.

Who Will Go?

One year ago to-day Dora Rankin heard the summons, "Come up higher," and entered into rest. The work she had planned, and was eager to begin, has opened to her sister, in a manner unexpected, marvelous, and without seeking.

You have read in the December Woman's Missionary Advocate the letters of Miss Rankin, telling of the urgent invitation she had received from literary and business men in Kading to come and teach their grown-up sons. Scarcely daring to refuse the earnest solicitations, she went day after day in her own boat (given by the Juvenile Society, of Augusta, Ga.), teaching from 1:30 to 5 P. M., and returning to Nantziang in the evening, often reaching her home after eight o'clock.

Recent advices from Miss Rankin tell that, fearing the effects of the mental and physical strain in attempting work at such a disadvantage, she had decided to remove to Kading. With a faith like unto that of Abraham, when he arose at the command of God and went he knew not whither, this brave woman has turned her face away from the beautiful Louise home, rich to her with tender memories, and to-day, within the immense walled city of Kading, the only foreigner, she sits alone in a rented Chinese house, borne down with the burden of work too great for her strength, and calls to her sisters of the home church to "come up to us quickly, and save us and help us."

Who is the woman, knowing these facts and who can go, will turn a deaf ear to this almost piteous cry of Miss Lochie Rankin? This opening is the most wonderful that has ever been unfolded to us in China. Truly it is of the omnipotent power of God that the hitherto seclusive, conservative, idolatrous city of Kading, wherein no foreigner has ever dwelt, should throw open her gates and invite a Christian woman to come and train the sons of her literary men, even providing a place for the teacher and paying money to be taught.

We lift our hearts in praise and thanksgiving that this frail woman—our beloved pioneer missionary—had the heroic courage, the unwavering faith, and devotion to the cause, to enter in and possess the city in the name of the Lord of hosts.

Women of Christ, shall we dwell in "ceiled houses," amid culture and refinement, and surrounded by loved and loving companionship, while this precious sister lives, solitary in a comfortless native house, wherein lurks the germ of disease, or it may be death to the foreigner?

She asks nothing for herself, but for the work says: "Send a woman of some experience, who is brave and strong, and willing to conform in a measure to Chinese custom in dress, that the native taste will not be offended." When such an one offers, the Woman's Board will send her at once.

With the annual reports from China comes the urgent plea for more helpers. The re-enforcements that were sent last autumn are not sufficient to man the work, and others must follow soon; else plans must fail.

In Brazil Miss Bruce is anxiously waiting to welcome the promised experienced teacher, to open the Rio College on a fitting basis. God grant the week of prayer and self-denial recommended last June by the Woman's Board of Missions, and now soon to begin, will result in offerings of self and gifts that will meet the present need.

We evoke thee, Holy Spirit of God, to come down on the church at the call of thy people! and thou, Lord Jehovah, to hear the united prayers of thy servants, and "open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it."

NASHVILLE, TENN., Dec. 10, 1887.

Stewards and Preachers.

MR. EDITOR: I see this statement in the ADVOCATE, of December 8: "Make the Boards (of Stewards) pay what they promise(!), and then a great many preachers moving around will not leave 'unpaid debts.'" What do the stewards promise? Do the preachers think the stewards promise to pay their debts for them themselves? (what preacher could find a steward that would accept so much responsibility, unless they could feel satisfied that the members would back them up?) or do they merely decide what salary they think the preacher ought to have, and assess the members accordingly?

The preachers ought to do their full duty, and the stewards and members ought also to do theirs. But if the members will not pay their assessments, how can the stewards "make" them do so? And would it not be as unconstitutional and unjust, as it would be unprecedented and strange, to undertake to "make the Boards (of Stewards) pay" the assessments for the membership! Or would it be compliant with the Golden Rule ("Do unto others as you would be done unto") for the preachers to even desire to impose such a hardship upon the stewards? The preachers ought to do their very best in trying to do all the good and as little harm as possible; and the stewards ought to do the same, and endeavor faithfully to induce the members to pay up their assessments cheerfully and promptly. And then the Lord will be sure to take care of us all, and bless us with all needed good. These duties and obligations are mutual. But, alas! there are some members, and some stewards, and some preachers, who do not do their duty. But "let him that be without sin cast the first stone;" and let us "fall not out by the way, for we all be brethren." Instead of crimination and recrimination, will it not be much better to call for short, pointed and practical essays on the support of the ministry, and have a committee appointed to examine them and decide which is the best, have that published, and charge every preacher to read it once or oftener to his congregations every year?—for I feel persuaded that much dereliction of duty is owing to lack of due consideration and proper understanding of the matter. I think the people can be convinced that it is their duty to promote the religion of the Bible; but they have not thought of and investigated that question as they ought. And they need as much to be instructed on that point as about the way and plan of salvation generally; for the Bible declares "the way is so plain, a way-faring man, though a fool, need not err therein." And yet how many "lines upon lines, and precepts upon precepts," seem required to induce the people to walk in the ways of righteousness that they may be saved. I think it can be proven by the Bible that it is the duty of the people to support the ministry in "going into all the world and preaching the gospel to every creature;" and, furthermore, that the means thus contributed is absolutely a good, safe and paying investment. "And, lo! I am with you always;" "and never will leave you nor forsake you," declares the Savior to every preacher who goes forth and discharges his whole duty faithfully.

Now, let the preachers examine themselves also (while scrutinizing the stewards), and see if they be not as short in some things else as in their salaries. Come, brethren, let us "tote fair."

D. W. FOSTER.

PLAISANCE, Louisiana.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I see by the last ADVOCATE that you have about money enough to support a missionary and his wife for one year. Why not have him approved by the Board and sent to us at once? We need help so much in men. We are almost overwhelmed with work; so much so that I have had no time to write letters to the papers or to anyone. When can we have the men? We have Bro. Waters and Bro. Mosely and Miss Gaines, and yet the work seems to accumulate as the men come. I am at present in Kobe, holding the work here, while Dr. W. R. Lambuth and his family are at Hiroshima. When can we have a man for Hiroshima circuit to help me there? Can not the missionary brother be recommended to the Board of Missions and be sent to us before the close of this year? The good work still goes on, and new channels of usefulness are being opened up to us. Calls are coming to us now from two other important places, and yet we can not go to them unless we neglect the work we have in hand. The governor of one province, near us, wants a man and wife to teach. He offers $100 a month and house, and says they can teach as much Christianity as they like. Another call from government school, where they offer a house and $120 a month, and yet we have no one to occupy it. Where are all the Christian young men who came from our colleges? Are they not willing to give themselves to this work? It is a great work, and one in which they can honor God and be the means of the salvation of thousands in this land. We appeal to all Christian young men in our church who have felt the power of the grace of God in their hearts and know the preciousness of the Word of God. Come and help us! Come to this land where so many thousands are waiting for some one to tell them how to be saved! They are ready to receive the gospel when it is presented to them. The present rising generation have no religion at all, and are ready to accept any religion brought to them. May God help you! is my earnest prayer. Ever your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, Nov. 18, 1887.

P. S.—I have just returned from a new Bible class in the native city of Hiogo, two miles from us. Had ten in my class; and five of the number who have read some in the Bible want to be Christians. The leader says he will try and get a house in which I can preach to them on Sabbath. I trust this is the beginning of great work in the native city, where there are fifty or sixty thousand people who do not know the Lord.

Poverty Better Than Riches. A Danger.

MR. EDITOR: During a very interesting discourse, I heard, some time ago, the preacher make use of this remark: that he had often felt or, rather, desired he was in such circumstances that the church would have no concern as to his support; that his situation would place him independent of assistance. Since then my mind has been somewhat concerned as to that remark; so much so that it has led me to ask of you space in your columns for my reflections. No doubt, his feelings upon that point are in accord with many other ministers, especially if the case is such that the membership is heavily taxed to meet his support. He is not to be condemned for his feelings in the matter. But the question does arise, Would it be best for him to be in such circumstances? Would it make him the more useful, and would it make the case better for the church? I do not propose to say that all wealthy ministers are of less use to the church than those in dependent circumstances, but I do say the exceptions, as to usefulness, are on the side of the former. There are few men satisfied to be poor, and yet it does seem poverty is necessary to a higher development of some qualifications essential in a good pastor. To be true sympathizers, men must be in somewhat like circumstances. A wealthy pastor could not have the same feelings with the poor as that of a poor minister. His heart may be right in most things, but his circumstances would place him above that of the poor; hence the inevitable would be a difference of feelings, a want of true sympathy. I do not want it to be understood that I am an advocate of keeping preachers in a condition of squalid poverty, but, on the contrary, of freeing them from all anxiety as to their support, a good home, and that well supplied; but don't let the church be released from this responsibility. There is a mutual benefit to preacher and people by a need of his wants being supplied and the church supplying those wants. The pastor, no doubt, labors harder for the church when he is dependent on it for his support, and there is a corresponding feeling of obligation on the part of the church when faithful labor is given; hence when the obligations are met, there is a source of joy to both—the one of having done good and careful work; the other of having met the obligations for that faithful labor. The Master was poor; had not where to lay his head. Is it not one of the causes of our success, as a church, the poverty of the ministry? The gospel was sent to the poor; and the support has largely come from that class. Then let us not bewail our poverty, but rejoice that it has been a cause of greater consecration, more faithfulness in the church. Give us our pastor as he is that we may have the joy of supplying his temporal wants; that he may come to us all clothed in humility and true sympathy. Then we rejoice together, feeling there is more joy in giving than in receiving.

J. W. M'NEIL.

The Reasons.

MR. EDITOR: In a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, in an article under the caption of, "That Thousand Dollars, and How Was It Gotten?" the question was asked, "What then moved the people to respond to Dr. Lambuth's call through the ADVOCATE?"

Perhaps many forces were brought to bear upon this call. In the first place, this was a new method in raising missionary money, and people, as a mass, like changes that raise them out of the old groove, giving them a little variety. Variety is said to be the spice of life.

In the second place, this call was for a specified purpose, and designating the very place where this missionary should labor. This, of itself, would cause the people to respond more freely and promptly than they would have done otherwise. Each donor must feel that they have an abiding interest in this missionary, whoever he may be, and will watch his movements with much concern, regarding him as their own missionary.

Again, Dr. Lambuth's call was one of great emergency—one that moved the hearts of the people to heed the cry for help that came as a mournful dirge from that far-off heathen land.

The editor's card was another force brought to bear upon this call. The enrollment of names, with the amount of each one's donation, from week to week, was a grand scheme. It had its influence on the reading public, stimulating them to contribute their mite to aid in raising a thousand dollars for a specified purpose. From week to week, and during the busy hum of life, one moment could be spared to watch the progress of the Lambuth call. Each week the amount grew larger and larger, and finally the call was answered financially; but who is the man?

Perhaps the greatest force of all was the reading of Mrs. Kelly's letter, that came as a sad wail, and as heart speaking to heart, touching the tenderest cord, and causing the eye to grow dim, and enlisting the deepest sympathy. Her appeal was simply irresistible.

With all these forces, and God at the helm, the response came slowly, but surely.

MRS. J. H. BRUNNER.

ENTERPRISE, Mississippi.

In the New Work.

I have just made a move of two hundred miles by rail. I belong to a moving brigade. I moved because I was sent by Bishop Keener, the chief pastor, who has charge of the North Mississippi Conference this year. I believe in the itinerancy and in itinerating with all my heart and soul. It is best for both preachers and people. It keeps both from stagnation and death, or from dry rot, which is just as bad. I have tramped around, up and down, one side of my own Conference for twenty-five years, until it was high time for me to move out into new parts. I knew every hog trail in the country, and I had grazed the grass exceedingly short in all those parts. My peculiar ways—idiosyncrasies, I believe you call them—were well known to all, both old and young. My pet sayings, catch-words and peculiar phrases were only too well known. Most men—common men—have these things. They come to be a heavy load in the course of time, a clog on most men's wheels. I have secretly wished for a long while some good Bishop would move me out into a new corner, and allow me to take a fresh start. I've got my wish at last. I am here in a new place, among new people and in new surroundings, and I begin to feel the impulse and inspiration of newness in my own bones. This is said to be a delightful charge. I believe it. The only drawback is the lack of room in the parsonage for my numerous family. Committees are at work now to add new rooms, which will be done soon. When this is done we will be comfortably stored away, with room to entertain an editor, or any other preacher who may pass this way.

The church in Senatobia is a gem; not large, but well-proportioned and elegantly and tastefully furnished. My predecessors here have done good work, and they have left the odor of a good name behind them. This speaks well for them and for the charge. It makes me proud and devoutly thankful to know that my brethren are so honored and loved here where they served so long. I am always uneasy when I go to a charge and hear unkind things of the preachers who have gone before me. I, straightway, know that the preachers were wrong, or the people were wrong, or both. In either case it makes the way up-grade for me. I am thankful to God that I am wholly free from the sin, or weakness, of ministerial jealousy. It never ruffles my feathers to hear my brethren praised as pastors or as preachers. I can't do pastoral work and I can't preach as other men have done; but I can do my own work in my own way, and God will own and bless that to the good of his church. I am perfectly content to be myself and to do my own work in my own way. I covet—oh! yes, I covet earnestly—the best gifts, but not the gifts of other men. There is enough of the best gifts for me and for every other man. If other men had less of these best gifts, that would not give me any more. I have no desire to be like anybody but Christ, and I do not want anybody to be like me, only as I am like my Lord. I have quit—long ago quit, if I ever began—patterning after other men. Somehow or other, I have an intense longing to retain my identity, my individuality and my own essential personality both in this world and in the world to come. I don't want to be lost in a common, conglomerate mass and aggregation of humanity. When I get to heaven, I want to be there personally. I will have as much need for that which is peculiar to me, personally, in heaven as I have had on earth.

What an endless variety and charm our distinct personalities, sanctified and saved, will give to the society of our final home! Men are not moulded like bullets: thirty to the pound, all the same size and shape, and exactly alike when the necks are trimmed off. I am partially an Irishman by natural generation, and I am—thanks be unto God!—a Christian by spiritual regeneration—I may say, wholly a Christian by spiritual regeneration and sanctification. I am yet, however; and I am what I am by the grace of God in Christ Jesus, our Lord. Grace was intended to purify, not unmake, men. It leaves them what they are, only that they are for God instead of being for self and sin. I say these things with a personal pronoun, because I find some good souls grently troubled because they can not be like other people, and because some other people are all too ready to say, "Be like me." In either case this is a delusion and a snare. It is not of God. The unity of the Spirit is in the Spirit himself, and not in the men who enjoy his divine presence in their hearts. The unity that unifies is not in being alike, but in being guided by the Holy Ghost.

Well, my brother, my appointments are made for me by the Bishops; but I take them all as from God, and this gives me the most pleasant contentment wherever I go. I believe I have always been wholly free from any desire for any particular place or work, though I have always dreaded district work, and I am thankful to be free from it. The pastorate is far more preferable. If I were hunting for an easy job, I would not select the presiding eldership. However, whatever falls out to me in the allotment of work, I take from the hand of him who called me to it, and I go at it cheerfully in the name of my Lord. Pray for me this year, that I may fill this charge as acceptably and as profitably as my brethren who have gone before me.

Yours, BALLINGER.

Roman Catholic Charities.

The Roman Catholic Church charities are among the most brazen of frauds. For clear, cold-cut robbery, for wading into the treasury, commend us to a Roman Catholic charity. An orphan asylum, a Magdalen asylum, a home for abandoned children, old men, old women, anything under the charge of priests, or nuns, or Ladies of the Sacred Heart, or Sisters of Charity or Mercy, or any one of the sanctified humbugs of the Church of Rome, any of the orders of friars, Dominicans, Lazarites—we do not care by what name they are called, whether male or female, they are all pretty much the same and are all very nearly akin to mendicants, and pretty nearly all leeches and beggars upon the community, and pretty closely allied to robbers of the public funds. From New York to San Francisco, from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico, this thing has been going on since the first priest soiled the continent with his feet. There is no church in America that expends so little in charity and so much in building edifices as the Church of Rome, no Christian association that closes its heart more brutally and coldly to the appeal of the unfortunate, nor extends its open palm so persistently and unblushingly for alms which never get beyond church use. There is not in San Francisco a Roman Catholic Church charity of any kind. There is no place where a poor Roman Catholic, in sickness or distress, can find relief, except it is saddled upon the State Treasury. Every Roman Catholic orphan asylum, every lying-in and foundling asylum, or hospital, or Magdalen asylum, or old men's or old women's home is a source of profit to the institution that runs it. We charge, without fear of contradiction, that every Roman Catholic institution in the State of California that pretends to be a charity is a money-making institution, and shows clean net profits instead of a deficit in its executive management. In 1887, the State of New York paid $577,417 to eighteen Roman Catholic institutions, nominally for the support of the poor: in 1878, it paid $615,419; in 1879, $550,371; in 1880, $662,458; in 1881, $555,223; in 1882, $681,519; in 1883, $696,838; in 1884, $837,462; in 1885, $838,719; in 1886, $1,055,615. The total disbursements in twelve years amounted to $8,052,528 48, fully the one-half of which is clear profit to the church. In the city of New York, the Roman Catholic Protectory receives from the State $110 for the support of each child, while the average cost of each child did not exceed $50. The reported number of children in its care was two thousand. Here was a cold robbery in one institution of over $100,000. New York is robbed of $1,000,000 annually in the name of Roman Catholic charities. This money is used to propagate the papal religion and build papal edifices. More than twelve times as much money is abstracted from the public treasury by the Roman Catholic institutions as by Protestant and Jewish combined, while Protestant and Jewish institutions maintain more dependent children than all the Roman Catholic institutions together. The Jewish people have less paupers and criminals thrown upon the public than any other sect; more than any other they look out for their own. In the United States of America, Roman Catholic paupers, mendicants, criminals, insane and diseased are out of all proportion to the Protestant element. Roman Catholics do not take care of their own poor, and do not concern themselves about them except for the purpose of making money out of their care. In a word, the Papal Church begs alms of a Protestant and irreligious community to support its poor, and then steals enough of it to build churches, asylums, parochial school-houses, and other edifices required for church use. Look about in California: A cathedral being erected in San Francisco, another in Sacramento, and churches in every town and country village; the Jesuits have erected a splendid church and school edifice in San Francisco; the Franciscan and Dominican friars, a good-for-nothing set of idle monks, are housed in splendid buildings; colleges and school edifices on a most expensive scale; nunneries and monkeries growing up in every direction and every side, exhibiting an expenditure that would not be possible if they did not get money out of the State and municipal treasuries, and did not direct the money, stream, from assisting the poor, into a dishonest direction. In a word, they throw their criminals and pampers, their orphans and dependents upon the public for maintenance, while they grasp all the money in reach to build. This is the policy of the Roman Catholic Church. The Roman Catholic, as a rule, never contributes to a Protestant charity; the Protestant, as a rule, never inquires the religious character of the institution to which he gives his money in charity. Lord county, Illinois, has twenty-four insane persons, costing the State six thousand dollars per annum for maintenance, and among them is not a single American-born citizen. The Church of Rome is the richest religious establishment in the world; the order of Jesuits is the richest order in the world; the Roman Catholic Church and its orders have more valuable property in San Francisco than any other institution—and yet there is not a place where a poor, destitute, sick papist, one disabled by infirmity, helpless from age or infancy, can find refuge, food, clothes or medicine. Well and most properly does Dr. McGlynn style it a "machine," and most truthfully does he charge that all this charity business is a pretense "to make employment for and give comfortable homes to the rapidly increasing host of monks and nuns who make so-called education and so-called charity their regular business," for which a very common experience shows that they have but little qualification beyond their stamp and garb." That there are Roman Catholics who are broad-minded, great-hearted and generous, we will not deny, but it is not the policy of the "machine" to permit them to indulge their generous emotions outside the pale of the Papal Church or in any other direction than in upholding and enriching the Church of Rome.—San Francisco Argonaut.

"That Miss Jones is a nice-looking girl, isn't she?"

"Yes, and she'd be the belle of the town if it was n't for one thing."

"What's that?"

"She has catarrh so bad it is unpleasant to be near her. She has tried a dozen things and nothing helps her. I am sorry, for I like her, but that doesn't make it any less disagreeable for one to be around her."

Now if she had used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, there would have been nothing of the kind said, for it will cure catarrh every time.

If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen attentively and at once to what it teaches.—Burgh.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes a derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of sedentary habits are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Giddiness, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which make the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can restore these cases, and nothing succeeds so well in relieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there is a return feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act as it should. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

The Artificial Eye is not only a Comfort, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It compels the eyelids to move as the lid as ever. It restores the functions of the tear passages. It prevents the eyelashes from turning inward, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in the case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye, and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Mr. W. Bonsey, our optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

Briefs.

The report of the Treasurer of the Mission Board, in the Missionary Reporter, for December, shows a reduction of $32,662 in the loan account of the Board.

The money reported at the Mississippi Conference for foreign and domestic missions, not including what was raised by the Woman's Board, was about $3,200 in excess of last year. The spirit of the gospel is touching the springs, and they begin to bubble over.

The saloon-keepers in Philadelphia have trouble in obtaining bondsmen to enable them to take out license. The late law puts the license at $500, and the surety must give a $2,000 bond for the payment of all fines, penalties or damages that may be levied upon the dealer for any violations of the law, and besides that he must live in the ward where the saloon is located. This makes it troublesome to take out a license. According to the signs of the times, the saloon is just now floating out upon "a sea of troubles," and a storm of retribution is brewing, which will dash the piratical craft upon the rocks of punitive judgment.

The principal theme was "Co-operation in evangelical work in America by all churches." The churchless masses, our heterogeneous elements of population, socialism, anarchy, outrage upon the Sabbath, and other national dangers, were most eloquently set forth. The close, prayerful, brotherly consultations brought the Alliance members very close to each other, and the very spectacle of the meeting, even aside from what was said, will make a deep public impression.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the nation, in the Kansas liquor cases, is all that the most extreme prohibitionist can desire. An exchange says:

It is at once an answer to the political machines, whether newspapers or politicians or men, who insist that prohibition can have no authority, and a full reply to the uninstructed foreigner who regards every attack on drink-shops as an invasion of personal liberty.

It is in order now for people who inveigh against prohibitory statutes to ask themselves if there is not a good deal of straight-out rebellion against the fundamental principles of law in all such talk as they have indulged in? When the Supreme Court decides that, under its police authority, a State may prohibit the making of liquor on private premises for private use—the friends of "personal liberty" had better quit the country. The court evidently regards the liquor business in the light of a plague.

The dispatches on Tuesday morning brought the sad news of the death of Rev. Dr. A. R. Winfield, editor of the Arkansas Methodist. He died at his home, in Little Rock, after an illness of only two days. Ten days ago we parted with him at the Mississippi Conference, when he was in the best health. Truly, "in the midst of life we are in death." Dr. Winfield was a man well known throughout the church, and his death will produce genuine sorrow in thousands of hearts.

The Old and the New.

The year is swinging on its hinges, and soon the old will be shut out forever, and the new opened for our entrance. In looking back through the past twelve months, we can see abundant reason to sing:

"What troubles have we seen,
What conflicts have we past."

In the review of the past year, and in the knowledge of our present state, we can continue the song:

"But out of all the Lord
Hath brought us by his love."

In that review innumbered blessings, received from the God of all grace, pass before the door of memory; and, as we count them, we again catch up the strain:

"Seasons and months and weeks and days Demand successive songs of praise."

Yea, we stand, as it were, between the old year going and the new year coming—monuments of God's providence and Christ's grace and the Spirit's intercessions—and exclaim, with the pious Addison:

"When all thy mercies, oh, my God!
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view I'm lost
In wonder, love and praise!"

A retrospect of the past should produce only gratitude. Why mourn over failures and shortcomings? The past can not be changed. A look into the future should inspire only hope. Why distress ourselves about defeats and disasters yet in the future? Let us imitate Paul, who, after having passed safely through many sore trials, "thanked God and took courage." Let these two words be our motto for the coming year: "Thankfulness and courage." Let us look back and thank God; look forward and take courage. A good text for a new-year meditation is supplied us by the Apostle Peter: "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind; be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The Honest Unbeliever.—The Resurrection.

BY BISHOP J. C. KEENER, D. D.

"It seems to me that such a person as Christ should not die. Why should he die if he lived before he came into the world? If he is the Son of God, and created everything, and was present at the making of the world, certainly death ought to have no power over him. But he did die. If that be so, it is of all deaths the fullest of death. I can imagine no greater despair than that of his friends at his death. It was as if the light of day had gone out at noon. If he could not live, who can hope to overcome death? Infinite life in the tomb!

"If afterward he came up from the grave, still the fact remains that he died. As death comes from sin, it would seem that to die put on him the stamp of a sinner. No event afterward could change this: that he took a sinner's portion. I can not doubt his death, because he died at the hands of the Roman government. That could not be a pretended death. For he was publicly executed. An illustrious man, such as he was, would not be published by his friends to have been crucified had it not been so. That is certainly a fact: that he was crucified. Besides, it has not been so very long ago. It was after Cæsar and Cicero, and only fifteen years before the destruction of Pompeii. Compared with the burial of Agamemnon, it is a recent thing; whose tomb has been of late opened, and the gold mask found on his face. The story, too, of his trial is as full of detail as a modern trial; and, in fact, brought out clearer. So that much I do fully believe: that Christ was crucified. But now comes the wonder: The Mighty God suffers it! The Son dies! The perfect One dies as any other man! All along here is to me an unsolved mystery.

"It is not as difficult to believe that such an one should come up out of the grave as that he should go into it. If he was the Eternal Son, one might expect that death could not hold him. His own power of life would bring him up; but what power could put him into death?

"Then, if he lives, should we not know it; see it? Would not all men and things give evidence of it? The proof that he came out of the grave is that he lives. Witnessing to the fact of the resurrection is well, but the main witness is that he lives; if he be alive. So it seems to me:

"If I could be convinced that he lives, that would end the entire problem—I mean certainly assured of the fact. Somehow, the historic statement, however credible or closely knit, does not enter into me as something actually known. If I could myself be introduced to him, then I should know that he lives. But I fear that, short of this, doubt will forever lodge in my mind, dissolving the theory of a resurrection. As this is the base and pillar of the whole of Christianity, I do not know that too much evidence of its truth could be demanded. I should like both the historic evidence, and also the confirmation of it personally: the without and the within testimony—the one agreeing with and confirmatory of the other. Then, no matter how strange his death, I shall receive it; in fact, I shall be prepared to accept all the Scriptures that cluster about his form, whether in death or life.

"You see, something out of the ordinary course is necessary to convince me—some supernatural testimony brought directly to my own mind, as strong as my own personal consciousness. Yet I am no believer in special visions and personal illumination. What I want is something direct, new, and yet not exceptional; because if I have a vision, what shall I say to some other man who professes, maybe, to have a different vision?

"Here is a squarely stated fact: that Jesus rose from the dead, and that he now lives. Here it is in the book. Now say that, so far as such a fact can be proved by being in a book of truth, it is proved. But the further proof needed is some vital evidence. It must come to me from him. Life with life must consent to so vast and momentous a truth."

* * * * * * *

Well, do you rest here? will this alone satisfy? and will it satisfy? Will you accept Christ upon your own terms? If you will, it is precisely the evidence which Christianity proffers: that by personal experience every man, great or small, shall "know the Lord." This, indeed, is the covenant secured to us by Christ. That a man shall have written in his mind and on his soul the love of his Savior. "If any man will do his will," says Christ, "he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." The confirmatory witness of the Spirit attests the written Word, as the stamp of a seal answers to its die. He witnesses with our spirit that we are the sons of God. "Because ye are sons"—declared to be—"God sends the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Feeling the love of the Son—the life of the Son—we lisp the sacred speech of sons. "No man calleth Jesus, Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." It is not expected that you shall accept fully and forever so great a truth without supernatural, incontrovertible evidence; without this vital consent between you and the Lord, and between your mind and the breathing of the Spirit. Here is no room for fanatical profession of spiritual revelation, because the check is in the Word: "To the law, and to the testimony." "Search the Scriptures, for they are they which testify of me."

"But how can all this come to me?"

If you are in earnest, you will obey the law of repentance; you will admit that you have sinned: you will confess that your conscience has troubled you, and does now trouble you; you will seek help; you will approach God by prayer: you will thus far do his will, try to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ;" you will cry out, "Lord, I believe, help mine unbelief." If you do this, you will now "hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live," for "the time now is"—without waiting for the resurrection at the last day; you shall have the evidence of it in your own heart; you shall be raised from the death of sin into the life of righteousness; you shall be "translated from the power of darkness into the kingdom of his dear Son." In fact, the Lord offers you stronger proof, and more of it, than your unbelieving soul asks for. Do not let Satan longer deceive you, but accept Christ on your own terms.

The serious obstacle with you is, that you wish for all the evidence at the first step, in a process which supplies it at the last. Can you not be satisfied if at the last you come to the full assurance of the truth? Will you not yield yourself to the guidance of One who promises you all that you desire? It may be that the very steps which precede the firm conviction of the sublime truth are essential to the securing it. The heart requires a gradual or, rather, a graded presentation of immortal truth. The steps which go before fit the spirit for a full introduction to the Savior. They are as the angels who came to announce his coming. They prepared the shepherds for the vision of the Babe. Do not think that you require any greater certainty of assurance than you will receive. The Lord will see to it that you are satisfied. The resurrection of your own spirit will prepare you to believe in his resurrection. The same power which raised Christ from the dead is to dwell in you. The miracle which raised him is the abiding power which, in its continuous action, has created the church of the New Testament. His life will quicken your life. He who is "the First-Born from the dead" will raise you into his own vital power over death, and you will realize that Christ is in you—the hope of glory. You will be conscious of Christ. The Spirit will have created you a new personality.

Before this all lesser difficulties give way. This is the truth about which the Holy Spirit flashed in the first declaration of the gospel by St. Peter: "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all." This is "the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe," of which St. Paul speaks: "According to the working of his mighty power which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places." Do not let the threadbare argument against the resurrection of the body from its divided particles after death disturb you; for even our scars are now kept intact in their identity amid the sloughings off of seven entire bodies during the lifetime of everyone seventy years old.

Cyril, Archbishop of Jerusalem, A. D. 350 (in Lect. IV. 19), speaks with point in the same direction: "Be tender, I beseech thee, of this body; and know that thou shalt arise from the dead, to be judged with this body. But if any thought of unbelief steal upon thee, as though the thing were impossible, consider from thine own ease the things which appear not. For tell me, think where thou wert thyself an hundred or more years ago? From what an element, from what a very small and mean substance hast thou come to so great stature, and to such dignity of comeliness. Can not he who brought into being that which was not raise up again that which has been and has decayed?"

The One glorious body, now in heaven, is the type of the human body. It ascended. The place where it lay alone remains. That which the Holy Ghost enabled Job to perceive and record 1,520 years before Christ, we may surely realize, by the Spirit, 1,850 years after Christ. And there could scarcely be a more powerful statement of the resurrection. They are words to be "graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever"!—"For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." The life of his Redeemer was to Job's consciousness a greater security than the embalming processes of Egypt, that his body would live again. It is interesting to place these immortal words of the Patriarch, as they come down to us through the ages in unabated strength, alongside of that procession, weird, solemn, real, which, of late, bore the mortal remains of Thotmes III. and of Rameses the Great, amid wailing multitudes, from the Plain of Thebes to Cairo; after an undisturbed rest of thirty-four hundred years. But dead—oh, how dead!—was this dust of kings.

"Inside the coffin and surrounding the body of Thotmes were found wreaths of flowers, larkspurs, acacias and lotuses. They looked as if but recently dried, and even their colors could be discerned. He it was who overran Palestine 200 years before the birth of Moses. When the remains were unrolled, the spectacle was of brief duration. There was only time to take a hasty photograph, and the features crumbled to pieces, and vanished like an apparition." (Palmore.)

The following amendment to the Constitution is before Congress: "Congress shall have power to legislate on the subject of marriage and divorce by general laws applicable alike to all States and Territories, and neither bigamy nor polygamy shall exist or be permitted within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

In Waldeck, Germany, the law prohibits the granting of a marriage license to a person addicted to the liquor habit.

The League of Freedom and Justice.

In giving an account of the club meeting of the Sixth Ward of this league, the Times-Democrat has this in regard to an address of the president of the club:

Dr. Gabert delivered a very interesting address, advocating sanitary reforms and revindication of the Sunday Law, allowing the pure air to enter the closed-up houses which are breeding sickness and poisonous gases by being closed up, even for one day only.

How wonderful! We are at loss which to admire most in the above—the ignorance it displays, or the sublime impudence. Since the days of Moses no really scientific mind has ever questioned that Sabbath-keeping was the best sanitary regulation ever proposed. And, then, let us ask, What houses are closed up on Sunday? No dwellings where people live are closed. Where do those "poisonous gases" come from? The saloon. The fact that the saloon creates "poisonous gases" is the very reason for closing it up, not only on Sunday, but for all time. Truly, the Times-Democrat may well characterize such talk as "very interesting."

Mr. Keppler, the president of the club of the First Ward, has also been enlightening his comrades with some "very interesting" remarks. For instance: The Times-Democrat represents him as saying that the Sunday Law was "ruinous to the society of men, and detrimental to the church and to religion." But what about the society of woman and children? We have yet to see the first man, or "society of men," which has been ruined by the Sunday Law.

The patronizing attitude of this league towards the church and religion is enough to take a man's breath! A law of God—as old as the world, and made for all times and for all circumstances, the corner-stone of morality, the foundation upon which all stable, civil government must rest—"detrimental to the church and religion"! Verily, when ignorance goes forth to air itself, what sights we do see!

The real trouble is to be found by reading the above words backwards. It is neither the public health nor the church nor religion to which the Sunday Law has been "detrimental," but it is the saloon—that originator of "poisonous gases." That is the whole trouble. This league wants free whisky, free beer on Sunday, and yet it is trying to hide its ultimate purpose by crying out that the church and the public health are endangered. The public health is in good hands, and so is the church; and neither needs any suggestions from this league. If the people of this city and State sit still and see this German League undermine and destroy our Sunday Law, then we have entirely underrated their "grace and grit."

Personals.

A good brother in North Mississippi sends the editor Christmas greeting after this style: "Happy Christmas to you and yours! As I sit down to my Christmas turkey I'll think of the 'poor editors,' and wonder if they have any." That is the most wonderful wonder which wonderful wonderers wonder while wondering in this wonderful world of wonders. "Poor editors," indeed! Turkeys, indeed! They are out of fashion—both!

Brother, can you read the letters from Japan and Mrs. McGavock's letter, in this number, without seeing how God has answered the prayer of the church in opening heathen doors for the gospel? Now, down upon your knees and cry to God to baptize the church with a spirit of liberality which will quickly enable her forces to enter these open doors.

The postoffice address of Rev. John A Ellis, presiding elder of the Woodville district, for the present is Amite City, La.

It pains us exceedingly to write that our young brother, Rev. C. E. McLean, is quite ill at the home of his brother, in East Feliciana parish. He has been sick now for more than a year, and we can only commend him to the loving Father to do with him as seemeth best.

Brother preacher, don't forget Dr. Adam Clark's exhortation—"Kill yourself with work, and then pray yourself alive again." The life that comes in that way is worth having.

We are pained to chronicle the death of Rev. A. J. Briggs, of the Alabama Conference. He died, suddenly, a few days ago, soon after his arrival home from the Conference session.

The wife of Dr. S. A. Steel, of Louisville, died a short time since. A noble woman full of faith and good works has entered upon the rewards and enjoyments of the great future.

Sir William Gladstone finishes his seventy-ninth year to-day. And everybody knows what a vigorous man he is, both in body and mind.

Francis Murphy, the apostle of temperance, is working at present among the workmen of the iron mills and glass factories of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The drouth in the Western country interfered very much with the religious meetings of the Baptists and Campbellites. There was not water enough to baptize the saints!

It is said the Pope will receive about $24,000, in presenting gifts presented during his jubilee celebration! He ought to take care of some of his poor Lazaruses!

Rev. J. W. DePass has retired from the editorship of the Florida Christian Advocate. Rev. Dr. Josey, his Anderson succeeds him.

There is to be a watch-night service at Carondelet Street Church next Saturday night. Bro. Carradine proposes to begin the service at 9 o'clock. All are invited to this solemn service to watch the old year out and the new year in.

DISEASE lies in wait for the weak. A feeble constitution or an enfeebled condition is malaria, atmosphere and sudden changes of temperature, and the least tobacco assails the weakest victims. Dr. J. H. McLean's strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier will give tone and vitality and strength to every one entire body.

BOOKS.

GUNETHICS; OR, THE ETHICAL STATUS OF WOMAN. By Rev. W. F. Bovard, A. M., D. D., President Uniontown Wesleyan College. Author of "The Scriptural Status of Woman." Price, seventy-five cents. Funk & Wagnalls.

This little book is an attempt to sketch the status of woman in the field of human civilization and redemption, and thereby disclose the ethical status of the sex. He argues from Scripture that the woman has all the rights and immunities bestowed upon her that belongs to the male, both in the Church and the State. The work may be read with interest and profit even by those less advanced in this line of belief.

THE VANDERHEYDE MANOR HOUSE. By Miss M. Cooper Pelee, $1 25. Worthington Company.

The best book the distinguished author has written. Among the hundreds of novels issued during the year, the Vanderheyde Manor House stands out in bold relief. It is a good story, told in beautiful language. It rapidly takes the reader from the beginning, and holds his attention to its dramatic close.

FREE JOE, AND OTHER GEORGIAN SKETCHES. By Joel Chandler Harris. Including Free Joe, and The Rest of the World, Little Compton, Aunt Fountain's Prayer, Trouble on Lost Mountain, and Azalia. One volume, 12mo, $1. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

WORTHINGTON'S ANNUAL for 1888. A Series of Original Interesting Stories, Biographies, Natural History, Sketches, Poems, etc., for the young. Illustrated with upward of 500 original engravings, printed in color, and several chromo-lithographic illustrations, enclosed in a beautiful cover of original and unique design, printed in rich colors. 4to, boards. $1 50.

Harper's Weekly.

A JOURNAL OF CIVILIZATION AND A PICTURE HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.
10 CENTS A NUMBER.
Subscription per Year, $4.00.

The THIRTY-SECOND VOLUME will begin with the Number issued on January 4, 1888.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is the leading illustrated paper of America. It touches on every side the changeful phases of human progress, and presents a literary and pictorial record of the notable events and movements of our time. The variety and excellence of its contents, which include serial and short stories by the best and most popular writers, fit it for the perusal of people of the widest range of tastes and pursuits.

In Politics, the influence of HARPER'S WEEKLY is directed to the end of securing a higher standard of public duty and an abler and purer administration of public affairs. The fairness of its editorial comments has earned for it the respect and confidence of all impartial readers.

In Literature, HARPER'S WEEKLY for 1888 will be liberally supplied with contributions from the best and most popular writers. An American serial story of unusual originality and interest will appear early in the coming year, and it will be followed by a new novel by Mr. H. RIDER HAGGARD, and by other short and serial stories from authors of equal note.

In Art, the publishers of the WEEKLY maintain a continuous advance in the quality and interest of its illustrations. Whenever the pressure on the space of the main sheet demands it, Supplements will be given for the adequate delineation of important events, and from time to time Supplements will be devoted to specially selected fine-art productions, to striking features of American enterprise, or to foreign topics of world-wide interest. As a family journal, HARPER'S WEEKLY will be edited with the same strict regard which has been paid in the past to the qualities that make it a safe and welcome visitor to every home.

Bound Volumes of HARPER'S WEEKLY for three years, in cloth, $7.00 per volume. Cloth cases, to bind weekly, $1.00 each.—By mail, postage free.

Harper's Bazar.

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY JOURNAL OF FASHION AND DOMESTIC ECONOMY.
10 CENTS A NUMBER.
Subscription per Year, $4.00.

The TWENTY-FIRST VOLUME will begin with the Number issued on December 25, 1887.

HARPER'S BAZAR unites the choicest literature and the finest art pictures with the latest intelligence regarding the fashions, the most useful household information, and all the arts that render home attractive. No topic is neglected in its columns that could contribute to the entertainment and instruction of the family circle, and nothing is admitted that could offend the most fastidious taste. Its weekly illustrations of the latest Paris and New York styles, with patterns and descriptions of materials, may save many times the cost of subscription by helping women to be their own dressmakers, and to adapt their wardrobes to the fashions of the day, while to dressmakers and milliners it is indispensable. Its articles on housekeeping, cooking, the management of servants, and all matters pertaining to the household, and on social etiquette, are from the best sources, and are eminently practical. Much attention is paid to art decoration, and exquisite designs and adaptable papers are frequently published.

The literary merit of HARPER'S BAZAR is of the highest order. Its serial stories are by writers of world-wide fame, such as THOMAS HARDY, WILLIAM BLACK, Mrs. LYNN LINTON, F. W. ROBINSON, W. E. NORRIS, BRET HARTE, W. CLARK RUSSELL, W. BESANT, JAMES PAYN, Mrs. CRAIK, J. S. WINTER, D. C. MURRAY, etc. Its short stories are distinguished for their brightness. Its editorials are vigorous and sensible, and its poems, essays, and other matter are the best.

The fine art illustrations of HARPER'S BAZAR, from the leading native and foreign artists, form a marked feature of the journal.

A host of novelties are in preparation for the new volume, which will open with new serial stories of absorbing interest by the powerful writers—Mrs. LYNN LINTON and BRET HARTE.

Bound Volumes of HARPER'S BAZAR, for three years back, ready, $7.00 each.—By mail, postage free.

Harper's Young People

A SIXTEEN-PAGE ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
5 CENTS A NUMBER.
Subscription per Year, $2.00.

The SIXTH VOLUME began with the Number issued November 1, 1887.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE is a miscellany of the best reading for boys and girls. The serial and short stories found in its pages are of a high literary quality; and while they have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, they do not debase the taste of young readers by exaggerated or false views of life and motives of action. The paper contains valuable articles on scientific subjects and travel, historical and biographical sketches, papers on athletic sports and games, stirring poems, etc., contributed by the brightest and most famous writers. No subject that may properly enlist the interest of young people is foreign to its purpose. In all the departments free use is made of illustrations in aid of the text, and fine pictures representing the work of the foremost artists and engravers lavishly adorn its pages.

Every line in the paper is subjected to the most rigid editorial scrutiny in order that nothing harmful may enter its columns.

The fact that HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE appears at weekly intervals, sustains the interest felt by its readers, especially in serial stories and continued articles, while the sixteen pages (exclusive of occasional Supplements) of which each number consists afford ample space for the utmost variety of matter.

A novel and important feature of the volume of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE for 1888, which will comprise 53 weekly numbers, will be Supplements of especial interest to Parents and Teachers.

The year's weekly numbers of the paper contain about one-fourth more reading than the twelve numbers of the most popular of the monthly juvenile magazines, and this at a yearly subscription price considerably less than theirs.

Bound Volumes of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, for four years, in box, ornamental cloth, $3.00 per volume.—By mail, postage free.

POSTAGE FREE TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS IN THE UNITED STATES, CANADA, AND MEXICO.

Remittances should be made by Postal Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss. When no time is specified, subscriptions will begin with the current number.

HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents in Stamps.

Our Young People.

THE TURN OF THE YEAR.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

The days are brief, and dark and cold:
The barren fields are brown and sere:
The world is chill, the world is old,
And speeds the flying year.

The birds and flowers are gone away,
Or sleep in Mother Earth's warm breast.
But I amid the storms must stay,
And toil and never rest.

Hush, heart unquiet and dismayed!
Soon shall the sun in strength return:
Why dost thou mourn, of life afraid?
Soon the black year will turn.

The darkest day precludes the light.
However man the depth bewails:
After the longest, loneliest night
The morning never fails.

What if thy year be near its end;
If failing heart and flesh be faint;
What if thy lovers, kin and friend,
Be deaf to thy complaint:

Even as turns the faithful year
In the slow days of storm and gloom,
And spring begins her journey here
To tempt the earth to bloom,

So shall thy Sun unveil his face
And all these mists in radiance burn.
Wait but his hours; take heart of grace;
Thy year begins to turn!

Happy New Year.

Dear Little Folks: I encourage you to persevere with the 1, 2, 3 puzzle. I will send a New Year's card to the first boy or girl, under fourteen years of age, who correctly solves the problem. Really it is not so very difficult, and I would give a hint how it is done, only I want you to think it out alone. I am pleased to observe the remarkable tenacity with which you cling to the Bible questions. No other book is so well worth studying. But, merely to vary your letters a little, instead of any more questions for awhile, suppose you write short sketches of Bible people and places. Use simple words and make your sentences short as possible.

To illustrate: Once upon a time, I knew a little girl who dreaded compositions and did not write hers until Friday evening. One Friday, when she was clear run out of ideas about spring and birds and flowers, she got up a little history of Ruth, which was something like this: "Ruth lived in a country called Moab. A famine in another land made a man, his wife and two sons move to Moab. One son married Ruth; the other, a girl named Orpah. Old man died. Sons ditto. Old lady languished to return to her native land. Ruth went with her. They tramped. They were very poor. Ruth gleaned in a rich man's field. Man was Boaz. She gleaned. She married Boaz." How many of you can compose a story as good as that. Try it.

Merry Christmas and happy New Year to you all.

COUSIN CAMILLE.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to your paper in so long, I thought I would write again. I like to read the little cousins' letters very much. I wish more of the little cousins would write to the dear old ADVOCATE. I think it would help them to improve in their writing. We had a camp meeting at Union Church. There were nine accessions to the church. I will answer some of the little cousins' questions: Marvin Hodges, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian" is found in Acts xxvi, 28. John Lindsey, the shortest verse in the Bible, is found in John xi, 35. Catie Jones, the Bible contains 2,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 66 books, 1,186 chapters. I will close by asking the little cousins some questions: Where in the Bible is "Rhoda" found? What woman killed the general? Where in the Bible is "new moons" found? With many good wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain, as ever,

Your friend,

RHODA C. BUSH.

MEADVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am now off at school in Port Gibson, Miss., and am very much pleased with it. Our lady principal takes your interesting paper, and all of the girls, myself included, enjoy reading it very much. I see, in the last paper, that Edith M. Chichester wishes to know in what Psalm the words, "Cast thy burdens upon the Lord and he will sustain thee," are found. I beg leave to answer, that she will find them in Psalms lv, 22. I will now close by asking in what chapter and verse of Acts do we find the words, "To the unknown God." I am,

Your friend,

WILNA M. CHICHESTER.

PORT GIBSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your valuable paper, allow me to speak a few words to the little people. We had a very interesting Sunday-school awhile this year, but we are not doing so well at this time. My papa, five sisters and one little brother, besides myself, went from our house. I think that was doing pretty well for one family. I enjoyed it so much that I did not want to miss a single time. Bro. Cotton, who is our pastor, visits us once a month. We all love Bro. Cotton very much. We love him to visit our homes. I will answer John Lindsey's question: The shortest verse in the Bible can be found in John xi, 35. Now, I will ask the little folks a question: Where can the middle verse in the Bible be found? I hope to see my letter in print. For fear it will find the waste-basket, I will bid the little people good-bye.

Your little friend,

TOMMIE L. HOLT.

BENTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As this is my first attempt to write to your valuable paper, I hope it will not be wasted. My papa takes your valuable paper, and I so much like to read the children's columns. I take a very valuable little paper: namely, The Youth's Companion. Our pastor, H. L. Scarborough, says he would be so glad if more of the little cousins would take it. I will close by asking a question: Where and how many times is the word "grasshopper" found in the Bible? I remain,

Yours truly,

GERTRUDE FELDER.

PORT VINCENT, Louisiana.

FULL OF THE BIBLE.—A boy went to Sunday-school regularly, and had many Bible verses in his mind. He was a temperance boy. So a wicked man in a pleasant manner invited him to drink with him.

"I thank you, sir, but I never drink liquor," the boy answered.

"It will not hurt you."

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

"You need not be deceived by it. I would not have you drink too much. A little will do you no harm, and will make you feel pleasantly."

"At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." And the boy added, "I think it wiser not to play with adders."

"My fine little fellow, I like you. You are no child; you are fit to be the companion of a gentleman. It will give me great pleasure if you will drink wine with me."

"If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

This was a stunning blow to the tempter. He gave up his wicked attempt, and went back to his companions and said, "That little fellow is so full of the Bible you can't do anything with him."

Every boy's mind and girl's mind should be so full of the Bible that wicked tempters can not do anything with them. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."—Standard.

AN "AWFUL" STORY.—There was once an awful little girl who had an awful way of saying "awful" to everything. She lived in an awful house in an awful street, in an awful village, which was an awful distance from every other awful place. She went to an awful school, where she had an awful teacher, who gave her awful lessons out of awful books. * * * So this awful girl was all the time in an awful state, and if she don't get over saying "awful," I am afraid she will come to an awful end.—Methodist.

Household.

CARE OF THE HANDS.—There are not nearly so many secrets in hand treatment as people imagine. A little ammonia or borax in the water you wash your hands with, and the water just lukewarm, will keep the skin clean and soft. A little oatmeal mixed with the water will whiten the hands. Many people use glycerine on their hands when they go to bed, wearing gloves to keep the bedding clean; but glycerine does not agree with everyone. It makes some skins harsh and red. These people should rub their hands with dry oatmeal, and wear gloves in bed. The best preparation for the hands at night is white of egg with a grain of alum dissolved in it. Quacks have a fancy name for it; but all can make it and spread it over their hands, and the job is done. They also make the Roman toilet paste. It is merely white of egg, barley flower and honey. They say it was used by the Romans in olden times. Any way, it is a first-rate thing; but it is a sticky sort of stuff to use, and does not do the work any better than oatmeal. The roughest and hardest hands can be made soft and white in a month's time by doctoring them a little at bedtime, and all the tools you need are a nail-brush, a bottle of ammonia, a box of powdered borax, and a little fine white sand to rub the stains off, or a cut of lemon will do even better, for the acid of the lemon will clean anything.—Scientific American.

TRAINING CHILDREN.—The time is past when it is considered fashionable for a young lady to be unskilled in domestic duties, and the declaration on her part of entire ignorance no longer surrounds her with angelic glamour. While each child is being taught little lessons in housekeeping by its mother, it is being taught those higher lessons in life, lessons which will be ever useful to him. The girl should not only learn industry and thriftiness, but the nutritive and chemical value of principles of cooking. She should learn the relation of acids and alkalies, the laws of fermentation, the effect of putting meat into hot or cold water, the time and ease of digestion of the articles prepared for the table, and, most of all, the laws of health and the prevention of disease. The boy will find in his little duties about the home how many discouragements a mother often meets with, and how with his helping hand he can lighten her labors, and at the same time learn how much pluck, cheerfulness, self-reliance and infinite patience a woman must possess to be a successful housekeeper.

MONEY VALUE OF A WIFE.—Let a man become a widower, and he soon learns what the financial worth of a wife was to him. When he is compelled to hire the food cooked, the garments made or mended, the washing and ironing done, he finds that about one-half of his income is required to meet these outgoes. Who saved this expense before? Let the cold fingers and the silent lips in the graveyard bear testimony. The family purse should be as accessible to a faithful wife as to the husband. What man would consent to become a partner in a company in which his brother partner should alone have control of the company's funds? There is no one thing more degrading and depressing to a hard-working wife, than to feel that she must beg like a tramp for every cent she spends beyond her food, which as truly belongs to her as though she earned it as a domestic or shop-girl.—New England Farmer.

A Babe In The House

is the source of much sunshine and joy, brightening many a dark cloud and lightening many a heavy load—ton joys command while only in a healthy body. The Creator with great wisdom has distributed over the earth vegetable remedies for every ill of human kind. This marvelous Laboratory reveals its secrets to man only by long and searching labor. Few men have attained greater success than Dr. R. V. Pierce; nor devised for suffering humanity a greater production than his "Golden Medical Discovery," the unfailing remedy for consumption in its earlier stages, as well as for chronic nasal catarrh, scrofula, tumors and all blood disorders.

"In spiritual things two are more than twice one. Two pulling together at a load can accomplish a hundred times as much as two pulling in different directions.—Rev. W. S. Danley.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedlow, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Barton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

WESLEY—Died, November 21, 1887, of membranous croup, PEARL AMBER, lovely and beloved little daughter of J. Wesley and Fannie I. Johnson, of Hinds county, Miss. Little Pearl was their youngest daughter, aged seven years, eight months and sixteen days; but, notwithstanding her little life was cut so short, she leaves in the hearts of all who knew her, a record that very few persons, who live even to years of maturity, ever leave. Her mission on earth seemed to be one of love and goodness, not seeming to know what it was to be otherwise. Loving and affectionate to her friends and relatives, kind and polite to strangers, she won the love and admiration of all she met. Truly none knew Pearl but to love her. Even the dumb creatures that lived around her loved her devotedly. And if the outside world so loved and admired this dear and interesting little girl, need I say that she was idolized by her parents, sisters and brothers, whom she, in return, loved as only such as Pearl could love?

Though the pet and idol of the household, indulged to everything that heart could wish, from her babyhood; though beautiful in person, as she was good and lovely in character, Pearl had no vanity or worldliness in her pure little heart. Not one unpleasant thought can be connected with the memory of that bright little being, whose presence, even in our darkest hours, would disperse the shadows and fill our hearts with sunshine. At school she was one of the few who form the silver lining on the clouds that darken a teacher's life. Advanced far beyond those of her age, she inspired the other children with a desire to learn also; while her sweet, amiable disposition made her there, as elsewhere, a general favorite. Even now the broken-hearted parents have the little letters she used to write, to remind them of all they have lost. How dark and dreary is the home she has left. The sun does not shine as brightly, nor do the birds sing as sweetly, as when their darling Pearl was with them. Oh! how many weary months will pass e'er they can realize that she can never return! How often will they listen for her little footsteps, and look to see her coming in the door, only to be overwhelmed with grief to think that can never be again.

Only the day before she died she took her music lesson as usual, and appeared so lively and well that no one could have associated the idea of death with her. But even then the angels were hovering around her, and suddenly, without a moment's warning, they bore her away on their "snowy wings" to her heavenly home, where "everlasting spring abides, and never-ending flowers."

Oh! Pearl, can you not from your distant home send some ray of comfort to your grieving loved ones? Could'st thou not hear them imploring thee to come back and speak to them once more? Beautiful in death as in life, sweet Pearl, and pure as thy name, thou remindest us of a frozen lily with those little hands so meekly folded in sweet resignation to the will of thy heavenly Father.

May the thought, that though their darling can not come to them, that when their "day's work is done," they can meet her in heaven, where, "infinite day obscures the night, and pleasures banish pain!" May the memory of those dear little ones guard them from all evil, and finally guide them safely through the "dark valley," to their eternal home "beyond the sunset!" K. M. J.

GRACE—The committee appointed to draft resolutions in memory of our beloved sister, MRS. F. M. GRACE, submit the following:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our Woman's Missionary Society, our much loved friend and sister and our only life-member; therefore, be it

Resolved, That though the ways of Providence are mysterious, and we can not understand why our sister has been removed from a sphere of usefulness in our society, and from the tender, loving care of a devoted husband; yet in the shadow of this great mystery, we can trust God, knowing that "he doeth all things well." Thanking him, too, that he has permitted us to be associated with one so patient and cheerful, even in hours of pain and affliction, so submissive to the divine will in all things.

Resolved, That we emulate her sweet Christian example of giving liberally to the Lord of what he has given us, for "he loveth a cheerful giver."

Resolved, That our society extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, praying "that the oil of joy for mourning and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness" enable them to say, that the "Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the Minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society, and a copy furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for publication.

MRS. S. G. M. BANNERMAN.

CONERLEY—Died in Sabine parish, La., November 13, 1887, BRO. C. F. CONERLY, after an illness of thirteen days. Bro. Cullen was born in Marion county, Miss., December 27, 1812. His parents were John R. and Elizabeth Conerly—old pioneer Methodists. They moved to this State when Cullen was quite young; but he, being brought up under religious training, the result was that almost as soon as he arrived at the years of accountability he attached himself to the church (Methodist), in which faith he remained till the Lord saw fit to remove him to the church triumphant. During the late war Bro. Cullen was among the first to volunteer, and, having to undergo the hardships of a soldier's life, he became a victim of lung disease, which proved fatal in the end. Bro. Cullen was a thorough-going, energetic man. He was married, in 1870, to Miss Mary Knouce. In 1877 he was elected a member of the police jury. In 1879 he was elected sheriff of the parish of Vernon, which office he continued to fill in regular succession till death. It was while in the city of Texarkana, on official business, that he was taken sick, with pneumonia, and died away from home, but not away from friends. In his last hours he was rational and left testimony that he was going to rest. He leaves a wife and five children, with many friends and connections, to mourn their loss. A BROTHER.

CORDILL—ROSA KATE SNYDER, daughter of Daniel Snyder and Rosanna Gass, was born in Waterproof, La., March 5, 1853; married Stephen H. Cordill, April 9, 1875, and died at his home in Franklin parish, La., October 20, 1887. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Magnolia, in 1877, under the ministry of Rev. A. M. Walles, and remained in its communion till death. She had a strongly marked character, possessed many attractions of person and manner and a clear, cultured and practical mind. She was a true, unselfish friend, an obedient daughter, a loving sister, a tender, gentle mother, and loved her husband with the fondness of a wife's deep devotion. Her single steady aim seemed to be to make others happy. The troubled and sorrowing found ready sympathy and help from her. She was the mother of five children, and with all her powers strove to make them happy. But while her hands were busy, and her heart full of love for them and her husband, the destroyer suddenly came. She was seized with congestion, and in ten hours she was dead. Her disease was so violent, and death so sudden, that she left no dying testimony; but we trust her peace was made with God, and her freed spirit has entered into rest, for the pen of inspiration has written, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." J. D. HARPER.

BLUDWORTH—JOHN DEVAN BLUDWORTH, son of T. W. and Charlottie Bludworth, was born in Barbour county, Ala., June 1, 1852, and departed this life, at his father's house, near Lockhart, Lauderdale county, Miss., November 7, 1887, aged thirty-five years, five months and six days. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1873. He lived a very consistent Christian from the time he professed faith in Christ and joined the church, until he departed this life. During his long-protracted sickness he often expressed himself as being ready to die. The writer visited him during his sickness, and prayed with him, and he said that his trust was in Jesus, and that he was resigned to the will of God. So he crossed the river of Jordan so happy in the Lord. His last words were: "It will soon be over." Look up, father, mother, brothers and sisters; he is at the beautiful gate, watching and waiting for you. J. H. HOLLAND.

WRIGHT—MRS. M. C. WRIGHT (nee Crandfield) was born in Copiah county, Miss., April 18, 1836; was married to E. Wright in April, 1859, and died August 22, 1887. Sister Wright joined the Baptist Church at Antioch in 1856, and lived a conscientious and faithful member for two or more years; when she joined the Methodist Church at Pleasant Valley and remained a faithful and devoted member of same up to death. She was the mother of seven children. Two of them had passed to heaven before the good Lord called for the dear mother. Mrs. Wright was a devoted wife, a kind and devoted mother, and no doubt is with her two children and parents singing praises to a blessed Savior in heaven.

THE BEREAVED.

Shallenberger's Pills claim to be an Antidote for Malaria. The proof of this is in the fact that cases treated unsuccessfully with quinine or any other remedy—cases which have resisted all other treatment—yield at once to a dose or two of the Antidote. It destroys the cause of disease, and health follows immediately. Sold by Druggists.

To increase the standard of an enfeebled system, the nourishing properties of the blood must be increased. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier, enriches and purifies the blood and fills it with strength-giving constituents.

Scientific.

The Boomerang.

Several German observers have been studying the boomerang for the discovery of the secret of its curious course of flight. Dr. H. Landois, of Munster, from intercourse with a group of native Australians who were exhibited there, has found that there are larger and smaller boomerangs. The larger ones are slender crescents, about six'y centimetres long, five and a half centimetres wide, and one centimetre thick; plane on the lower side, convex on the upper side, pointed at either end, and sharpened toward the edges. The lower end is cross-grooved, to aid in holding it. The careful manner in which the savages manipulated the weapon, trying its shape, testing its qualities, and scraping it down, is significant of the importance they attach to its having exactly the right curvature. The wood of which the instrument is made is an extraordinarily heavy Australian iron-wood; and the only tools used in making it are sharp stones and pieces of glass. The smaller boomerangs are held at an angle of 45 degrees, but are in other respects conformed to the larger ones. An exhibition of boomerang-throwing revealed a degree of strength in the natives which was in astonishing contrast with the thinness of their forms. They took the weapon in their right hand, with the flat side downward and the concave side forward, and with a run and a shout, threw it by a short jerk about one hundred yards up into the air. It flew away in a straight line, then turned to the left, and returned in a curved line back to the thrower, whirling around constantly and whizzing unpleasantly. The curve which the weapon describes in its return is not a screw-line or a spiral, but is more like a figure 8. The savages seemed able to control their instrument, even when wind interfered to complicate its course. Once the projectile went astray, and, coming in contact with a gentleman's hat, cut it off as cleanly as a razor would have done. Herr Hermann Froehel, of Weimar, who seems to be a manufacturer of toy-boomerangs, as he speaks of having made eleven thousand specimens of the article, believes he has discovered the mystery of its shape. It is not a crescent or even curvature, but must have a kind of nick or sharper curvature in the middle, with the two arms of unequal length, in the proportion of about four to five. The arms should not be of the same thickness, but the longer one should be pared down so as exactly to balance the shorter one. The correctness of these principles may be verified by adding a very little to the weight of either arm, or by slightly shortening the longer one. The instrument will then no longer answer its peculiar purpose any better than if it were only a common stick. The peculiarity of the motion of the boomerang is due to the difference in the length of the arms, by the operation of which a divergence from the circular is imparted to its curve of rotation. The remarkable feature of the whole matter is that such savages as the Australians should have been able to discover the peculiar properties of this form and apply them. The fact shows what extraordinary powers of observation the people of nature possess. The attempts to give a philosophical explanation of the trajectory of the boomerang variously compare it with the caroming of a billiard ball, the sailing of a piece of paper or card-board in the air, and the flight of birds.—Popular Science Monthly.

Rheumatism originates in lactic acid in the blood, which, settling in the joints, causes the pains and aches of the disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures rheumatism by neutralizing the acidity of the blood, and giving it richness and vitality. Try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Say what we will of the obscurities of Revelation and the mysteries of Providence, truly spiritual and believing men and women go on reading both deeper and deeper, clearer and clearer, all their lives, till at last—no longer through a glass darkly, the veil taken away—they see as they are seen, know as they are known, stand face to face with the Savior they have so long and so trustingly followed, and have "open vision for the written Word."—F. D. Huntington.

The quality of the blood depends much upon good or bad digestion and assimilations to make the blood rich in the red strength-giving constituents, use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier. It will nourish the properties of the blood from which the elements of vitality are drawn.

WOMAN'S NEW INDUSTRY.—The type-writer is creating a revolution in methods of correspondence, and filling the country with active, competent young ladies who are establishing a distinct profession, and bringing into our business offices, lawyers' offices, editorial sanctums, etc., an element of decency, purity and method, which is working a perceptible change. The field is widening daily; not from crowding out of their place young men who have been in the habit of claiming a pre-emption for clerical work of all descriptions, but in creating absolutely new positions. The revolution, if it may be called so, has come from the discovery to business men of an ability of which they were unaware, until the great convenience and excellent work of the type-writer forced them to it. The art of dictation is almost a new art, but it is spreading rapidly, and business men are beginning to understand that much of their lives has been wasted in the mere mechanical drudgery of letter-writing, and that through employing a competent amanuensis they are now enabled to get off their correspondence with the least possible friction and the smallest amount of time. Whereas, five years ago the type-writer was simply a mechanical curiosity, to-day its monotonous click can be heard in almost every well-regulated business establishment in the country.

A Very Common Complaint.

How often do we drag on, day after day, with nought especially to complain of but general debility and perhaps some weakness of the lungs? We feel conscious of the latter because we take cold so easily, and any rough work may get seems to stick so closely to us, and we feel an occasional soreness in the chest. The former does not apply to any specific ailment, for we can not localize our trouble so as to give it a definite name; yet we feel such a general good-for-nothingness, that we call it by the generic name of "general debility." If we are feminine, we feel that this term embraces our misery, and there are so many like ourself we are easily understood. But what would we not give to find relief? A patient living in Boston Highlands, Mass., in a letter of November 6, 1885, says:

"After having used the Compound Oxygen since last March, it is only just to you to send some word to attest its value. I hardly know what I should have done without it. I commenced taking it for general debility, caused by female weakness; and also for my lungs, which are not very strong. Last winter I was very susceptible to colds, which almost invariably settled upon my lungs, and although under a physician's care at the time, and swallowing a great deal of medicine, I made such slow progress that I decided upon taking the Compound Oxygen. It has been of untold value, my lungs are stronger, I do not take cold as easily, and all signs of a cough which I had on commencing it very soon disappeared. I feel stronger in every way."

Write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., and they will mail you, free, an interesting treatise on Compound Oxygen—its mode of action and results.

The Bible tells us of the streams that it may allure us to the fountain: it tells of the past acts of God's faithful love that we may be led to set our hope on God, and to feel assured that he who hath helped will help, and that he who hath loved will love to the end.—Thomas Erskine.

An Extraordinary Phenomenon.

No other term than the above would apply to the woman who could see her youthful beauty fading away without a pang of regret. Many a woman becomes prematurely old and haggard because of functional derangement. What a pity that all such do not know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will restore their organs to a normal state, and make them youthful and beautiful once more! For the ills to which the daughters of Eve are peculiarly liable the "Prescription" is a sovereign remedy. It is the only medicine sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be returned. See guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

Though true repentance be never late, yet late repentance is seldom true.—Brooks.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,

The great uses of study to a woman are to enable her to regulate her own mind.—Hannah More.

If the stomach performs its functions actively and regularly, the food of which it is the receptacle, is transformed into blood of a nourishing quality, which furnishes vigor and warmth to the whole body. The best remedy to give tone to the stomach is Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

In all the Western country the weather is exceedingly severe; snow-storms and blizzards being frequent.

In the Senate a sharp debate between Senator Call, of Florida, and Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, on the Mormon question was closed by Mr. Call withdrawing his resolution to print in the Congressional Record the memorial of the Constitutional Convention of Utah.

At Rochester several flour mills have been destroyed by the explosion of gas. The buildings were wrecked and several lives lost.

The Republicans in the Senate have criticised severely the President's message, and were answered as warmly by the Democrats.

The news from the West is that the people are suffering from the cold weather. Many are badly housed and without a supply of fuel, and a number of deaths by freezing have been reported.

In the Senate the bill for removing the Ship Island quarantine has been reported favorably. A joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment on the subject of marriage and divorce, and prohibiting bigamy and polygamy, was discussed in the Senate.

Congressman Moffat, from Michigan, has died, and both Houses adjourned as a mark of respect.

S. S. Carlisle has been confirmed as our Minister to Bolivia.

Maj. J. M. Wright, of Louisville, has been appointed marshall of the United States Supreme Court.

The political troubles in the Indian Territory have been settled, and the Downing candidate for chief has been declared elected.

The trial trip of the new cruiser "Chicago" was made recently, and everything worked satisfactorily. She attained a speed of sixteen knots an hour.

The First National Bank of Shreveport has been designated as the Depository of the United States moneys.

Hon. Daniel Manning, ex-Secretary of the Treasury Department, died at the residence of his son, in Albany, N. Y., December 24.

The strike of employees of the Reading Railway will affect at least 60,000 persons, and they are confident of ultimate success.

Chicago has struck natural gas. At last accounts the stream had been flowing for forty-eight hours with increasing force.

FOREIGN.

The Duke of Edinburgh has expressed the opinion that war in Europe is almost unavoidable and likely to break out at no distant day.

President Carnot has been censured for saying that he would do what he could to maintain amicable relations between France and Germany.

Numerous Cossack regiments are being massed in Russian Poland.

Lord Churchill's visit to Russia, it is believed, will influence England's policy.

It is stated in advices from Zanzibar that Stanley reached Wadelai in the early part of September.

The West Indies have been swept by a storm in which seventy vessels were wrecked and many lives lost. Nearly 300 huts and houses were destroyed by a huge wave.

A German paper declares that a conspiracy exists whose purpose is to bring about a resignation of the Crown Prince in favor of his son.

In London Gen. Miller has been arrested as an accomplice in a dynamite conspiracy.

King Milan of Servia says the present movement is fraught with danger to Europe; but in a conflict between Germanic and Slav ideas, Servia should remain a neutral spectator.

The customary long furloughs given annually, on January 13, to Russian officers longest in the service will not be given next month.

Secretary Balfour has been summoned to Ireland to attend the Portumna assizes in January, when the appeal of Sir William Plunt will be heard.

Military movements are increasing in Europe. Austrian reserves have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to join their regiments, and officers and men of the Prussian army on the Russian frontier have had their furloughs curtailed. The Austrian ambassador to Russia sends word to his government that the movements of Russian troops are simply in accordance with a scheme in operation since the Turkish war to place a perfect cordon from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

In France, the decoration scandal in connection with M. Wilson has been revived, and his arrest is expected. It is said that France will evacuate the New Hebrides Islands in January.

King Kalakua of Hawaii, having vetoed two bills passed by the Hawaiian Legislature, has brought himself into trouble again, the Legislature insisting that during the last troubles he pledged himself not to interfere with it.

The German diplomats expect a war in the early spring. The Czar's peaceful intentions have been overborne by the Pan-Slavists. The tone of the St. Petersburg papers is warlike, and things seem to be moving in the direction of a fray between Austria and Russia, and possibly Germany.

The Guatemala revolution has been suppressed by the utter rout and defeat of the revolutionists.

The British Mission to Abyssinia to induce the King to sue for peace is a failure.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 153 Julia street, New Orleans.

Felicity Street Church.

BUILT, 1850. BURNED, 1887. REBUILT, 1888.

Anyone who knows and loves her; anyone who has served at her altars, or found Christ precious within her sanctuaries; anyone who has ever attended or worked in her Sunday-school as scholar, teacher or officer; any stranger without her gates; any friend, whoever and wherever dispersed, having a mind to assist in the rebuilding of Felicity Street Church, has now an opportunity. All are invited to help. "Who gives quickly gives twice."

The church approaches rapidly to completion, and will soon call her children and well-wishers once more to offer, under the shadow of her walls, the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise. Contributions, however small, in aid will be promptly acknowledged by the treasurer and gratefully appreciated by the people. Send them to the preacher in charge, Rev. S. H. Werlein, care of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans.

The Origin of the Le Conte Pear.

The two Le Conte pear trees first brought to Georgia, were introduced by Major John Le Conte, from whom it takes its name. It was in the year 1828, and these two trees stand to-day vigorous and healthy, and are abundant bearers. It is not known from where these trees sprang, but it is conceded they are a hybrid between the sand pear and some other variety (perhaps the Bartlett). It is very certain they can not be traced beyond the two original trees, and it is from them that has sprung the valuable orchard around Thomasville, Ga. The Le Conte is positively blight-proof. It is a rapid grower and an abundant bearer, and grows at ten years old to the height of thirty feet, with spread of branches about the same, and with a trunk the diameter of which is about fifteen inches. A tree of this age and size, on good ground, usually bears from ten to twenty-five bushels. The fruit ripens in July and August, the season being about six weeks in which to market it. The fruit is large and handsome and is a good shipper, and has brought very satisfactory prices in the market up to date. The writer affirms that 300 Le Contes produced fruit this season that netted $1,500. The writer himself shipped and sold, from less than two acres of sandy ground this year, over $700 worth of pears net, after paying the transportation companies $2 80 freight. Think of this, farmers—300 trees netting more than an ordinary cotton and corn farm! Think of it, railroad men—two acres of fruit paying you more money for transportation than 160 acres planted in cotton! Farmers should diversify their crops if they would succeed. The all-cotton and corn and the all-sugar and rice system has kept them poor. Fruit can be grown almost on our houses and on our farms with very little expense if the proper kind of trees are set. I am aware that thousands of dollars have been spent for worthless nursery stock and our people have met with little success, but it is because they buy trees not suited to our climate. If they will plant the Le Conte and Kieffer pear and plant the Japan varieties of fruit trees and give them proper attention, the South can grow fruit enough to supply the world. Col. W. R. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, Miss., is sole agent for these valuable trees in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, and will take pleasure in giving further information.

To Our Agents.

For some time past we have been offering special inducements to our subscribers; but the month of December will be "red-letter month" for our agents of the Louisiana Conference. To every one of our agents, "itinerant preachers only," sending us three brand-new subscribers, all at one time and cash in full, we will send to their nearest express office, "not prepaid," "a brown 15-inch Gladstone Satchel," genuine "grain-leather," nickel trimming, worth in your town $3 50 to $4—just the thing for Conference.

This offer is for agents, as above stated, and during December only for Louisiana agents.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS ABROAD.

Progress in Pianos.

[From the London Lady's World.]

Messrs. Mason & Hamlin bid fair to become as famous for their improved pianos as they have long been for their world-renowned organs. The peculiar feature of the Mason & Hamlin piano is that the strings are directly secured to the iron frame by metal fastenings, instead of being wound around iron pins set in wood as in other pianos. The results of this important improvement are claimed to be remarkable refinement and musical purity of tone, much decreased liability to get out of tune, and increased durability. A circular containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians, dealers and tuners will be sent, free, to anyone addressing the manufacturers, Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, Union Square, New York City.

How to Make Money.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL
AND PHOSPHATES OF
LIME, SODA, IRON.

Invalids need no longer dread to take that great specific for Consumption, Asthma, and threatening Coughs—Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. As prepared by Dr. Wilbor it is robbed of the nauseating taste, and also embodies a preparation of the Phosphate of Lime, giving nature the very article required to aid the healing qualities of the oil, and to re-create where disease has destroyed. It also forms a remarkable tonic, and will cause weak and debilitated persons to become strong and robust. It should be kept in every family for instant use on the first appearance of Coughs or Irritation of the Lungs. Manufactured only by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 16, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.
